Believe me to be your sincere friend.

PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA.

In Peralta's several conferences with Gen. A. Obregon, minister of war and marine, at Mexico City, according to Peralta's claims later, Obregon suggested the advisability of including in the hospital corps of the several expeditions various Mexican army doctors and attendants to form a nucleus of the corps.

The following letters refer to the above matter:

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, July 5, 1916.

DR. MANUEL DE LA ROSA PUEBLA.

MY DISTINGUISHED FRIEND: We have been waiting for you here for five days, and seeing that you could not get here, even after we had wired you to that effect, I then decided to start the work together with our distinguished friend, Dr. Guzman, in order to take advantage of the little time that is left us.

You know beforehand, as we have agreed, which position corresponds to you, and we don't have to talk about this matter any further. I shall remain here some six or eight days more, and by that time I suppose that you will be here with us. Please write to your brother Roberta and tell him to answer my letter as soon as possible, since it is of the highest importance for our affairs. I am, your friend,

PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA.

Before the above letter reached Dr. Rosa he arrived in Vera Cruz. Peralta, on July 6, wrote him the following, written on stationery bearing "Private correspondence of the director of the military hospital, Vera Cruz:

"MY ESTEEMED AND DISTINGUISHED SIR: As the legal representative of Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, the chief of the Liberal Party in Honduras in this city, I fully authorize you to arrange for the establishment of the Red Cross service [referring to hospital arrangements for the military movements] in a thorough manner for the object which is known to you, employing only Mexican doctors under the terms of the inclosed sheet.

"I beg to state to you beforehand that any arrangements which you may make will be sanctioned by the provisional governor of the Republic of Honduras, headed by Maximo B. Rosales, whose legal representative I am. As I have said before, it will be necessary that you shall take charge of the entire outfit in the manner in which we have agreed upon already."

The "inclosed sheet" referred to, headed "Terms," is translated to read:

"Chief of the hospital service: Colonel, cash per month, $200 silver of Honduras.

"Five doctors: Lieutenant Colonels, cash per month, $150 silver of Honduras, with guaranty of a raise.

"Employment guaranteed for the provisional and constitutional period. The interested parties should previously state who, in case of death, should receive one-half of their salary during the aforesaid time.

"Obligations: To place themselves unconditionally at the service and under the immediate orders of the chief of same.

"If at any time before this revolution has been brought to an end these men should abandon their posts, then all obligations will cease and this contract becomes null and void.

"PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA."

The above-mentioned Mexican doctors were to be placed on leave of absence from the Mexican Army, but were to receive, nevertheless, their regular pay in that service from the Mexican minister of war and marine in addition to the contract terms quoted above.

From Vera Cruz, on July 6, 1916, on the private correspondence letterhead of the director of the military hospital, Peralta wrote Gen. Alvaro Obregon, National Palace, Mexico City:

"MY DISTINGUISHED GENERAL: I SHALL NEVER GET THROUGH THANKING YOU FOR ALL THE KINDNESS WHICH YOU HAVE SHOWN ME, AND I SHALL NEVER BE ABLE TO FORGET YOU. THE LIBERAL PARTY OF MY COUNTRY, AS WELL AS I, HAVE RECOGNIZED YOU THE GREAT MAN WHO HAS GIVEN HIS STRONGEST SUPPORT FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE LIBERAL RULE IN CENTRAL AMERICA, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE HIGH IDEALS OF THE CONSTITUTIONALISTS, WHICH YOU SO SPLENDIDLY REPRESENTED IN YOUR PERSON AND THAT OF GEN. CARRANZA.

"I AM NOW QUIETLY ARRANGING THE VARIOUS EXPEDITIONS IN THIS COUNTRY (MEXICO) WHICH WILL WORK IN CONNECTION WITH THOSE WHICH I SHALL TAKE OUT OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE BRITISH COLONY, BELIZE; AND I BADLY NEED, AS YOU POINTED OUT BEFORE TO ME, THE ORGANIZATION OF A RED CROSS STAFF WITH ALL MEXICAN DOCTORS. IN CONSEQUENCE I BEG OF YOU TO GRANT ME THE FAVOR OF RELEASING DR. MANUEL DE LA ROSA FROM THE PROGRESSO IN MY FAVOR.

"DR. DE LA ROSA WILL HAND YOU THIS LETTER IN PERSON AND I DO NOT DOUBT YOUR GENEROSITY WILL NOT DEPRIVE MY MEN OF THE SERVICES OF THIS VALUABLE MAN. BELIEVE ME TO BE YOUR SINCERE FRIEND.

"PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA."

The following correspondence from Peralta shows that he had also been appointed by Carranza as the latter's legal and confidential spy in the United States. In addition to Peralta's continued violations of the Federal neutrality laws of the United States he now, by becoming spy of Carranza, likewise violated another Federal law, which Barnes's Federal Code, 1919-20 (p. 1667, No. 7059), defines as follows:

"Whoever, other than a diplomatic or consular officer or attaché, shall act in the United States as an agent of a foreign government without prior notification to the Secretary of State shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both. The words 'foreign government' as used in this act and in sections 156, 157, 161, 170, 171, 172, 173, and 220 of the act of March 4, 1909, entitled 'An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States,' shall be deemed to include any government faction or body of insurgents within a country with which the United States is at peace, which government faction or body of insurgents may or may not have been recognized by the United States as a government."

The English translation of the letter follows:

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, July 11, 1916.

Dr. JORGE A. GUZMAN, City.

MY DISTINGUISHED FRIEND: I have the honor of communicating to you for your guidance that you have been appointed my private secretary to accompany me on all my political missions on behalf of the government of Gen. Maximo B. Rosales as a revolutionary, provisional, and constitutional government, and also on diplomatic and other missions which the first chief (Carranza) will designate for me, whose legal representative I am at the present time in the United States and in Washington.

I shall not fail to mention that as a reward for your good services you shall be awarded whatever I think advisable, with an elevated position that is corresponding to your capabilities, for his Government in the Republic of Honduras.

I am, your sincere friend.

PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA.

Peralta also, on June 13, 1916, sent a letter to Gen. Alvaro Obregon, National Palace, Mexico City, and labeled it "confidential":

"MY DEAR GENERAL: I HAVE SENT YOU A LETTER WITH DR. MANUEL DE LA ROSA, BUT I DO NOT KNOW WHETHER YOU HAVE RECEIVED SAME, BUT I AM VERY ANXIOUS THAT YOU SHOULD READ IT. IN CONSEQUENCE OF THE INTERNATIONAL DIFFICULTIES I FIND IT HARD TO GET A STEAMER TO RETURN TO THE PLACE FROM WHERE I CAME, BUT I CAN NOW TAKE A STEAMER ON THE 16TH OR 17TH INSTANT.

"I SUPPOSE YOU ARE WELL POSTED ABOUT MY MOVEMENTS HERE, WHICH ARE PROGRESSING NICELY AT PRESENT FOR THE BENEFIT OF OUR COMMON POLITICAL INTERESTS. THE YOUNG BEARER OF THIS LETTER IS A PERSON OF MY UTMOST CONFIDENCE. HE WILL TELL YOU ALL ABOUT OUR AFFAIRS AND I ASK YOU TO HONOR ME KINDLY WITH YOUR ATTENTION BY GRANTING ME THE WISHES WHICH HE WILL EXPRESS TO YOU, AS I AM SURE BY SO DOING YOU WILL PROTECT THE INTERESTS OF OUR CAUSE, WHICH ARE ALSO THOSE OF YOUR OWN.

"Thanking you again for your favors extended me, I remain,

"Your sincere friend,

"PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA,

"No. 3426 Canal Street, New Orleans, La."

Peralta, when in Vera Cruz, overlooked no opportunities for deals that meant financial profit to himself or to Rosales. The following agreement indicates that Rosales and Peralta knew within 24 hours after the former became revolutionary President of Honduras that the looting of that country would begin. The agreement was by and between an American in Mexico, W. P. Gavin, Rosales, and Peralta, and is translated herewith:

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, July 15, 1916.

I, the undersigned, hereby as a representative of Gen. Maximo B. Rosales in the United States of North America and in the Republic of Mexico, grant to W. P. Gavin, an American citizen and a resident of Vera Cruz, Mexico, a special concession for the construction of the national railroad which starts from Puerto Cortez and La Pimienta, according to the plans rendered in the minister of Formento, in order to make it interoceanic, provided Mr. W. P. Gavin include in his negotiation Gen. Maximo B. Rosales and the undersigned, taking into consideration that the whole part will be divided in three shares, of which Mr. Gavin, Gen. Rosales, and Sr. Peralta will own a third each, but with the understanding also that Mr. W. P. Gavin will be the head of the whole enterprise and who will look after the financial affairs to proceed in this matter, being understood, therefore, and beforehand that whatever Mr. W. P. Gavin does in our benefit will be entirely accepted by us.

This contract should be in effect 24 hours immediately after Gen. Maximo B. Rosales has been in possession of the executive power in any condition of the Republic of Honduras. It is further understood that the said W. P. Gavin, with the above two mentioned, will control all exportation of products, live stock, etc., of the Republic of Honduras, also the importation of necessary articles for the welfare of the Republic.

PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA,

Representative of Gen. M. B. Rosales.

W. B. GAVIN.

Fully six months prior to the date of the agreement with Gavin, Peralta and Rosales, to keep me enthusiastic as to their cause, had promised to make me, within "a year or two after Rosales became President of Honduras," a multi-millionaire; likewise, that Peralta, Rosales, and myself would control the entire business affairs, governmental and otherwise, of Honduras for our own mutual profit.

This included absolutely the same proposition entered into between Peralta and Peralta. After Rosales won out in Honduras he was to issue $50,000,000 worth of Honduran gold bonds, which, according to his plans, were to be unloaded on American and European bankers at a considerable discount through a selling commission, which was myself, and which would receive as payment for selling the bonds $5,000,000 in gold. Of this commission Peralta and Rosales were to receive one-third each.

The balance of the money to be derived from bonds was to be spent by the Rosales Government in so-called public improvements in Honduras, such as railroads, highways, etc. The contracts for such work were to go exclusively to a concern to be organized for that specific purpose by myself; and Rosales and Peralta, irrespective of how excessive the bids for such work might have been, were to see that this concern received the contracts. Furthermore, they were to be secret partners in the organization. Rosales, Peralta, and myself, in one way or another, so they estimated, would have procured a very large part of the money derived from the sale of the bonds, and which was to be split in equal parts among the three of us.

Notwithstanding the glamor of so much "easy money" coming my way, my reports to the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation continued with regularity, and fully exposed from day to day the schemes of Rosales, Peralta, and their associates. In the end the United States was enabled to break up completely all plots in which these grafters were involved.

Before Rosales, Peralta, et al. finally succumbed to their activities, they had entered into similar arrangements to loot Honduras with three other parties, using the same bait that they held forth for Gavin and myself. My knowledge of Mexicans and Central Americans before this had taught me that these "monkey promises" were worth naught, even had I entered into their schemes in fact and they had won out.

The English translation of an original, signed document, formulated at Vera Cruz, on July 13, 1916, refers to arms, ammunition, and men from Mexico as part of one of the proposed armed expeditions against the Central American governments. It follows:

RECEIPTS FOR $500.

I have received from Mr. Pedro de Peralta, as the representative of Maximo Rosales, the sum of $500 (five hundred pesos) Mexican money, for my services and for the shipping of arms from Mexico to Vera Cruz, as per contract signed under this date.

R. DE LA ROSA.

VERA CRUZ, July 13, 1916.

The contract, translated, reads:

CONTRACT.

I do solemnly contract with Mr. Pedro Grave de Peralta as the legal representative of Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, chief of the active Liberal Party of Honduras, to get up 100 men, more or less, and 4 officers, giving them only 30 carbines, 30.30, with 100 cartridges each, and 20 Mausers with 100 cartridges each, for the expedition that is proposed to start for Honduras, of which I shall be the leader under orders from Gen. Rosales. In the meantime there shall be deposited for me $1,500 (1,500 pesos) silver before I leave.

R. DE LA ROSA.

Witness:

TEO. G. SEFA,
J. A. GUZMAN.

Carranza, according to Peralta's statements, in addition to the $50,000 cash which he received from the Mexican Government through the Banco Nacional de Mexico, the Mexican Government arranged to send a fleet of five small boats to Quintana Roo to be used by the Central American revolutionists.

At a later date there were shipped from Vera Cruz to Quintana Roo the arms, ammunition, and other war equipment which was to be supplied by the Mexican Government to Gen. Rosales and his revolutionary allies. This consisted of naval cannon, several pieces of field artillery, shells for same, and between 2,500 and 3,000 rifles, and a large supply of bombs. Likewise in excess of 1,000,000 cartridges for these rifles were included. All of these were sent to Col. Carlos Vidal, Mexican military commander in Quintana Roo. The war equipment consisted also of a wireless outfit and a large quantity of hospital supplies, clothing, shoes, etc.

An opportunity was afforded me at a later date to verify positively the fact that Carranza had supplied arms and ammunition to the revolutionists of Central America. The later reports showed that the supplies were a hundred times over the amount that could have been used by Carranza's military forces in the territory at Quintana Roo.

During June, July, and August, 1917, the Felixista Mexican revolutionary leaders, through one of their principal supporters, at that time in Guatemala, learned of this large consignment of war material in Quintana Roo and submitted a plan to the Felixista headquarters junta at New York City for its approval. This scheme was for the Felixistas to outfit an expedition from Livingston, Guatemala, and via boat to attack and overpower the Carranza garrison in Quintana Roo and capture for their own movement this war outfit.

Before Peralta left Vera Cruz in 1916 he sent the following cablegram to Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, at 116 South Hagan Avenue, New Orleans, La.:

JULY 20, 1916.

RAMON LARA (Gen. Rosales code name):

Send me immediately Perez (code name for Ramon Diaz) with money for the plantation, placing first money as formerly requested.

Peralta, before leaving Vera Cruz, had sent Gen. Maximo B. Rosales a written report and had instructed him to send Ramon Diaz and Ladislao Santos, both parties Hondurans, immediately to Vera Cruz to act there as confidential agents of Rosales and Peralta. The following is part of the code devised by Peralta and Rosales for use of their confidential agents in Vera Cruz:

Code word.	Decode.
Terminado-----	We can not get a boat for the voyage.
Alberque-----	I am sending you a boat for the voyage.
Saludole-----	The war equipment has left.
Recuerdos-----	Get your men ready.
Recado-----	I am getting my men ready.
Mandene-----	I have my men ready.
Felisdades-----	The north coast of Honduras is watched by American boats, be careful.
Canado-----	The Governor of Honduras has the ports prepared
Tarde-----	The commander of the port interposes difficulties.
Dies-----	I have 100 men ready.
Viente-----	I have 200 men ready.
Trienta-----	I have 300 men ready.
Bien-----	They are waiting for us on the coast of Honduras.
Siento-----	I have bad news from the coast.
Dineero-----	I am leaving with the expedition.
Metioro-----	I am leaving for the execution of the arranged plans.
Aceptado-----	I am ready and only waiting for the war equipment.
Mezolado-----	Where do you want to land?
Novadade-----	We are ready and shall leave soon.
Mision-----	Invasion prepared.
Cumplida-----	We have good leaders and good men.
Titulos-----	We are organized at Payo Obispo.
Wescullana-----	We lose out.
Cartas-----	We have Omoa (a town in Honduras).
Mercaderias-----	We are marching on San Pedro.
Salimostien-----	We received money from the boss.
Malas Finacas-----	We have a great deal of difficulty.
Chivastoco-----	We left for the attack.
Cudiado-----	All hands are ready.
Salco-----	Rise over there and attack Tela.

In the following code table, the figures behind initials indicate the date of an invasion, the month to be prearranged:

"A, 7; B, 8; C, 9; D, 10; E, 11; F, 12; G, 13; H, 14; I, 15; J, 16; K, 17; L, 18; LL, 19; M, 20; N, 21; N, 22; O, 23; P, 24; Q, 25; R, 26; S, 27; T, 28; U, 29; V, 30; W, 31; X, 1; Y, 2, and Z, 3."

Another one of Gen. Rosales's code names was "Mike Smith." One of Peralta's code names was "Otto Hawkins," and my name in their code was "Andrew."

The following is a translated copy of cablegram sent by Peralta to his wife from Vera Cruz, Mexico, July 6, 1916:

ADELA A. DE PERALTA,
No. 3426 Canal Street.

You are doing right. Punish me with your silence in exchange for my orgies. Without steamer, without anything, I shall leave airplanes.

PEDRO.

Peralta sailed from Vera Cruz on July 16, 1916, by steamer Dade. He arrived in Galveston, Tex., on July 20. He then received the following Western Union telegram from his wife:

NEW ORLEANS, July 19, 1916.

PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA,
Steamship Dade, Quarantine, Galveston.

I am sick. When will you arrive there? General asks me urgently for credit. We salute you.

ADELA.

The reference to the general means Rosales, who was asking Mrs. Peralta for information concerning funds received by Peralta from Mexican Government officials.

Peralta sent the following message in reply:

STEAMSHIP "DADE,"
Via Galveston, Tex., July 20, 1916.

ADELA PERALTA,
No. 3426, New Orleans.

Why are you sick, little one? Will be home Monday. Tell Rosales.

PEDRO.

On his way to New Orleans from Galveston, Peralta sent his wife this telegram:

HOUSTON, TEX., July 22.

ADELA GRAVE DE PERALTA,
No. 3426 Canal Street, New Orleans.

I shall take coffee with you to-morrow. I embrace all of you, and kiss for me my little ones.

PEDRO.

Peralta arrived in New Orleans over the Southern Pacific Railroad from Houston on the morning of July 23. Before leaving Vera Cruz he had sent me word that he was returning to the United States via Habana and New York City, and that he would not be back in New Orleans until after September 1. Various telegrams passing between his wife and himself as mentioned hereinbefore and which reached me from a spy I had planted near Mrs. Peralta and who had the confidence of Mrs. Peralta, however, posted us thoroughly as to Peralta's exact movements and he was very much astonished to see me when I called at his home on the afternoon of July 23.

At this time Rosales and Peralta, as shown hereinbefore, considered it advisable to keep entirely confidential their plans and negotiations with the Mexican Government. Peralta's explanation to me on the afternoon of my call, regarding his Mexican visit, and with his usual veracity, was:

"After I left New Orleans I went to New York. A day or two after I arrived there I received a cable that my brother in Habana was dangerously ill. I went there immediately. After I had been there a week I learned of an excellent business opportunity in Mexico. So I went there."

Peralta at that moment had no idea that I was thoroughly familiar with all details regarding the real purpose of his visit to Mexico and of his compromises with the Mexican Government. Nor did he understand until several weeks later that I had verified all this through the Guatemalan spy, Mrs. Concho, who Estrada Cabrera had foisted on him in Vera Cruz.

Giving Peralta enough rope to entangle himself, I, at this time and for several weeks thereafter, "played" with him while he remained in ignorance of my information concerning him and his secret deals with Mexico.

On July 23, 1916, from New Orleans, Peralta telegraphed Gen. Rosales at San Francisco, translated as follows:

MAXIMO B. ROSALES,
No. 1528 Sutter Street, San Francisco:

I just arrived and bring letters. I bring something very important. We salute you sincerely.

PEDRO.

The "letters" referred to above were missives from President Carranza, Gen. A. Obregon, Candido Aguilar, and other Mexican officials assuring Rosales of their complete belief in his ability to launch and carry out Carranza's plans for the overthrow of various Central American Governments.

The "something" referred to by Peralta as "very important" was the money which he had received from the Mexican Government for the Rosales movement. Peralta, as we learned later, also on July 23, 1916, wrote Rosales a full report of his negotiations with the Mexican Government. He also told Rosales it was most important that he come to New Orleans immediately.

On July 24, 1916, Peralta telegraphed as follows:

MAXIMO B. ROSALES,

1528 Sutter Street, San Francisco:

I send you certificate, Government credit, with documents that you asked Adela for. I shall write you.

PEDRO.

On July 28, 1916, No. 1830, Western Union, Rosales sent following wire to Peralta at New Orleans:

It will be difficult for me to leave with family two weeks earlier. I am waiting for the referred documents.

M. B. ROSALES.

Gen. Rosales left San Francisco with his wife and two children on August 14, 1916, arriving in New Orleans over the Southern Pacific Railroad at 6.55 o'clock p. m., August 20. Peralta and myself met him at the depot and took him in a motor car to Peralta's house at No. 3426 Canal Street, where he resided with his family for three or four weeks, later moving to a furnished house a block away, No. — Hagan Avenue.

Rosales, upon his arrival in New Orleans, showed Peralta correspondence he had had with other parties concerning their proposed revolutionary movements as exchanged with his supporters while Peralta was in Mexico. These letters included the following from Ramon Cardon, one of Rosales's principal and confidential lieutenants in Honduras, and dated May 14, 1916, from La Ceiba:

ESTEEMED GENERAL: The trip of my friend, M. Mejia, of this city, affords me the great opportunity to write you. It is perhaps a matter of importance, but above all, I am sincere.

After your personal well-being, which I fervently desire, my General, I come as a loyal friend of yours to lay the following before you:

Since your absence from the country, your true friends and the writer, who have knowledge of the great saviour project, which would be initiated under your command, our attitude from that time was desperate and active, to the point that it became general and overflowed with sympathies, not on the part of the people only, but also by men of real importance all over this zone.

Therefore, since you put foot on North American soil, we have awaited you one time or another, in order that the country—the country villified and sacrificed—might be redeemed and vindicated. Unfortunately, so passed the time, and that spontaneous and ardent will of the Honduran people has not yet become realized, but, nevertheless, it is not exhausted; our active energies are with you without vacillation, without lies, and without egotism.

General, despite the scant reserve on the part of some of your agents in such a very delicate matter as the one in question, despite some misfortunes, your mere presence in whatsoever place on this coast might have been and would be at the same time, cause for great rejoicing among your friends, and even the masses, without organization, would cooperate in the assured triumph of our cause.

The Honduran people acclaim you. The people want men of integrity like you. They discard at each step this unworthy pack of clowns and usurers of the State.

General, to be indifferent before the misfortunes of the country, to be indifferent before the petitions of the people also, in these moments of agony, is to be ungrateful. And of this the minions, the despots of to-day, are capable. Meritorious men like you and those of great antecedents sacrifice everything for the country and for the race. It is sufficient to remember, General, that dissatisfaction has become general in the country, to the extent that the same chiefs who yesterday worked with the present Government are to-day its worst enemies.

General. In order to carry out our serious mission, we need men of responsibility and influence, and you should remember among your devoted and active partisans Gen. Teofilo Rosales, Col. Roman Diaz, Col. Lucas Acosta, Branlio Valladeres, Frederico Becerra, and other in this city.

Gen. Luis Isanla de Trujillo, who a short time ago disappeared and is believed to be in Guatemala or Belize, Col. Manuel Matute and his brothers, who used to reside in Colorado, to-day they are in St. Pedro Lula, and Tela T. Rosales is his devoted partisan—of that we have proofs. If before this he was with Chico Mejra or with Bertrand, since last year, they have had a complete falling out.

Instead of being favored he has been annoyed to the point that in September last they wanted to restrict him to Tegueigalpa. With him it is possible to have a direct understanding, because he is a man of prestige. Depluto, in the islands of Bahia, Frujillo, and Toro and his alliance with us will be of the greatest importance. He remains ready and awaits your orders.

With the good communication which you could establish on this road, everything would be arranged with full surety of success. You must know also and believe that the country in general is going into bankruptcy, in matter of finance as well as in everything else; that the chiefs of the governmental departments, as well as of the Government itself, are the true exploiters and nothing remains for the people; not even the right to the fight for life, since all the business is monopolized by them.

At present there is nothing new in La Celba; the brothers of the President, with his assistance, sprung something that is very rare among us, demanding of the city 20 blocks, bought by private individuals from their (brothers') families, on the ground of defective titles. Houses have been built on these lots and they are a part of the city.

Why do they thus injure the public, and why should they lose their land and their improvements? All this and other things cause great dissatisfaction to reign.

General, you must remember that on account of the happenings during the last elections, the outrages to certain persons and to the people in that they were treated as prisoners, and even now at this time I have two friends in trouble, who suffer confinement with all its filthiness. It would be a long task to tell you to-day the series of happenings which pass, but there will come a time to do it.

Permit me to tell you that a great many of your friends have disappeared from the country. No news from Tela—many went away. Lately the intelligence of the death of the brave Col. Soriano in Belize has been received with great sorrow—a person with a great future.

For this reason those who accompanied you lie still in Belize, distracted and in great difficulties. They went to Gen. F. Rosales, asking him if he was ready to cooperate in this matter. While, without notice, he remained firm and serene when the time came, having respect for his oath.

My General, in one word, I, as an unconditional partisan, assure you that everything here is ready; more men than necessary, all in excellent spirit, which is indispensable. It is no more the money, but the materials of operation and your orders combined.

The Government officers assure that a strict vigilance is kept for you and your agents, and that to-day orders for your arrest, upon stepping ashore in Honduras, have been issued. A short time ago Janire R. Farciós de Fega visited us and returned there on Wednesday of last week, and he told us that he was expecting that soon something would materialize, and that you would come, and that he, together with the rest of friends, would remain ready.

My General, with these lines I conclude my letter, and, if it is convenient to you, answer, or if you wish to communicate with Diaz and Rosales, send the letters with bearer, with direction to Ramon Cardon, Rec. a Dona Aua de Mejia. By this means there is full security and confidence.

With kindest regards, I am, your friend,

Rosales also showed Peralta a copy of a letter written by him on May 15, 1916, from San Francisco to Manuel Lobo, at that time one of his partisans in New York City, the translation of which follows:

MY DEAR FRIEND: I have just received your highly esteemed letter of the 10th instant, your silence having worried me for more than two weeks. I have been receiving correspondence from the friends of Honduras, who are in despair about the situation of the country, for there is an alarming division among the Government officers themselves, there being no confidence in anything.

There are difficulties which Bertrand has on every hand, the very bad economic situation, and no one wishes to give him a cent, the banks which let him have money and the Rossner firm having closed their accounts, and they have no money to pay the employees.

They even have sold the steamer Barahona at New Orleans for $7,000, and of this they paid $4,000, which they owed for repairs, and it was under seizure because they had nothing to pay with. The boundary commission with Guatemala escaped (barely missed firing shots at each other) and suspended their relations.

Relations are strained with the Guatemalan Government. With Salvador they are bad also, owing to boundary affairs, a question having been raised recently.

Mariano Vasquez, with the representative of this Government at a banquet at Tegucigalpa, received a terrible insult, and for this reason the representative returned to Salvador and the relations are strained. With Nacaragua also they have solved the boundary question, and the matter has reached such a stage that an escort, commanded by Bertrand, with a commander appointed for La Mesquitia, was shot at by the Nicaraguans, and thus the matter remained.

It would take too long to enumerate to you the events; the coast is in a lamentable state; there is no sale for fruits; the railroad of the Government is almost suspended and has no work; only twice a week does a train run. The superintendent resigned twice, and they did not wish to accept the resignation. Luis Bergman (and) the greater part of the employees are discharged.

Everybody is crying war, and the change of the Government, and they think of this only. Many people are leaving. At Belize there is already a large colony awaiting the moment, and for this and for other reasons it is of exceeding (importance) to lay the bases.

The clipping you sent me about the affairs at Guatemala; the press of this place also has published something about the matter; I think there is something; but all these complications do not tend to favor our work, for which reason we must not lose time.

Immediately after Rosales arrived in New Orleans, the Rosales junta in that city became one of the most active revolutionary headquarters that ever has operated in the United States. The homes of Rosales and Peralta, only a block separating them, were filled constantly with revolutionary leaders and sympathizers with their proposed movements in Nicaragua, Guatemala, and Honduras.

Enjoying their confidence in every detail, I was in nightly conference, from early evening until morning hours, with the ringleaders of the plot and all their aids. In this manner the United States was enabled through me to keep thoroughly posted as to all their plans.

They at this time perfected their spy and courier system by which they sent and received through their "grapevine" messengers complete information from their allies in Central America, Mexico, and British Honduras who were to cooperate in these movements.

Rosales and Peralta then adopted a time-honored plan among revolutionists whereby they endeavored to seduce officers of Central American Governments. These officers, dazzled by promises of enormous loot, were to desert their Governments at a given time and join the ranks of Rosales and Peralta.

Rosales and Peralta, personally and through their friends and supporters in Honduras, made many such propositions to army officers in Honduras and Guatemala. One of the leading Honduran Army commanders was Gen. Antonio Mendes Monteroso, at that time military governor and commander at La Ceiba.

This general was one of the most celebrated military leaders and revolutionists in Central America. He was not, however, at this moment particularly enthusiastic regarding Rosales. The latter, therefore, decided to prevail on him through the Government of Mexico to participate in the Central American plans.

Monteroso was born on September 2, 1869, at Guatemala City. When 16 he received a commission as an officer in the Guatemalan Army. Due to his political aspirations some 17 years ago he affiliated himself with the Guatemala Revolutionary Party and was one of the leaders of a revolutionary movement out of Nicaragua and Honduras against Estrada Cabrera, President of Guatemala.

A few years later Monteroso was said to have been a participant in another revolutionary movement against Guatemala. Both movements were defeated, and Monteroso changed his base of operations to Nicaragua and rose to the rank of general in the army of that country. His principal military work in Nicaragua was as general and second in command of troops under Gen. Emiliano Chamorro, who in 1910 succeeded in forcing Zalya, the military dictator, out of Nicaragua, and who as a political exile died recently in New York City.

Monteroso then organized and led the troops which in 1911 started a revolution from the Nicaraguan border against President Davilla of Honduras. This resulted in placing in power as President of Honduras Manuel Bonilla. From then on Gen. Monteroso was extremely active in Honduran military and political affairs. He served as military governor and commander at Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, and also as governor and military commander at various prominent garrisons in Honduras, such as La Celba and Puerto Cortez.

The Mexican Government, Peralta and Rosales, in combination with various Guatemalan and Nicaraguan revolutionary leaders, decided that in so much as Monteroso had participated in movements against Guatemala and in other Central American countries, he therefore would add a great deal of strength to Carranza's plans to procure control of Central America. Gen. Monteroso was approached openly with a proposition to participate in Carranza's plans, being sounded out by one of Carranza's personal representatives. The following signed statement by Gen. Monteroso confirms this claim:

"During the year 1916, President V. Carranza of Mexico, through a confidential representative, made me the proposition mentioned hereinafter. At that time I was military governor and commandant for the Government of Honduras at La Celba.

"The confidential agent of President V. Carranza of Mexico was Senor Gustave Solano, who at the time this proposition was made to me was at New Orleans, La. Knowing that I was acquainted with Alfredo Quinones, a native of Salvador, Gustave Solano, who is now private secretary of Espinosa Mirelles, the governor of the Mexican State of Coahuila, therefore authorized Alfredo Quinones to propose to me in writing, which he did, that I would receive a special commission from President Carranza as the official, directing head of a revolutionary movement which President Carranza wanted me to start in Honduras and operate out of that country against the Government of Guatemala.

"Gustave Solano, by his credentials and otherwise, fully proved to Alfredo Quinones his complete authority to act for President Carranza in this matter, and Alfredo Quinones in turn proved to my entire satisfaction regarding the complete authority of Gustave Solano and himself to act in this matter.

"I was assured by these representatives of President Carranza that the Government of Mexico would finance this revolutionary movement to any extent, no matter how high the expenses might run, and that the entire revolutionary movement would be completely outfitted with all necessary arms, ammunition, artillery, machine guns, machetes, and all other war supplies, equipment, and any financial payment for my services I might designate.

"Furthermore that President Carranza would supply me with two or more steamships which would be used in the revolutionary movement against the Guatemala coast, was agreed. This proposed revolutionary movement, so I was informed by Gustave Solano, through Alfredo Quinones, would include a large number of Mexican Army officers and soldiers.

"I was also informed at that time by these representatives of President Carranza that this revolutionary movement was part of the complete plans of President V. Carranza, of Mexico, to overthrow, by a revolutionary movement on the part of Mexico, Estrada Cabrera, President of Guatemala, and was to be the opening movement on the part of Mexico to become the domineering power in all of the Central American countries.

"I also at that time understood from these parties that the financial backing and total expenses of this proposed revolutionary movement against Guatemala, as offered to me through these parties, who were the confidential agents of President Carranza, was to be paid with money furnished for this purpose to President V. Carranza of Mexico by H. Von Eckhardt, the German Ambassador to Mexico City.

"So that I would be able to secure the full plans of Mexico regarding this proposition, therefore, for a considerable time, I conducted negotiations regarding these matters with Gustave Solano through Alfredo Quinones, and after I had secured complete information regarding same, I then emphatically told these parties to inform President Carranza and everybody else implicated in this proposition that under no circumstances would I be a party to any such proposition, first on account of the fact that I was a native of Guatemala, and always had been and would be the loyal supporter of my native country, and never, under any circumstances would I cooperate with Mexican forces against Guatemala, and in the second place, inasmuch as I was a strong admirer and personal friend of President Cabrera of Guatemala, that for no amount of money or promise of future political reward or power, such as was promised me to handle this revolutionary matter, would I ever be connected with any revolutionary plans against him. Furthermore, even if I were against Mr. Cabrera, I would never have anything to do with a proposition that was or would be financed or supported by Germany or any German interest.

"On account of the rumors which seem to be well established regarding the fact that the Government of Mexico is now said to be financing and cooperating with a revolutionary movement against the Government of Guatemala, which is to be started in the near future out of the Mexican States of Chiapas and Tabasco, I have further reasons.

"Believing now is the time to inform fully President Estrada Cabrera regarding these matters, therefore I have made this written statement as to the facts mentioned herein and same has been signed by me at New Orleans, La., on this 8th day of September, 1919.

" (Signed) ANT. M. MONTEROSO."

Carranza, Rosales, and Peralta, in making the above-mentioned proposition through Carranza's personal representative to Monteroso, made one of the most serious mistakes regarding their Central American plans. For, unknown to them, Monteroso had made his peace with Estrada Cabrera, of Guatemala, and at that moment was a strong ally of the latter.

Through Monteroso the Governments of Honduras and Guatemala, in addition to information they had already regarding Mexico's intrigues and that of Peralta and Rosales, procured many additional facts bearing on these schemes.

The United States Government at this time was informed in my reports regarding the presence of Gustave Solano in New Orleans and his activities in connection with the Rosales junta. I also knew of Carranza's plans to seduce away from their Governments the principal officers in the Honduran and Guatemalan Armies. But at that time it was deemed inadvisable to flush the game and secure possession of documentary evidence involving these parties.

On or about August 16, 1919, via Vaccaro Bros. steamship Ceiba, Gen. Monteroso arrived in New Orleans to engage medical attention for old wounds, received by him in 20 years of revolutionary action. While there he resided at the residence of Miss Clotilde Martinez, No. 1230 Joseph Street.

Through mutual friends I met Gen. Monterosa, and after becoming friendly with him brought up the subject of Carranza's plans during 1916 and 1917 to overthrow Central American Governments. I told him that I was thoroughly familiar with Carranza's offers to him to participate in this plot.

Gen. Monteroso very frankly admitted the entire matter and related to me the facts mentioned in his statement. I then told him I wanted to bring this matter to the attention of a strong friend connected with the United States Government, and asked him if he would reduce his verbal statement to writing and sign same. He agreed to do this.

So here could be no doubt regarding Gen. Monteroso's statement, I had one of his closest personal and political supporters in New Orleans, Rafael H. Valle, certify to the statement, and Valle also signed same, as the reproduced copy shows. Valle is now secretary at Washington of what is known as the Border Dispute Commission of Honduras.

Peralta and Rosales, in connection with their junta work at New Orleans, began to arrange speedily the various armed expeditions, one of which was to leave New Orleans, another from near Belize, British Honduras, and a third from Payo Obispo, in the Mexican Territory of Quintana Roo. At this time their plans were switched, whereby, with arms, ammunition, boats, and other supplies of war, purchased in the United States with Mexican and German money, they would attack the Honduran ports of Puerto Cortez, Puerto Barrios, and La Ceiba. And while they were carrying on operations and bombarding from water, their friends in the various towns and circumjacent to them were to uprising and attack by land.

After these three ports were in possession of the Rosales revolutionists their friends and supporters in many other towns throughout the entire country were to rise against the Government. They stated that it would then be a question of only three or four weeks before the capital would be in their possession and that Rosales would then be revolutionary acting president of Honduras.

The Honduran Congress would be immediately convened, and Rosales, backed by his revolutionary army, would be in a position to domineer the actions of the legislative body and Congress would immediately proclaim Rosales the legal active president pending an election. The election, due to Rosales's military power, would, of course, as they said, automatically place him to succeed himself. Their plans, as soon as Rosales became revolutionary president, contemplated additional arms, ammunition, supplies, and other sinews purchased in the United States with Mexican and German money supplied Rosales, and which he could have had shipped from the United States if he had been in charge of Honduras.

Additional quantities of arms, ammunition, and boats, the latter fitted out with rapid-fire guns, were to be supplied in large consignments from Mexico. They were to be concentrated in the Honduran ports on the Atlantic Ocean and at Amapala on the Pacific. Rosales, then in Honduras, proposed to raise, arm, and equip an army of 25,000 men and, at a given time, this army from Honduras was to invade, from Honduras, Guatemala and Nicaragua.

The boats supplied by Mexico were then to attack the Guatemalan ports of Puerto Barrios and Livingston on the Atlantic, and San Jose on the Pacific; likewise the Nicaraguan ports of Bluefields on the Atlantic, and Leon and Managua on the Pacific.

While Guatemala was being assailed on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts by boats supplied by Mexico and under control of Rosales and his Central American leaders, and invaded by from ten to fifteen thousand Honduran troops, officered for the great part by Mexicans, Carranza was to attack Guatemala from the south with an army of between six and ten thousand Mexican troops, which were to operate out of the Mexican State of Chiapas.

The Guatemalan revolutionary junta in Mexico was at this time arming and equipping a revolutionary group in that part of Guatemala which is known as the Peten, under the command of Dr. Eusebio Toledo Lopez, whose seconds in command were Gen. Carter and Prado Romana.

Among the most active of the Guatemalan revolutionary junta in Mexico then was Gen. Jose Leon Castillo, who had been provided with funds by Villavicentio, Mexican consul general at New Orleans, and who had been sent by Villavicentio to Mexico.

Gen. Juan Ignacio Toledo, Gen. Luis F. Obregon, Gen. Jose G. Salazar, Gen. Isidoro Valdez, Dr. Jose Llerena, Max Tejeda Jose Prado Romana, Dr. Jorge Guzman, the party Peralta appointed as his private secretary when in Mexico City, and who is well remembered in New Orleans as the person who wrote a book at the request of Villavicentio which was the most extreme attack on the United States and on President Wilson ever written or prepared, and Dr. Felipe Obregon, who were among the principal members of the Guatemalan revolutionary group which planned and perfected the movement out of Chiapas and which was to be carried through by the troops of Mexico.

Dr. Felipe Obregon was the active head of the Guatemalan junta in Mexico, and his first assistant was Lic Francisco E. Toledo. Their headquarters were at No. 3 de Guerrero, No. 64 Bis, Mexico D. F.

Dr. Guzman, included in the above list, it will be recalled, was appointed private secretary to Peralta when the latter made his visit to Mexico to confer with Carranza and others concerning the Central American movement. Dr. Guzman also attained notoriety in New Orleans as the author of a book, written at the request of Villavicentio, and which was regarded as the most extreme attack on the United States, and on President Wilson, ever written or prepared by a Latin American. I contrived to gain proof sheets of this book and submitted them to the Department of Justice, on the receipt of which the State Department warned Villavicentio to refrain from circulating the work.

At the time Mexico, through Rosales, Peralta, and their associates, planned to invade and overrun Guatemala, from Honduras, with an army of 10,000 men, Rosales, with Nicaragua revolutionists, was to invade Nicaragua. Simultaneous with this invasion, the Nicaraguan ports on the Atlantic and Pacific were to be attacked and out of Costa Rica an expedition under the personal command of Dr. Julian Irias was to invade Nicaragua inland.

These revolutionary plans, involving Central America, were scheduled to take definite shape and the three proposed expeditions were to begin to function during the latter part of September, 1916. The Honduran Government, however, about this time, officially, through their minister at Washington, complained to the State Department regarding the revolutionary activities of Rosales, Peralta, and their associates. It was claimed that the State Department assured the Government of Honduras that if any of these revolutionary expeditions landed in Honduras that United States marines would be landed at once and would block completely the efforts of the revolutionists.

Rosales and Peralta, so they claimed, were told by their legal advisor in Washington that even if they were successful in landing their expeditions in Honduras, and before they had time to secure control of that country, their plans would be interfered with by the landing of American marines. They also averred at this time that other advisors, including prominent business men in New York City, and elsewhere in the United States, and who were not familiar with Rosales's Mexican connections, informed them that it would be best that they hold up their movement, pending the outcome of the presidential election in the United States in November of that year.

Rosales and Peralta, believing that the Republican Party would be victorious, and that if they did the probabilities were that a Republican President would immediately formulate a strong Mexican policy, resulting in the downfall of Carranza, and if this indeed did happen and it was shown that Rosales had become revolutionary President of Honduras, through the efforts of Carranza, and that in turn Rosales, for Carranza, whether successful or not, had endeavored to overthrow the legal Governments of Nicaragua and Guatemala, the Republican President, on his inauguration, would bring about the downfall of Rosales, together with that of Carranza.

They therefore decided to postpone all their revolutionary plans until after the presidential election in the United States.

As customary with such revolutionists they then began "playing both ends against the middle" and posed as political exiles, holding that they had been persecuted and evicted from their native country, and set up claims that Bertrand had been elected illegally as President of Honduras. The new plan included spreading of propaganda against the Presidents of Honduras, Nicaragua, and Guatemala.

The propaganda included efforts on their part to prepare an alibi which would give them reason to explain at a later date to the United States Government the necessity for the Rosales revolutionary movement in Honduras. This embraced the following letter from Rosales to the United States Department of State:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 26, 1916.

HON. ROBERT LANSING,
Secretary of State.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: As a representative of a majority of the citizens of Honduras, I desire to call your attention to the following statement of facts and conditions as they now exist in Honduras.

As you have no doubt been informed, Dr. Francisco Bertrand has recently been elected President of Honduras and takes office February 1, and it is this alleged election that I desire to call to your attention. The majority of the citizens of Honduras are adverse to his taking office for the reasons hereinafter stated.

The election is illegal under the constitution, which specifically provided in article 104:

"A citizen who has held the presidency can not be reelected nor elected vice president for the term immediately following, neither can his blood relatives four times removed or two times removed by marriage be elected president or vice president."

This exclusion could not be expressed in more positive terms. It not only refers to a citizen who has held the presidency but includes any blood relatives or relatives by marriage as specifically expressed. Article 105 of the constitution states:

"No citizen who may have held the office of president of the country within the last six months of his constitutional term of office, nor any relative referred to in the previous article, shall be eligible for reelection to this office."

This provision is likewise forcibly expressed.

Article 106 of the constitution states:

"In case of the permanent absence of the President of the Republic, the executive power shall fall upon the vice president, and in case of the absence of the vice president the office shall go to the designates in the order of their appointments."

It is by virtue of article 106 that Mr. Bertrand is seeking the color of right for his election.

Six months prior to the election he took what might be termed a furlough from office, but did not, in fact, relinquish the office of president, remaining the entire time in the executive mansion and availing himself of all the privileges of this high office, even as to the guard of honor, thereby seeking to evade, as far as possible, the purpose and meaning of this section.

During this entire period he carried on a very extensive and vigorous campaign for reelection, going so far as to suppress any and all newspapers which dared disavow his right to reelection, positively forbidding free speech, and incarcerating many of the leading citizens of Honduras who dared express themselves in any way adversely to his desires. Officers of the army were dismissed and no one, whether civil or military, was allowed to do anything that would in any way affect his plans.

This dictatorship has brought about a dreadful feeling of unrest in all classes. The people of Honduras are proud and jealous of their constitution, it having been attained after a series of revolutions that cost thousands of lives and millions of dollars, and they do not feel that at this time it should be in this manner trampled under foot. They therefore are appealing to you to use your good offices to bring about a peaceful solution of this problem that threatens to deluge them again in civil war and wreck what is now a peace-loving and prosperous country.

This is not a political matter nor simply one of party, but a nation-wide movement for the protection of their rights, and I am inclosing herewith opinions as to the unconstitutionality of this election from men whose friendship toward the United States is unchallenged. They are as follows:

Dr. Jose Maria Ochoa, Velasquez, ex-minister of RR. EE; Dr. Jesu Bendana, ex-subsecretary of RR. EE; Dr. Frederico Ucles, ex-magistrate of the Supreme Court of Justice; Dr. Felipe Calix, ex-magistrate of the Supreme Court of Justice; Dr. Jesus M. Alvarado, ex-magistrate of the Supreme Court of Justice; Dr. Salvador Aguirre, ex-magistrate of the Supreme Court of Justice; Lic. Guillermo Rivera, ex-magistrate of the first court; Lic. J. Jesus Alvarado, ex-attorney general of the first court; Lic. Jose Maria Sandoval, ex-judge of the civil and professor of administrative justice; Lic. Federico Canalee, ex-subsecretary of the ministry of justice and judge; Lic. Cristobal Canales, ex-administrator of taxes; Dr. Isadero Martinez S., ex-deputy of the National Congress; Dr. Pauline Valladares, ex-deputy of the National Congress; Dr. Teodoro Boquin, ex-judge; Dr. Prudencio Martinez and Dr. Pedro Amaya.

The citizens of Honduras most naturally look to the United States for the protection of their rights. President Wilson has many times expressed publicly his desire to maintain peace in these Central and South American Republics, and he quite recently in a public address stated that the United States would recognize only legally constituted governments, and we have been inspired by his attitude to present this matter in the hope that the United States will take some action to prevent this very apparent injustice and direct violation of our constitution.

I think that from a perusal of the above you can not help but be of the opinion that if a President should be able to take a furlough for six months preceding an election that the tenure of office could be continued indefinitely to the utter disregard of the constitution, and defeating not only the letter but the intent of this provision, which is sufficiently plain to show that it was the desire of the framers thereof to prevent a man succeeding himself in this high office.

I shall be most happy at any time that you may find it convenient to call on you and go into this matter in detail and furnish you with overwhelming proofs of the merit of our claim.

I am represented in Washington by John Doyle Carmody, Esq., attorney and counselor at law, who will in my behalf receive any communication that you desire to transmit.

I am, sir, with consideration of the highest respect,

Your obedient servant,

M. B. ROSALES.

At this time the Guatemalan section of the Rosales junta from New Orleans and from Mexico City began circulating large quantities in the United States of Guatemalan revolutionary propaganda, of which the following, both in English and Spanish, is typical:

"HORRIBLE SITUATION IN GUATEMALA—VICTIMS OF ITS PRESIDENT.

"The rumors reaching us from every corner of Central America, in a manner clearly denoting a lamentable protestation, assure us of the fact that the mandatory of the unfortunate Republic of Guatemala, Manuel Estrada Cabrera, is hastily making ready to effect his fourth reelection to the magistracy of that country, and, laboring under such impressions, the reader can easily imagine the pseudopantomime or dumb show which awaits a helpless people, who, indeed, deserve better days, by forcing to the ballot box disguised, destitute Indians and armed soldiers of the nation and the gentle citizens, who will no doubt go to the polls 'voluntarily,' under the pressure of the lash and the threatening point of the bayonet.

"By the time the coup d'état begins to take the form of reality, we shall have our pens in line, ready to strike at this fallacious election, and in the meantime we shall take pleasure in giving full account in the extensive English language of the ignominious and celebrated personage who actually occupies our minds, so that here in the United States proper the people may arrive at their own conclusion, no matter how remote, of the caliber and instinct of the ruler of Guatemala.

"As the reader turns over these pages he shall read of the 'victims of Estrada Cabrera,' accusing vehemently the horrible situation of Guatemala and the painful via crucis the country has been going through for a period of 17 years of sempiternal terrorism.

"It is a well-known fact that Estrada Cabrera has extinguished unscrupulously and entirely ruined our foreign credit. He has in the same way emptied the public treasury by transferring the cash to places of his own selection; he has brought the standard of the nation to so low an exchange as 60 to 1, and has converted our institutions of learning into regular centers of corruption and espionage.

"He has granted to foreigners the mines of the country under all sorts of concessions, regardless of the intrinsic rights of third persons. However, he has, in turn, presented us with his generous instinct in the persons of the widows and orphans, who weep sadly for the surreptitious disappearance of their beloved ones, and, as a culmination of his heroic achievements, he has erected the numerous necropolis for the interment of his defenseless victims.

"It is also a plain truth that he has brought his hegemony and state of terror to bear upon the neighboring Republics of Central America, trampling upon their last remaining vestiges of independence and liberty. He has to-day an army composed of his degenerated followers, who know no pay day, it being a matter of regret to notice how foreign visitors are shocked on seeing them shoeless, hungry, and ragged, exchanging their swords for nourishment, and at the same time hiding with shame their worn-out uniforms.

"He has substituted the legislative and the judicial bodies with herds of eunuchs, who enjoy themselves in depriving their fellow-beings of their honest belongings, disguised, for the purpose, under the dignified purple of the Goddess of Themis; and the fact shall not escape us that instead of making use of the invulnerable sons of the land for honorable purposes and the aggrandisement of the country, Cabrera employs the unworthy service of degenerated foreigners in order to obtain his ends, and it is a salient truth, that by means of servile promises made to the Department of State at Washington in former administrations (for, it shall be known that Mr. Wilson—the altruist master—has never and will never utilize the corrupted element of Cabrera) he succeeded in shaking his bloody hand with that of Mr. Knox, thus silencing, in effusive pact, the disorder of things and state of terror, in which for a period of 17 years of agony he has kept the Republic of Guatemala a fruitful accomplishment which justifies the flatterers-by-trade in calling him the 'sublimar exalted ruler,' when not classifying him as the direct descendant of Charles V.

"It is likewise an incontrovertible fact, the truthfulness of which jumps to the eye, that the execrable candidate in question leaves behind neither industries, monuments, public roads, navy or wealth, but in turn he leaves us a Guatemala wrapped in a regrettable sudarium.

"In order that the reader may not think we are laboring under a passionate inspiration in expressing these opinions, we refer him to any of the publications inserted below, which have been seeing the public light in various languages and throughout the civilized world, and from the columns of which they have commented, with impartiality, the countless errors and aberrations of his administration, and very particularly the crimes thus far perpetrated on the persons of subjects who dared express opinions contrary to those of the 'Benemerito' of Guatemala, or else who refused to accede to his will when the same would have compromised their dignity and probity.

"The consummated facts herein referred to have been, as already stated, thoroughly ventilated, reproduced, and rudely censored by the press in general, and it is on this account the thousand-and-one publications we have now in our possession, and which we will make use of when the day of judgment for Cabrera before the civilized nations shall appear in the eye of universal history.

"These publications have been mostly written in French and Spanish and are hardly known in English, for which reason we have concluded to issue this pamphlet in this language, so that the generous and noble people of the United States of America, where the cradle of democracy swings full blast, where liberty rings over hill and dale to the remotest corner of the land, where justice and human life is so much respected and venerated; here, where the germ of despotism finds only sterile ground for development, and where the culprit is abhorred and duly punished—may know who is the tyrant of Guatemala, who still pretends to reelect himself for six years longer to the presidency of that country.

"This crime horrified everybody, but could not be averted, notwithstanding all the efforts made to save him by the strong and powerful German colony in Coban. The notorious Juan Barrios M., together with Julio Godoy, Samuel de Leon, and Juan Rafael Zu Niga, were Cabrera's appointed executioners. In order to make himself more favorably known to the chief executioner, the latter of the trio of murderers kicked the dead man in the face, calling him all the bad names that only a man of his breed could know.

"Several persons witnessed this, among them Mr. Jose Maria Meza, of Nicaragua, who is living in his country now, after having been a prisoner for a long time in Guatemala. His crime was that he witnessed this murder, and that was enough for Cabrera to put him in prison. A friend of his, Mr. William Ibs, the foreign representative of the St. Charles Hotel, in New Orleans, who was at the time of the imprisonment and the murder of Mr. Sta. Cruz, employed in one of the large German firms at Coban, also testifies to the truth of what we have said about this foul murder of Sta. Cruz. The notorious Juan Barrios M. was made minister of foreign affairs as a reward for his part in this crime.

"Ex-Congressman Jose Maria Urbizo, shot near El Chato, where he was sent by Cabrera with a military escort under Capt. Dionisio Gutierrez, who made Urbizo walk 12 miles barefooted over a rocky road, helping him along with the bayonet and butt, until they arrived at the spot selected for the execution, where the half-dead, blood-covered victim was finally shot to death.

"Then the soldiers tied the hands and feet of the corpse over a post and threw it into a near-by ravine to serve as a meal for the jackals and turkey buzzards. Miguel Cuadra, of Nicaragua, just happened to pass near the spot at the time of the execution, and, attracted by the rifle shots, he witnessed the whole grewsome performance.

"The mayor of El Chato, who heard of this murder, and who thought it the outcome of a drunken brawl, reported the matter to Cabrera; but the mandatory told the astonished mayor:

"If you don't dismiss the matter quickly from your mind, you will go over the same road that Urbizo did."

"The crime of this unfortunate young man had consisted of some complimentary verses about Jose Leon Castillo.

"Gen. Jose Maria Reyna Barrios, murdered by Oscar Zollinger at the suggestion of Cabrera, as the worldly press has denounced.

"Dr. Manuel Enrique Araujo, President of El Salvador, killed by means of machetes in the Park Bolivar, in the city of San Salvador. The murderers confessed and were shot by the Government of Salvador.

"Gen. Manuel Lisandro Barillas, ex-President of Guatemala, and selected for this purpose by two well-known military men, Gen. Jose Maria Lima and Col. Onofre Bone. After having confessed all they were told to do by Cabrera, the Mexican Government had these two fellows shot.

"One hundred boy students of the Military School of Guatemala, who were slaughtered on the Plaza de Armas of Guatemala City for the only reason that during a diplomatic reception one of the boys fired a shot at Cabrera, whom he unfortunately did not kill.

"Under the pretext of this one shot, that he called a conspiracy, Cabrera had them and a lot of his political prisoners shot, whom he suspected to be in the plot with Manuel Mandrinan, who placed the bomb in the 7 Avenida Sur, and which exploded right under Cabrera's coach, but unfortunately did not kill him.

"The iron box that was a part of this bomb was made for Mandrinan in the shop of Tinetti Bros., two Italians, who did not even ask him what he wanted his box for. Nevertheless, they were imprisoned, and it took the Italian Government 14 months to get them out of Cabrera's jail. The names of the people shot in prison during this carnage of Cabrera's are:

"Engineer Eduardo Rubio Pilona, candidate for the Presidency of Guatemala; Dr. and Gral. Mateo; F. Morales; Dr. Francisco Ruiz; Mr. Juan Viteri; Col. Manuel P. Cordova; and Fulgencio Cortez; and the Italian Signor Vinelli.

"In the city of Antigua there were executed: Enrique Acena, Col. Sarvello Solorzano, Pedro Cofino, Rafael Vides, Ramon Palencia, and others whose names we ignore.

"During those days four of the sons of the best families of the country were suspected as accomplices in the bomb plot, and under persecution of a lot of policemen they fled into a house in the Callejon de Judios. Here they were surrounded immediately by 500 soldiers and, after having received their toll, they shot each other to death in order not to fall into the hands of Cabrera, where unspeakable tortures awaited them, as they knew only too well.

"A few days before this murder Mr. Manuel Lopez Cojullun, president of the Workmen's Club, was flogged to death by the captain of police, Ramon Bonilla, who some years before had murdered Gen. Martin Barrundia. Cabrera, by a special arrangement, listened to the killing of Mr. Cojullun over the telephone without losing a single detail of this terrible murder; for Cabrera had given his murderer most explicit orders to open Cojullun's mouth and to administer poison to him.

"When Cojullun objected to this, Cabrera's beast took his heavy police club and started to beat the man literally to death. First he broke all the man's teeth, then his arms, legs, and ribs, until the unfortunate man was nothing but a groaning mass of bloody flesh and broken bones, and—the President of Guatemala, Manuel Cabrera, the benemerito of the country—listened to this and enjoyed, as the pervert that he is.

"Gen. Plutarco Bowen, kidnaped in Tapachula, Mexico, by Hippolito Lamber, a Frenchman, and some other of Cabrera's bailiffs, and brought on Guatemalan soil, where he was shot in the city of San Marcos after the second amnesty had been declared. When about to be executed Bowen made a few brief remarks, ending like this:

"I am going to my grave now because I hate a tyrant; and if on the other side of the grave there are also tyrants I shall fight them again as I have done here on earth."

"Gen. Calizto Mendizabal was murdered by Cabrera himself. After he had been offered a glass of Cabrera's famous 'cocktail' he died from the effects of the poison contained in his drink.

"Mr. Rafael Prado Romano and his brother, Ldo Transito Rojas, shot in Jutiapa, together with his 15-year-old boy. This murder of a father and of his innocent boy was an awful sad thing. The father is said to have pleaded earnestly and long with Cabrera's murderers to content themselves with taking his life, but to spare that of an innocent child, who could not possibly have known anything about politics. He pleaded in vain, and he might as well have addressed stone figures as to expect any mercy from any of Cabrera's hirelings.

"When at last this horrible fact dawned on the unfortunate father, he embraced his boy, imploring him to die a brave lad, and, calling down the ire of God upon his murderers, the father and son fell dead under the hail of bullets fired at them by Cabrera's murderers. Cabrera was told this sad story, and he is said to have gloated over it for weeks in brutish satisfaction. And this man is to-day a friend of Mr. Knox and the famous Mr. Sulzer, of New York.

"Ldo Mariano Castillo, Luis Antonio Giron, Gen. Eugenio Monterosso, Col. Transito Retana, murdered on the frontier of Salvador; Francisco Carrascosa, shot at El Plantanar by Gen. Larrave, who showed his sorrow for having been ordered to shoot this brave young lad, who defied the tyrant until his death, by cursing the tyranny for this wherever he went.

"Antonio Lopez, who was poisoned by orders of Cabrera in Tapachula, Mexico.

"Bruno Maldonado, who was taken from the prison and given instructions by Cabrera to murder ex-President Barillas; but Maldonado warned Barillas of this plot and gave him a chance to flee. He then returned to Cabrera with the story that Barillas had escaped him. Cabrera had him immediately flogged to death, as he has done with many others that did not follow his instructions to the letter.

"Dr. Hermelino Quezada, a Mexican, shot in Coatepeque; Heraclio R. Trejo, shot in San Marcos; Victor Fenjler, shot in El Rodeo; Adrian Victoria, shot in Techulután; Alberto Lallande, Gaudencia Morales, murdered in El Rancho de San Augustin; Doroteo Reyes, murdered in San Pablo; Guadeloupe Chacon, murdered in San Marcos; Martin Munoz, shot in Ayutla; Guillermo Garcia, shot in El Cucho; Luis Felipe Arias, a famous musician, murdered by an Italian agent of Cabrera.

"In Mazatenango, Cabrera had the commanding officer, and with him seven men, shot for rebellion and sedition; Neftali Palomeque, a Mexican, shot by Cabrera's order because he protected Guatemalan refugees on Mexican soil; Manuel Diaz, for having distributed some pamphlets during the presidential elections favoring J. Leon Castillo.

"Bernardo Lemus, from Salvador; Presbitero Beltran, shot in the church of San Francisco by a certain Mendoza inspector of police, who later on confessed this crime during an operation and while under the influence of choleraform; Jaime Lopez, from Salvador, shot in San Marcos; Ernesto Huerta, shot in Sta Rosa by Col. Silverio Herrarte; five Mexicans and one Colombian with the name of Vallarino, shot in the port of San Jose by the captain of the port, Salvador Cabrera, who had the bodies cast into the sea, with the exception of Vallarino, whom they did not see on account of the dark night, and who was still alive and was able to hide under the wharf.

"Villarino made this crime public and died in the penitentiary; Primencio Aguirre, shot in El Chaguite de Agua Blanca by Capt. Cleofas Paredew; Luis Espino, shot in the Sta Catarina by Capt. Benjamin Martinez; Lieut. Carlos Garcia, shot in Jutiapa; Adolfo Garcia, shot in the Sta Catarina by Capt. Mercedes Aldana; Col. Tiburcio Resinos, killed by orders of the captain of Jutiapa, through a criminal with the name of Saturnio Orellana, in Salvador; Saturnino was pardoned for nine murders that he had committed and also made a sergeant on the police force of Jutiapa.

"Celso Martinez and his brother Francisco, shot near Lake Ayarza after having received about 1,500 lashes each for several weeks; Aquilino Sandoval, shot by Pauline Quintana through orders of Gen. Resonos, of Jutiapa; Jesus Argueta, shot by orders of Gen. David Barrientos in Jalapa; Francisco Guzman Montenegro, shot by Col. Ramon Ludero, commander in Monjas; Fernando Chinchilla, shot by Ezequiel Morales in Calderas de Agua Blanca through orders of the commander of Jutiapa.

"Alberto Cantoral, who was given up by the Government of Salvador and then murdered in Jutiapa by Capt. Marcial Lelva; Felipe Telly, shot at the frontier of Salvador when he was handed over to Cabrera's soldiers; 18 men shot at Momotenango; Dr. Joaquin Yela, a very important man, killed in the penitentiary; and, lately, Ldo D. Manuel Paz starved to death.

" POISONED.

"Gen. Calizto Mendizabal, Felipe Cruz, poisoned on his plantation by two men sent from the city of Guatemala; Gen. Luis Garcia Leon, Dr. Jose Montoya, Dr. Antonio Lopez, Col. Roque Morales, Wenceslao Chacon, Juan Espino, and Antonio Espino, poisoned on the same day by Gen. Doroteo Rosinos in the jail at Jutiapa, and then reported by him as having died suddenly; Francisco Cabrera, the President's own brother; Landetino Gonzales, and others.

" PERSECUTED AND MURDERED ABROAD.

"Gen. Pedro Aguilar, Col. Mateo Paz Pinto, Capt. Jacinto J. Castro, Eugenio Gonzalez, Flavio Sandoval, Mrs. Elena de Cuellar, Mrs. Soledad Valladares, and Col. Manuel F. Rivera. All these are Cabrera's victims in Salvador.

"Capt. Julian Belteton, Gen. Jose Najera, Col. Jose Maria Navas, Lieut. Julio Molta, Felix Lainfiesta, Capt. Jesus Villeda. All these were Cabrera's victims in Honduras.

"Lds. Emilio de Leon, Laureano Urrutia, J. Maria Urrutia y Guzman, victims of Cabrera in Mexico; Ldo Miguel Vaeladares de la Vega, in Nicaragua.

"Lds. J. F. Gonzales, Juan F. Ponciano, Mardoqueo Jerez, Socorro Lopez, Capt. J. Cifuentes. All these were Cabrera's victims in Nicaragua.

"Jose B. Samoyoa, in New York.

"Dr. Jorge Veles, in the Argentine Republic. Dr. Patrocínio B. Mendia, in Comitan, Mexico.

"Manuel Cabrera, President of Guatemala, has always a good supply of murderers on hand that he uses in those special occasions, when it becomes necessary in his opinion to do away with somebody dangerous to himself, and in Guatemala these gentry are popularly known as the private executioners of the 'Benemerito de la Patria.'"

Cabrera, becoming alarmed at the activities of the Mexican-Rosales-Peralta plots in connection with the Guatemalan group, immediately began extending active cooperation to the Felixista Mexican revolutionary party. The Felixista party at once established a junta in Guatemala City, and from Guatemalan territory launched their operations against the Mexican State of Chiapas. During the latter part of 1916, and from January on in 1917, President Cabrera, of Guatemala, through the Felixistas, who had secured control meanwhile of nearly all of Chiapas, in this way protected himself from a prospective invasion of Guatemala by Carranza's troops from Chiapas.

From that time to this the Felixistas and various other revolutionary factions and bandits in Chiapas have kept Carranza so busy in that State that he has had no time to think of Guatemala.

The full details of President Cabrera's participation in Mexican revolutionary affairs of the Felixistas will be stated and proven by documents in a subsequent narration.

During 1916 and until the latter part of 1917 Mexico had no consular or diplomatic representative in Guatemala. It is claimed that Mexico, in 1917, sent a minister to Guatemala, who died shortly after his arrival. It is also claimed by Mexicans friendly to Carranza that from the latter part of 1917 until quite recently every diplomatic representative that Carranza sent to Guatemala either has died or had continued sickness.

Among Carranza's diplomatic corps they refer to a post in Guatemala at the present time as though Carranza had "become soured on them," for when one of them is sent to Guatemala it is regarded openly as "a death sentence."

The activities of Rosales, Peralta, and their Central American associates at their headquarters junta in New Orleans continued actively along the lines as set forth in the above narration. They were marking time, waiting the outcome of the American presidential election.

Peralta's enemies within his own party, who secretly hoped for and worked for his downfall, due to his arbitrary and lordly manner of conducting affairs, and envious of his influence with Rosales, brought charges before Rosales "sub-rosa" that Peralta had appropriated at least $15,000 of the $50,000 he raised from Carranza on his trip to Mexico City.

Rosales, however, was afraid to break with Peralta, regardless whether or not the reports were true. Peralta explained, it is said, that the $15,000 in question was distributed by him in Mexico among minor parties, who were paid to support the Rosales plans.

Whatever did remain of the original $50,000 advanced by Carranza, it is a fact that Peralta and Rosales proceeded to expend the balance with a prodigality that occasioned comment. Peralta "blossomed forth" with numerous diamonds, stones of size and luster.

Carranza, through Villa Vicentio, consul at New Orleans, pressed Rosales and Peralta constantly to begin immediately on their proposed armed invasions. To assuage Carranza they replied that they were waiting the outcome of the American election, and they added that they "needed time" to bring pressure to bear on Senators and Members of the Congress to forestall the carrying out of the rumored plan of landing American marines in Honduras.

During the early part of November, 1916, Peralta and Rosales decided it was advisable for the former to proceed to New York City, Washington, and other cities to endeavor to secure influences, which, in turn, would be utilized with Congressmen, Senators, and other Government officials, so that when the Rosales expedition invaded Honduras the United States either would delay in sending the marines or would not send them at all.

Peralta on this trip was to complete also final arrangements with Dr. Julian Irias, who was making his headquarters at Washington and New York City, for the active participation of Dr. Irias and his supporters in the expedition out of Nicaragua and Costa Rica against the Honduran troops. At the same time Rosales and his three expeditions from New Orleans, Payo Obispo, and Belize would move against Honduras from the sea.

On November 6, Peralta, accompanied by his wife and by Mrs. Rosales, who, Rosales later told me, while he was under the influence of liquor:

"You know Pedro is a very shrewd hombre, and his mission is a most vitally serious one. It was wise to have Mrs. Rosales along to keep an eye on him."

Before leaving New Orleans, Rosales gave Peralta several letters to be presented to parties who Rosales and Peralta said were friends of theirs. Among these letters was the following:

NEW ORLEANS, LA., November 5, 1916.

HON. SAM S. WRIGHT,
Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

MY DEAR SIR AND FRIEND: My special representative in the United States, Mr. Pedro Grave de Peralta, is going to Cedar Rapids; he is well known to you, and he has always spoken about you in the highest terms as a progressive man of whom our country could expect much in the case that we could get you interested in that rich part of our country. It would be agreeable to me if you should enter into an arrangement with Mr. Grave de Peralta, and you may be assured that any agreement signed by him will have my entire sanction, and he has my power of attorney to that effect.

Believe me, your friend and servant.

M. B. ROSALES.

Knowing in advance of Peralta's proposed trip and purposes of same, which were duly reported to the Department of Justice, I was requested to make arrangements to meet Peralta in New York City on his arrival there, so that the department would be informed of his further activities as they were unfolded.

I left Rosales "in safe hands," with one of my assistants, in whom the general had complete confidence. Before leaving him he informed me fully regarding matters Peralta was scheduled to attend to on this trip and handed me the following letter to give to Peralta:

"MY DEAR FRIEND: I have received your letter of the 8th from Birmingham. I am glad to see that you arrived there all right. I have noted what you have to say about Mr. Baird, and I hope that you will be able to get something from him.

"He has not written to me up to now, and I want you to keep on after him. Mr. Jones does not leave until to-night, but he is going to Washington first. It would be well for you to talk the most important matter with Dardano and Labo, but in a very reserved manner.

"Mr. Jones said that the day that you took the train a negro spy was put there as a detective over you, and you have to be on your lookout for that. The triumph of the Republican Party has become a fact, as I have told you, and it would be well for you to come to an understanding with these people.

"I wish that you would go and see Mr. Irias and give him, in my name, my best regards; tell him that I am very sorry for that which has happened in Nicaragua, and that there seems to be no other remedy but the machete.

"It will be well for you to speak in my name, in order to find out whether or not something could be done from that side and that he then would give his instructions to his men to come to an understanding with Jose Antonio Sanchez, who lives in Juaniquillapa, near Someto; tell him that we are fighting and our cause is his cause.

"Do not be worried about your family. They are well and I see them often. Take good care of yourself. Do not worry so much about Adelita. I am glad to hear that Concha's cold is getting better and I am writing her."

The "negro spy" referred to in the above letter was an imaginary one and was mentioned to Peralta to show him that I was working, as he thought, in his behalf.

On November 12, 1916, from New Orleans, Rosales wrote Peralta as follows:

"MY DEAR FRIEND: Yesterday I received your telegram about the affair of Dr. Dardano, and I am very glad to hear about him. I hope all the rest will go as well as this matter.

"Mr. Andrew (code name for Jones) left here Saturday the 10th instant for Washington and he told me that he would be there about the 14th. I inclose a letter for Dr. Irias. Give it to him personally and talk to him about this matter and then, if he is willing, let him give his instructions to his friends to that effect.

"Be careful to tell him not to mention anything to King, as the latter has denounced us in Honduras, as I have heard, in order to stay well. Well then, Wilson won out. Maybe that is well, as the old saying goes 'Nothing succeeds but success.'

"We have to play good politics and have to be careful."

I left New Orleans on November 10, 1916, accompanied by Guillermo Rosas, formerly private secretary of Gen. Felix Diaz, the Mexican revolutionary leader, and who at that time was secretary of the Felixista revolutionary group at New Orleans. For a long time prior to this, so that the Department of Justice could be thoroughly informed, I had been an active participant in the affairs of the Felixistas. As many important developments were being brought to a head through these Mexican revolutionists, I "staid on the nest" with this man, not only to find out about his own party's revolutionary affairs, but to gain additional information which he would receive from party leaders in New York.

Rosales, convinced that I wielded untold influence among newspapers and national legislators, he looked to me to help him no little on my trip to New York City and Washington. Shortly before we parted, he placed his hand on my shoulder and exclaimed:

"Now, comrade, show us that you are a fighting man. Remember, you and Peralta are to promise any and everything to those friends whose influence we have to have, no matter what they want.

"Promise them everything under the ground and in the sky. Promise to deliver the devil, if you have to do so. But go ahead. Tell Peralta that I am here like Christ, waiting for my sentence."

On arriving in Washington, I left Rosas, who had a mania for flirtations, sitting in "Peacock Alley" of the Hotel Willard while I arranged a series of conferences with several of the Honduran and Nicaraguan revolutionary leaders then in Washington.

I left Washington a day later and met Peralta in New York City at the Hotel Astor, where he, with his customary habit of exaggeration, impressed on me the alleged fact that he had secured positive assurances that when the revolutionary movement was started no American marines would be landed in Honduras. I felt that this was false and later nalled the lie.

During the remainder of November and through December I was with Peralta constantly in New York and at Washington. In this way the Department of Justice gained timely information as to additional plans as developed and matured by the revolutionists.

In Washington Peralta presented Rosales' letter to Dr. Julian Irias. Rosales refers to in his letter of November 12, 1916, to Peralta. Irias was most enthusiastic in regard to all Rosales' plans and wrote the following from Washington on November 29, 1916, to the latter:

MY DISTINGUISHED FRIEND: If everything is ready, I am. Before the movement is started you must be able to put war equipment at a certain point on the frontier. This point has to be defined clearly, so that our friends may know where to go to arm themselves and that they furthermore may study which places they should attack or menace.

"I have been assured (by Peralta) that you can place on said frontier four Colt machine guns with 25,000 bullets each, and then 1,500 rifles with 150 bullets for each one. If this is so, it would be a fine basis.

"I beg to call your attention to the fact that the steamer which carries this equipment should bring along two good gasoline launches, so that the goods can be delivered speedily at a minor port, because, as you will understand, it would be rather a difficult and risky undertaking otherwise.

"It will be necessary that you should let me know exactly the date, the place, and the person who will deliver the goods on the frontier to the chiefs that I send.

"You will understand readily that it would not do to assemble too many people near the frontier before the movement really starts, because that would show the thing too openly and would be dangerous. But they will be under orders, so that they can assemble as quickly as possible.

"It would also be very convenient to know with which one of your intelligent and confidential chiefs on the frontier our people shall understand themselves, at the same time it would be well to clear up the point whether one of your chiefs shall be governor of the zone or one of our own men. It seems to me better that he should be a man from Honduras, as this would give more standing to the movement, under the condition, of course, that he should not have any run in with our men.

"The movements on the coast and from the frontier should be simultaneous in order to have the greatest effect.

"In order to issue commands, I will have to be in Central America; but I can not do that before the middle of January. It would be a good thing to call on Costa Rica secretly in order to give instructions to some chiefs, and since you know the distances, and in order not to commit any foolishness, the people should leave quietly, and that way they could not be near the frontier until the middle of February, and that would be proceeding rapidly and disposing of elements necessary for the mobilization.

"I calculate that we need about $25,000 gold for this movement, counting on taking the entire 1,500 rifles, and since the American gold is now standard in Nicaragua we will have to give the soldiers at least from $12 to $15 for this trip to the frontier, and there are some chiefs whom we will have to give $250 and more.

"A letter from you, in which you bind yourself to lend me all kinds of assistance—that is, economical, the frontier, and the elements to upset the Government of my country in case that you should win—would be enough for me in exchange for my help.

"If you accept the plan, and in order not to lose any time, it would be well that you should right now put some funds at my disposal, so that I could write from here to some chiefs in Costa Rica, whom I am going to meet, and whom I could give sufficient funds to sail for said Republic.

"J. IRIAS."

Irias, due to his former negotiations with Rosales and Peralta, was ready to participate in their revolutionary movement against Central American countries during August or September of that year. Peralta claimed that on or about the time he was getting ready to leave Mexico that Irias had secured considerable cash from Carranza.

It will be noticed in Irias's correspondence with Rosales that he set forth that it would be impossible for him to have his part of the expeditions ready until the middle of February, 1917. To this Peralta, for Rosales, agreed. This in turn was concurred with by Carranza and his officials.

At a later date and in Washington Irias showed Peralta and myself the following letter from Mexico:

MEXICO CITY, November 26, 1916.

MR. JULIAN IRIAS, Washington.

MY DEAR FRIEND: I received your letter yesterday, which had been delayed somewhat in Vera Cruz on account of a strike of the workmen on the Mexican Railroad. I knew that you were in New York by the New York Herald, which carries one interview with you and another one with Mr. Stikel, about the presidential elections in Nicaragua.

I have addressed several letters to you in Costa Rica, some directly and some through Mr. Dieguez, not knowing whether you were in that Republic or not. I wrote these letters for the very special purpose of telling you how convenient it would be for you to come to this capital so that you might put yourself in contact with Mr. Venustiano Carranza, in charge of the executive power of the Republic, who sympathizes very much with the National Liberty Party of Central America and especially with that of Nicaragua, that victim of the Yankees which is making all efforts to conserve her independence.

Understand me well, that Mexican revolution which drove out the Dictator Diaz and, later on, the horrible tyranny of Huerta, is not only Mexican but a revolution of continental consequences, considering the influence it will have among all the peoples who are now under the rules of tyrants that are more or less assisted by the Yankees.

In order to solidify the destinies of our race on the continent and to establish the legitimate influence of Mexico among the sister nations, it would be well to create legations in the main Latin American Republics, and especially those of Central America, whose destinies are so closely interwoven in the past as well as in the future with those of Mexico.

Since you are the famous leader not only of the National Liberal Party of Nicaragua but also of the National Party of Central America, as the cause of the National Liberal Party of Nicaragua is identified with the cause of the independence of Central America, therefore it is indispensable that you should come to this Republic for the already indicated purpose.

If Samuel Sediles was very well received here and could do something for the Liberal Party, merely being an ordinary intelligent member of same, it is very reasonable to assume that the leader should be well received who has made his name famous even outside of Central America, through the high esteem that he enjoys in his country, for the kind feelings that he inspires in all Central America, by his energy and his dignified and proud attitude before the Yankee power, and the accusations that were made against him to undermine his political and personal honor.

I do not doubt that Mr. Carranza will understand you, as he himself has shown himself so energetic in the defense of Mexican honor in the North American question.

I write often for El Democrata, one of the best papers of this capital, and sometimes in El Pueblo. In these, as well as in El Universal, I have reproduced important news from Nicaragua before and after the elections. The Universal brought your interview with the New York Herald, the Pueblo that of Stikell, and in El Democrata there appeared, besides some other news, one of my stories about the suit brought by El Salvador in the court of Cartago against the canal treaty.

I am waiting for the papers that you told me I would receive in order to start a series of stories about Nicaragua and your own personality. It would be well for you, before you come here, to give me your opinion about the Mexican revolution, about Mr. Carranza, and his minister of foreign relations, Gen. Candido Aguilar, who have so brilliantly maintained the rights of Mexico in the North American question.

It would be very well also, if you have the time to get them, to have some evidence of the sympathies with which the Governments of Salvador, Honduras, and Costa Rica look upon your political work for the cause of the independence and honor of the peoples of Central America. Such testaments from the Presidents of these Republics would be invaluable for you here.

I shall publish your opinion of Mr. Carranza, Gen. Aguilar, and the Mexican revolution in the papers of this capital before you get here.

Sediles went to Costa Rica about a month ago, and it is absolutely necessary that you should be here before his return. I hope that you will do so in your own interest. I can not tell you any more now.

My address is: Segunda Calle de Balleras, 16.

Clementina wrote me awhile ago, telling me that you had called on her and that you had told her all about your trip in Nicaragua just before the election. She was highly pleased by the visit of such an old and true friend.

With best regards from Delfina and my boys, I remain, waiting for you,

Your friend,

R. CONTRERAS.

Irias had for many years prior to our meeting been a disturbing factor in Nicaraguan politics. In an interview between him and me several months before this he had confided that he had been elected leader of the National Liberty Party of Nicaragua. He added that he had been named as the presidential candidate for this faction at the polls for the October elections of 1916.

However, according to Irias, he realized he never would be permitted to gain the office, explaining that the voices of 75 per cent of the Nicaraguan voters would be in favor of him, but alleging that the United States had "cooked the results." When I asked him to enlighten me as to the "cooking," he said:

"Secretary of State Bryan has entered into an arrangement with Chormoro, our minister to Washington, whereby if the latter manages to put through the treaty with America on canal rights across Nicaragua, the United States will see that Chormoro is installed in office as President of Nicaragua."

He added Mr. Bryan had assured Chormoro that United States marines would control the election in Chormoro's favor. He then said that his revolutionary movement in connection with Rosales should be pushed along and put in full swing by election day, and in that event the small number of American marines in Nicaragua would be "wiped out."

Personally, I can not vouch for the authenticity of Irias's statement and I only set down what he claimed to be a fact. His statement, however, regarding the "wiping out" of the marines, when I reported it to the Department of Justice, resulted in the United States sending a large number of marines to Nicaragua.

Irias at this time showed me a signed proclamation issued by the National Liberal Party of Nicaragua, a translation of which follows:

"The great convention of the National Liberal Party of Nicaragua, in conformity with the Part C of article 10 of the statutes of the party, decrees:

"First and only. The citizen Dr. Julian Irias is the popularly elected candidate of the National Liberal Party of Nicaragua for the President of the Republic during the elections which will take place on the first and second days of October of this present year.

"To be communicated to the executive council for publication and recommendation.

"Given in the Hall of Meetings, Leon, 22d of July, 1916.

"Leonardo Arguello, D. P., Gonzalo Ocon, L. Ramirez M., A. Yablada, J. Sanson, Arturo Nunez, Gustavo F. Moguera, J. Molino Larios, Federico Sacasal, Tomas Perelra, Palo Ruiz Morales, Bernarbe Portocarrero, R. Sevilla, A. Medrano, P. A. Blandon, Igno Chavez, H. Espinoza, H. Portocarrero, A. Zuniga M., M. B. Sebrate, Abraham Mary, Jose W. Mayorga, B. Sotomay, Gustavo Abaunza, Erasmo Calderon, J. Y. Lanza, Franco Paniagua Pradounza, M. Perez Alonzo, F. Sornamba, H. A. Castellon, first secretary."

In several other interviews between Irias, Peralta, and myself in Washington, and in other interviews between Irias and myself at the McAlpin Hotel, New York City, he told me he would sail early in January, 1917, for Costa Rica, where he would begin preparations for his part in the revolutionary movements. However, Irias, after learning of the amounts of money secured by Rosales and Peralta from Carranza, instead of sailing from New York to Costa Rica, sailed from New York to Vera Cruz on or about January 10, 1917.

Irias proceeded to Mexico City, where he completed arrangements with Carranza, Gen. A. Obregon, and others to be reimbursed personally for his participation in Carranza's Central American revolutionary plans. This trip of Irias to Mexico was a great surprise to Rosales and it likewise resulted in delaying the contemplated revolutionary expedition of Rosales against Honduras.

It was evident that Irias felt that he should be put in a position to "handle" some of Carranza's money after he became aware that Peralta and Rosales had so much of the first chief's lucre to spend lavishly.

WHEN IN MEXICO CITY, GEN. A. OBREGON, THEN MEXICAN MINISTER OF WAR AND MARINE, AUTOGRAPHED A PHOTOGRAPH OF HIMSELF TO IRIAS.

Irias remained in Mexico until early in March and on March 13 sailed from Vera Cruz for New Orleans. He arrived there on March 17 and went to the Monteleon Hotel.

With all hotels under our surveillance by special informants, we learned of Irias's arrival immediately. He was astonished when I called at his apartment and wanted to know how I learned of his arrival. He had in his room three handbags and a steamer trunk, from which at a later date we procured the contents and handed them to the Department of Justice.

After leaving Irias I notified the superintendent of the New Orleans division of the Department of Justice as to the revolutionist's presence in New Orleans. From then on I was daily in close touch with Irias, and the Government was enabled to be informed fully regarding his movements.

On the night of March 24 the superintendent of the New Orleans division of the department informed me he had received instructions from Washington to secure, if possible, photographed copies of all papers and documents in Irias's possession.

Arrangements were made whereby I was to take Dr. Irias, his secretary, and one of his associates out for lunch and for an automobile ride—as long a ride as possible—keeping them away from their apartment for at least four hours, which would enable agents of the department to open his trunks, photograph documents, and replace them without fear of interruption.

In my report to the Department of Justice, dated March 27, 1917, I stated:

"Respectfully recommend that Dr. Irias should be arrested by your department, provided he can be successfully put and kept in jail or deported until the present critical situation in the United States is passed.

"It would be, however, more satisfactory, I believe, to have the case handled by the immigration authorities, for, insomuch as Dr. Irias has conspired in the United States, not only against Nicaragua, but likewise against Honduras and Guatemala, therefore, under the law, as I understand it, he should be deported for this.

"My recommendation in regard to his deportation or arrest is made for the following reasons:

"In my several extended conversations with Irias, he practically has told me in plain English, as fully covered in many of my previous reports, that he has been promised liberal support from the Carranza Government in regard to his political aspirations in Nicaragua and likewise to date has received cash advances from Carranza.

"This was brought out by him in answer to several pointed questions from me in regard to making Irias believe that in the end his proposed political affairs would never be successful; furthermore that Carranza under no circumstances would have anything to do with him as far as financially backing him.

"He then stated his arrangements with the Carranza Government, not only from the standpoint of their moral support, but also financial support was in every way far beyond his expectations and greater than he ever had anticipated receiving.

"I then laughingly told him that I had heard many rumors of him likewise having sought and then received financial support from the German Government through the minister from Germany in Mexico City. I then also told him what a damned shame and sin it was for a great country like the United States to be played with by England and that all of our Government officers, from the President down, including Senators and Congressmen, were a 'bunch of nuts,' and in other words damned forever to him my own country and all of its present policies and went the limit as far as endeavoring to convince him of the fact that I was willing to be a traitor to the United States.

"I also fully agreed with him that the United States had helped to steal the presidency of Nicaragua from him. I also assured him of the fact that I was strictly for Germany. I then told him that it had been reported from Mexico that he had been a daily visitor to Von Eckhardt, the German minister in Mexico City, likewise had frequently been seen dining and riding with the German ambassador.

"In answer to this remark on my part, Irias, feeling sure that I was one of his strong friends and ardent supporters and could be trusted fully, stated that the German minister in Mexico City was his personal friend and supporter. I then asked him if this meant that he was not only being supported by Carranza, but also with German money behind his proposed political future. His answer was that the 'future is always broad.' He added that his 'past had been full of many disappointments,' but that his efforts for the last six months had resulted in success for him far beyond his expectations.

"Dr. Irias, as you know, is probably as ardent a hater of America and all Americans as anyone who has ever come to this country. There is no doubt from information developed so far by me and which your department has secured from other sources but that he is under financial obligations to Carranza and Germany, through the German minister to Mexico."

At 10.30 o'clock p. m., March 27, 1917, I called at Irias's room at the Monteleon Hotel. At this time I found him with one of his assistants packing a small trunk and a box. I told him it looked as though he were getting ready to move. He said not, and added that he was preparing some "things" to send his family at Costa Rica. It appeared that he intended to slip out of New Orleans on a steamer the next morning with some of his papers and documents which the department was very anxious to procure.

He then said that the box and trunk were to be shipped the next morning via a United Fruit Co. steamer. I volunteered to see that the trunk and box would be taken to the ship early in the morning and suggested it might be advisable for him, on account of his political connections, to stay away from the dock. I said I would also save him the trouble and expense of moving the packages to the steamer.

He greatly appreciated my "suggestion." I immediately advised the New Orleans office of the department. On the morning of March 28 I arranged with a porter of another hotel to call at the Monteleon Hotel in a taxicab for Dr. Irias's baggage. The porter had instructions to "stall" around after he got the baggage to "shake off" possible shadowers.

The porter was then to take the baggage to his hotel, from which it was to be sent to the Department of Justice office. Much to my surprise, at 9.40 a. m. this porter telephoned me that he had not only had the baggage outside his hotel, but also Dr. Irias and his secretary were with the baggage in the taxicab.

He said Irias had insisted on accompanying the baggage to the United Fruit Co. dock. This more than ever convinced me that the contents of the baggage must be important.

I instructed the porter to take Irias and the baggage to the steamship dock, but spend as long a time as possible in arriving there. I got in touch with the superintendent of the New Orleans division of the department and suggested that he arrange with one of the officials of the steamship company to see that the baggage was put on board the steamer and that just before she sailed it be covered with a tarpaulin and carried off the vessel.

Mr. Beckham, of the New Orleans office of the department, proceeded to the dock, and, working in cooperation with the port captain, handled this matter satisfactorily. The baggage was removed from the steamer just before she sailed and was then carried to the New Orleans office of the department, where it was "frisked" and found to contain absolutely nothing of importance. It was filled with clothing, etc., which Irias really wished to send his family.

The Department of Justice forwarded the trunk and box on the following steamer for Costa Rico.

From March 25 to March 29, 1917, I called daily in the mornings on Irias, endeavoring to persuade him to accompany me on a motor journey and take luncheon with me. On two of these occasions he said he would be glad to go, and put on his hat, but instructed his secretary to stay in the room until he returned.

Watching the automobile outside the hotel were several agents of the Department of Justice, waiting to see me drive away with Irias and his secretary, in which event I was scheduled to keep Irias and his assistant away from the hotel for not less than four hours. Irias's instructions to his secretary to "remain" defeated this plan until the morning of March 29.

On that morning, after arguing for an hour and a half, I succeeded in taking Irias and his secretary for a ride and for lunch, with the proviso that I would have them back by 2 o'clock. It was noon before we were safely out of the hotel and on our way.

I had told the chauffeur of my car not only to drive slowly, but on the way out to a resort 10 miles from the city to arrive there by a circuitous route, and also to experience an "accident."

This resulted in consuming an hour and a half. I had previously arranged with a friend of mine, who was to serve our lunch at the resort, to drag the meal for at least another two hours. During luncheon Irias and his secretary imbibed many mixed drinks and several pints of wine. He "opened up," revealing additional revolutionary plans and reiterating others.

Irias expressed a desire to return to the city shortly after 3 o'clock. Department of Justice officials had impressed on me the necessity of detaining Irias until 4 o'clock. To kill additional time, I had arranged for a yacht to be moored on the lake and within full view of the restaurant, in the hope that I might induce Irias and his secretary to board the vessel.

As we left the dining room I pointed out the yacht nonchalantly and advised Irias to "look her over," saying that she resembled a boat that Rosales expected to use in his expedition. Irias, apparently thinking it would delay him but a few minutes, assented, and we went aboard. I suggested that we take a 5 or 10 minute "spin" to show "what she could do."

My previous arrangements included an understanding with the captain of the boat whereby we would run at least 10 miles out and consume at least an hour's time, even if it were necessary to "break" the engines.

Irias, who was fond of boats and boating, enjoyed his "spin" until sleep overtook him as he sat on deck and basked in the warm sunshine. The sunshine, food, wine, and air also affected Irias's secretary. By the time the pair of "sleeping beauties" awakened we were so far out that we did not make the moorings again until after 4 o'clock.

The chauffeur of the automobile had been instructed to delay his return to the city. At 4.30 p. m., about halfway in, we stopped at a road house, which offered me an opportunity for telephoning the department office to learn how affairs were progressing. Department agents informed me that when they had entered Irias's room they were unable to open his trunk and other baggage without breaking the locks on his luggage.

Also, it was said that his baggage contained such an unusually large quantity of important papers that it was utterly impossible in such a limited time to photograph them and return same and have the locks repaired. The officials had decided, they told me, on account of the compromising nature of Irias's documents, to arrest him. But to keep me "covered" from suspicion on the part of the revolutionists, it was suggested that I "warn" Irias that the secret service agents had searched his room, secured his documents, and were waiting to arrest him on sight, and that I would anchor him in the meanwhile in a "safe place" and at a later hour in the day he would be taken into custody by the Federal authorities.

I hurried out of the road house, assuming a worried and highly alarmed air, and told Gen. Irias I had telephoned my office on a business matter and had been informed by one of my men that he had seen a corps of secret-service men at Irias's hotel, and that they had searched his room, seized his papers, and were coming to the city to locate him.

I thought the general would suffer a stroke of apoplexy. He became immediately sober and began to wring his hands and moan hoarsely. The secretary seemed nauseated, and from the appearance of things I thought a hospital would be the most appropriate place for these men.

I encouraged the general's spirits by saying, "Don't worry, my general; I'm your comrade, not only in sunshine but in storm. Leave it all to me."

I told him I would drive around town with him to prevent his falling into the hands of "those damned secret-service men" and added that we would procure an attorney to fight the case. I advised him to let me hide him until he could get out of New Orleans or could make up his mind what course to pursue.

I took Gen. Irias to a hotel, planted him in a room where an assistant of mine, in offices across the street and employing field glasses, could keep tab on him. The room also was watched from the hallway. However, the general was so impressed with the desire to hide that he wouldn't have left his room had an earthquake shook the structure.

With the general anchored safely, I met representatives of the Department of Justice and was instructed to be back in Irias's new room at 8.30 o'clock that night. I was told that between 8.45 and 9.30 p. m. secret-service operatives would knock on the door, and on admittance they would enter a bitter row with me about the attempted arrest of Irias.

I returned to the apartment at the appointed hour and told him the best thing to do would be for him to leave the city by motor car that night on the Galveston Road. We were to make the attempt at midnight and pick up a train early in the morning. With a sick smile the general said:

"Ah, my good amigo comrado," patting me on the back. "I am in your hands. Do what you like, for I am in a strange land, full of enemies."

At about 9.20 p. m. a resounding knock was delivered on the locked door, which door Irias had tested carefully to see it was locked. This was followed by typical police knocks, and I yelled:

"Who is there?"

The answer, coming in a gruff tone, was:

"Open that door and do it quick, or it will be broken in."

I retorted:

"I will not until you tell me who you are."

The answer came:

"It is the secret service."

At that, Irias, as it appeared to me, would never be able to finish the dash he began toward the bathroom. His secretary took one forlorn look at the bathroom door, through which Irias did manage to stagger, and chose a clothes closet as his temporary refuge.

Meanwhile there came several more knocks. I opened the door. Two Department of Justice agents, accompanied by a pair of city detectives, both friends of mine, pushed into the room. They closed and locked the door. The prearranged dispute was launched in loud tones, and I was asked:

"What in h—l are you doing here? Where is Irias and his revolutionary associates?"

I denied I knew where they were and said the last I had seen of them was at the resort where we had had luncheon. This brought on fits of anger on all sides. Irias and his aid heard all the rumpus and must have thought there was about to be bloodshed. Finally one of the city detectives advised that I be "rapped on the bean" and the room be "frisked." At this a very audible groan floated out from the depths of the clothes closet. I stepped in front of the clothes closet and began wrestling with one of the detectives to "keep him from opening the door." However, he won out and reached in, pulling out the limp form of the secretary.

An assault was made on the bathroom door, which had been locked by Irias. The general apparently had decided to remain in there indefinitely. I then called out:

"The game is up, my general. Open the door and come out."

He did so. While in the bathroom he had removed his coat, vest, collar, and tie. As he came out he had his hand on his stomach and was gasping:

"Oh, Mr. Jon-as, I am so ver' seek. What do these men want here? Tell them to get out my room."

He was told to "put on his clothes and come along." The general, who understood English perfectly, said:

"I am seek, so ver' seek. No comprehendo."

However, the general took three long drinks of whisky and was calmed enough to be ushered, together with the secretary and myself to the jail. As the lockup loomed in view, the general announced that he was hungry. I insisted that he be taken to a restaurant. This was done. Irias was placed in a cell at midnight and held for the Federal authorities.

I assured Gen. Irias in jail that I would arrange bond and procure an attorney. The general, however, not waiting for me to make any arrangements of this character, early the next morning got in touch with an attorney friend of his, who immediately saw the United States district attorney. The latter, after conference with the superintendent of the New Orleans offices of the department, so I was told, agreed to release Irias in custody, provided he would leave the United States. Within a few days thereafter Irias departed from these shores.

Several months prior to this episode there had been a discussion of the case between myself and officials of the Department of Justice in Washington and New Orleans as to the most feasible manner of securing an opportunity of photographing all papers and documents in possession of Rosales and Peralta and returning them so that their plans would remain unchanged and to leave them unaware of the photographing of the papers.

The plan agreed upon was that whenever the opportunity was afforded I was to hurry out to the houses of Peralta and Rosales at some midnight hour, telling them I had been "tipped off" that the secret service planned to search their homes for revolutionary papers. I was to say that these papers, if found in their possession, would send them to prison, and which, as we thought, would result in their becoming frightened and passing their documents to me for safekeeping and in that way would enable the department to photograph them.

On the night of March 30, 1917, after having wound up the Irias case, I was advised that the "psychological moment" had arrived for lifting the papers. Anticipating that they might not turn over the papers, but instead might sneak the papers out of their houses, we "covered" the houses to insure success in case my first plan failed.

The wisdom of this latter precaution was made obvious. Accompanied by two operatives, I drove to Peralta's house, No. 3426 Canal Street, arriving there at 2.30 o'clock on the morning of March 31. When he came downstairs, I informed him Irias had been arrested and all documents in Irias's room had been seized. I also told him that up to the time of Irias's arrest the latter had been shadowed continually and had been seen with Rosales and Peralta. I added there was no doubt but that Federal authorities early that morning would come to Rosales's and Peralta's houses to take documents.

I suggested that Peralta bundle up everything of a compromising nature and entrust the package to me for safekeeping. He said this was a splendid idea, but declared he had no papers, with the probable exception of a dozen letters that, after all, "amounted to nothing." I told him to get them ready so that I could take them after I returned from Rosales's house, explaining that I was on my way to warn the latter.

Proceeding to Rosales's residence, I awakened him at 3 a. m. He said he would have one of his men, Roman Diaz, carry such compromising matter as he might have to the home of Diaz's sweetheart on St. Louis Street. He added that the papers in his possession "were very limited," but that Peralta had tremendous quantities of the more important ones, and as far as he, Rosales, was concerned, he would immediately burn those he had.

To avoid overplaying my hand, I merely warned him not to destroy his documents, holding forth that such a move would imperil the cause in which we were "interested" and said I would return to Peralta's house for a conference. I told Peralta that Rosales said the latter had "all the important papers." His answer was:

"Rosales is either a liar or is crazily scared."

I spent 20 minutes with Peralta and said good-night, then, returning to Rosales's house. When I arrived there the entire place was full of smoke, with the odor of burning paper rising. He told me he had four grates and the kitchen stove consuming the compromising papers. I said it was "a fine move" and warmly congratulated him for so doing. Incidentally, I could have throttled him for having thought of such a plan.

I suggested to Rosales that he pack the rest of his papers and send them out to be hidden at the homes of some of his aids. I left him at 3.30 a. m., feeling certain that either of the two men would have their bodyguards carry out their most valuable papers. Meanwhile I had the two operatives "planted," one near the door of each home.

About 3.45 a. m., from where I was stationed, in back of some palm trees a block away from Peralta's house and where I had full view of same, I noticed one of Peralta's men come rushing out, lugging a very bulky handbag. One of the operatives permitted this fellow to move half a block and then stepped out and placed him under arrest, accusing him of being a dangerous and suspicious character. The other operative joined his partner, and I then drove up in my car. The Belize Negro of Peralta's instantly recognized me and said:

"Boss, please tell these detectives that I am all right."

I asked him what he was doing out at that hour in the morning, lugging a big grip. He replied that he was on his way to the market to get provisions for Peralta. I protested vigorously about the operatives holding the man, and I called the Negro aside, telling him I would try to bribe one of the detectives to release him. Then I called the officer aside and told him to take the man to police headquarters and hold him subject to the orders of the New Orleans division of the Department of Justice, and then to bring me the grip. It was then about 4 o'clock in the morning.

As I started back toward town, it occurred to me it would be wise to stop again at Peralta's and tell him I had seen one of his men arrested. His house was illuminated and I was admitted by Peralta. Peralta, on being informed of the arrest, became all but insane with fear and anger.

Thrown over my right arm was a raincoat, in the pocket of which was a heavy caliber automatic pistol. I was armed also with a smaller caliber automatic, attached to my belt on the left-hand side. Intuitively I placed my hand on the larger automatic in the raincoat pocket as I stepped in.

He threw his right hand to his hip. He drew his pistol half way. With his face distorted he said:

"I might as well be dead as have that grip which my Negro had fall in the possession of the authorities."

He added:

"By God, Jones, this is all your fault!"

Thinking he intended to take a shot at me, and then to commit suicide, I warned him, never taking my gaze from his eyes:

"Don't draw that gun, for you'll never have time to use it. I have you covered through the pocket of my coat."

To this day I don't understand why, when he attempted to "throw his gun," I did not pump several bullets through his stomach. However, I was able to stand still and to keep cool and convinced him, apparently, that by bribing the detectives or in some other way I could regain possession of the grip. I had left the chauffeur in the car when I entered the house, but much to my surprise he told me that he had crept in the yard and was watching Peralta through a window opening into the hall, and that it was a mystery to him, when Peralta "dove for his gun," why I had not shot the revolutionist.

After cooling down Peralta, I backed out the front door and to be honest about it was glad to have been able to escape from the situation without killing him.

At 5 o'clock that morning the operatives turned the grip full of papers over to me. Within the next hour they were in possession of the Department of Justice officials at New Orleans.

In our casual examination it was found there were hundreds of letters, documents, etc., by and between officers of the Mexican Government in Mexico, some of their officials in the United States and many other compromising matters. These letters and documents fully corroborated all my reports regarding the plans of Carranza and his officials in connection with Rosales, Peralta, and others in Carranza's Central American revolutionary plots.

The Department of Justice also had confirmed the reports through other sources of information than myself. The New Orleans division officers decided that these papers were of such paramount importance that they be submitted immediately to the Washington headquarters. The papers left New Orleans that morning for the National Capital.

At 9 o'clock a. m., Peralta telephoned me to learn if I had been successful in regaining the grip. I said I had, and added that I had "slipped the detectives a piece of money" and the grip was so full of compromising papers and the Federal authorities appeared to be so hot on the trail that I was afraid that they would be found in my possession and I would be arrested and imprisoned. To play safe, I declared that I had expressed the grip to a relative of mine in Washington for safekeeping.

Several months before this, a party who I thought was a very close friend and who also was friendly with Rosales and Peralta, had been hypnotized by the revolutionists into the belief that untold wealth awaited him if he cooperated with them and they came into power in Honduras. This person had for some time a covert idea that I might be "tipping off" the authorities to Rosales and Peralta.

For some time before I succeeded in flushing the papers out of possession of Rosales and Peralta and into the hands of the authorities, as I learned later, Peralta and Rosales, with never a sign to me, were becoming suspicious, regarding my solicitude in their behalf. This was the result of my friend's treachery to me. For that reason Peralta and Rosales did not turn the papers over to me on the morning I tried to get them.

I also learned subsequently that the treachery of my friend resulted in plans by Rosales and Peralta to have me "bumped off" quietly. I did not know of these facts until two and a half months after the above scenes.

To make my bluff stick in regard to my having warned Peralta and Rosales regarding the raids by Federal agents, the Department of Justice carried out, on the morning of March 31, with Federal search warrants and several operatives, a "blind" search.

That evening at 5 o'clock, at Peralta's request, I went to his house. I had been received prior to this time always in his parlor. His negro cook informed me that Mr. Peralta was upstairs and took me up to one of the bedrooms, where I found Peralta, Rosales and two of their gunmen. This looked odd, so I shook hands with all of them, meantime keeping my back away from any of the quartette. I took a chair and backed it in a corner, where I could watch each man.

I again assured Peralta and Rosales that their papers were safe and that I had telegraphed to have them returned to New Orleans, as Peralta had requested over the telephone that morning. The Rosales-Peralta papers were returned to me on April 9, 1917, and I was instructed to surrender them to their owners, which I did.

Rosales and Peralta, shortly after this date began consummating their final plans and arrangements to start their several revolutionary expeditions against Honduras. The United States, having secured all necessary documentary proof and evidence sufficient to convict all parties involved and with every card in governmental hands, waited quietly for the launching of the movement.

These revolutionists expected by the middle of May to have each of the several expeditions in motion. Delays, however, changed some of their plans and they finally set the date of the expedition which was to leave New Orleans for the first week in August.

Prior to this time they had received a letter regarding one of the boats to be used in the expedition.

This letter from Belize, British Honduras, on December 8, 1916, M. A. Perdomo wrote to Peralta in New Orleans:

"I have investigated whether the boat of Fogarait can go to Payo Obispo, but I am told that she draws too much water to get there, but you can send the big boat easily to Xcalax and wait there for the lighters from Payo Obispo, and that way you do not have to go into the colony at all, as it is very easy to communicate from Xcalax to Payo Obispo.

"In case that you should get to a port in Honduras and that you should need an agent there, I would suggest Mr. Aurelio Lainfiesta, who is a reliable man of good habits and is also employed by us. I shall see to it that he will attend to all your business in the proper manner.

"Without any further news for to-day, I beg to remain,

"M. A. PERDOMO."

During all my connections with these revolutionists, they repeatedly had become indebted to me for various sums of money lent for their expenses and for the purchase of arms, ammunition, and other supplies. All of these items were covered fully by contracts or by memoranda of agreement with them and which were photographed by the Department of Justice as soon as they passed into my hands.

At one time these parties were "in on me" to the extent of more than $7,000, and in the end my net loss in cash was in excess of $2,000.

The following are typical of some of their agreements, which, as soon as made, were photographed and copies of same sent to the chief at Washington and to the State Department:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF LOUISIANA,
Parish of Orleans.

The following agreement, made and entered into this 19th day of October, in the year 1916, by and between Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, his associates, assistants, and heirs and assigns, a citizen of the Republic on Honduras, Central America, and temporarily residing in the city of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, party of the first part, and Chas. E. Jones, his heirs, and assigns, residing in the city of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, party of the second part, witnesseth:

For and in consideration of services rendered to the party of the first part by the party of the second part, and for the further consideration hereinafter stipulated in this contract, the party of the first part agrees hereby, for a period of one year from date hereof, to purchase from the party of the second part, any and all arms, ammunition, and equipment of every kind and description whatsoever, which said party of the first part may purchase in his individual capacity or in any official capacity; that said party of the first part likewise agrees hereby to purchase from said party of the second part any and all gunboats, steam vessels, sailing and auxiliary vessels, whether armed or not, of any and all kinds of description, exclusively through said party of the second part, and whether the party of the first part purchases said property in an individual or an official capacity, or for himself, or for any political party or government with which the said party of the first part may be connected.

Said party of the first part further agrees hereby to purchase all commissary supplies, uniforms, and equipment of every nature and kind necessary and proper to equip soldiers, sailors, and all other persons that may be or come under his direction and contract.

It is further hereby agreed that it is the intent and purpose of this contract not only to obligate said party of the first part to make all of said purchases through said party of the second part, but also to obligate all of the aides, assistants, and officers of said party of the first part, or who may become aides, assistants, and officers of said party of the first part, to make all such purchases by and through said party of the second part.

It is further hereby agreed that it is the intent of this agreement that said party of the second part shall be the agent of said party of the first part in the making of all purchases as hereinabove set forth and contemplated, whether said purchases are made by said party of the first part directly or through his associates, officers, or assistants, and whether said purchases are made by him as an individual, or political leader, or as an official of any government.

Witness our hands, in duplicate, in the city of New Orleans, on the date first above written.

M. B. ROSALES.
CHARLES E. JONES.

Gen. M. B. ROSALES,
No. 116 South Hagan Avenue, New Orleans, La.

DEAR GENERAL: As per conversation with you to-day, it is herewith understood by and between Señor Pedro Grade de Peralta, yourself, and myself that when the boat for your expedition against Spanish Honduras is ready to leave the port of New Orleans that I will advance or cause to be advanced by other parties the price of $2,500 worth of food and commissary supplies, such as corn, rice, meat, and other eatables selected by you as per written list that you are to furnish me with. Also, at that time, $250 worth of boots and shoes as per list you are to furnish me with.

You, in consideration of this, are to give me your note, payable within 30 days from date of said note, for the sum of $2,750.

I also agree to advance or cause to be advanced by other parties to you, in cash, the sum of $5,000, same to be placed at your disposal six days before your expedition sails from the port of New Orleans. You, at the time this $5,000 is placed at your disposal, are to give me your note payable within 30 days from the date of said note.

It is also understood that the said Pedro Grave de Peralta is to indorse said notes.

This agreement, covering the matters mentioned heretofore, is on this 13th day of January, 1917, by and between all of the parties signing same, entered into in the city of New Orleans, parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana, and in the United States of America.

Witnesseth:

ROMAN DIAZ.
LAVISIOS SANCHOS.
M. B. ROSALES.
CHARLES E. JONES.
PEDRO GRAVE DE PERALTA.

About the first week in August, 1917, officials of the Department of Justice and the State Department at Washington decided, so I was informed later, it would be dangerous to take further chances with the possibility of Rosales, Peralta, and their associates slipping out of New Orleans with their armed expedition. Orders, I was told, were issued to the superintendent of the New Orleans Division to close in immediately on all the revolutionists, arrest them, and indict them for violation of the neutrality laws.

On August 5, 1917, Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, who had moved in the meantime to Mandeville, La., was arrested there by department agents. Roman Diaz and Ladisalo Santos and others were taken into custody by the authorities.

Peralta was brought in to the Department of Justice, and, as I was told later, broke down completely and agreed to make a complete confession regarding their entire plans and plots. He was to become a witness for the Government, and, as sometimes occurs, it was probable that he would have received immunity in exchange for his becoming a traitor to his associates and their cause.

I could not have been used as a witness, for it would have blocked my future activities among other revolutionary groups. Peralta at this time made a signed statement, which is on file in the Department of Justice records. These revolutionists had violated every known neutrality law. The Government had sufficient documentary proof to convict all of them, but irrespective of this fact, the United States district attorney at New Orleans, I was informed, recommended to the Attorney General that these men be permitted to elect the privilege of suffering deportation or standing trial for their offenses in the Federal courts. Quite naturally, they elected to be deported.

When Roman Diaz was arrested at New Orleans by Federal authorities, the following diary was found in his possession:

"July 3, 1917. We left New Orleans from Mandeville (a small town 20 miles from New Orleans).

"July 7. Gen. Carranza has given us the necessary help and special orders.

"July 9. I am informed from La Ceiba (a town in Honduras) that partners are ready and that we must fix the date.

"July 17. A letter from Santos advised me that the deal has been closed in Mexico.

"July 19. Lara and Santos call me by cable from Vera Cruz.

"July 20. They tell me to leave in a hurry.

"July 30. We left Mandeville together with the General and Tonche (this refers to Gen. Rosales and his wife) and we had coffee on the boat.

"July 31. They have surrendered their house and I took out my passage. They left New Orleans on August 1, at 6 p. m., and I left them at the boat, which they boarded at 8 p. m. (Referring to Rosales giving up his house at New Orleans and proceeding to Mandeville. The passage mentioned refers to Diaz purchase of ticket to Vera Cruz.)

"August 1. Gen. Rosales, $1,200.

"August 2. For funds for the campaign."

Included in Diaz diary was a list of expenses which he and Santos had incurred in Vera Cruz for the purchase of revolvers, cartridges, clothing, and provisions, the charter of a boat, and the advance payment to 100 Mexicans who were to participate in a part of the expedition. The total expenditures for this purpose is set down as $10,180. The diary also included a list of rifles, cartridges, dynamite, powder, canon, lead, bomb throwers, machine guns, carbines for cavalry, two mountain guns, and other equipment.

Following is a sworn statement made by Roman Diaz when he was arrested, the English translation reading:

"My name is Roman Diaz Maldenano, and I am not more than 34 to 36 years old. I am living with my family in Yuscaran and Tegucigalpa. Four of my brothers are military men; one of them, Pedro Diaz M., is now in Government service; the other three are farming now and have no longer any military connections.

"I am not doing anything now, and am living on $500 which I brought with me. I fled from my home in July last year on account of the persecution of the present Government. Membreno was then President ad interim after the death of Bonilla and before the presidency of Bertrand.

"They followed me up to the north coast of Honduras by orders of Membreno and I was put in prison for one month. From there I was freed by the Vacas brothers. With me they made prisoners of Doroteo Hernandez Hafael and Diaz Plata. Samuel Woya, Miguel Anjel Cruz, Jose Antonio Gomez.

"I was military commander of Marcala under Davila in 1911 and Gov. Davila's administration. I was also in three companies with troops of the Government. I also was first aid de camp of the President, Gen. Trerencho Sierra, and Manuel Bonilla.

"I left La Cerbia on the 26th of July, fleeing through the mountains and the plantations, pursued by the soldiers of Monterossa, and after four months I was able to cross into Guatemala.

"I sailed from Puerto Barrios about the 21st or 22d of November and I arrived in New Orleans November 28, 1916. I have been here ever since without any employment and only living off the money which I brought along. I have stopped at several places here, but I was forced to change my abode frequently after having been informed that I was followed by spies of the consul of Honduras. Chavez and I were afraid of them.

"I received about four drafts, the money coming from my family and sent to me through Mrs. Condra Fortin Rosales, and which she handed to me, to be collected from the Whitney Bank. Sometimes money for me was placed to the account of Mrs. Condra Fortin Rosales in Tegucigalpa, and from there the draft was sent to her.

"Sometimes she gave me the money, and then again the draft, which I cashed at the Whitney Bank with an introduction from Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, her husband. At the same time my wife addressed her letters to me here under Pedro Perez, informing me of the amounts deposited.

"The only friend that I have here is Gen. Maximo B. Rosales; all the others are in the employ of the consul, and for that reason are my enemies.

"Maximo B. Rosales handed me $1,200 on August 1, charging me to deliver it to his friends in Vera Cruz, to be employed in his companies, and I was told to hand it directly to Ladislao Santos, the confidential agent of Rosales. This money is the same that was taken from me by the agents of the Department of Justice of the United States when they examined me here in the office. I recognize Gen. Maximo B. Rosales as the chief of the Liberal Party in Honduras, as he is known all over Central America. In this deal I was employed as a messenger and an agent of Gen. Rosales."

The following is a statement of one of the accounts, showing disbursements by Peralta to his chief, Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, that was secured from Rosales at the time of his arrest:

Miscellaneous	$102. 95
As per receipt of Dec. 2	2,160. 00
As per receipt of Dec. 14	400. 00
Given to Mrs. Peralta	50. 00
On Jan. 19, 1916, miscellaneous	300. 00
Trip to Belize and money handed some of our partisans	400. 00
Total	3,412. 95

Four hundred and fifty dollars loaned to Mr. F. R. Villavicentio, Mexican consul at New Orleans at 4 per cent per month.

The statement of Ladislao Santos, one of Gen. Maximo B. Rosales's messengers and agents in Mexico, which was made by him when he was arrested by United States authorities at New Orleans on August 5, 1917, follows:

"Gen. Maximo B. Rosales's messenger left in the latter part of June, 1917, for Mexico, via Laredo, and reported to Rosales from Mexico City in a letter dated June 28, 1917.

"In this letter he claims to have destroyed his letters and cable codes during an attack of the Villa followers on his train, but adds that everything looks very favorable for their plans in Mexico. He states that he has met J. Miguel Enriquez, another envoy of Rosales, who assures him also that all goes well in Mexico for them.

"This Enriquez is favorably mentioned in a letter from Gen. J. Catro, sub-secretary of war and marine to Gen. Isidro Valdeza, one of the principal leaders of the Guatemalan revolutionists in Mexico, and who was in actual warfare against Estrada Cabrera in 1916.

"Enriquez also reports to Rosales in a letter dated July in Mexico City that Estrada Cabrera is giving aid to the Felix Diaz movement and that Gen. Lee Christmas went to Mexico for that purpose. He says further that the Honduran minister, Wintia, is expected in Mexico City, but adds that he is harmless.

"IN A LETTER DATED MEXICO CITY, JULY 30, 1917, LADISLAO SANTOS, ROSALES'S MESSENGER, CLAIMS THAT HE NEEDS MONEY FOR A VOYAGE TO YUCATAN TO SEE GEN. ALVARADO, THE GOVERNOR OF YUCATAN, ABOUT SOME PROMISED WAR EQUIPMENTS. HE ALSO CLAIMS TO HAVE BEEN INTRODUCED TO GEN. TREVINO AND GEN. OBREGON AND PRESIDENT CARRANZA, AND WHO HAD TOLD HIM TO ASSURE ROSALES OF 200 RIFLES ADDITIONAL. HE THEN REFERRED TO SOME MEXICAN SENATOR AND STATES THAT THIS SENATOR IS HIGHLY INTERESTED IN THEIR UNDERTAKING, AS IT WOULD BE A POLITICAL STROKE THAT WOULD UNSEAT ESTRADA CABRERA. HE ASKED ROSALES TO WRITE TO HIM TO THE HOTEL RITO, ROOM 404, MEXICO CITY. IN THIS LETTER HE BEGS ROSALES TO DISPATCH ROMAN DIAZ TO VERA CRUZ.

"In a letter dated Mexico City, July 24, 1917, Ladislao Santos tells Gen. Rosales that he and Lara have everything ready, cloaking his enterprise in a deal for a plantation, and that they are only waiting for the arrival of Roman Diaz to cut the fruit. He asks Rosales to send the money in gold.

"In a letter dated July 1, 1917, Payo, Territory of Quintana Roo, Mexico, Col. R. Loriano, the representative of Gen. Rosales in that part of the country, tells him that the governor, Carlos Vidal, as well as his assistant, Col. de la Rosa, have been called to the front in Tabasco to fight the rebels and are unable to do anything for him now.

"He advises them to get in touch with the secretary of war in Mexico City through the agents for orders to the successors of these two men, and says that he has a party in the port of Xialac, with the name of Narasco Rivera, who is willing to act as a receiving agent for all the goods shipped there from Vera Cruz.

"According to the reports from other agents of Rosales, their men are still waiting to join his expedition, and they are now strung along in the ports of British Honduras and Mexico, such as Payo Obispo, Corazal, Bellee, Punta Gorda, Stann Creek, etc."

A few days after the arrest of Rosales, Roman Diaz, Ladislao Santos, and other of their associates, they sailed from New Orleans for Mexico. Shortly after that Peralta disappeared from the city, headed presumably for Habana, Cuba.

In this way ended Carranza's plot to expand his dictatorship into all Central America by revolutionary intrigues. Through the activities of the Department of Justice, the greatest and most successful secret service organization in the world, Carranza's plans in connection with Von Eckhardt, the German ambassador, to make all Central America pro-German were defeated, saving the United States and her Allies from facing in Central America a pro-German sentiment and activities there similar to those she had to contend with in Mexico.

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re Juan Guevara, of Eagle Pass, Tex., smuggling ammunition from San Antonio, Tex., into Piedras Negras, Mexico:

NEW ORLEANS, LA., September 25, 1918.

Through ———, one of my informants on the border, who has the confidence of Juan Guevara, of Eagle Pass, Tex., who is in the jitney business at Eagle Pass, learn that Guevara for the last several months has been very active in running ammunition out of the United States to Gen. Peraldi, the Mexican military commander at Piedras Negras, Mexico.

Under date of September 11, 1918, ——— wrote me that Guevara carried 10,000 rounds of 30-30 cartridges out of San Antonio, Tex., during the week starting September 2, 1918. These cartridges were carried by Guevara in his automobile from San Antonio, Tex., to Eagle Pass, and that when he arrived in Eagle Pass with them they were then slipped over the river to Gen. Peraldi.

——— tells me that Guevara makes the trip by automobile to San Antonio and return to Eagle Pass on an average of about once a week.

——— states that inasmuch as he is in the confidence of Guevara, that he can arrange to leave San Antonio, Tex., with Guevara in his automobile when he has it loaded with ammunition, and in this way Guevara can be caught with the goods.

Would respectfully recommend that ——— be allowed to handle this matter, for I feel confident of the fact that he can in this way catch Guevara running the ammunition.

When I arrive at San Antonio, Tex., will discuss this matter with Mr. Brenningman, superintendent of your San Antonio division, and if my plans regarding Guevara meet with his approval, then in that event will arrange to handle this matter as suggested with ———.

The ex-Mexican consul at Eagle Pass, Tex., Teodora Frezleres, who has been mentioned in my previous reports as being implicated in smuggling arms out of the United States, has recently been transferred to San Antonio, Tex., and Seguin, who was consul at San Antonio, Tex., has taken charge of the Mexican consulate at Eagle Pass, Tex.

Seguin likewise has been mentioned in several of my previous reports has been actively engaged in smuggling ammunition out of the United States into Mexico.

Juan Guevara is on very close and intimate terms with Consuls Frezleres and Seguin, and both Consul Frezleres and Seguin are the principals behind Guevara.

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re Juan Guevara, of Eagle Pass, Tex., smuggling ammunition from San Antonio, Tex., into Piedras Negras, Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., November 13, 1918.

Under date of November 10 ——— wrote me that Juan Guevara, who has been smuggling arms and ammunition from San Antonio, Tex., to Eagle Pass, Tex., and from there into Piedras Negras, Mexico, for the Mexican Government, recently died from influenza.

——— also tells me, however, that undoubtedly some of Guevara's associates will continue to smuggle arms and ammunition by automobile out of San Antonio, Tex., in cooperation with Mexican Consul Seguin, of San Antonio, who is operating with Mexican Consul Teodora Frezleres, of Eagle Pass, Tex.

Bibb also recently wrote me that Gen. Peraldi, the military commander in the Piedras Negras district, was offering large inducements for arms and ammunition. I therefore on November 12 wrote ——— as follows:

"Looking over your reports for the past month I notice in your letter of October 2, on page 5 of that letter, you state Gen. Peraldi is offering very strong inducements for 30-30 rifles, carbines, and 30-30 cartridges.

You will remember you wrote me on or about the 1st of October in regard to that fellow Juan Guevara, who has been running arms and ammunition for Seguin, the Carranza consul at San Antonio, in connection with Frezleres, the Carranza consul at Eagle Pass, and if Gen. Peraldi, as you say, in your letter, is offering any inducement for arms and ammunition, hope you will be able to make arrangements through some other party or parties whereby we can sell

Peraldi or any of the Carranza crowd all of the arms and ammunition they want. I can secure any quantity and in this way we will be able to involve all of those mixed up in the transaction and in the end cause the arrest of the entire crowd. Keep this very confidential, handle it carefully and I believe something may come of it."

As mentioned in my letter to ———, provided he can handle the matter with Gen. Peraldi for Teodora Freziers, Mexican consul at Eagle Pass, or Consul Seguin at San Antonio, I will be able to have friends of mine arrange to sell them the ammunition, ——— states they are in the market for.

If you have any suggestions or instructions to give me regarding this proposed plan, in that event will be glad to receive same.

Refer you to my report of September 25, 1918, entitled "Re Juan Guevara, of Eagle Pass, Tex., smuggling ammunition from San Antonio, Tex., into Piedras Negras, Mexico." This report will give you full information regarding how this ammunition previously has been handled. Also refer you to my previous report dated September 24, 1918, entitled "Re alleged participation of Mexican Government in smuggling narcotics out of Mexico into United States and ammunition from the United States into Mexico via Mexican mail coaches and in Mexican mail bags," will give you full information as to how the Carranza Government is getting arms and ammunition out of the United States into Mexico.

(Cresse is code name for Jones.)

STATEMENT BY CHARLES E. JONES REGARDING JUDGE CHARLES A. DOUGLAS, WHICH IS REFERRED TO ON PAGE 5804 OF MR. JONES'S TESTIMONY.

In so much as I have explained to the committee regarding the loyalty of Adam Leckie to the United States and his continued efforts to assist the United States Government regarding Mexican affairs, therefore I believe, in justice to Judge Charles A. Douglas, that I should also inform the committee of the fact that as long as I have known Judge Douglas I have never seen or heard him say or plan to do anything for the Mexicans that could in any way be construed as being harmful or detrimental to the interests of the United States. On the contrary, know that if Bonillas, Carranza, Luis Cabrera, and other Mexican Government officials had followed the advice of Judge Douglas that conditions in Mexico for the last several years would have been far better than they were.

Repeatedly Judge Douglas, as Carranza's legal adviser in the United States, was able to render service of the greatest value to the United States Government. I believe the committee should also be informed at this time of a statement made to me by A. Bruce Bielaski, at that time Chief of the Bureau of Investigation, United States Department of Justice, regarding Judge Douglas. This was in 1916 or 1917. I asked Mr. Bielaski if Douglas could be depended on as far as the United States was concerned in Mexican affairs. Mr. Bielaski said that whenever any emergency arises regarding Mexican matters that Douglas invariably would gladly cooperate with the Department of Justice, and, if necessary, or desired, they could secure from Judge Douglas at all times any information or documents he might have regarding Mexico or Mexicans, provided it would be to the interests of the United States Government for him to furnish same. Furthermore, Mr. Bielaski stated that Douglas, first of all, was an American.

Having known Judge Douglas for several years I consider that his loyalty, as far as Mexican affairs is concerned, was always of the same type as that of Adam Leckie.

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re Jerome S. Hess, of New York, calling at Mexican embassy, 1413 I Street NW., Washington, D. C.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 6, 1918.

On July 1, at about 4.45 p. m., Mexican Ambassador Bonillas, Godchaux, and myself were in the front parlor on the right-hand side of the hall, and the door bell rang and a maid went to the door. I heard a man ask for Bonillas, and the maid told him that the ambassador was busy. The man, however, insisted that he was a close personal friend of the ambassador and told the maid that he was Mr. Hess and to take his card to the ambassador. The maid therefore brought the card into the parlor, and the ambassador sent word to Hess to call later. Godchaux palmed the card off the card tray in the hallway as we went out.

The original card with the name Jerome S. Hess, in his handwriting on the back of his card, is herewith attached to this report.

Hess is a member of the firm of Hardin & Hess, 50 Pine Street, New York.
(Cresse is code name for Jones.)

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re attaché of French Embassy at Washington calling at Mexican Embassy at Washington.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 8, 1918.

During my recent trip to Washington, several times called at the Mexican Embassy as per my previous reports.

On the afternoon of June 28, at about 2.45 p. m., when I entered the embassy was shown by the butler to the parlor on the right-hand side of the hall, and at that time heard conversation between a man and a woman in the parlor on the left-hand side of the hall.

After the butler left me I took a look into the parlor where the man and woman were, and saw that the man was dressed in a uniform of a French Army officer, and that the young lady he was talking to was Miss Bonillas, one of the daughters of the Mexican ambassador.

A few moments thereafter they came out of the parlor and as they came through the door of the parlor the French Army officer had his arm around the waist of the young lady.

They left the embassy and entered an automobile which was driven by the French Army officer. The Maryland license of this automobile was No. 80237.

At about 4 p. m. that afternoon by telephone reported this matter to Mr. Pike, of your Washington office.

(Cresse is code name for Jones.)

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re various visitors to the Mexican Embassy at Washington, D. C.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 8, 1918.

Among the parties in Washington who visit the Mexican Embassy is a Madame Brull.

Also Lieut. Joseph J. Coppola, of the Italian military mission.

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re party by name of Heinemann who appeared to be a German, calling at Mexican Embassy, Washington, D. C.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 8, 1918.

On the afternoon of June 28, at about 2.45 p. m., as Godchaux and myself reached the Mexican Embassy, we saw a party just going up the steps to the front door, and as he rang the bell he pulled a cardcase out of his pocket and took a card from same. I read the name Heinemann on the card in his hand, but could not get the initials, as his thumb was over same.

When the maid opened the door he asked if a certain party was there to meet him (could not catch the party's name). The maid told him no, but to come back between 4.30 and 5 p. m. and the party would be there. Heinemann then left and walked away from the embassy.

He has the facial characteristics of a German. He wore nose eyeglasses, had blue eyes, blonde hair, ruddy complexion, clean shaven, weight about 145 pounds, 5 feet 8½ inches in height, wore a gray suit, tan shoes, Panama hat, and carried a cane.

At about 4 p. m. that afternoon by telephone reported this matter to Mr. Pike of your Washington office, and suggested that one of your operatives pick up Heinemann when he returned to the embassy at 4.30 p. m. and tail him to his hotel, office, or residence, and in that way learn who he was.

(Cresse code name for Jones.)

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re interviews with Ignacia Bonillas, Mexican ambassador to the United States at Washington, D. C., and ideas and plans suggested as result of these interviews which may help to offset Germany's strength in Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 19, 1918.

Per instructions received from Mr. Pike and yourself, I had several interviews with Bonillas, the Mexican ambassador, each of these lasting from one to four and a half hours.

As fully covered in my previous reports and personal interviews with the chief and Mr. Pitse in regard to the Mexican Government having employed me to handle their secret-service work in the United States, I therefore, was in a position to talk very frankly to the ambassador regarding the feeling in the United States toward Mexico caused by their pro-German policy.

I told the ambassador I had learned while in New York on this trip, likewise while having lunch with several prominent Congressmen and Senators, also from many prominent newspaper men in Washington, that are personal friends of mine, that it seemed to be a consensus of opinion from all of the parties mentioned that Mexico had and was asking and expecting of the United States many political and diplomatic courtesies between Governments at peace with each other, and that in turn Mexico, so all of the parties seem to think, wanted everything from the United States and in turn did not appear to be willing to even meet the United States halfway.

I then told the ambassador that I could not understand how his Government expected the United States to arrest and prosecute the many Mexican revolutionary leaders and their supporters in the United States, clogging up the courts with such prosecutions, spending many hundreds of thousands of dollars in apprehending these Mexican revolutionary leaders, thereby eliminating all of the enemies in the United States of Mexico, and in turn after having done all of that for the Government of Mexico, then to see each hour and day the Government of Mexico allow thousands of Germans and other enemies of this country in Mexico to carry on activities of every kind that were just as dangerous, harmful, and detrimental to the interests of the United States as the Mexican revolutionary parties in the United States were to his Government.

Also told the Mexican ambassador that he certainly must realize, and if he did not, then a little investigation on his part would convince him of the fact that my statement was correct, which was that the press of the United States were bitterly opposed to President Carranza, and the present Mexican Government, and this opposition on the part of the press of America, was due entirely to the stand Mexico had taken in regard to openly being a friend and supporter of Germany on this continent; likewise on account of Mexico allowing Germans in that country to openly do everything in their power that had been and would be in the future harmful to the United States.

I also explained to the ambassador that as far as I was able to learn from certain friends of mine in the newspaper business in Washington, likewise from conversation with several Congressmen and Senators who were intimate friends of mine, that they feel the United States would be an absolute fool to ever do anything for Mexico, unless Mexico in turn showed a disposition to cooperate along equitable lines with the United States.

I then told the ambassador I had learned from personal observation on my last trip up and down the Mexican border and throughout other parts of the country that many of the city, county, and State officials, and the same applied to prominent business and professional men, but that had the utmost hatred for the Mexican Government, this being due entirely to the apparent pro-German and anti-American sentiment in Mexico.

I likewise at that time said to the ambassador that no one more than he fully understood that the United States as a Government was the most moral, honest, and honorable Government in the world, which he admitted, likewise the best friend Mexico had to-day in the world. He said he hoped so, and I also told him, irrespective of the fact that it was apparently common knowledge in the United States, whether correctly so or not, that Mexico was called pro-German and anti-American in every way, nevertheless, knowing my country and its Government officials as I did by reputation, that whenever any of the Mexican revolutionary leaders committed any overt acts against Mexico in the United States the authorities would immediately prosecute them, and this had been amply proven in the past by such prosecutions.

At my last interview with the ambassador in the presence of Godchaux, on the afternoon of July 1, 1918, which lasted from 3 p. m. to 6.15 p. m., I put as many hot and direct shots into the ambassador's hide along these lines as I possibly could, and in turn, if it is possible to be convinced of the honor and integrity of any Mexican, and it is a debatable question if such a one ever existed, nevertheless, Bonillas apparently fully realizes that it will pay Mexico in every way not to have a break with the United States.

I asked Bonillas the point-blank question as to why Mexico had not and would not declare war on Germany and he said that the relations between the Mexican people and those of Germany had always been friendly; therefore, in so much as Germany had given Mexico no provocation of any kind, he felt sure the reason President Carranza and the Mexican Congress and Senate had not declared war on Germany was due to the fact to do so would be dishonorable, inhuman, and absolutely immoral.

I then said to the ambassador for the sake of argument whether the present position of President Carranza is correct or not, nevertheless, President Carranza is a Mexican, and the future of Mexico at this moment to a very great extent is in his hands, and whether right or wrong in your opinion, Mr. Ambassador, do you not think that if Mexico was to declare war at the present time on Germany it would give Mexico countless opportunities to again put Mexico in her right position among the nations of the world, likewise give her the opportunity to secure financial assistance from the Allies and to effect new treaties with all of the Allies, likewise when all of the claims against Mexico were eventually presented for settlement which now existed, if an ally of the Allies could make a good settlement regarding such claims it would give to Mexico many things along these lines and other ways too numerous to mention. The ambassador said undoubtedly my supposition as outlined would mean a great deal to Mexico, but unfortunately President Carranza was in the minority, and that irrespective of his individual influence in Mexico as its present leader he had to contend with many of his senators, congressmen, Government officials, and army officers who may not feel as he did.

I then said, "Mr. Ambassador, I am talking to you at the present moment as the paid representative of the Mexican Government, and it is my duty as such to give you facts as I understand them; therefore my statement, of course, under those circumstances could not be considered offensive," and he said, certainly not, and I then told him it seemed to be pretty well understood in the United States that President Carranza had been bought by the German Ambassador to Mexico City, and that President Carranza likewise was cooperating with the Government of Germany, acting under suggestions received from the German Ambassador to Mexico City.

The ambassador's face at this remark hardened up, turned rather pale, and he looked like he did not appreciate the statement I had made. He however took it very nicely and then said, "Yes, it is unfortunate and a great pity that such remarks have been made, but, nevertheless, I tell you on my honor that President Carranza has never taken one single cent from the Government of Germany, directly or indirectly, nor from any person or persons that are in any way directly or indirectly connected with any of the interest of Germany that may try to influence him as far as the Government of Germany is concerned."

I then said to him, "Mr. Ambassador, is it true that the majority of the army officers of the Mexican Government are in the pay of the German Ambassador to Mexico City or of other interests that are friendly to Germany?" I also said that I had heard many times that many of the Mexican army officers were on the pay roll of the German Ambassador to Mexico.

The ambassador said unfortunately probably part of my information along those lines were correct, and undoubtedly some of the Mexican army officers had taken money from Germany, but he felt sure he could honestly say, that those Mexican army officers as a whole were in the minority, and as far as the majority of the Mexican army officers are concerned, my statement is incorrect. The ambassador also said that treachery on the part of one's own country's army officers undoubtedly existed in all governments, and then said some of your own United States Army officers have or may be taking money from German interests.

I then said to the ambassador, if as a fact some of your Mexican army officers are in the pay of Germany, and President Carranza decided to declare war on Germany, what effect would it have as far as those army officers in the pay of Germany being able to attempt to overthrow President Carranza, and I also said, Suppose that a large part of the Mexican army officers are in the pay of Germany, how then, in that event, if President Carranza thought that Mexico should declare war on Germany, could he safely do so. The ambassador said that if such a condition really existed it would be dangerous for President Carranza to attempt to declare war on Germany, for if the majority of his army officers were in the pay of Germany, it would result in the present Mexican Government being overthrown by the army, provided Carranza attempted to declare war on Germany.

I then said to the Ambassador I understand there also were some prominent newspapers in the United States who have repeatedly stated President Carranza has been doing everything he possibly could and that he will continue to do so, that is in every way as he sees and understands it harmful and detrimental to the interests of the United States, Carranza doing this simply with an idea of eventually forcing the United States to make him a financial proposition, likewise give him other favorable treaty concessions, so that if the United States were to do this Carranza would have accomplished financially and politically a great deal for his country, and in turn for these favors he would declare war on Germany and lose nothing by so doing. The Ambassador said, yes, he had also heard the same rumors, but they were not so.

Summing up my several conversations with Bonillas during the last week, which he believes were given me by him to enable me to get published in the newspapers of the United States, which he, of course, wants and expects to be very favorable to Mexico, and convinced of the fact that he is in every way strictly a Mexican, and he will at all times go to any extreme to endeavor to hypnotise or double-cross the State Department whenever he can secure an opportunity to do so.

However, Mexican as he is, which means individual selfishness, likewise always endeavoring to look out first for his own interests therefore, fully understanding the situation between his country and the United States as he does, that he to stay in his present position, and the same applies to his future politically and financially in Mexico, am inclined to believe there is an opportunity through my talking to him in the most direct manner possible for the State Department, and saying to him many things that the State Department could not personally say to him, and in the end probably be able to constantly throw a scare into him regarding the necessity of making certain recommendations to President Carranza, which may be fruitful in the way of results which might be advantageous to the United States.

I came to Bonillas very highly recommended by Andres Garcia, of El Paso, in whom he has a great deal of confidence, likewise from the consul general at New Orleans and from Adam Leckie who, as you know, is a very close personal friend of his. On June 28 he wrote Leckie regarding me as follows:

EMBAJADA DE MEXICO,
Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
28 de Junio de 1918.

Sr. ADAM LECKIE,
Edificio del Banco de Londres,
Mexico, D. F.

MUY ESTIMADO Y FINO AMIGO: Con fecha 25 de junio recibí su carta de 20 de Mayo, que me entrego el Sr. Charles E. Jones, y tendré satisfaccion en obsequiar la recomendacion de Ud.

Me repito su atto. y afmo S. S.,

Y. BONILLAS.

TRANSLATION.

Under date of June 25 I received your letter of May 20, which was handed to me by Mr. Charles E. Jones, and I will take pleasure to favorably consider your recommendation.

Your attentive and affectionate sure servant.

NOTE.—The above copy of Bonillas's letter was sent to me by Leckie.

I told Bonillas that I believe he should from time to time give out newspaper interviews that define the position of Mexico, and that I would have same published in all of the daily papers throughout the United States, and which eventually may lead Bonillas into making some positive declaration which may force Carranza into a more definite position regarding his present attitude toward the United States in regard to the European War.

In my report of December 24, 1917, under the heading of "Confidential report re Mexico from information secured from A. E. L. Leckie" I at that time sent forward to your department information in regard to the majority of the Mexican Army officers being in the pay of the German Government. That part of my report in part was as follows:

Learned from Leckie there is absolutely no truth in the many reports which have been circulated in the United States to the effect that Pablo Gonzales and Carranza are about to have a break. Leckie stated Gonzales of course had many different arguments with Carranza, but all of them were friendly and that the spirit of cooperation and friendship between Carranza and Gonzales, as he understood it, was as strong as ever.

"Leckie also said Gonzalez was extremely active in regard to having Carranza declare war on Germany, and no matter how this situation eventually ended, he believed Gonzalez would always be against Germany.

"Leckie said Gonzalez had repeatedly urged Carranza not to interfere with Gen. M. Paleaz, in the Tuxpam oil fields, on account of the fact that it might result in the United States and her allies taking charge of all the Mexican oil fields. Gonzalez told Leckie to talk to Carranza about these matters and urge him to leave Paleaz alone at this time.

"Leckie then stated he had several interviews with Carranza in regard to the fact that Carranza had everything to gain and nothing to lose by declaring war on Germany, and also to under no circumstances at this time attempt to interfere with Gen. Paleaz in the Tuxpam oil fields, and his principal argument with Carranza was that if he attempted to attack Gen. Paleaz and run him out of the oil fields it would probably result in Gen. Paleaz or some of the Carranza troops setting fire to the oil fields or destroying property there, which, as Leckie understood, it would result in England asking the United States to take charge of the oil fields, due to the fact that England proposes to have the oil from there irrespective of consequences.

"Leckie told me there was absolutely no doubt in his mind but that Carranza, and practically all of his officials, had become convinced of the fact that they should declare war on Germany, and were about ready to do so at the time the Germans began their recent Italian drive, and he believed if this move on the part of Germany in Italy had not been made that by now Carranza would have declared war on Germany.

"Leckie then said that after much quiet investigation on his part, and after many talks with Gonzales and others, both for and against the United States, there was no doubt in his mind but that the entire Mexican Army crowd has been bought up absolutely by German interests in Mexico, and that these German interests are paying from time to time the prominent Mexican Army officers large additional sums of money.

"Leckie, however, is inclined to believe Carranza has and will continue to hold out for some time before he will even admit that he is considering any plan which will result in Mexico breaking with Germany. Carranza hopes in the end to in this way secure assurances of financial assistance from the United States."

I at that time discussed with Leckie as to whether Carranza was in the pay of the German Government or not, and he stated he felt sure of the fact Carranza was not in the pay of Germany. If this is correct German money in Mexico is running short.

You will remember in many of my reports for 1916 and 1917, regarding the Rosales Honduranian and other Central American revolutionary movements, I at that time was able to secure possession of the majority of the papers of Rosales, Peralta, and their associates, which were sent forward to your department to be photographed. In these papers were included letters from Carranza, C. Agullar, Minister of Foreign Affairs, Gen. Obregon, Gen. Greene, Gen. Hill, and from many other prominent Mexican Government officials, which prove they were implicated financially, politically, and otherwise in endeavoring through Rosales and Peralta of the Honduranian revolutionary party, Gen. Castillo, Dr. Guzman, and others of the Guatemalan revolutionary parties, Dr. Julian Irias of the Nicaraguan revolutionary party, Dr. Daradona of the San Salvadoran revolutionary party, which proved that Carranza and his officials expected and hoped to be able through each of these revolutionary leaders in Central America to overthrow all of the present existing Central American Governments and place in each of those country a revolutionary leader as president who would have been made president of each of those countries largely due to the financial and political support of Carranza and his officials.

As I see the Mexican situation to-day, am convinced of the fact that the money spent by Carranza through Gen. Maximo B. Rosales, Dr. Julian Irias, Dr. Daradona, Gen. Castillo, and others in endeavoring to overthrow the Central American Governments, as mentioned hereinbefore, was German money that passed through Carranza's hands for the purpose of establishing governments in Central America that would, if they had been successful in their revolutionary efforts at that time, have given Germany the opportunity to-day in each of those countries that she (Germany) now has in Mexico.

Your department being in possession of photographic copies of all of these original letters, likewise enables me to have the opportunity to show to Bonillas that the Mexican Government would be playing with the most dangerous fire if they in any way cooperated to any further extent with Germany, for in doing so if a break is thereby caused between Mexico and the United States, at that time it will be proven that Carranza had hoped and attempted to overthrow all of the present Central American Governments. The proof, no matter how positive it is, will in the end, I believe, not carry much weight in even making the people of Latin America have a friendly feeling for the United States. The only value of these documents, letters, etc., at the present time, would be to use as a club on Bonillas and Carranza.

Carranza personally will not believe to any great extent, and pays but very little attention to the individual opinions or reports from his various Government officials. For instance, if Ambassador Bonillas reported to Carranza that the feeling in the United States was very antagonistic toward Mexico, on account of pro-German activities in Mexico, Carranza would be inclined to consider this was simply a personal belief of Bonillas.

However, as stated to Mr. Pike and yourself, believe that I will be able not only to have Bonillas send in reports to Carranza, but likewise can impress upon his various consuls and his friends and supporters throughout the United States that Mexico is playing with fire, in regard to their present pro-German attitude, and in my conversations with each of these various Mexican consuls that are scattered over the United States, I feel sure that I can convince them of the fact that it is their duty to advise President Carranza of the feeling toward his Government in the United States.

As each and every one of the Mexican consuls in the United States are always anxious to send any information to Carranza, so that in this way he can convince Carranza of the fact they are on the job, and as each of these consuls after I have a straight talk with them will probably consider they have something important to report to Carranza and as I hope will report to him the talk that your department or the State Department will want me to hand to the consuls, likewise that he, the consul, can hardly understand how Mexico can expect the United States to eliminate all of the Mexican revolutionary leaders and their supporters in the United States, when in turn Mexico is allowing German activities of every kind, to the detriment of the United States, to exist in Mexico.

My supposition is that each consul in his eagerness as he will think, to send something new and fresh in the way of information to Carranza, will send this information to Carranza as if it had been secured from observation. If my plan can be successfully carried out believe Carranza, in this way will receive from 25 or 30 of his consuls likewise from his friends and supporters in the United States reports along these lines that will convince him of the fact that his present policy is a grave mistake. These reports reaching Carranza from such widely distributed points, and from a large number of his consuls, are bound to make an impression on him for he then will realize that it is not the mere idea or opinion of one man.

The thought may occur to you that these consuls will quote me as their source of information when making their reports to Carranza regarding this matter. This is hardly under any circumstances liable to happen due to the fact that these Mexican consuls never give credit to any one for information furnished and to make an impression upon Carranza, will endeavor to make him believe they have worked very hard to secure their opinions along these lines.

Another phase of this matter is that I will likewise throw a very stiff scare into all of these various Mexican consuls regarding the great danger to the Mexican Government existing at the present time caused by the reorganization of the Mexican revolutionary movement in the United States which I can prove to them is amply financed and in a position to be a most dangerous factor in eliminating Carranza and all of his followers in Mexico. This will likewise be instantly reported to Carranza as the individual opinion of each of his consuls.

I also when I see Leckie during the latter part of this month or early in August at San Antonio, per my previous reports, will talk to him very straight in regard to the danger of the revolutionary movement against Mexico, and of the sentiment against Mexico in this country in regard to their pro-German attitude, and as Leckie and all of his associates in the United States and Mexico are financially very heavily interested in their various Mexican investments, it will result in Leckie likewise working on Carranza and his prominent officials, also through his Mexican law partners of Mexico City and with Douglas, and I feel sure that between Leckie, Douglas and their associates in Mexico that Carranza through them will receive some very strong facts that may cause him to wake up.

As stated in my report of July 12, 1918, under the heading of "Information pertaining to the present Mexican situation which I expect to obtain from Adam Leckie of Mexico City and Washington, D. C." I in that report forwarded the following information in part:

"Leckie is, as mentioned in many of my previous reports, on very intimate terms with President Carranza of Mexico and Secretary C. Agullar, Mexican minister of foreign affairs. He, therefore, is in a position to be thoroughly posted as to the true conditions in Mexico regarding the German situation in that country, likewise should be fully aware of the real Mexican sentiment regarding the United States at this time.

"Leckie is the junior member of the Mexican law firm of Gonzalez, Roa, Carbajal & Leckie, with offices at Edificio del Banco de Londres, Mexico 18, Mexico City. Gonzales Roa, of Leckie's firm, is general counsel for the National Railways System in Mexico, also chief associate counsel for the United Railways of Yucatan, also the Reguladora del Henequen of Yucatan. Likewise the department of agriculture, the Mexican Monetary Commission, also the commission of legislation, also director and professor of the University of Mexico, general attorney in Mexico for the Wells Fargo Express Co. and many other corporations.

"Carbajal was the Carranza minister to Costa Rica and Nicaragua, likewise minister plenipotentiary to Russia, later to the United Kingdom. After he returned to Mexico he occupied the position of under secretary of state and at the present time is the legal adviser for the Mexican finance department.

"Leckie, therefore, on account of his partnership arrangement with these two Mexicans who I understand are very close personal friends of Carranza, likewise act as his personal legal and political advisers, has given to Leckie an opportunity to secure probably more correct information pertaining to the true situation in Mexico than almost any other American."

Leckie, therefore, through his own influence, and that of his Mexican law partners, can talk to Carranza and his officials in such a way that it should be productive of results with them. The services so far rendered along the lines by Leckie to the United States have been of great help and value to our Government.

Another part of this proposed plan is for me to request each agent of your department in every town that has a Mexican Consul to carefully select three or four of the most reliable American business and professional men of known loyalty in that town and who have never had any connection with the various Mexican factions. These men could be, for instance, a prominent preacher, banker, doctor, lawyer, or of any business provided he met our requirements as to his general reputation and loyalty to the United States.

After your local agent picked these men and they had been checked up to the limit, your agent and myself would see each man we had selected and explain to him that the Mexican situation was rather critical and that we wanted him in some manner to begin to cultivate the Mexican Consul in his town, apparently cultivating him for personal or business reasons, likewise inviting the Consul to his home and club for social affairs, and in many other ways putting the Consul under personal and social obligations to him. In a few weeks the friendship between these business men and the Consul should have developed to the extent that the business men could then begin to drift into conversations with the Consul regarding the Mexican situation. After that the Americans could begin to lay their plans to press into the Consul's brain that the United States is, after all, Mexico's best friend and that Mexico with such American propaganda talk to the Mexican Consuls and other friends and supporters of the present Mexican Government in the United States, being scientifically showered on these Mexicans and in such a manner as to not overplay the proposition, felt sure that all of this in the end would reach Carranza and his officials from his consuls, and as direct information and opinions of his consuls.

This plan is along the lines of my own propaganda work direct to the Mexican Consuls, as outlined in detail on pages 7 and 8 of this report.

Believe if I am given the opportunity to try this plan out in connection with the plan regarding my talk to the Mexican consuls and friends and supporters in this country as mentioned hereinbefore, that I am capable of handling same, so that it may produce some results which may be of value to the United States.

By constantly keeping in close personal contact with each of the American business men and professional men selected for this propaganda work I can keep them hustling to produce results, or each of your local agents can do so on direct instructions from your department.

It is almost impossible to put in a report details of such propaganda work, but it can, I feel sure, be very easily and successfully worked out in person.

The same class of propaganda work can be successfully carried out by trusted Americans in Mexico.

I personally stated several times to Mr. Pike that as I understand the Mexican, Central American, and South American situation, that Germany if she can force this country to have a break with Mexico is thereby deliberately forcing the United States to play into her (Germany's) hand.

My interpretation of this supposition is that if we have a break with Mexico, and declare war on her, or were forced to send troops in to pacify that country, inasmuch as all of the citizenship of South America, Central America, and Mexico total approximately 95,000,000 people, all of whom are of Spanish or Latin blood, and therefore clannish to the core, and that if Germany therefore can force the United States to intervene in Mexico or Germany would try to convince them to pick a row with us, Germany in doing so plays one of her most successful trump cards, for after the present European war is ended our trouble with Mexico, if we have it, will enable Germany's financial and commercial interest to have more than a fair chance to secure a foothold commercially in South America, Central America, and Mexico, using as an opportunity to do so that the United States declared war on Mexico, which, according to the Mexican and Latin American race, would, as Germany would try to convince them, was a direct insult to the Spanish-speaking people of Central America, South America, and Mexico.

We, in this way, as I see and understand it, would give Germany an opportunity to secure a foothold after the war that under no circumstances should Germany be allowed to have in Latin America and Mexico.

My supposition can be offset by the statement that if the United States was in a position to present to the people of Mexico, Central America, and South America absolute proof of Mexico's cooperation with Germany and that such proof in turn would kill Germany's opportunity to extend her commerce after the war in the countries mentioned.

Proof or no proof, as I see and understand it, knowing the Latin Americans as I do, it would be of very little weight with them.

I am firmly convinced of the fact that it is my duty to recommend as strong as I possibly can that in one way or the other whether playing the cards above or under the table that the present Mexican situation be won by diplomacy.

If, as a matter of fact, my supposition is correct and that is I am absolutely convinced of the fact that Germany to-day owns and controls the policy of the present Mexican Government, she certainly won it diplomatically or financially, and if such is the case the United States should likewise diplomatically or financially try to undo Germany's gain there and secure possession of Mexico along the same lines that Germany did.

IF AFTER ALL FINANCIAL, DIPLOMATIC, AND PROPAGANDA EFFORTS CAN NOT WIN MEXICO OVER TO THE UNITED STATES, THEN IN THAT EVENT EVEN IF THE UNITED STATES HURTS HERSELF COMMERCIALLY IN LATIN AMERICA FOR THE NEXT FIFTY YEARS, THE UNITED STATES SHOULD IRRESPECTIVE OF HER PROSPECTIVE LOSS COMMERCIALLY IN CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICA AT ONCE INTERVENE IN MEXICO AND HOLD ITS CONTROL ON MEXICO FOR SEVERAL YEARS AFTER THE EUROPEAN WAR ENDS, SO THAT IN THIS WAY GERMANY WOULD HAVE ABSOLUTELY NO OPPORTUNITY TO DO ANY BUSINESS IN MEXICO.

It is a very hard matter to cover in detail all points pertaining to the various suggestions mentioned in this report, but feel sure that my past record with your department in regard to producing results in Central American and Mexican affairs entitles me to have the opportunity to endeavor to work these plans out and which may be productive of results.

The information I am furnishing to the Mexican Government at the present time, per my previous reports, in regard to the activities of the various Mexican revolutionary groups in the United States has been so arranged that it will thoroughly convince Carranza of the fact that at the present time the reorganized revolutionary movement of his Mexican political enemies and their associates in the United States, which is a combination of every faction opposed to Carranza, and who have joined the new combination, is so well organized, equipped, and financed that when it begins to successfully operate that the chances are more than even they will have an excellent opportunity to overthrow the present Mexican Government.

I expect in this way to be able to probably open up the way to force Bonillas to make some proposition to the State Department which in turn might give them the opportunity to force a trade on Bonillas.

My present plans in regard to carrying out the proposed propositions mentioned hereinbefore, likewise the plans in my report of July 19, under the heading of "Plan proposed by me in regard to capturing German military spies in Mexican and Texas towns along the border," is to leave New Orleans during the first week of August with Godchaux and A. T. Howell, and this trip will take me to Houston, Galveston, San Antonio, Brownsville, El Paso, Laredo, Corpus Christi, Del Rio, Eagle Pass, and a few other border towns in Texas; Phoenix, Tucson, Nogales, and other towns in Arizona; several border towns in New Mexico, Los Angeles, Calif., and a few other points where Mexican consuls are located. Believe that I will, as opportunities under circumstances which may develop as this trip progresses, be able to continue to have sent through various consuls of the Mexican Government, likewise through their strong friends and supporters of Mexico in the United States, a volume of information which will never be traced back to me, and which, in the end, will give Carranza many things to think over and which may be productive of beneficial results to the United States.

I feel sure all of this information reaching Carranza from his various consuls, his friends, and supporters regarding the activities of his revolutionary enemies in the United States, likewise the other propaganda work mentioned hereinbefore, will probably frighten him into at least cooperating with the United States in regard to elimination of some of the activities of the Germans in Mexico.

As my last trip to Mexico and along the border in April and May, 1918, was productive of considerable results regarding Mexican and other matters, part of which I secured from Mexican officials, believe that this trip will likewise be productive. If my proposed trip meets with your approval will greatly appreciate having you advise me immediately regarding whatever instructions you may desire to give me.

If the time ever comes, and the chances are more than 50 per cent that it may happen, whereby Germany's hand in Mexico, by force, should be forever crushed by the United States and at the same time the people of Mexico, as a whole, be taught to respect the lives and property of Americans in Mexico, then in that event, knowing Mexico as I do, I ask that I will be remembered and assigned to the intelligence force in the first expedition that lands in Mexico.

(Cresse code name for Jones.)

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re break alleged to have occurred between Carranza and Gen. Obregon.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., September 26, 1918.

Understand within the last four or five weeks Carranza and Obregon have not been on friendly terms and that they are now on the verge of an absolute open break, which, if it has not already occurred, will become a reality now almost any moment.

The feeling between Carranza and Obregon for the last year, while apparently in the open was extremely friendly, nevertheless, Obregon, who has always felt that he was the logical candidate for the presidency of Mexico in the next Mexican presidential elections, which are to be held in September 20, 1920, has realized, so his friends and supporters claim, that during the last year Carranza has been doing everything he possible could to secretly tear down and destroy the presidential aspirations of Obregon.

Understand that the reasons for the open break which is now said to exist between Carranza and Obregon, were caused by Carranza giving amnesty to Pedro Ojeda, who is an old federal general and who is known from one end of Mexico to the other to be one of the bitterest personal and political enemies of Gen. Obregon.

At the time Carranza extended his amnesty to Gen. Ojeda, Obregon at that time is said to have written Carranza and likewise made the statement to his friends and supporters that Carranza had forgotten the fact when he (Carranza) came to the State of Sonora after he had been defeated in the State of Coahuila, he was without food, clothes, and even without shoes, and at that time he (Carranza) asked the people of Sonora to help him. Obregon has also told Carranza and his friends that whatever Carranza was or had been, he (Obregon) and his friends and supporters had really made Carranza.

Obregon is also said to have told Carranza that he was fully aware of Carranza's work and plans in regard to double-crossing him in the next presidential elections.

It is also said that Carranza now fully realizes his mistake in openly offending Obregon at this time, and to offset this mistake has offered, as President of Mexico, amnesty to all of the old federals and has asked and urged them to return to Mexico.

Among the old federal revolutionary sympathizers in the United States, and this also applies to the friends and sympathizers of Gen. Obregon, it is believed by them that this is a plan of Carranza to rally around for himself as much support as he can secure from the old federal revolutionists, and if he can accomplish this, then, in that event, it may offset to a great extent his split with Obregon.

Under date of July 16, 1918, I forwarded report entitled "Presidential candidates in the next presidential elections and serious Mexican situation which may arise from same at that time." Respectfully refer you to this report as mentioned for full details in regard to the plans and allegiances that Obregon has and is making to offset the work of Carranza in regard to defeating Obregon in the next presidential elections.

If the present break between Carranza and Obregon grows, it will result within the next few months in Obregon undoubtedly starting a revolutionary movement against Carranza.

As mentioned in my report of July 16, regarding the next Mexican presidential elections, Obregon already is on friendly and intimate terms with Esteban Cantu, governor of Lower California, who has, so it is said, promised his support to Obregon.

(Cresse code name for Jones.)

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re plan proposed by me in regard to capturing German consuls and German military spies in Mexican and Texas towns along the border.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 19, 1918.

As mentioned to Mr. Pike and yourself (Chief Bielaski), during my last trip to Washington in June, 1918, I believe my proposed plan in regard to eliminating some of the most active German consuls and German military spies in various Mexican towns across from United States territory is feasible and contains more than a fair chance of being successfully carried out.

As stated to you in person, many of the Mexican towns along the border, such as Matamoros, Nuevo Laredo, Piedras Negras, Juarez, and many other towns of the same class, and farther down in Mexico have, since the United States entered the war, given the German consuls in those towns, assisted by German military and naval officers, the opportunity to secure from the towns in the United States across the border a great deal of information which they undoubtedly have considered valuable, and which likewise may have been harmful to the interests of the United States.

A concrete example of the activities of the Germans along these lines is that of the German consul at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, who has been assisted in his work there for Germany by a Capt. Hinsch and a certain Herman Ruckheim, as mentioned in my previous reports.

The following plan in regard to eliminating the above-mentioned parties can be, I believe, successfully carried out by me, with the assistance of Godchaux and one or two other parties.

On account of my present friendly, official, and personal connection with the Mexican Government, I can secure for myself and for those it might be necessary to have assist me, credentials from the Mexican Government which will enable me to come and go into Mexico without interference from their officials.

Believe it is possible for Godchaux and myself, likewise others I may use to personally work our way into the confidence of several of the German consuls along the border, likewise some of their military spies on the Mexican side of the river, and hope to be able to a certain extent by feeding them from time to time a line of fake military or naval information, same to be furnished by the Bureau of Army Intelligence or your department and which would be of no harm to the United States, and of no value to them. Believe that in this way, due to their desire to secure information, that I can at least gain sufficient of their confidence to have them at a certain time meet me a few miles out of the particular Mexican town that is their headquarters, ostensibly meeting me at such place to secure from me at that time a lot of important military maps, etc., and if such a meeting is carried out on the Mexican side of the river, then spies in that event would simply knock out or kidnap the German consul or military spy, shove him over the river onto United States territory, and they would then be turned over to our Army officers.

The thought may occur to you that the prisoner would put up a yell that he had been kidnaped from Mexican territory; however, if he did, in that event it would be his own fault, for when he woke up he would be on United States territory.

Another part of the plan is to run in Godchaux and other ringers on these German consuls and military spies, letting these ringers for several weeks feed them a line of phony information, until they had secured their confidence, and then at a later date make arrangements to meet the Germans three or four miles out of towns on the American side of the river, and if such a meeting can be arranged, as I believe it can be, then in that event the Germans could be caught on United States territory, or if for some reason the German or Germans would not leave the Mexican town it is quite possible that they could be drugged, or knocked on the head in their office or on an automobile ride and then taken over the river into the United States.

Furthermore, am satisfied of the fact that a great deal of the information that is reaching German consuls and German military spies in Mexico and on the border is going to them from Mexicans and others who are operating on the United States side of the river.

The chances are even that I also may be able to likewise open up leads which may enable me to learn of the identity of these spies for Germany on the American side of the river.

Another part of this proposed plan is that Andres Garcia, Chief of the Mexican Secret Service, and Inspector General of Mexican Consulates, who is as cold as a piece of ice, and who considers human life of no value if it stands in the way of producing results for his department, he, therefore, will go to an extreme to make a showing with President Carranza.

Believe I can propose to Garcia, who has a certain amount of confidence in me, and is likewise convinced that I can be of value to his government, that it would be an excellent idea to surrender to me several of the most notorious German spies along the border, and in turn at the time these Germans are turned over to me, that I will likewise deliver to him several of the revolutionary leaders on the border that Mexico is very anxious to get.

As far as the Government of Mexico is concerned, do not believe they would enter into an arrangement of this kind, but feel sure of the fact that Garcia in his desire to make a showing to the Mexican Government will enter into plan with me, whereby if I can deliver to him a few of these prominent Mexican revolutionists, that he likewise at the same time, will turn over to me several of the most prominent German spies in Mexico. Of course as far as Garcia would ever know, the United States would in no way have any connection with such a plan. I would simply tell Garcia here, you want to do something for your country and I do also for mine, let's arrange a trade of this kind, you kidnap a few of these Germans for me and I likewise will kidnap a few of the Mexican revolutionary leaders you want.

I am putting this proposal plan in the form of a report, as per your request. The only assistance I will need is to have the subrosa cooperation from your agents along the border, who in turn in a quiet way at the proper time can, if necessary, secure the assistance of the Army Intelligence Bureau.

As stated to you in person if at any time this proposed plan resulted in my becoming involved in Mexico or anything personally happening to me, nothing would ever be known about it as far as our Government is concerned. Furthermore, handling the matter as suggested, as far as the United States is concerned, they officially would have nothing to do with the matter, therefore, in no way would they be involved in same, provided in some way I might blunder.

I have handled for your department practically all of the matters pertaining to the Honduran, Nicaraguan, San Salvadoran and Guatemalan Central American revolutionary movements for the last three years, likewise a very large percentage of all of the inside information pertaining to the activities of the Felicista Mexican revolutionary matter, and a great deal of the information furnished to your department regarding the Villista and other Mexican revolutionary matters were obtained through me, likewise many others matters, and to date I have so far successfully handled these matters with but few mistakes, therefore feel sure that my past record in regard to producing results entitles me to have the opportunity to at least attempt to eliminate to a certain extent the activities of the German consuls and German military spies along the border.

It is almost impossible to convey complete plans or ideas in a report regarding a matter of this kind, for as a rule such plans have to be worked out as the matter develops, and as per conditions pertaining to the local situation where the case is handled.

It is also possible as this proposed plan develops in the future that it may open up the opportunity to eliminate in one way or the other many of the German spies in the interior of Mexico that you stated you were very anxious to get possession of.

I feel absolutely sure of the fact that I can secure some results along these lines and will greatly appreciate having you give me the opportunity to try to do so.

(Cresse code name for Jones.)

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re request for information from chief as to name of Germans in Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., July 31, 1918.

While discussing with you in Washington the German situation in Mexico, and details of my plans in regard to capturing several of the German military spies along the Mexican border, you mentioned the fact that there were several Germans in the interior of Mexico that your department were very anxious to get possession of.

If my suggestions meet with your approval in that event, will greatly appreciate having you send me the names and addresses of the Germans in the interior of Mexico that your department is interested in, for it may be possible that I might be able to secure the elimination of these Germans that your department is interested in.

Will greatly appreciate having you definitely advise me through your New Orleans office at the earliest possible date regarding this matter, so I can go ahead with my plans regarding this proposition.

(Cresse code name for Jones.)

Confidential report by Cresse to Department of Justice re American Army officer stationed at El Paso, Tex., visiting the German consul three times in one week at Juarez, Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., May 13, 1918.

On the morning of April 19 secured information from Andrew Garcia, Caranza consul at El Paso, Tex., that an American Army officer whose name understood was either Lieutenant or Captain Hughler (am not certain that this name is correct), had during the last six or seven days crossed the International bridge at El Paso and called on each of his trips on the German consul at Juarez, Mexico. I could not press Garcia too strongly for details regarding the visits of this American Army officer to the German consul at Juarez.

Just before going to your local office at El Paso to report this matter to Mr. Jones your special agent at El Paso, learned that Col. Willard, United States Army intelligence officer at El Paso, had likewise secured a lead or information regarding the United States Army officer who had called on the German consul at Juarez. Gave all of the information I had to Mr. Jones, and asked him if Col. Willard had likewise reported the matter to him. Mr. Jones told me he had not.

Being on friendly terms with Garcia, telephoned him from Jones's office, and asked if Col. Willard had seen him in regard to this Army officer, and Garcia told me he had.

The first that your El Paso office heard of this matter was from me, and which shows complete lack of cooperation and assistance that should be extended by Col. Willard and his office to your representative at El Paso. Also understand this is not the first instance regarding lack of cooperation from Col. Willard's office to your El Paso office.

TESTIMONY OF MR. N. T. JONES.

(The witness was duly sworn by the chairman.)

The CHAIRMAN. You may state your name.

Mr. JONES. N. T. Jones.

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Jones, you are a brother of the witness who has been testifying, Charles E. Jones?

Mr. JONES. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. In the work that he has been doing, as he has testified, have you generally accompanied him and assisted him in such work?

Mr. JONES. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are familiar then with the work which he and you have been doing and to which he has testified?

Mr. JONES. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you heard his statements here?

Mr. JONES. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And are they, of your knowledge, true?

Mr. JONES. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there anything in addition to what he has stated which you care to state for the record?

Mr. JONES. No, sir. He has covered the ground very fully, and I can swear to the truth and correctness of all the statements he has made from my own personal knowledge.

The CHAIRMAN. You were present with him at these conversations which he has testified to with the Mexican ambassador, Bonillas, in this city?

Mr. JONES. Yes, sir; also at all conversations with De Negri, Seguin, and all other conferences with Mexican officials that he has testified to.

The CHAIRMAN. How does it happen that you gentlemen have been present together at these conferences?

Mr. JONES. Well, we were both very much interested in the whole matter, and we have always made it a habit to have a witness in securing any information from any of these Mexicans, either one of ourselves or some other outside witness.

The CHAIRMAN. Was there possibly a thought that the Jones family might last longer if you traveled together?

Mr. JONES. Yes, sir; there have been some threats made, and we thought it would probably be better if we traveled in pairs.

The CHAIRMAN. I believe that is all, Mr. Jones. I thank you very much.

The committee will adjourn until to-morrow afternoon at half past 2.

(Whereupon, at 1.15 p. m., the committee adjourned until Wednesday, May 19, 1920, at 2.30 o'clock p. m.)

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION,
OFFICE OF DIVISION SUPERINTENDENT,
NEW YORK CITY, December 21, 1918.

N. T. JONES, Esq.,

Special Agent of the Department of Justice,
New York, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: December 31 will mark the closing of my service in the department and the end of a happy year I have spent in the association with you in the New York district. I wish to thank you personally for the efficient, earnest, and loyal help you have given to the department, the New York division, and to me during this period. Your part in helping to win the World War has been no small one, and to you more than to me is due credit for the excellent results this office has attained.

I wish you a Merry, Merry Christmas and the best of success for the New Year.

Yours, sincerely,

CHAS. DEWOODY,
Division Superintendent.

INVESTIGATION OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS

HEARING

BEFORE A

SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS UNITED STATES SENATE

SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS
SECOND SESSION

PURSUANT TO

S. Res. 106

DIRECTING THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS TO INVESTIGATE THE MATTER OF OUTRAGES ON CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES IN MEXICO

PART 21

(STATE DEPARTMENT EXHIBITS)

Printed for the use of the Committee on Foreign Relations

WASHINGTON
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
1920

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Massachusetts, Chairman.

PORTER J. McCUMBER, North Dakota.

WILLIAM E. BORAH, Idaho.

FRANK B. BRANDEGEE, Connecticut.

ALBERT B. FALL, New Mexico.

PHILANDER C. KNOX, Pennsylvania.

WARREN G. HARDING, Ohio.

HIRAM W. JOHNSON, California.

HARRY S. NEW, Indiana.

GEORGE H. MOSES, New Hampshire.

GILBERT H. HITCHCOCK, Nebraska.

JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Mississippi.

CLAUDE A. SWANSON, Virginia.

ATLEE POMERENE, Ohio.

MARCUS A. SMITH, Arizona.

KEY PITTMAN, Nevada.

JOHN K. SHIELDS, Tennessee.

C. F. REDMOND, Clerk.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

ALBERT B. FALL, Chairman.

FRANK B. BRANDEGEE

MARCUS A. SMITH.

DAN M. JACKSON, Clerk.

INVESTIGATION OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington.

HON. ALBERT B. FALL,
Chairman Subcommittee to Investigate Mexican Affairs, Committee on Foreign Relations, United States Senate.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of September 6, 1919, reading as follows:

"The Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee investigating Mexican affairs hopes to begin hearings at once. There will be called certain witnesses whose testimony will be along the lines of the business and petroleum interests in Mexico.

"With this end in view, if it is not inconsistent with the best interests of the Government, the committee desires that you furnish it with information in regard to all protests to the Mexican Government or to any Mexican official, as to any law or proposed law, or decree, affecting American rights in Mexico, and especially affecting petroleum. Also, the committee will be grateful if your department can furnish in addition to the copies of the protests, copies of the replies of the Mexican Government or of any Mexican official thereto."

In reply I have the honor to inclose herewith, copies of 37 documents on the subject of Mexican decrees affecting the rights of American oil interests in Mexico. Additional papers on other subjects relating to Mexican affairs will be sent to you as soon as the copies have been made.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

WILLIAM PHILLIPS,
Acting Secretary of State.

Inclosures: Correspondence between Secretary of State and American diplomatic and consular officers in Mexico. (37 documents, Nos. 1 to 37).

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, June 28, 1914.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington.

Wireless from Tampico: "June 27, 8 p. m. Local authorities have been ordered to strictly enforce decree for collection of oil-production tax in Mexican gold or in United States currency at rate of two for one. Most companies have paid, but some have not as they regard it unjust to arbitrarily enforce rate of exchange of two for one when prevailing rate is about three for one. Orders have been received not to allow ships to be dispatched if production tax is not paid and same rules probably will be applied in cases of bar dues. Companies do not complain of amount of production tax which is rate provided by law under Madero administration instead of 75-cent rate by decree of Gen. Huerta. They feel that it is unjust for authorities not to accept constitutionalists currency or at least accept New York exchange at prevailing rate. Total of bar dues and production tax under present administration is 70 cents Mexican or 35 cents American currency. Under preceding administration was $1.25 or about 42 cents American currency, but present procedure of fixing exchange rate is regarded as arbitrary and illegal and companies believe instead of ships being detained on account of nonpayment such charges pending decision of legality of same that some method should be adopted which will permit shipments to continue and at same time protect interests of both Government and shippers. Miller."

CANADA.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 29, 1914.

AMERICAN CONSUL,
Brownsville, Tex.

Forward to: Geo. C. Carothers, Monterey.

Call on Consul General Hanna and ask to be shown departments June 26, 5 p. m., regarding La Barra taxes.

Represent to Gen. Carranza in the strongest possible manner the injustice of these demands in refusing to accept Constitutionalists currency or at least accept New York exchange at prevailing rates.

Companies believe instead of ships being detained on account of nonpayment such charges pending decision, that some plan should be adopted which will permit shipments to continue, and at same time protect Government and shippers.

BRYAN.

MONTEREY, MEXICO, July 5, 1914.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington:

Very favorable answers have been received from the secretary of hacienda relative to my representatives made to Gen. Carranza in behalf of the Huasteca Oil Co., the matter of exchange, kind of money to be accepted, clearance of oil ships, and American oil interests. I have telegraphed Consul Miller at Tampico.

CONSUL GENERAL HANNA.

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, July 9, 1914.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C.:

Wireless from Tampico: "July 8, 8 p. m. Department's July 6, 7 p. m. Local authorities have not yet received order to accept New York exchange at prevailing rate. Same order should be sent Tuxpam authorities, as production tax in Panuco Topila fields must be paid in Tuxpam July 15. As banks are not open will probably be difficult to determine prevailing rate of exchange. While this rule, if enforced, will not end all discrimination in favor of Tuxpam as against Tampico, it will reduce the amount of that discrimination as much as the difference between the prevailing rate of exchange and the arbitrary rate of two for one. There will be no further complaint if this ruling is fairly put into effect. Miller."

CANADA.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 10, 1914.

AMERICAN CONSUL GENERAL,
Monterey, Mexico:

Yours July 5, 8 a. m. On July 4 Canova telegraphed from Saltillo that secretary of Hacienda had directed port authorities at Tampico to accept New York exchange at prevailing gold rate and to facilitate movement of shipping.

Consul at Tampico telegraphs July 8 that local port authorities had not received orders said to have been issued by secretary of Hacienda. He says the orders should also be issued to Tuxpam authorities, as production tax in Panuco-Topila fields must be paid in Tuxpam July 15. As banks are not open will probably be difficult to determine prevailing rate of exchange.

Point out to Gen. Carranza the injustice of authorities declining to accept constitutional currency, in view of decree No. 21, dated February 28, 1914, and signed by Venustiano Carranza, making it obligatory upon officials as well as the public to accept constitutional currency. Department understands this decree has never been repealed. Earnestly endeavor to arrange with Carranza for the acceptance of this currency in payment of la barra and other taxes. If banks at Tampico were open New York exchange could be conveniently arranged. As they are closed, it is practically impossible.

BRYAN.

SALTILLO, MEXICO, July 11, 1914.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington:

Yours July 10, 7 p. m., referred to [Hanna?] Villarreal, being in Monterey. Office here assures me orders were sent to accept New York exchange at prevailing gold rates, and it has telegraphed Villarreal substance of your message.

CANOVA.

VERA CRUZ, MEXICO, July 17, 1914.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington:

Wireless from Tampico: "July 17, 10 a. m. Department's July 16, 10 a. m. Authorities absolutely refuse to accept any rate except two for one, which they claim is prevailing rate for Mexican gold. Absolutely no concessions have been made in response to action of Department State in matter. Miller."

CANADA.

MONTEREY, MEXICO, July 18, 1914.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington:

Following is transmitted for Vice Consul Silliman: "July 18, 8 p. m. Yours July 15, 9 p. m. Consul Miller is still at his post. After conference with secretary of finance this afternoon and with reference to Consul General Hanna's of July 16, 3 p. m., matter of payment of export duties at Tampico appears to reduce to this: The basis of charge is the Mexican gold peso. Constitutionalists claim that it is only fair that products sold for gold should pay their taxes in gold; further they claim that they are justified in limiting the extent to which their money shall be used as legal tender if Mexican gold is not available New York exchange which is thought to be easily obtainable in Tampico will be accepted as a convenience. Those who need it must make their own arrangements for it. If they buy it with Constitutionalist or other money they must pay what the sellers demand. Silliman."

CONSUL GENERAL HANNA.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, January 19, 1916.Consul JOHN R. SILLIMAN,
Queretaro, Mexico:

Department reliably informed de facto authorities contemplate issuing a decree providing for the nationalization of petroleum, which, if we are correctly informed, would affect most seriously the interests of numerous American citizens and other foreigners who have heretofore engaged in the business of producing and selling petroleum in Mexico. Point out to Gen. Carranza in unequivocal terms the dangerous situation which might result from the issuance of any decree of a confiscatory character. Request that definitive action be delayed until department shall have had opportunity to examine proposed decree, and mail copy thereof to department.

LANSING.

QUERETARO, January 21, 1916.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington:

Department's January 19, 4 p. m., information concerning nationalization of petroleum.

The secretary in charge of the department informed me this afternoon the Government is not contemplating such a decree. On the contrary, he showed me a contract just signed with an American firm for the construction of about 60 kilometers of oil pipe line in the Tuxpam district.

SILLIMAN.

QUERETARO, MEXICO, January 26, 1916.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington:

Department's January 19, 4 p. m., and department's January 22.
Nationalization of petroleum.

In accordance with department's wishes, subject was taken up personally with Gen. Carranza. He informed me this morning: "The Government is not contemplating the issuance of a decree nationalizing the petroleum industry." This confirms statement to me by Subsecretary Rouaix.

SILLIMAN.

JANUARY 22, 1917.

CHARLES PARKER, Esq.,
Representing American Interests,
Queretaro, Mexico:

The department's attention has been called to certain proposed provisions relating to rights of foreigners in Mexico, which provisions, it appears, the convention in session at Queretaro has decided to incorporate into the Mexican Constitution.

The first paragraph of article 27, relating to the expropriation of private property, appears to confer on the Executive the power to determine, without any legislative authority and without any judicial recourse being afforded to property owners to profect their rights, the necessity or utility of property, the condemnation of which, to him, may seem advisable. The vesting of such extensive powers in the Executive appears objectionable. It would seem desirable that at least the question as to whether property is taken for a public purpose should always be subject to judicial review.

The seventh paragraph of the same article provides that civil and commercial companies may not own and operate for themselves properties of an area greater than that absolutely necessary for the accomplishment of the purposes of their creation, and that the executive shall in every case determine the appropriate area. The objection to a provision so capable of capricious application appears evident. The precise conditions under which the power vested in the executive may be exercised are not defined. No safeguards are afforded against unwise or arbitrary executive acts. The fact that purchases would seemingly in all cases be subject to executive sanction would alone appear to show the impossibility of any proper practicable application of such a provision. While it is hardly to be supposed that it is intended to give this provision retroactive effect, should this be done such action would apparently result in confiscation of property rights vested under existing laws and treaty stipulations, since no provision is made for compensation for property taken and since property would evidently not under such conditions be taken in the proper exercise of the right of expropriation.

Article 28, providing that there shall be no exemption from taxation would apparently, if improperly given a retroactive effect, impair the obligation of contracts of many foreign corporations now operating under agreements, concluded either with the Mexican Federal Government or with the Mexican States, which provide for certain exemptions from taxation for periods that have not yet expired.

By the first and second paragraphs of article 33, it is provided that the executive may expel from the country forthwith and without judicial process any foreigners whose presence he may deem inadvisable, and that there shall be no appeal from his decree. These provisions apparently confer authority on the executive to expel foreigners without regard for the general practice of nations, which confines the exercise of the power of expulsion to cases in which just cause for the exercise of this harsh measure are clearly shown. The express power of the executive to expel, for reasons satisfactory to himself, aliens who have been permitted to enter Mexico, would seemingly place all aliens in that country in a position of insecurity and would appear to be at variance with the apparently growing tendency of nations to restrict the exercise of this right with a view to affording safeguards against the expulsion of aliens in an arbitrary manner inconsistent with the proper protection of their just rights and with a view to the observance of the rules of international comity.

The third paragraph of article 33 provides that foreigners may not acquire real estate unless they shall declare their intention to waive their citizenship and the protection of their governments in all matters appertaining to the property. The Government of the United States has, in the past, made clear, as doubtless have other nations, that it can not concede the right of Mexico to limit, by its municipal law, this Government's right of intervention to protect the rights of its citizens residing or sojourning in that country, nor concede that waivers such as those referred to in this provision can annul the relations of citizens to their own government and extinguish the obligation of this Government to protect its citizens in Mexico. In so far as the proposed provision would hamper the transfer to another foreigner of foreign-owned lands, it would apparently in a sense be confiscatory of rights enjoyed by the foreign owner from the time of his acquisition of the property.

[Paraphrase.]

You are instructed to bring the foregoing immediately to the attention of Gen. Carranza, and state that the provisions above mentioned seem to indicate a proposed policy toward foreigners which is fraught with possible grave consequences affecting the commercial and political relations of Mexico with other nations. Further, that the American Government can not acquiesce in any direct confiscation of foreign-owned properties in Mexico or indirect confiscation. You will bring to the attention of Gen. Carranza the department's earnest desire that he give these matters his careful consideration with a view to avoiding the possibility of the disturbance of hitherto pleasant relations existing between the two governments, and with a view to avoiding future serious difficulties under the proposed constitution with any government organized under it.

LANSING.

POLITICAL CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF MEXICO, SIGNED JANUARY 31, 1917, AND PROMULGATED FEBRUARY 5, 1917.

[Translated for the Mexican Review by H. N. Branch.]

TITLE I, CHAPTER I.—THE RIGHTS OF MAN.

ARTICLE 1. Every person in the United States of Mexico shall enjoy all rights prescribed by this constitution; these rights shall neither be abridged nor suspended except in such cases and under such conditions as herein provided.

ART. 2. Slavery is forbidden in the United States of Mexico. Slaves who set foot upon the national territory shall by this very act recover their freedom and enjoy the protection of the law.

ART. 3. Instruction is free; that given in public institutions of learning shall be nonsectarian. Primary instruction, whether higher or lower, given in private institutions shall likewise be nonsectarian.

No religious corporation nor minister of any religious creed shall be permitted to establish or direct schools of primary instruction.

Private primary schools may be established only subject to official supervision.

Primary instruction in public institutions shall be free.

ART. 4. No person shall be prevented from engaging in any profession, industrial, or commercial pursuit or occupation which he may deem fit, provided it be lawful. The exercise of this liberty may only be forbidden by judicial order when the rights of third persons are infringed, or by executive order, issued under the conditions prescribed by law, when the rights of society are affected. No one shall be deprived of the fruit of his labor except by judicial decree.

Each State shall determine by law what professions shall require licenses, the requisites to be complied with in obtaining the same, and the authorities empowered to issue them.

ART. 5. No one shall be compelled to render personal services without just compensation and without his full consent, excepting labor imposed as a punishment by judicial decree, which shall conform to the provisions of subdivisions I and II of article 123.

Only the following public services shall be obligatory, subject to the conditions set forth in the respective laws: Military service, jury service, service in municipal and other public elective office, whether this election be direct or indirect, and service in connection with elections which shall be obligatory and without compensation.

The State shall not permit any contract, covenant, or agreement to be carried out having for its object the abridgment, loss, or irrevocable sacrifice of the liberty of man, whether by reason of labor, education, or religious vows. The law, therefore, does not recognize the establishment of monastic orders, of whatever denomination, or for whatever purpose contemplated.

Nor shall any person legally agree to his own proscription or exile, or to the temporary or permanent renunciation of the exercise of any profession or industrial or commercial pursuit.

A contract for labor shall only be binding to render the services agreed upon for the time fixed by law and shall not exceed one year to the prejudice of the party rendering the service; nor shall it in any case whatsoever embrace the waiver, loss, or abridgement of any political or civil right.

In the event of a breach of such contract on the part of the party pledging himself to render the service, the said party shall only be liable civilly for damages arising from such breach, and in no event shall coercion against his person be employed.

ART. 6. The expression of ideas shall not be the subject of any judicial or executive investigation, unless it offend good morals, impair the rights of third parties, incite to crime, or cause a breach of the peace.

ART. 7. Freedom of writing and publishing writings on any subject is inviolable. No law or authority shall have the right to establish censorship, require bond from authors or printers, or restrict the liberty of the press, which shall be limited only by the respect due to private life, morals, and public peace. Under no circumstances shall a printing press be sequestered as the corpus delicti.

The organic laws shall prescribe whatever provisions may be necessary to prevent the imprisonment, under pretext of a denunciation of offenses of the press, of the vendors, newsboys, distributors, workmen, and other employees of the establishment publishing the writing denounced, unless their responsibility be previously established.

ART. 8. Public officials and employees shall respect the exercise of the right of petition, provided it be in writing and in a peaceful and respectful manner; but this right may be exercised in political matters solely by citizens.

To every petition there shall be given an answer in writing by the official to whom it may be addressed, and said official shall be bound to inform the petitioner of the decision taken within a brief period.

ART. 9. The right peaceably to assemble or to come together for any lawful purpose shall not be abridged; but only citizens shall be permitted to do so in order to take part in the political affairs of the country. No armed assembly shall have the right to deliberate.

No meeting or assembly shall be deemed unlawful, nor may it be dissolved, which shall have for its purpose the petitioning of any authority or the presentation of any protest against any act, provided no insults are proffered against the said authority, nor violence resorted to, nor threats used to intimidate or to compel the said authority to render a favorable decision.

ART. 10. The inhabitants of the United States of Mexico are entitled to have arms of any kind in their possession for their protection and legitimate defense, excepting such as are expressly prohibited by law and such as the nation may reserve for the exclusive use of the army, navy, and national guard; but they shall not bear such arms within inhabited places except subject to the police regulations thereof.

ART. 11. Every man has the right to enter and leave the Republic, to travel through its territory and change his residence without necessity of a letter of security, passport, safe conduct, or any other similar requirement. The exercise of this right shall be subordinated to the powers of the judiciary, in the event of civil or criminal responsibility, and to those of the executive insofar as relates to the limitation imposed by law in regard to emigration, immigration, and the public health of the country, or in regard to undesirable foreigners resident in the country.

ART. 12. No titles of nobility, prerogatives, or hereditary honors shall be granted in the United States of Mexico, nor shall any effect be given to those granted by other countries.

ART. 13. No one shall be tried according to special laws or by special tribunals. No person or corporation shall have privileges or enjoy emoluments which are not in compensation for public services and established by law. Military jurisdiction shall be recognized for the trial of criminal cases having direct connection with military discipline; but the military tribunals shall in no case and for no reason extend their jurisdiction over persons not belonging to the army. Whenever a civilian shall be implicated in any military crime or offense, the cause shall be heard by the corresponding civil authorities.

ART. 14. No law shall be given retroactive effect to the injury of any person whatsoever.

No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, property, possessions, or rights without due process of law instituted before a duly created court, in which the essential elements of procedure are observed and in accordance with previously existing laws.

In criminal cases no penalty shall be imposed by mere analogy or even by a priori evidence, but the penalty shall be decreed by a law in every respect applicable to the crime in question.

In civil suits the final judgment shall be according to the letter or the judicial interpretation of the law; in the absence of the latter the general legal principles shall govern.

ART. 15. No treaty shall be made for the extradition of political offenders, or of offenders of the common class, who have been slaves in the country where the offense was committed. Nor shall any agreement or treaty be entered into which abridges or modifies the guarantees and rights which this Constitution grants to the individual and to the citizen.

ART. 16. No one shall be molested in his person, family, domicile, papers or possessions except by virtue of an order in writing of the competent authority setting forth the legal ground and justification for the action taken. No order of arrest or detention shall be issued against any person other than by competent judicial authority, nor unless preceded by a charge, accusation or complaint for a specific offense punishable by imprisonment, supported by an affidavit of a credible party or by such other evidence as shall make the guilt of the accused probable; in cases in flagrante delicto any person may arrest the offender and his accomplices, placing them without delay at the disposition of the nearest authorities. Only in urgent cases instituted by the public attorney without previous complaint or indictment and when there is no judicial authority available may the administrative authorities, on their strictest accountability, order the detention of the accused, placing him at the disposition of the judicial authorities. Every search warrant, which may only be issued by the judicial authority and which must be in writing shall specify the place to be searched, the person or persons to be arrested and the objects sought to which the proceeding shall be strictly limited; at the conclusion of which a detailed written statement shall be drawn up in the presence of two witnesses proposed by the occupant of the place to be searched or in his absence or refusal by the official making the search.

Administrative officials may enter private houses solely for the purpose of determining that the sanitary and police regulations have been complied with; they may likewise demand the exhibition of books and documents necessary to prove that the fiscal regulations have been obeyed, subject to the respective laws and to the formalities prescribed for cases of search.

ART. 17. No one shall be imprisoned for debts of a purely civil character. No one shall take the law into his own hands, nor resort to violence in the enforcement of his rights. The courts shall be open for the administration of justice at such times and under such conditions as the law may establish; their services shall be gratuitous and all judicial costs are accordingly prohibited.

ART. 18. Detention shall be inflicted only for offenses meriting corporal punishment. The place of detention shall be different and completely separated from that set apart for the serving of sentences.

The Federal and State Governments shall organize in their respective territories the penal system—penal colonies or prisons—on the basis of labor as a means of regeneration.

ART. 19. No detention shall exceed three days except for reasons specified by the formal order of commitment, which shall set forth the offense charged, the substance thereof, the time, place, and circumstances of its commission, and the facts disclosed in the preliminary examination. The said facts must always be sufficient to establish the corpus delicti and the probable guilt of the accused. All authorities ordering any detention or consenting thereto, as well as all agents, subordinates, wardens, or jailers, executing the same, shall be liable for any breach of this provision.

The trial shall take place only for the offense or offenses set forth in the formal order of commitment. If it shall develop in the course of trial that another offense different from that charged has been committed, a separate accusation must be brought. This, however, shall not prevent the joinder of both causes of action, if deemed advisable.

Any maltreatment during apprehension or confinement; any molestation inflicted without legal justification; any exaction or contribution levied in prison are abuses which the law shall correct and the authorities punish.

ART. 20. In every criminal trial the accused shall enjoy the following guaranties:

I. He shall be set at liberty on demand and upon giving a bond up to 10,000 pesos, according to his status and the gravity of the offense charged: Provided, however, That the said offense shall not be punishable with more than five years' imprisonment; he shall be set at liberty without any further requisite than the placing of the stipulated sum at the disposal of the proper authorities or the giving of an adequate mortgage bond or personal security.

II. He may not be forced to be a witness against himself; wherefore denial of access or other means looking toward this end is hereby strictly prohibited.

III. He shall be publicly notified within 48 hours after being turned over to the judicial authorities of the name of his accuser and of the nature of and cause for the accusation, so that he may be familiar with the offense with which he is charged, may reply thereto, and make his preliminary statement.

IV. He shall be confronted with the witnesses against him, who shall testify in his presence if they are to be found in the place where the trial is being held, so that he may cross-examine them in his defense.

V. All witnesses which he shall offer shall be heard in his defense, as well as all evidence received, for which he shall be given such time as the law may prescribe; he shall, furthermore, be assisted in securing the presence of any person or persons whose testimony he may desire, provided they are to be found at the place of trial.

VI. He shall be entitled to a public trial by a judge or jury of citizens who can read and write and are also citizens of the place and district where the offense shall have been committed, provided the penalty for such offense be greater than one year's imprisonment. The accused shall always be entitled to trial by jury for all offenses committed by means of the press against the public peace or against the safety, domestic or foreign, of the Republic.

VII. He shall be furnished with all information of record needed for his defense.

VIII. He shall be tried within four months if charged with an offense the maximum penalty for which does not exceed two years' imprisonment, and within one year if the maximum penalty be greater.

IX. He shall be heard in his own defense, either personally or by counsel, or by both, as he may desire. In case he shall have no one to defend him, a list of official counsel shall be submitted to him in order that he may choose one or more to act in his defense. If the accused shall not desire to name any counsel for his defense, after having been called upon to do so at the time of his preliminary examination, the court shall appoint counsel to defend him. The accused may name his counsel immediately on arrest and shall be entitled to have him present at every stage of the trial, but he will be bound to make him appear as often as required by the court.

X. In no event may imprisonment or detention be extended through failure to pay counsel fees or through any other pecuniary charge, by virtue of any civil liability or other similar cause. Nor shall detention be extended beyond the time set by law as the maximum for the offense charged.

The period of detention shall be reckoned as a part of the final sentence.

ART. 21. The imposition of all penalties is an exclusive attribute of the judiciary. The prosecution of offenses belongs to the public prosecutor and to the judicial police, who shall be under the immediate command and authority of the public prosecutor. The punishment of violations of municipal and police regulations belongs to the administrative authorities, and shall consist only of a fine or of imprisonment not exceeding 36 hours. Should the offender fail to pay the fine this shall be substituted by the corresponding period of arrest, which shall in no case exceed 15 days.

Should the offender be a workman or unskilled laborer, he shall not be punished with a fine greater than the amount of his week's wages or salary.

ART. 22. Punishments by mutilation and infamy, by branding, flogging, beating with sticks, torture of any kind, excessive fines, confiscation of property, and any other unusual and excessive penalties, are prohibited.

Attachment proceedings of the whole or part of the property of any person made under judicial authority to cover any civil liability arising out of the commission of any offense, or by reason of the imposition of any tax or fine, shall not be deemed a confiscation of property.

Capital punishment is likewise forbidden for all political offenses; in the case of offenses other than political it shall only be imposed for high treason committed during a foreign war, parricide, murder, with malice aforethought, arson, abduction, highway robbery, piracy, and grave military offenses.

ART. 23. No criminal case shall have more than three instances. No one, whether acquitted or condemned, shall be tried twice for the same offense. Verdicts of "not proven" are abolished.

ART. 24. Every man is free to embrace the religion of his choice and to practice such ceremony, devotions, or observances of the respective creed, either in places of public worship or at home, provided they do not constitute an offense punishable by law.

Every religious act of public worship shall be performed strictly within the places of public worship, which shall be at all times under governmental supervision.

ART. 25. Correspondence sent through the mails is inviolable and shall be free from search. The violation of this provision shall be punishable by law.

ART. 26. No member of the army shall in time of peace be quartered in private dwellings without the consent of the owner; nor shall any other exaction be demanded. In time of war the military may demand lodging, equipment, provisions, and other assistance, in the manner provided by the corresponding martial law.

ART. 27. The ownership of lands and waters within the limits of the national territory is vested originally in the nation, which has had and has the right to transmit title thereof to private persons, thereby constituting private property.

Private property shall not be expropriated except for cause of public utility¹ and by means of indemnification.

The nation shall have at all times the right to impose on private property such limitations as the public interest may demand as well as the right to regulate the development of natural resources, which are susceptible of appropriation, in order to conserve them and equitably to distribute the public wealth. For this purpose necessary measures shall be taken to divide large landed estates; to develop small landed holdings; to establish new centers of rural population with such lands and waters as may be indispensable to them; to encourage agriculture and to prevent the destruction of natural resources and to protect property from damage detrimental to society. Settlements, hamlets situated on private property, and communes which lack lands or water or do not possess them in sufficient quantities for their needs shall have the right to be provided with them from the adjoining properties, always having due regard for small landed holdings. Wherefore, all grants of lands made up to the present time under the decree of January 6, 1915, are confirmed. Private property acquired for the said purposes shall be considered as taken for public use. In the nation is vested direct ownership of all minerals or substances which in veins,

¹ While the term "public utility" may be somewhat misleading, it is felt that that of "public use" may be even more so. The same expression ("por causa de utilidad publica") is to be found in the 1857 constitution, and has always been interpreted by the courts of Mexico in the sense of public interest, as in the case of land expropriated for the surface work of a mine, etc.

masses, or beds constitute deposits whose nature is different from the components of the land, such as minerals from which metals and metaloids used for industrial purposes are extracted; beds of precious stones, rock salt, and salt lakes formed directly by marine waters, products derived from the decomposition of rocks, when their exploitation requires underground work; phosphates which may be used for fertilizers; solid mineral fuels; petroleum and all hydrocarbons—solid, liquid, or gaseous.

In the nation is likewise vested the ownership of the waters of territorial seas to the extent and in the terms fixed by the law of nations; those of lakes and inlets of bays; those of interior lakes of natural formation which are directly connected with flowing waters; those of principal rivers or tributaries from the points at which their courses become permanently identifiable to their mouths, whether they flow to the sea or cross two or more States; those of intermittent streams which traverse two or more States in their main body; the waters of rivers, streams, or ravines, when they bound the national territory or that of the States; waters extracted from mines; and the beds and banks of the lakes and streams hereinbefore mentioned, to the extent fixed by law. Any other stream of water not comprised within the foregoing enumeration shall be considered as an integral part of the private property through which it flows; but the development of the waters when they pass from one landed property to another shall be considered of public utility and shall be subject to the provisions prescribed by the States.

In the cases to which the two foregoing paragraphs refer, the ownership of the nation is inalienable and may not be lost by prescription; concessions shall be granted by the Federal Government to provide parties or civil or commercial corporations organized under the laws of Mexico, only on condition that said resources be regularly developed, and on the further condition that the legal provisions be observed.

Legal capacity to acquire ownership of lands and waters of the nation shall be governed by the following provisions:

I. Only Mexicans by birth or naturalization and Mexican companies have the right to acquire ownership in lands, waters, and their appurtenances, or to obtain concessions to develop mines, waters, or mineral fuels in the Republic of Mexico. The nation may grant the same right to foreigners, provided they agree before the department of foreign affairs to be considered Mexicans in respect to such property, and accordingly not to invoke the protection of their Governments in respect to the same, under penalty, in case of breach, of forfeiture to the nation of property so acquired. Within a zone of 100 kilometers from the frontiers, and of 50 kilometers from the seacoast no foreigner shall under any conditions acquire direct ownership of lands and waters.

II. The religious associations known as churches, irrespective of creed, shall in no case have legal capacity to acquire, hold, or administer real property or loans made on such real property; all such real property or loans as may be at present held by the said religious associations either on their own behalf or through third parties shall vest in the nation, and anyone shall have the right to denounce property so held. Presumptive proof shall be sufficient to declare the denunciation well founded. Places of public worship are the property of the nation, as represented by the Federal Government, which shall determine which of them may continue to be devoted to their present purposes. Episcopal residences, rectories, seminaries, orphan asylums or collegiate establishments of religious associations, convents or any other buildings built or designed for the administration, propaganda, or teaching the tenets of any religious sect shall forthwith vest, as of full right, directly in the nation, to be used exclusively for the public services of the Federation or of the States, within their respective jurisdictions. All places of public worship which shall later be erected shall be the property of the nation.

III. Public and private charitable institutions for the sick and needy, for scientific research, or for the diffusion of knowledge, mutual aid societies, or organizations formed for any other purpose shall in no case acquire, hold, and administer loans made on real property, unless the mortgage terms do not exceed 10 years. In no case shall institutions of this character be under the patronage, direction, administration, charge, or supervision of religious corporations or institutions, nor of ministers of any religious sect or of their dependents, even though either the former or the latter shall not be in service.

IV. Commercial stock companies may not acquire, hold, or administer rural properties. Companies of this nature which may be organized to develop any manufacturing, mining, petroleum, or other industry, excepting only agricultural industries, may acquire, hold, or administer lands only in an area absolutely necessary for their establishments or adequate to serve the purposes indicated, which the executive of the union or of the State in each case shall determine.

V. The banks duly organized under the laws governing institutions of credit may make mortgage loans on rural and urban property in accordance with the provisions of the said laws, but they may not own or administer more real property than that absolutely necessary for their direct purposes; and they may furthermore hold temporarily for the brief term fixed by law such real property as may be judicially adjudicated to them in execution proceedings.

VI. Properties held in common by coowners, hamlets situated on private property, pueblos, tribal congregations and other settlements which, as a matter of fact or law, conserve their communal character, shall have legal capacity to enjoy in common the waters, woods and lands belonging to them, or which may have been or shall be restored to them according to the law of January 6, 1915, until such time as the manner of making the division exclusively of the lands shall be determined by law.

VII. Excepting the corporations to which Clauses III, IV, V and VI hereof refer no other civil corporation may hold or administer on its own behalf real estate or mortgage loans derived therefrom, with the single exception of buildings designed directly and immediately for the purposes of the institution. The States, the Federal district and the Territories as well as the municipalities throughout the Republic shall enjoy full legal capacity to acquire and hold all real estate necessary for public services.

The Federal and State laws shall determine within their respective jurisdictions those cases in which the occupation of private property is to be considered of public utility; and in accordance with the said laws the administrative authorities shall make the corresponding declaration. The amount fixed as compensation for the expropriated property shall be based on the sum at which the said property shall be valued for fiscal purposes in the catastral or revenue offices, whether this value be that manifested by the owner or merely impliedly accepted by reason of the payment of his taxes on such a basis, to which basis there shall be added 10 per cent. The increased value which the property in question may have acquired through improvements made subsequent to the date of the fixing of the fiscal value shall be the only matter subject to expert opinion and to judicial determination. The same procedure shall be observed in respect to objects whose value is not recorded in the revenue offices.

All proceedings, dispositions, decisions and all operations of demarcation, concession, composition, judgment, compromise, alienation, or auction which may have deprived properties held in common by coowners, hamlets situated on private property, settlements, congregations, tribes and other settlement organizations still existing since the law of June 25, 1856, of the whole or a part of their lands, woods and waters, are declared null and void; all dispositions, resolutions and operations which may subsequently take place and produce the same effects shall likewise be null and void. Consequently all lands, forests and waters of which the above-mentioned settlements may have been deprived shall be restored to them according to the decree of January 6, 1915, which shall remain in force as a constitutional law. In case the adjudication of lands, by way of restitution be not legal in the terms of the said decree which adjudication should have been requested by any of the above entities, those lands shall nevertheless be given to them by way of grant, and they shall in no event fail to receive such as they may need. Only such lands, title to which may have been acquired in the divisions made by virtue of the said law of June 25, 1856, or such as may be held in undisputed ownership for more than ten years are excepted from the provision of nullity, provided their area does not exceed fifty hectares. Any excess over this area shall be returned to the commune and the owner shall be indemnified. All laws of restitution enacted by virtue of this provision shall be immediately carried into effect by the administrative authorities. Only members of the commune shall have the right to the lands destined to be divided and the rights to these lands shall be inalienable so long as they remain undivided; the same provision shall govern the right of ownership after the division has been made. The exercise of the rights pertaining to the nation by virtue of this article shall be made by judicial process; but as a part of this process and by order of the proper tribunals, which order shall be issued within the maximum period of one month, the administrative authorities shall proceed without delay to the occupation, administration, auction, or sale of the lands and waters in question, together with all their appurtenances, and in no case may the acts of the said authorities be set aside until final sentence is handed down.

During the next constitutional term the Congress and the State legislatures shall enact laws within their respective jurisdictions for the purpose of carrying out the division of large landed estates subject to the following conditions:

(a) In each State and Territory there shall be fixed the maximum area of land which any one individual or legally organized corporation may own.

(b) The excess of the area fixed shall be subdivided by the owner within the period set by the laws of the respective locality; and these subdivisions shall be offered for sale on such conditions as the respective governments shall approve, in accordance with the said laws.

(c) If the owner shall refuse to make the subdivision, this shall be carried out by the local government by means of expropriation proceedings.

(d) The value of the subdivisions shall be paid in annual amounts sufficient to amortize the principal and interest within a period of not less than 20 years, during which the person acquiring them may not alienate them. The rate of interest shall not exceed 5 per cent per annum.

(e) The owner shall be bound to receive special bonds to guarantee the payment of the property expropriated. With this end in view the Congress shall issue a law authorizing the States to issue bonds to meet their agrarian obligations.

(f) The local laws will govern the extent of family estate, determining what property will constitute the same on the basis of its inalienability; it shall not be subject to attachment nor to any charge.

All contracts and concessions made by former governments from and after the year 1876 which shall have resulted in the monopoly of lands, waters, and natural resources of the nation by a single individual or corporation, are declared subject to revision, and the executive is authorized to declare those null and void which seriously prejudice the public interest.

ART. 28. There shall be no private nor governmental monopolies of any kind whatsoever in the United States of Mexico; nor exemption from taxation; nor any prohibition even under cover of protection to industry, excepting only those relating to the coinage of money, to the postal, telegraphic, and radiotelegraphic services, to the issuance of bills by a single banking institution to be controlled by the Federal Government, and to the privileges which for a limited period the law may concede to authors and artists for the reproduction of their work; and lastly to those granted inventors or improvers of inventions for the exclusive use of their inventions.

The law will accordingly severely punish and the authorities diligently prosecute any accumulating or cornering by one or more persons of necessities for the purpose of bringing about a rise in price; any act or measure which shall stifle or endeavor to stifle free competition in any production, industry, trade, or public service; any agreement or combination of any kind entered into by producers, manufacturers, merchants, common carriers, or other public or quasi-public service, to stifle competition and to compel the consumer to pay exorbitant prices; and in general whatever constitutes an unfair and exclusive advantage in favor of one or more specified person or persons to the detriment of the public in general or of any special class of society.

Associations of labor organized to protect their own interests shall not be deemed a monopoly. Nor shall cooperative associations or unions of producers be deemed monopolies when, in defense of their own interests or of the general public, they sell directly in foreign markets national or industrial products which are the principal source of wealth of the region in which they are produced, provided they be not necessities, and provided further that such association be under the supervision or protection of the Federal Government or of that of the States, and provided further that authorization be in each case obtained from the respective legislative bodies. These legislative bodies may, either on their own initiative or on the recommendation of the executive, revoke, whenever the public interest shall so demand, the authorization granted for the establishment of the associations in question.

ART. 29. In cases of invasion, grave disturbance of the public peace, or any other emergency which may place society in grave danger or conflict, the President of the Republic of Mexico, and no one else, with the concurrence of the Council of Ministry, and with the approval of the Congress, or if the latter shall be in recess, of the permanent committee, shall have power to suspend throughout the whole Republic or in any portion thereof, such rights as shall be a hindrance in meeting the situation promptly and readily, but such suspension shall in no case be confined to a particular individual, but shall be made by means of a general decree and only for a limited period. If the suspension should occur while the Congress is in session, this body shall grant such powers as in its judgment the executive may need to meet the situation if the suspension occur while the Congress is in recess, the Congress shall be convoked forthwith for the granting of such powers.

CHAPTER II.—OF MEXICANS.

ART. 30. A Mexican shall be such either by birth or by naturalization.

I. Mexicans by birth are those born of Mexican parents, within or without the Republic, provided in the latter case the parents be also Mexicans by birth. Those born within the Republic of foreign parentage shall likewise be considered Mexicans by birth, who within one year after they come of age shall declare to the department of foreign affairs that they elect Mexican citizenship, and who shall furthermore prove to the said department that they have resided within the country during the last six years immediately prior to the said declaration.

II. Mexicans by naturalization are:

(a) The children of foreign parentage born in the country, who shall elect Mexican citizenship in the manner prescribed in the foregoing clause, and in whom the residence qualification required in the said section does not concur.

(b) Those persons who shall have resided in the country for five consecutive years, have an honest means of livelihood and shall have obtained their naturalization from the said department of foreign affairs.

(c) Those of mixed Indian and Latin descent who may have established residence in the Republic, who shall have manifested their intention to acquire Mexican citizenship.

In the cases stipulated in these sections, the law shall determine the manner of proving the requisites therein demanded.

ART. 31. It shall be the duty of every Mexican:

I. To compel the attendance at either private or public schools of their children or wards, when under 15 years of age, in order that they may receive primary instruction and military training for such periods as the law of public instruction in each State shall determine.

II. To attend on such days and at such hours as the town council shall in each case prescribe, to receive such civic instruction and military training as shall fit them to exercise their civic rights, shall make them skillful in the handling of arms and familiar with military discipline.

III. To enlist and serve in the national guard, pursuant to the respective organic law for the purpose of preserving and defending the independence, territory, honor, rights, and interests of the fatherland, as well as domestic peace and order.

IV. To contribute in the proportional and equitable manner provided by law toward the public expenses of the federation, the State and the municipality in which he resides.

ART. 32. Mexicans shall be preferred under equal circumstances to foreigners for all kinds of concessions and for all public employments, offices, or commissions, when citizenship is not indispensable. No foreigner shall serve in the army nor in the police corps nor in any other department of public safety during times of peace.

Only Mexicans by birth may belong to the national navy, or fill any office or commission therein. The same requisite shall be required for captains, pilots, masters, and chief engineers of Mexican merchant ships, as well as for two-thirds of the members of the crew.

CHAPTER III.—OF FOREIGNERS.

ART. 33. Foreigners are those who do not possess the qualifications prescribed by article 30. They shall be entitled to the rights granted by Chapter I, Title I, of the present constitution; but the executive shall have the exclusive right to expel from the Republic forthwith and without judicial process, any foreigner whose presence he may deem inexpedient.

No foreigner shall meddle in any way whatsoever in the political affairs of the country.

CHAPTER IV.—OF MEXICAN CITIZENS.

ART. 34. Mexican citizenship shall be enjoyed only by those Mexicans who have the following qualifications:

I. Are over 21 years of age, if unmarried, and over 18, if married.

II. Have an honest means of livelihood.

ART. 35. The prerogatives of citizens are:

I. To vote at popular elections.

II. To be eligible for any elective office and be qualified for any other office or commission provided they have the other qualifications required by law.

III. To assemble to discuss the political affairs of the country.

IV. To serve in the army or national guard for the defense of the Republic and its institutions as by law determined.

V. To exercise the right of petition in any matter whatever.

ART. 36. It shall be the duty of every Mexican citizen:

I. To register in the polls of the municipality, setting forth any property he may own and his professional or industrial pursuit, or occupation; and also to register in the electoral registration lists, as by law determined.

II. To enlist in the national guard.

III. To vote at popular elections in the electoral district to which he belongs.

IV. To fill the elective Federal or State offices to which he may be chosen which shall in no case be gratuitous.

V. To serve on the town council of the municipality wherein he resides and to perform all electoral and jury service.

ART. 37. Citizenship shall be lost:

- I. By naturalization in a foreign country.
- II. By officially serving the government of another country, or accepting its decorations, titles, or employment without previous permission of the Federal Congress, excepting literary, scientific, and humanitarian titles, which may be accepted freely.
- III. By compromising themselves in any way before ministers of any religious creed or before any other person not to observe the present constitution, or the laws arising thereunder.

ART. 38. The rights or prerogatives of citizenship shall be suspended for the following reasons:

- I. Through failure to comply without sufficient cause with any of the obligations imposed by Article 36. This suspension shall last for one year and shall be in addition to any other penalties prescribed by law for the same offense.
 - II. Through being subjected to criminal prosecution for an offense punishable with imprisonment, such suspension to be reckoned from the date of the formal order of commitment.
 - III. Throughout the term of imprisonment.
 - IV. Through vagrancy or habitual drunkenness, declared in the manner provided by law.
 - V. Through being a fugitive from justice, the suspension to be reckoned from the date of the order of arrest until the prescription of the criminal action.
 - VI. Through any final sentence which shall decree as a penalty such suspension.
- The law shall determine the cases in which civic rights may be lost or suspended and the manner in which they may be regained.

TITLE II, CHAPTER I.—OF THE NATIONAL SOVEREIGNTY AND FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

ART. 39. The national sovereignty is vested essentially and originally in the people. All public power emanates from the people and is instituted for their benefit. The people have at all times the inalienable right to alter or modify their form of government.

ART. 40. It is the will of the Mexican people to constitute themselves into a democratic, federal, representative republic, consisting of States free and sovereign in all that concerns their internal affairs, but united in a federation according to the principles of this fundamental law.

ART. 41. The people exercise their sovereignty through the federal powers in the matters belonging to the Union, and through those of the States in the matters relating to the internal administration of the latter. This power shall be exercised in the manner respectively established by the constitutions, both Federal and State. The constitutions of the States shall in no case contravene the stipulations of the Federal constitution.

CHAPTER II.—OF THE INTEGRAL PARTS OF THE FEDERATION AND THE NATIONAL TERRITORY.

ART. 42. The National Territory comprises the integral parts of the Federation and the adjacent islands in both oceans. It likewise comprises the Island of Guadalupe, those of Revillagigedo, and that of "La Pasion," situated in the Pacific Ocean.

ART. 43. The integral parts of the Federation are: The States of Aguascalientes, Campeche, Coahuila, Colima, Chiapas, Chihuahua, Durango, Guanajuato, Guerrero, Hidalgo, Jalisco, Mexico, Michoacan, Morelos, Nayarit, Nuevo Leon, Oaxaca, Puebla, Queretaro, San Luis Potosi, Sinaloa, Sonora, Tabasco, Tamaulipas, Tlaxcala, Veracruz, Yucatan, Zacatecas, the Federal District, the Territory of Lower California, and the Territory of Quintana Roo.

ART. 44. The Federal District shall embrace its present territory; in the event of the removal of the Federal powers to some other place it shall be created into the State of the Valley of Mexico, with such boundaries and area as the Federal Congress shall assign to it.

ART. 45. The States and Territories of the Federation shall conserve their present boundaries and areas, provided no boundary question shall exist between them.

ART. 46. The States having pending boundary questions shall settle them as provided by this constitution.

ART. 47. The State of Nayarit shall have the territorial area and boundaries at present comprising the territory of Tepic.

ART. 48. The islands in both oceans embraced within the national territory shall depend directly on the Federal Government, excepting those over which the States have up to the present time exercised jurisdiction

TITLE III, CHAPTER I.—OF THE DIVISION OF POWERS.

ART. 49. The supreme power of the federation is divided for its exercise into legislative, executive, and judicial.

Two or more of these powers shall never be united in one person or corporation, nor shall the executive power be vested in one individual except in the case of extraordinary powers granted to the executive, in accordance with the provisions of article 29.

CHAPTER II.—OF THE LEGISLATIVE POWER.

ART. 50. The legislative power of the United States of Mexico is vested in a general Congress, which shall consist of a House of Representatives and a Senate.

SECTION I.—OF THE ELECTION AND INSTALLATION OF THE CONGRESS.

ART. 51. The House of Representatives shall consist of representatives of the nation, all of whom shall be elected every two years by the citizens of Mexico.

ART. 52. One representative shall be chosen for each 60,000 inhabitants or for any fraction thereof exceeding 20,000, on the basis of the general census of the Federal district and of each State and Territory. Any State or Territory in which the population shall be less than that fixed by this article shall, nevertheless, elect one representative.

ART. 53. There shall be elected an alternate for each representative.

ART. 54. The election of representatives shall be direct, in accordance with the provisions of the electoral law.

ART. 55. Representatives shall have the following qualifications:

I. They shall be Mexican citizens by birth and in the enjoyment of their rights. .

II. They shall be over 25 years of age on the day of election.

III. They shall be natives of the States or Territories respectively electing them, or domiciled and actually resident therein for six months immediately prior to the election. The domicile shall not be lost through absence in the discharge of any elective office.

IV. They shall not be in active service in the Federal army, not have any command in the police corps or rural constabulary in the districts where the elections respectively take place, for at least 90 days immediately prior to the election.

V. They shall not hold the office of secretary nor assistant secretary of any executive department or of justice of the supreme court, unless they shall have resigned therefrom 90 days immediately prior to the election.

No State governor, secretary of state of the several States, or State judge shall be eligible in the districts within their several jurisdictions, unless they shall have resigned from their respective offices 90 days immediately prior to the day of election.

VI. They shall not be ministers of any religious creed.

ART. 56. The Senate shall consist of two senators from each State and two from the Federal district, chosen in direct election.

Each State legislature shall certify to the election of the candidate who shall have obtained a majority of the total number of votes cast.

ART. 57. There shall be elected an alternate for each Senator.

ART. 58. Each Senator shall serve four years. The Senate shall be renewed by half every two years.

ART. 59. The qualifications necessary to be a Senator shall be the same as those necessary to be a Representative, excepting that of age, which shall be over 35 on the day of election.

ART. 60. Each House shall be the judge of the election of its members and shall decide all questions arising therefrom.

Its decisions shall be final.

ART. 61. Representatives and Senators are inviolable for opinions expressed by them in the discharge of their duties, and shall never be called to account for them.

ART. 62. Representatives and Senators shall be disqualified during the term for which they have been elected from holding any Federal or State commission or office for which any emolument is received without previous permission of the respective house; in the event of their accepting such commission or office they shall forthwith lose their representative character for such time as they shall hold such appointive office. The same provision shall apply to alternate Representatives and Senators, when in active service. The violation of this provision shall be punished by forfeiture of the office of Representative or Senator.

ART. 63. The houses shall not open their sessions nor exercise their functions without a quorum, in the Senate, of two-thirds, and in the House of Representatives of a majority of the total membership; but the members present of either house shall meet on the day appointed by law and compel the attendance of the absentees within the next 30 days, and they shall warn them that failure to comply with this provision shall be taken to be a refusal of office, and the corresponding alternates shall be summoned forthwith; the latter shall have a similar period within which to present themselves, and on their failure to do so the seats shall be declared vacant and new elections called.

Representatives or Senators who shall be absent during 10 consecutive days without proper cause or without leave of the president of the respective house, notice of which shall be duly communicated to the house, shall be understood as waiving their right to attend until the next session, and their alternates shall be summoned without delay.

If there shall be no quorum to organize either of the houses or to continue their labors once organized, the alternates shall be ordered to present themselves as soon as possible for the purpose of taking office until the expiration of the 30 days hereinbefore mentioned.

ART. 64. No Representative or Senator who shall fail to attend any daily session without proper cause or without previous permission of the respective house, shall be entitled to the compensation corresponding to the day on which he shall have been absent.

ART. 65. The Congress shall meet on the 1st day of September of each year in regular session for the consideration of the following matters:

I. To audit the accounts of the previous year, which shall be submitted to the House of Representatives not later than 10 days after the opening of the session. The audit shall not be confined to determining whether the expenditures do or do not conform with the respective items in the budget, but shall comprise an examination of the exactness of and authorization for payments made thereunder and of any liability arising from such payments.

No other secret items shall be permitted than those which the budget may consider as such; these amounts shall be paid out by the secretaries of executive departments under written orders of the President.

II. To examine, discuss, and approve the budget for the next fiscal year and to lay such taxes as may be needed to meet the expenditures.

III. To study, discuss, and vote on all bills presented and to discuss all other matters incumbent upon the Congress by virtue of this constitution.

ART. 66. The regular session of the Congress shall last the period necessary to deal with all of the matters mentioned in the foregoing article, but it may not be extended beyond the 31st day of December of the same year. Should both houses fail to agree as to adjournment prior to the above date, the matter shall be decided by the executive.

ART. 67. The Congress shall meet in extraordinary session whenever so summoned by the President, but in such event it shall consider only the matter or matters submitted to it by the President, who shall enumerate it or them in the respective call. The President shall have power to convene in extraordinary session only one of the houses when the matter to be referred to it pertains to its exclusive jurisdiction.

ART. 68. Both houses shall hold their meetings in the same place and shall not move to another without having first agreed upon the moving and the time and manner of accomplishing it, as well as upon the place of meeting, which shall be the same for both houses. If both houses agree to change their meeting place but disagree as to the time, manner, and place, the President shall settle the question by choosing one of the two proposals. Neither House may suspend its sessions for more than three days without the consent of the other.

ART. 69. The president of the Republic shall attend at the opening of the sessions of the Congress, whether regular or extraordinary, and shall submit a report in writing; this report shall in the former case relate to the general state of the Union; and in the latter it shall explain to the Congress or to the House addressed the reasons or causes which rendered the call necessary and the matters requiring immediate attention.

ART. 70. Every measure of the Congress shall be in the form of a law or decree. The laws or decrees shall be communicated to the executive after having been signed by the presidents of both houses and by one of the secretaries of each. When promulgated, the enacting clause shall read as follows:

"The Congress of the United States of Mexico decrees (text of the law or decree)."

SECTION II.—OF THE ORIGIN AND FORMATION OF THE LAWS.

ART. 71. The right to originate legislation pertains:

- I. To the President of the Republic;
- II. To the representatives and senators of the Congress;
- III. To the State legislatures.

Bills submitted by the President of the Republic, by State legislatures, or by delegations of the States shall be at once referred to committee. Those introduced by representatives or senators shall be subject to the rules of procedure.

ART. 72. All bills, action on which shall not pertain exclusively to one of the houses, shall be discussed first by one and then by the other, according to the rules of procedure as to the form, time of presentation, and other details relative to discussions and votes.

(a) After a bill has been approved in the House where it originated it shall be sent to the other House for consideration. If passed by the latter, it shall be transmitted to the President who, if he has no objection thereto, shall immediately promulgate it.

(b) All bills not returned by the Executive within 10 working days with his observations to the House in which they originated, shall be considered approved unless during the said 10 days the Congress shall have adjourned or suspended its sessions, in which event they shall be returned on the first working day after the Congress shall have reconvened.

(c) Bills rejected in whole or in part by the Executive shall be returned with his observations to the House where they originated. They shall be discussed anew by this House and if confirmed by a two-thirds majority vote of the total membership shall be sent to the other House for reconsideration. If approved by it, also by the same majority vote, the bill shall become law and shall be returned to the Executive for promulgation.

The voting in both Houses shall be by yeas and nays.

(d) Bills totally rejected by the House not originating them shall be returned with the proper observations to the House of origin. If examined anew and approved by a majority of the members present, they shall be returned to the House rejecting them, which shall once again take them under consideration, and if approved by it, likewise by the same majority vote they shall be sent to the Executive for the purposes of clause A; but if the said House fail to approve them, they shall not be reintroduced in the same session.

(e) Bills rejected in part or modified or amended by the House of revision shall be discussed anew in the House of origin, but the discussion shall be confined to the portion rejected or to the amendments or additions, without the approved articles being altered in any respect. If the additions or amendments made by the House of revision be approved by a majority vote of the members present in the House of origin, the bill shall be transmitted to the Executive for the purposes of clause A; but if the amendments or additions by the House of revision be rejected by a majority vote of the House of origin they shall be returned to the former House in order that the reasons set forth by the latter may be taken into consideration. If in this second revision the said additions or amendments be rejected by a majority vote of the members present, the portion of the bill which has been approved by both Houses shall be sent to the Executive for the purposes of clause A. If the House of revision insist by a majority vote of the members present upon the additions or amendments, no action shall be taken on the whole bill until the next session, unless both Houses agree by a majority vote of the members present to the promulgation of the law without the articles objected to, which shall be left till the next session, when they shall be then discussed and voted upon.

(f) The same formalities as are required for the enactment of laws shall be observed for their interpretation, amendment, or repeal.

(g) No bill rejected in the House of origin before passing to the other House shall be reintroduced during the session of that year.

(h) Legislative measures may be originated in either House, excepting bills dealing with loans, taxes, or imposts, or with the raising of troops, which must have their origin in the House of Representatives.

(i) Whenever a bill shall be presented to one House it shall be first discussed there unless one month shall have elapsed since it was referred to committee and not reported, in which event an identical bill may be presented and discussed in the other House.

(j) The President shall not make any observations touching the decisions of the Congress or of either House when acting as an electoral body or as a grand jury, nor when the House of Representatives shall declare that there are grounds to impeach any high Federal authority for official offenses.

Nor shall he make any observations touching the order for a call issued by the permanent committee as provided in article 84.

SECTION III.—OF THE POWERS OF CONGRESS.

ART. 73. The Congress shall have power:

- I. To admit new States or Territories into the Federal Union.
- II. To grant statehood to Territories having a population of 80,000 inhabitants and the elements necessary to provide for their political existence.
- III. To form new States within the boundaries of existing ones provided the following requisites are complied with:
 1. That the section or sections aspiring to statehood have a population of 120,000 inhabitants at least.
 2. That proof be given to the Congress that it has sufficient means to provide for its political existence.
 3. That the legislatures of the States affected be heard as to the advisability or inadvisability of granting such statehood, which opinion shall be given within six months after the date of the communication addressed to them on the subject.
 4. That the opinion of the Executive of the Federal Government be also heard on the subject; said opinion to be given within seven days after the date on which it was requested.
 5. That the creation of the new State be voted upon favorably by two-thirds of the Representatives and Senators present in their respective Houses.
 6. That the resolution of the Congress be ratified by a majority of the State legislatures, upon examination of the copy of the record of the case, provided that the legislatures of the States to which the section belongs shall have given their consent.
 7. If the legislatures of the States to which the section belongs have not given their consent, the ratification referred to in the foregoing clause shall be made by two-thirds of the legislatures of the other States.
- IV. To settle finally the limits of the States, terminating the differences which may arise between them relative to the demarcation of their respective territories, except when the differences be of a litigious nature.
- V. To change the residence of the supreme powers of the federation.
- VI. To legislate in all matters relating to the Federal District and the Territories, as hereinafter provided:
 1. The Federal District and the Territories shall be divided into municipalities, each of which shall have the area and population sufficient for its own support and for its contribution toward the common expenses.
 2. Each municipality shall be governed by a town council elected by direct vote of the people.
 3. The Federal District and each of the Territories shall be administered by governors under the direct orders of the President of the Republic. The governor of the Federal District shall dispatch with the President, and the governor of each Territory shall dispatch with the President through the duly constituted channels. The governor of the Federal District and the governor of each Territory shall be appointed by the President and may be removed by him at will.
 4. The superior judges and those of first instance of the Federal District and those of the Territories shall be named by the Congress, acting in each case as an electoral college. In the temporary or permanent absences of the said superior judges these shall be replaced by appointment of the Congress, and in recess by temporary appointments of the permanent committee. The organic law shall determine the manner of filling temporary vacancies in the case of judges and shall designate the authority before whom they shall be called to account for any dereliction, excepting the provisions of this constitution with regard to the responsibility of officials. From and after the year 1923 the superior judges and those of first instance to which this clause refers may only be removed from office for bad conduct and after impeachment, unless they shall have been promoted to the next higher grade. From and after the said date the compensation enjoyed by said officials shall not be diminished during their term of office.
 5. The office of the public attorney (ministerio publico) of the Federal District and of the Territories shall be in charge of an attorney general, who shall reside in the City of Mexico and of such public attorney or attorneys as the law may determine; the said attorney general shall be under the direct orders of the President of the Republic, who shall appoint and may remove him at will.
- VII. To lay the taxes necessary to meet the expenditures of the budget.
- VIII. To establish the conditions upon which the executive may make loans on the credit of the nation; to approve the said loans and to recognize and order the payment of the public debt.
- IX. To enact tariff laws on foreign commerce and to prevent restrictions from being imposed on interstate commerce.

X. To legislate for the entire Republic in all matters relating to mining, commerce, and credit institutions, and to establish the sole bank of issue as provided in article 28 of this constitution.

XI. To create and abolish federal offices and to fix, increase, or decrease the compensation assigned thereto.

XII. To declare war upon examination of the facts submitted by the executive.

XIII. To regulate the manner in which letters of marque may be issued; to enact laws according to which prizes on land and sea shall be adjudged valid or invalid, and to frame the admiralty law for times of peace and war.

XIV. To raise and maintain the army and navy of the union and to regulate their organization and service.

XV. To make rules for the organization and discipline of the national guard, reserving for the citizens who compose it the right of appointing their respective commanders and officers, and to the States the power of instructing it in conformity with the discipline prescribed by the said regulations.

XVI. To enact laws on citizenship, naturalization, colonization, emigration, immigration, and public health of the Republic.

1. The public health service shall depend directly upon the president of the Republic without the intervention of any executive department, and its general provisions shall be binding throughout the Republic.

2. In the event of epidemics of a grave or dangerous nature, of the invasion of diseases from abroad, the public health service shall be called upon to put into force without delay the necessary preventive measures, subject to their subsequent sanction by the president of the Republic.

3. The sanitary authorities shall have executive faculties and their determinations shall be obeyed by the administrative authorities of the country.

4. All measures which the public health service shall have put into effect in its campaign against alcoholism and the sale of substances injurious to man and to the race shall be subsequently revised by the Congress in such cases as fall within the jurisdiction of the latter.

XVII. To enact laws on general means of communication, post-roads and post-offices and to enact laws as to the use and development of the waters subject to the Federal jurisdiction.

XVIII. To establish mints, regulate the value and kinds of the national currency, fix the value of foreign moneys and adopt a general system of weights and measures.

XIX. To make rules for the occupation and sale of public lands and the prices therefor.

XX. To enact laws as to the organization of the diplomatic and consular services.

XXI. To define the crimes and offenses against the Nation and to fix the penalties therefor.

XXII. To grant amnesty for offenses subject to the jurisdiction of the federal courts.

XXIII. To make rules for its internal government and to enact the necessary provisions to compel the attendance of absent representatives and senators and to punish the acts of commission or omission of those present.

XXIV. To issue the organic law of the auditor general's office.

XXV. To sit as an electoral college and to name the justices of the supreme court, and the superior and inferior judges of the Federal District and territories.

XXVI. To accept the resignations of the justices of the supreme court and of the superior and inferior judges of the Federal District and territories, and to name substitutes in their absence and to appoint their successors.

XXVII. To establish professional schools of scientific research and fine arts, vocational, agricultural, and trade schools, museums, libraries, observatories, and other institutes of higher learning, until such time as these establishments can be supported by private funds. These powers shall not pertain exclusively to the Federal Government.

All degrees conferred by any of the above institutions shall be valid throughout the Republic.

XXVIII. To sit as an electoral college and to choose the person to assume the office of president of the Republic, either as a substitute president or as a president ad interim in the terms established by articles 84 and 85 of this constitution.

XXIX. To accept the resignation of the President of the Republic.

XXX. To audit the accounts which shall be submitted annually by the executive; this audit shall comprise not only the checking of the items disbursed under the budget but the exactness of and authorization for the expenditures in each case.

XXXI. To make all laws necessary for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this constitution in the several branches of the government.

ART. 74. The House of Representatives shall have the following exclusive powers:

I. To sit as an electoral college to exercise the powers conferred by law as to the election of the President.

II. To watch by means of a special committee appointed from among its own members over the faithful performance by the auditor general of the nation in the discharge of his duties.

III. To appoint all the higher officers and other employees of the auditor general's office.

IV. To approve the annual budget, after a discussion as to what taxes must in its judgment be laid to meet the necessary expenditures.

V. To take cognizance of all charges brought against public officials, as herein provided, for official offenses, and, should the circumstances so warrant, to impeach them before the Senate; and further to act as a grand jury to decide whether there is or is not good ground for proceeding against any official enjoying constitutional privileges, whenever accused of offenses of the common order.

VI. To exercise such other powers as may be expressly vested in it by this constitution.

ART. 75. The House of Representatives, in passing the budget, shall assign a definite compensation to every office created by law, and if for any reason such compensation shall not be assigned, the amount fixed in the preceding budget or in the law creating the office shall be presumed to be assigned.

ART. 76. The Senate shall have the following exclusive powers:

I. To approve the treaties and diplomatic conventions concluded by the Executive with foreign powers.

II. To ratify the nominations made by the President of diplomatic ministers or agents, consuls general, higher officials of the treasury, colonels and other superior officers of the army and navy as by law provided.

III. To authorize the Executive to allow the national troops to go beyond the limits of the Republic or to permit foreign troops to pass through the national territory and to consent to the presence of foreign fleets for more than one month in Mexican waters.

IV. To give its consent to the use, by the President, of the national guard beyond the limits of the respective States or Territories and to fix the amount of the force to be used.

V. To declare when the constitutional powers of any State have disappeared, that the occasion has arisen to give to the said State a provisional governor, who shall call for elections to be held according to the constitution and laws of the said State. The appointment of such a governor shall be made by the Senate with the approval of two-thirds of its members present or during recess by the permanent committee by the same two-thirds majority from among three names proposed by the President. The official thus selected shall not be chosen constitutional governor in the elections to be held under the call which he shall issue. This provision shall govern whenever the State constitutions do not provide for the contingency.

VI. To sit as a grand jury to take cognizance of such official offenses of functionaries as are expressly prescribed by this constitution.

VII. To exercise such other powers as may be expressly vested in it by this constitution.

VIII. To adjust all political questions arising between the powers of a State whenever one of them shall appeal to the senate or whenever by virtue of such differences a clash of arms has arisen to interrupt the constitutional order. In this event the senate shall decide in accordance with the Federal constitution and the constitution of the State involved.

The exercise of this power and of the foregoing shall be regulated by law.

ART. 77. Each house may, without the intervention of the other:

I. Pass resolutions for matters exclusively relating to its own interior government.

II. Communicate with the other house, and with the Executive through the intermediary of committees appointed from among its members.

III. Appoint the employees in the office of the secretary and to make all rules and regulations for the said office.

IV. Issue a call for extraordinary elections to fill any vacancies which may have occurred in its membership.

SECTION IV.—OF THE PERMANENT COMMITTEE.

ART. 78. During the recesses of the Congress there shall be a permanent committee consisting of 29 members, 15 of whom shall be representatives and 14 senators, appointed by the respective houses on the eve of the day of adjournment.

ART. 79. In addition to the powers expressly vested in it by this constitution, the permanent committee shall have the following powers:

I. To give its consent to the use of the national guard as provided in article 76, clause IV.

II. To administer the oath of office should the occasion arise, to the President, to the members of the supreme court, to the superior judges of the Federal District and territories, on such occasions as the latter officials may happen to be in the City of Mexico.

III. To report on all pending matters, so that they may be considered in the ensuing session.

IV. To call extraordinary sessions in the case of official offenses or offenses of the common order committed by secretaries of executive departments or justices of the supreme court, and official offenses committed by State governors provided the case shall have been already instituted by the committee of the grand jury, in which event no other business of the Congress shall be considered, nor shall the sessions be prolonged beyond the time necessary for a decision.

CHAPTER III.—OF THE EXECUTIVE POWER.

ART. 80. The exercise of the supreme executive power of the nation is vested in a single individual who shall be called "President of the United States of Mexico."

ART. 81. The election of the President shall be direct in accordance with the provisions of the electoral law.

ART. 82. The President of the Republic shall have the following qualifications:

I. He shall be a Mexican citizen by birth, in the full enjoyment of his rights and he must be the son of Mexican parents by birth.

II. He shall be over 35 years of age at the time of election.

III. He shall have resided in the country during the entire year prior to the election.

IV. He shall not belong to any ecclesiastical order nor be a minister of any religious creed.

V. In the event of belonging to the army he shall have retired from active service 90 days immediately prior to the election.

VI. He shall not be a secretary or assistant secretary of any executive department unless he shall have resigned from office 90 days prior to the election.

VII. He shall not have taken part, directly or indirectly, in any uprising, riot or military coup.

ART. 83. The President shall enter upon the duties of his office on the first day of December, shall serve four years and shall never be reelected.

The citizen who shall replace the constitutional President in the event of his permanent disability shall not be elected President for the ensuing term.

Nor shall the person designated as Acting President during the temporary disabilities of the constitutional President be reelected President for the ensuing term.

ART. 84. In the event of the permanent disability of the President of the Republic, if this shall occur within the first two years of the respective term, the Congress, if in session, shall forthwith act as an electoral college and with the attendance of at least two-thirds of its total membership shall choose a President by secret ballot and by a majority vote; and the same Congress shall issue the call for Presidential elections and shall endeavor to have the date set for this event as far as possible coincide with the date of the next election of Representatives and Senators to Congress.

Should the disability of the President occur while Congress is in recess, the permanent committee shall forthwith designate a President ad interim who shall call Congress together in extraordinary session, in order that it may in turn issue the call for Presidential elections in the manner provided in the foregoing article.

Should the disability of the President occur in the last two years of the respective term, the Congress, if in session, shall choose the substitute to conclude the period of the Presidential term; if Congress shall not be in session the permanent committee shall choose a President ad interim and shall summon Congress in extraordinary session in order that it may act as an electoral college and proceed to the election of the substitute President.

The President ad interim may be chosen by Congress as substitute President.

The citizen designated as President ad interim for the purpose of calling elections, in the event of the disability of the President within the two first years of the respective term, shall not be chosen in the elections held to fill such vacancy and for which he was designated.

ART. 85. If the President-elect shall fail to present himself at the beginning of any constitutional term, or the election not have been held and the result made known by the 1st of December, the outgoing President shall nevertheless vacate office and the President ad interim chosen by the Congress, or in its recess by the permanent committee, shall forthwith assume the executive power. All action taken hereunder shall be governed by the provisions of the foregoing article.

In case of a temporary disability of the President, the Congress, or the permanent committee if the Congress shall not be in session, shall designate an Acting President during such disability. If a temporary disability shall become permanent the action prescribed in the preceding article shall be taken.

In the event of a leave of absence granted to the President of the Republic the person acting in his stead shall not be disqualified from being elected in the ensuing period, provided he shall not have been in office during the holding of elections.

ART. 86. The President may not resign office except for grave cause, upon which the Congress shall pass, to which body the resignation shall be tendered.

ART. 87. The President before entering upon the discharge of the duties of his office, shall make the following affirmation before the Congress, or in its recess before the permanent committee:

"I do solemnly affirm that I will defend and enforce the Constitution of the United States of Mexico and the laws arising thereunder and that I will faithfully and conscientiously perform the duties of President of the United States of Mexico, to which I have been chosen by the people, having ever in mind the welfare and prosperity of the nation; if I shall fail to do so, may the nation call me to account."

ART. 88. The President may not absent himself from the national territory without the permission of the Congress.

ART. 89. The President shall have the following powers and duties:

I. To promulgate and execute the laws enacted by the Congress, providing in the administrative sphere for their faithful observance.

II. To appoint and remove at will the secretaries of executive departments, the attorney general of the Republic, the governor of the Federal district, the governors of territories, the attorney general of the Federal district and territories; and to appoint and remove at will all other Federal employees whose appointment or removal is not otherwise provided for by law or in this constitution.

III. To appoint by and with the approval and consent of the Senate all ministers, diplomatic agents and consuls general.

IV. To appoint by and with the approval of the Senate the colonels and other superior officers of the army and navy and the superior officials of the Treasury.

V. To appoint all other officers of the army and navy as by law provided.

VI. To dispose of the permanent land and sea forces for the domestic safety and defense of the Union.

VII. To dispose of the national guard for the same purposes, as provided by Article 76, Clause IV.

VIII. To declare war in the name of the United States of Mexico, after the passage of the corresponding resolution by the Congress.

IX. To grant letters of marque, upon the terms and conditions fixed by the Congress.

X. To conduct diplomatic negotiations and to enter into treaties with foreign powers, submitting them for ratification to the Congress.

XI. To call Congress or either of the Houses in extraordinary session, whenever in his judgment it may be advisable.

XII. To afford the judiciary all the assistance necessary for the expeditious exercise of its functions.

XIII. To open all kinds of ports, establish maritime and frontier customs houses and designate their location.

XIV. To grant, according to law, pardons to criminals sentenced for offenses within the jurisdiction of the Federal tribunals, and to all persons sentenced for offenses of the common order in the Federal district and territories.

XV. To grant exclusive privileges for a limited time, and according to the respective laws, to discoverers, inventors or improvers in any branch of industry.

XVI. Whenever the Senate shall not be in session the President may temporarily make the appointments enumerated in Clauses III and IV hereof, but these appointments shall be submitted to the Senate so soon as it reconvenes.

XVII. To exercise such other rights and duties as are expressly conferred upon him by this constitution.

ART. 90. For the transaction of administrative matters of the Federal Government there shall be the number of secretaries of executive departments which the Congress may by law establish, which law shall likewise assign among the several departments the several matters with which each shall be charged.

ART. 91. No person shall be appointed secretary of an executive department who is not a Mexican citizen by birth and in the enjoyment of his rights and who has not attained the age of 30 years.

ART. 92. All rules, regulations, decrees and orders of the President shall be signed by the secretary of the executive department to which the matter pertains. They shall not be binding without this requisite. All rules, regulations and orders of the President touching the government of the Federal district and of the administrative departments shall be transmitted directly by the President to the governor of the district and to the chief of the respective department.

ART. 93. The secretaries of executive departments shall on the opening of each regular session report to the Congress as to the state of their respective departments. Either House may summon a secretary of an executive department to inform it, whenever a bill or other matter pertaining to his department is under discussion.

CHAPTER IV—OF THE JUDICIAL POWERS.

ART. 94. The judicial power of the federation is vested in a Supreme Court and in circuit and district courts, whose number and powers shall be fixed by law. The Supreme Court of Justice shall consist of 11 members; its sittings shall be in banc and open to the public, except in the cases where public interest or morality shall otherwise require. It shall meet at such times and under such conditions as by law prescribed. No sittings of the court shall be held without the attendance of at least two-thirds of its total membership, and all decisions rendered shall be by a majority vote.

The justices of the supreme court chosen to this office in the forthcoming elections shall serve two years; those elected at the conclusion of this first term shall serve four years, and from and after the year 1923 the justices of the supreme court, the circuit and district judges may only be removed for malfeasance and after impeachment proceedings, unless the circuit and district judges be promoted to the next higher grade.

The same provision shall govern in so far as it be applicable to the terms of two and four years, respectively, to which this article refers.

ART. 95. The justices of the supreme court shall have the following qualifications:

I. They shall be Mexican citizens by birth, in the full enjoyment of their civil and political rights.

II. They shall be over 35 years of age at the time of election.

III. They shall be graduates in law, of some institution or corporation authorized by law to confer such degrees.

IV. They shall be of good repute and not have been convicted of any offense punishable with more than one year's imprisonment; but conviction of larceny, deceit, forgery, embezzlement, or any other offense seriously impairing their good name in the public mind shall disqualify them for office, whatever may have been the penalty imposed.

V. They shall have resided in the country for the last five years, except in the case of absence due to public service abroad for a period not exceeding six months.

ART. 96. The members of the supreme court of justice shall be chosen by the Congress, acting as an electoral college; the presence of at least two-thirds of the total number of representatives and senators shall be necessary for such action. The election shall be by secret ballot and by a majority vote, and shall be held as among the candidates previously proposed, one being nominated by each State legislature as provided in the respective State laws.

Should no candidate receive a majority on the first ballot, the balloting shall be repeated between the two candidates receiving the highest number of votes.

ART. 97. All circuit and district judges shall be appointed by the supreme court of justice; they shall have such qualifications as by law required shall serve four years, and shall not be removed except by impeachment proceedings or for incapacity to discharge their duties, in accordance with the law.

The supreme court of justice may remove the district judges from one district to another, or it may fix their seats in another locality as it may deem most advantageous to the public business. A similar procedure shall be observed in the case of circuit judges.

The supreme court of justice may likewise appoint auxiliary circuit and district judges to assist in the labors of such courts as have an excessive amount of business in order that the administration of justice may be speedy; it shall also name one or more of its members or some district or circuit judge or shall designate one or more special commissioners whenever it shall deem it advisable or on the request of the President or of either house or of any State governor, solely for the purpose of inquiring into the behavior of any judge or Federal justice or into any fact or facts which amount to a violation of any individual rights or to the subversion of the popular will or any other offense punishable by Federal statute.

The circuit and district courts shall be assigned among the several justices of the supreme court, who shall visit them periodically, shall observe the conduct of their judges, listen to any complaint presented against them, and perform all such other acts as the law may require. The supreme court shall appoint and remove at will its clerk of the court and other employees on the roster established by law. The circuit and district judges shall likewise appoint and remove at will their respective clerks and employees.

The supreme court shall choose each year one of its members to act as chief justice with the right of reelection.

Each justice of the supreme court, on assuming office, shall make an affirmation before Congress, or if this is in recess, before the permanent committee, as follows:

The presiding officer shall say, "Do you promise to perform faithfully and conscientiously the duties of justice of the supreme court with which you have been charged and to defend and enforce the constitution of the United States of Mexico and the laws arising thereunder, having ever in mind the welfare and prosperity of the nation?" To which the justice shall reply, "I do." On which the presiding officer shall answer, "If you fail to do so, may the nation call you to account."

The circuit and district judges shall make the affirmation of office before the supreme court or before such other authority as the law may determine.

ART. 98. No temporary disability of a justice of the supreme court not exceeding one month shall be filled, provided there be otherwise a quorum. In the absence of a quorum the Congress, or in its recess the permanent committee, shall name a substitute selected from among the candidates submitted by the States for the election of the justice in question and not chosen, to serve during such disability. If the disability do not exceed two months, the Congress, or during its recess the permanent committee, shall choose at will a temporary justice.

In the event of the death, resignation, or disqualification of any justice of the supreme court, a new election shall be held by the Congress to fill this vacancy, as provided in article 96.

If the Congress shall not be in session the permanent committee shall make a temporary appointment until such time as the Congress shall convene and proceed to the corresponding election.

ART. 99. The resignation of a justice of the supreme court shall only be accepted for grave cause, to be passed upon by the Congress, to whom the resignation shall be tendered. If the Congress is in recess the power to act in this matter shall pertain to the permanent committee.

ART. 100. The supreme court shall grant all leaves of absence of its members when they do not exceed one month; such as do exceed this period shall be granted by the House of Representatives, or during its recess by the permanent committee.

ART. 101. No justice of the supreme court, circuit or district judge, nor clerk of any of these courts shall under any circumstances accept any State, federal, or private commission or office, excepting honorary titles from scientific, literary, or charitable associations. The violation of this provision shall work a forfeiture of office.

ART. 102. The office of the public attorney shall be organized in accordance with the law, and the public attorneys shall be appointed and removed at will by the Executive. They shall be under the direction of an attorney general, who shall possess the same qualifications as are required for the office of justice of the supreme court.

The public attorneys shall be charged with the judicial prosecution of all federal offenses; they shall accordingly sue out all orders of arrest, assemble and offer all evidence as to the responsibility of the accused, see that the trials are conducted in due order so that the administration of justice may be speedy, pray the imposition of sentence, and in general take part in all matters required by law.

The attorney general of the Republic shall personally intervene in matters to which the Federal Government is a party, in cases affecting ministers, diplomatic agents, and consuls general, and in all controversies between two or more States of the Union, between the Federal Government and a State, or between the several powers of a State. The attorney general may either personally or through one of the public attorneys take part in all other cases in which the public attorneys are called upon to act.

The attorney general shall be the legal advisor of the Government, and both he and the public attorneys under his orders shall faithfully obey the law and shall be liable for all breaches or for any violations in which they may incur in the discharge of their duties.

ART. 103. The federal tribunals shall take cognizance of:

I. All controversies arising out of laws or acts of the authorities when the latter infringe any individual rights.

II. All controversies arising out of laws or acts of the Federal authorities which limit or encroach upon the sovereignty of the States.

III. All controversies arising out of laws or acts of the State authorities which invade the sphere of the Federal authorities.

ART. 104. The Federal tribunals shall have jurisdiction over:

I. All controversies of a civil or criminal nature arising out of the application and enforcement of the Federal laws, or out of treaties concluded with foreign powers. Whenever such controversies affect only private rights, the regular local courts of the States, the Federal district and territories shall, at the election of the plaintiff, assume jurisdiction. Appeal may be had from all judgments of first instance to the next higher tribunal of the same court in which the case was first heard. Appeal may be taken from sentences of second instance to the supreme court of justice, which appeal shall be prepared, submitted, and prosecuted in accordance with the procedure provided by law.

II. All cases pertaining to admiralty law.

III. All cases to which the Federal Government may be a party.

IV. All cases arising between two or more States or between any State and the Federal Government, as well as those arising between the courts of the Federal district and those of the Federal Government or of a State.

V. All cases arising between a State and one or more citizens of another State.

VI. All cases concerning diplomatic agents and consular officers.

ART. 105. The supreme court of justice shall have exclusive jurisdiction in all controversies arising between two or more States, between the powers of government of any State as to the constitutionality of their acts, or between one or more States and the Federal Government, and in all cases to which the Federal Government may be a party.

ART. 106. The supreme court of justice shall likewise have exclusive jurisdiction to determine all questions of jurisdiction between the Federal tribunals, between these and those of the States, or between those of one State and those of another.

ART. 107. All controversies mentioned in Article 103 shall be prosecuted by the injured party in accordance with the judicial forms and procedure which the law shall establish, subject to the following conditions:

I. The judgment shall always be so drawn as to affect exclusively private individuals, and shall confine itself to affording them protection in the special case to which the complaint refers; but it shall make no general statement as to the law or the act that may have formed the basis for the complaint.

II. In civil or penal suits, excepting those mentioned in Clause IX hereof, the writ of "amparo"¹ shall issue only against final judgments when no other ordinary recourse is available by which these judgments may be modified or amended, if the violation of the law shall have occurred in the judgment, or if, although committed during the course of the trial, objection was duly noted and protest entered against the denial of reparation, and provided further, that if committed in first instance it shall have been invoked in second instance as a violation of the law.

When the writ of "amparo" is sought against mesne judgments, in accordance with the provisions of the foregoing clause, these rules shall be observed as far as applicable.

Notwithstanding the foregoing provision, the supreme court may in penal cases waive any defects in the petition when there has been a manifest violation of the law which has left the petitioner without recourse, or when he has been tried by a law not strictly applicable to the case, provided failure to take advantage of this violation has been merely an oversight.

III. In civil or penal suits the writ of "amparo" shall issue only if substantial portions of the rules of procedure have been violated, and provided further that the said violation shall deprive the petitioner of means of defense.

IV. In addition to the case mentioned in the foregoing paragraph, the writ of "amparo" shall issue only on a final judgment in a civil suit, provided the requirements set forth in Clause II hereof have been complied with, when the said judgment shall be contrary to the letter of the law applicable to the case or contrary to its legal interpretation, when it includes persons, actions, defenses, or things which have not been the object of the suit, or finally when all these have not been included either through omission or express refusal.

¹ This unique feature of Mexican law combines the essential elements of the extraordinary writs of habeas corpus, certiorari, and mandamus. It is a Federal procedure designed to give immediate protection when any of the fundamental rights of man are infringed by any authority, irrespective of category, or to excuse the obedience of a law or decree which has invaded the Federal or local sphere. Its use is most extensive, embracing minors, persons absent abroad acting through a "next friend," corporation, etc. An important feature is that it merely gives protection to a specific person or entity, and never makes any general statement of law. It could, hence, never declare a law unconstitutional, though it would give immediate protection as soon as the law in question acted on any person.

V. In penal suits the authorities responsible for the violation shall stay the execution of final judgment against which the writ of "amparo" has been sought; for this purpose the petitioner shall, within the period set by law, give notice, under oath, to the said authorities of the interposition of this recourse, accompanying it with two copies of the petition, one of which shall be delivered to the opposing party and the other filed.

VI. The execution of a final judgment in civil suits shall only be stayed when the petitioner shall give bond to cover damages occasioned thereby, unless the other party shall give a counter bond (1) to guarantee that the normal conditions and relations previously existing be restored, and (2) to pay the corresponding damages in the event of the granting of the "amparo." In such event the interposition of the recourse of "amparo" shall be communicated as provided in the foregoing clause.

VII. If a writ of "amparo" be sought against a final judgment, a certified copy of such portions of the record as the petitioner may desire shall be requested from the authority responsible for the violation; to this there shall be added such portions as the other party may desire and a clear and succinct statement by the said authority of the justification of the act protested; note shall be made of this on the record.

VIII. When a writ of "amparo" is sought against a final judgment, the petition shall be brought before the supreme court; this petition, together with a copy required by clause VII, shall be either presented to the supreme court or sent through the authority responsible for the violation or through the district court of the corresponding State. The supreme court shall render judgment without any other formality or procedure than the petition, the document presented by the other party and that of the attorney general or the public attorney he may name in his stead, and shall comprise no other legal question than that contained in the complaint.

IX. When the acts of an authority other than the judicial are involved or the acts of the judiciary exercised outside of the suit or after the termination thereof, or acts committed during the suit whose execution is of impossible reparation, or which affect persons not parties to the suit, the writ of "amparo" shall be sought before the district court within whose jurisdiction is located the place where the act protested was committed or attempted; the procedure in this case shall be confined to the report of the authority and to a hearing, the call for which shall be issued in the same order of the court as that calling for the report. This hearing shall be held at as early a date as possible, the testimony of both parties offered, arguments heard which shall not exceed one hour for each side, and finally the judgment which shall be pronounced at the same hearing. The judgment of the district court shall be final if the interested parties do not appeal to the supreme court within the period set by law and in the manner prescribed by Clause VIII.

In case of a violation of the guarantees of articles 16, 19, and 20, recourse shall be had through the appellate court of the court committing the breach or to the corresponding district court. An appeal against the decision of any of these courts may be taken to the supreme court.

If the district judge shall not reside in the same locality as the official guilty of the violation, the judge before whom the petition of "amparo" shall be submitted shall be determined by law; this judge shall be authorized to suspend temporarily the execution of the act protested in accordance with the terms established by law.

X. Any official failing to suspend the execution of the act protested, when in duty bound to do so, or when he admits an insufficient or improper bond, shall be turned over to the proper authorities; the civil and penal liability of the official shall in these cases be a joint liability with the person offering the bond and his surety.

XI. If after the granting of an "amparo," the guilty official shall persist in the act or acts against which the petition of "amparo" was filed, or shall seek to render of no effect the judgment of the Federal authority, he shall be forthwith removed from office and turned over for trial to the corresponding district court.

XII. Wardens and jailers who fail to receive a duly certified copy of the formal order of commitment within the 72 hours granted by article 19, reckoned from the time the accused is placed at the disposal of the court, shall bring this fact to the attention of the court, immediately upon expiration of this period; and if the proper order be not received within the next three hours the accused shall be set at liberty.

Any official who shall violate this provision and the article referred to in the foregoing paragraph shall be immediately turned over to the proper authorities. Any official or agent thereof who, after an arrest has been made, shall fail to place the accused at the disposition of the court within the next 24 hours shall himself be turned over to the proper authority.

If the detention be effected outside the locality in which the court is situated, there shall be added to the period mentioned in the preceding sentence the time necessary to travel from the said locality to that where the detention took place.

TITLE IV.—OF THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF OFFICIALS.

ART. 108. Senators and representatives of Congress, justices of the supreme court, secretaries of executive departments, and the attorney general of the Republic shall be liable for all common offenses committed during their term of office, as well as for all official offenses or acts of commission or omission in which they may incur in the discharge of their duties.

Governors of States and members of State legislatures shall be liable for violation of the constitution and the Federal laws.

The President of the Republic may only be impeached during his term of office for high treason and common offenses of a serious character.

ART. 109. If the offense belongs to the common order the House of Representatives, acting as a grand jury, shall determine by a majority vote of its total membership whether there is or is not any ground for proceeding against the accused.

If the finding be favorable to the accused, no further action shall be taken; but such finding shall not be a bar to the prosecution of the charge so soon as the constitutional privilege shall cease, since the finding of the House does not in any way determine the merits of the charge.

If the finding be adverse, the accused shall ipso facto be removed from office and be placed at the disposition of the ordinary courts of justice, except in the case of the President of the Republic, who may only be impeached before the Senate, as in the case of an official offense.

ART. 110. No constitutional privilege shall be extended to any high Federal functionary when tried for official offenses, misdemeanors, or omissions committed in the discharge of another public office or commission, during the time in which the privilege is enjoyed by law. This provision shall be applicable to cases of common offenses committed during the discharge of the said office or commission. In order that proceedings may be instituted when the functionary shall have returned to his original office the provisions set forth in the foregoing article shall be observed.

ART. 111. The Senate acting as a grand jury shall try all cases of impeachment; but it may not institute such proceedings without a previous accusation brought by the House of Representatives.

If the Senate should, after hearing the accused and conducting such proceedings as it may deem advisable, determine by a majority vote of two-thirds of its total membership that the accused is guilty, the latter shall be forthwith removed from office by virtue of such decision, or be disqualified from holding any other office for such time as the law may determine.

When the same offense is punishable with an additional penalty, the accused shall be placed at the disposition of the regular authorities, who shall judge and sentence him in accordance with the law.

In all cases embraced by this article and in those included by the preceding both the decisions of the grand jury and the findings of the House of Representatives shall be final.

Any person shall have the right to denounce before the House of Representatives offenses of a common order or of an official character committed by high Federal functionaries; and whenever the said House of Representatives shall determine that there exist good grounds for impeachment proceedings before the Senate, it shall name a committee from among its own members to sustain the charges brought.

The Congress shall as soon as possible enact a law as to the responsibility of all Federal officials and employees, which shall fix as official offenses all acts, of commission or omission, which may prejudice the public interest and efficient administration, even though such acts may not heretofore have been considered offenses. These officials shall be tried by a jury in the same manner as provided for trials by jury in article 20.

ART. 112. No pardon shall be granted the offender in cases of impeachment.

ART. 113. The responsibility for official breaches and offenses may only be enforced during such time as the functionary shall remain in office and for one year thereafter.

ART. 114. In civil cases no privilege nor immunity in favor of any public functionary shall be recognized.

TITLE V.—OF THE STATES OF THE FEDERATION.

ART. 115. The States shall adopt for their internal administration the popular, representative, republican form of government; they shall have as the basis of their territorial division and political and administrative organization the free municipality, in accordance with the following provisions:

I. Each municipality shall be administered by a town council chosen by direct vote of the people, and no authority shall intervene between the municipality and the State government.

II. The municipalities shall freely administer their own revenues, which shall be derived from the taxes fixed by the State legislatures, which shall at all times be sufficient to meet their needs.

III. The municipalities shall be regarded as enjoying corporate existence for all legal purposes.

The Federal Executive and the State governors shall have command over all public forces of the municipalities wherein they may permanently or temporarily reside.

Constitutional State governors shall not be reelected, nor shall their term of office exceed four years.

The prohibitions of article 83 are applicable to governors and to substitute or ad interim governors.

The number of representatives in the State legislatures shall be in proportion to the inhabitants of each State, but in no case shall the number of representatives in any State legislature be less than 15.

Each electoral district of the States shall choose a representative and an alternate to the State legislature.

Every State governor shall be a Mexican citizen by birth and a native thereof, or resident therein not less than five years immediately prior to the day of election.

ART. 116. The States shall have the power to fix among themselves by friendly agreements their respective boundaries; but these agreements shall not be carried into effect without the approval of the Congress.

ART. 117. No State shall—

I. Enter into alliances, treaties, or coalitions with another State or with foreign powers.

II. Grant letters of marque or reprisal.

III. Coin money, issue paper money, stamps or stamped paper.

IV. Levy taxes on persons or property passing through its territory.

V. Prohibit or tax, directly or indirectly, the entry into its territory or the withdrawal therefrom of any merchandise, foreign or domestic.

VI. Burden the circulation or consumption of domestic or foreign merchandise with taxes or duties to be collected by local customhouses or subject to inspection the said merchandise or require it to be accompanied by documents.

VII. Enact or maintain in force laws or fiscal regulations discriminating, by taxation or otherwise, between merchandise, foreign or domestic, on account of its origin, whether this discrimination be established with regard to similar local products or to similar products of foreign origin.

VIII. Issue bonds of the public debt payable in foreign coin or outside the Federal territory; contract loans, directly or indirectly, with any foreign government, or assume any obligation in favor of any foreign corporation or individual, requiring the issue of certificates or bonds payable to bearer or negotiable by indorsement.

The Federal Congress and the State legislatures shall forthwith enact laws against alcoholism.

ART. 118.—No State shall, without the consent of the Congress:

I. Establish tonnage dues or other port charges, or impose taxes or other duties upon imports or exports.

II. Keep at any time permanent troops or vessels of war.

Make war on its own behalf on any foreign power, except in cases of invasion or of such imminent peril as to admit of no delay. In such event the State shall give notice immediately to the President of the Republic.

ART. 119.—Every State is bound to deliver without delay to the demanding authorities the fugitives from justice from other States or from foreign nations.

In such cases the writ of the court granting the extradition shall operate as a sufficient warrant for the detention of the accused for one month in the case of extradition from one State to another and for two months in the case of international extradition.

ART. 120.—The State governors are bound to publish and enforce the Federal laws.

ART. 121.—Full faith and credit shall be given in each State of the federation to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of all the other States. The Congress shall by general laws prescribe the manner of proving the said acts, records, and proceedings and the effect thereof, as hereinafter provided.

I. The laws of a State shall only be binding within its own confines, and shall therefore have no extraterritorial force.

II. Movable and immovable property shall be governed by the lex sitae.

III. Judgments of a State court as to property and property rights situated in another State shall only be binding when expressly so provided by the law of the latter State.

Judgments relating to personal rights shall only be binding in another State provided the person shall have expressly, or impliedly by reason of domicile, submitted to the jurisdiction of the court rendering such judgment, and provided further that personal service shall have been secured.

IV. All acts of civil status performed in accordance with the laws of one State shall be binding in all other States.

V. All professional licenses issued by the authorities of one State in accordance with its laws shall be valid in all other States.

ART. 122.—The powers of the union are bound to protect the States against all invasion or external violence. In case of insurrection or internal disturbance they shall give them the same protection, provided the legislature of the State, or the executive thereof if the legislature is not in session, shall so request.

TITLE VI.—OF LABOR AND SOCIAL WELFARE.

ART. 123.—The Congress and the State legislatures shall make laws relative to labor, with due regard for the needs of each region of the Republic and in conformity with the following principles, and these principles and laws shall govern the labor of skilled and unskilled workmen, employees, domestic servants and artisans, and in general every contract of labor.

I. Eight hours shall be the maximum limit of a day's work.

II. The maximum limit of night work shall be seven hours. Unhealthy and dangerous occupations are forbidden to all women and to children under 16 years of age. Night work in factories is likewise forbidden to women and to children under 16 years of age, nor shall they be employed in commercial establishments after 10 o'clock at night.

III. The maximum limit of a day's work for children over 12 and under 16 years of age shall be six hours. The work of children under 12 years of age can not be made the object of a contract.

IV. Every workman shall enjoy at least one day's rest for every six days' work.

V. Women shall not perform any physical work requiring considerable physical effort during the three months immediately preceding parturition; during the month following parturition they shall necessarily enjoy a period of rest and shall receive their salaries or wages in full and retain their employment and the rights they may have acquired under their contracts. During the period of lactation they shall enjoy two extraordinary daily periods of rest of one-half hour each in order to nurse their children.

VI. The minimum wage to be received by a workman shall be that considered sufficient, according to the conditions prevailing in the respective region of the country to satisfy the normal needs of the life of the workman, his education, and his lawful pleasures, considering him as the head of a family. In all agricultural, commercial, manufacturing, or mining enterprises the workmen shall have the right to participate in the profits in the manner fixed in Clause IX of this article.

VII. The same compensation shall be paid for the same work without regard to sex or nationality.

VIII. The minimum wage shall be exempt from attachment, set-off, or discount.

IX. The determination of the minimum wage and of the rate of profit-sharing described in clause VI shall be made by special commissions to be appointed in each municipality and to be subordinated to the central board of conciliation to be established in each state.

X. All wages shall be paid in legal currency and shall not be paid in merchandise orders, counters, or any other representative token with which it is sought to substitute money.

XI. When owing to special circumstances it becomes necessary to increase the working hours there shall be paid as wages for the overtime 100 per cent more than those fixed for regular time. In no case shall the overtime exceed three hours nor continue for more than three consecutive days; and no women of whatever age nor boys under 16 years of age may engage in overtime work.

XII. In every agricultural, industrial, mining, or similar class of work employers are bound to furnish their workmen comfortable and sanitary dwelling places, for which they may charge rents not exceeding one-half of 1 per cent per month of the assessed value of the properties. They shall likewise establish schools, dispensaries, and other services necessary to the community. If the factories are located within inhabited places and more than 100 persons are employed therein, the first of the above-mentioned conditions shall be complied with.

XIII. Furthermore, there shall be set aside in these labor centers, whenever their population exceeds 200 inhabitants, a space of land not less than 5,000 square meters for the establishment of public markets, and the construction of buildings designed for municipal service and places of amusement. No saloons or gambling houses shall be permitted in such labor centers.

XIV. Employers shall be liable for labor accidents and occupational diseases arising from work; therefore employers shall pay the proper indemnity, according to whether death or merely temporary or permanent disability has ensued, in accordance with the provisions of law. This liability shall remain in force even though the employer contract for the work through an agent.

XV. Employers shall be bound to observe in the installation of their establishments all the provisions of law regarding hygiene and sanitation and to adopt adequate measures to prevent accidents due to the use of machinery, tools, and working materials, as well as to organize work in such a manner as to assure the greatest guaranties possible for the health and lives of workmen compatible with the nature of the work, under penalties which the law shall determine.

XVI. Workmen and employers shall have the right to unite for the defense of their respective interests, by forming syndicates, unions, etc.

XVII. The law shall recognize the right of workmen and employers to strike and to suspend work.

XVIII. Strikes shall be lawful when by the employment of peaceful means they shall aim to bring about a balance between the various factors of production and to harmonize the rights of capital and labor. In public services the workmen shall be obliged to give notice 10 days in advance to the board of conciliation and arbitration of the date set for the suspension of work. Strikes shall only be considered unlawful when the majority of the strikers shall resort to acts of violence against persons or property, or in case of war when the strikers belong to establishments and services dependent on the Government. Employees of military manufacturing establishments of the Federal Government shall not be included in the provisions of this clause, inasmuch as they are a dependency of the national army.

XIX. Lockouts shall only be lawful when the excess of production shall render it necessary to shut down in order to maintain prices reasonably above the cost of production, subject to the approval of the board of conciliation and arbitration.

XX. Differences or disputes between capital and labor shall be submitted for settlement to a board of conciliation and arbitration to consist of an equal number of representatives of the workmen and of the employers and of one representative of the Government.

XXI. If the employer shall refuse to submit his differences to arbitration or to accept the award rendered by the board, the labor contract shall be considered as terminated, and the employer shall be bound to indemnify the workman by the payment to him of three months' wages, in addition to the liability which he may have incurred by reason of the dispute. If the workman reject the award, the contract will be held to have terminated.

XXII. An employer who discharges a workman without proper cause or for having joined a union or syndicate or for having taken part in a lawful strike shall be bound, at the option of the workman, either to perform the contract or to indemnify him by the payment of three months' wages. He shall incur the same liability if the workman shall leave his service on account of the lack of good faith on the part of the employer or of maltreatment either as to his own person or that of his wife, parents, children, or brothers, or sisters. The employer can not evade this liability when the maltreatment is inflicted by subordinates or agents acting with his consent or knowledge.

XXIII. Claims of workmen for salaries or wages accrued during the past year and other indemnity claims shall be preferred over any other claims in cases of bankruptcy or execution proceedings.

XXIV. Debts contracted by workmen in favor of their employers or their employers' associates, subordinates, or agents, may only be charged against the workmen themselves, and in no case and for no reason collected from the members of his family. Nor shall such debts be paid by the taking of more than the entire wages of the workman for any one month.

XXV. No fee shall be charged for finding work for workmen by municipal offices, employment bureaus, or other public or private agencies.

XXVI. Every contract between a Mexican citizen and a foreign principal shall be legalized before the competent municipal authority and viséed by the consul of the nation to which the workman is undertaking to go, on the understanding that in addition to the usual clauses special and clear provisions shall be inserted for the payment by the foreign principal making the contract of the cost to the laborer of repatriation.

XXVII. The following stipulations shall be null and void and shall not bind the contracting parties, even though embodied in the contract:

(a) Stipulations providing for inhuman day's work on account of its notorious excessiveness, in view of the nature of the work.

(b) Stipulations providing for a wage rate which in the judgment of the board of conciliation and arbitration is not remunerative.

(c) Stipulations providing for a term of more than one week before the payment of wages.

(d) Stipulations providing for the assigning of places of amusement, eating places, cafés, taverns, saloons, or shops for the payment of wages, when employees of such establishments are not involved.

(e) Stipulations involving a direct or indirect obligation to purchase articles of consumption in specified shops or places.

(f) Stipulations permitting the retention of wages by way of fines.

(g) Stipulations constituting a waiver on the part of the workman of the indemnities to which he may become entitled by reason of labor accidents or occupational diseases, damages for nonperformance of the contract, or for discharge from work.

(h) All other stipulations implying the waiver of some right vested in the workman by labor laws.

XXVIII. The law shall decide what property constitutes the family estate. These goods shall be inalienable and may not be mortgaged, garnished, or attached, and may be bequeathed and inherited with simplified formalities in the succession proceedings.

XXIX. Institutions of popular insurance established for old age, sickness, life, unemployment, accident, and others of a similar character, are considered of social utility; the Federal and State Governments shall therefore encourage the organization of institutions of this character in order to instill and inculcate popular habits of thrift.

XXX. Cooperative associations for the construction of cheap and sanitary dwelling houses for workmen shall likewise be considered of social utility whenever these properties are designed to be acquired in ownership by the workmen within specified periods.

TITLE VII.—OF GENERAL PROVISIONS.

ART. 124. All powers not expressly vested in this constitution in the Federal authorities are understood to be reserved to the States.

ART. 125. No person shall hold at the same time two Federal offices or one Federal and one State elective office; if elected to two, he shall choose between them.

ART. 126. No payment shall be made which is not included in the budget or authorized by a law subsequent to the same.

ART. 127. The President of the Republic, the justices of the supreme court, representatives and senators, and other public officials of the Federation who are chosen by popular election shall receive a compensation for their services which shall be paid by the Federal treasury and determined by law. This compensation may not be waived, and any law increasing or decreasing it shall have no effect during the period for which the functionary holds office.

ART. 128. Every public official, without exception, shall, before entering on the discharge of his duties, make an affirmation to maintain this constitution and the laws arising thereunder.

ART. 129. In time of peace no military authorities shall exercise other functions than those bearing direct relation to military discipline. No fixed and permanent military posts shall be established other than in castles, forts, and arsenals depending directly upon the Federal Government, or in camps, barracks, or depots, established outside of inhabited places for the stationing of troops.

ART. 130. The Federal authorities shall have exclusive power to exercise in matters of religious worship and outward ecclesiastical forms, such intervention as by law authorized. All other officials shall act as auxiliaries to the Federal authorities.

The Congress shall not enact any law establishing or forbidding any religion whatsoever.

Marriage is a civil contract. Marriage and all other acts relating to the civil status of individuals shall appertain to the exclusive jurisdiction of the civil authorities in the manner and form by law provided, and they shall have the force and validity given them by said laws.

A simple promise to tell the truth and to comply with obligations contracted shall subject the promisor, in the event of a breach, to the penalties established therefor by law.

The law recognizing no corporate existence in the religious associations known as churches.

The ministers of religious creeds shall be considered as persons exercising a profession and shall be directly subject to the laws enacted on the subject.

The State legislatures shall have the exclusive power of determining the maximum number of ministers of religious creeds according to the needs of each locality. Only a Mexican by birth may be a minister of any religious creed in Mexico.

No ministers of religious creeds shall, either in public or private meetings, or in acts of worship or religious propaganda, criticise the fundamental laws of the country, the authorities in particular or the Government in general; they shall have no vote, nor be eligible to office, nor shall they be entitled to assemble for political purposes.

Before dedicating new temples of worship for public use, permission shall be obtained from the department of the interior (governacion); the opinion of the respective governor of the State shall be previously heard on the subject. Every place of worship shall have a person charged with its care and maintenance, who shall be legally responsible for the faithful performance of the laws on religious observances within the said place of worship, and for all the objects used for purposes of worship.

The caretaker of each place of public worship, together with ten citizens of the place, shall promptly advise the municipal authorities as to the person charged with the care of the said place of worship. The outgoing minister shall in every instance give notice of any change, for which purpose he shall be accompanied by the incoming minister and ten other citizens of the place. The municipal authorities under penalty of dismissal and fine, not exceeding 1,000 pesos for each breach, shall be responsible for the exact performance of this provision; they shall keep a register of the places of worship and other of the caretakers thereof, subject to the same penalty as above provided. The municipal authorities shall likewise give notice to the department of the interior through the intermediary of the State governor, of any permission to open to the public use a new place of worship, as well as of any change in the caretakers. Gifts of personalty may be received in the interior of places of public worship.

Under no conditions shall studies carried on in institutions devoted to the professional training of ministers of religious creeds be ratified or be granted any other dispensation of privilege which shall have for its purpose the ratification of the said studies in official institutions. Any authority violating this provision shall be punished criminally, and all such dispensation of privilege be null and void and shall invalidate wholly and entirely the professional degree toward the obtaining of which the infraction of this provision may in any way have contributed.

No periodical publication which either by reason of its program, its title, or merely by its general tendencies, is of a religious character, shall comment upon any political affairs of the nation, nor publish any information regarding the acts of the authorities of the country or of private individuals in so far as the latter have to do with public affairs.

Every kind of political association whose name shall bear any word or any indication relating to any religious belief is hereby strictly forbidden. No assemblies of any political character shall be held within places of public worship.

No minister of any religious creed may inherit either on his own behalf or by means of a trustee or otherwise, any real property occupied by any association of religious propaganda or religious or charitable purposes. Ministers of religious creeds are incapable legally of inheriting by will from ministers of the same religious sect or from any private individual to whom they are not related by blood within the fourth degree.

All real and personal property pertaining to the clergy or to religious institutions shall be governed, in so far as their acquisition by private parties is concerned, in conformity with article 27 of this constitution.

No trial by jury shall ever be granted for the infraction of any of the preceding provisions.

ART. 131. The Federal Government shall have exclusive power to levy duties on merchandise imported, exported, or passing in transit through the national Territory as well as to regulate at all times, and if necessary to forbid, for the sake of public safety or for police reasons, the circulation in the interior of the Republic of all kinds of goods, regardless of their origin; but the Federal Government shall have no power to establish or decree in the Federal district and Federal Territories the taxes and laws to which Clauses VI and VII of article 117 refer.

ART. 132. All forts, barracks, warehouses, and other real property, destined by the Federal Government for public service or common use shall be under the jurisdiction of the Federal authorities in accordance with the law which the Congress shall issue on the subject; any of these establishments which may subsequently be acquired within the territory of any State shall likewise be subject to Federal jurisdiction, provided consent thereto shall have been obtained from the respective State legislature.

ART. 133. This constitution and the laws of the United States of Mexico which shall be made in pursuance thereof and all treaties made or which shall be made under the authority of the President of the Republic, by and with the approval and consent of the Congress, shall be the supreme law of the land. And the judges in every State shall be bound by this constitution and by these laws and treaties, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

ART. 134. Bids shall be called for on all contracts which the Government may have occasion to enter into for the execution of any public works; these bids shall be submitted under seal and shall only be opened publicly.

TITLE VIII.—OF THE AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

ART. 135. The present constitution may be added to or amended. No amendment or addition shall become part of the constitution until agreed to by the Congress of the Union by a two-thirds vote of the Members present and approved by a majority of the State legislatures. The Congress shall count the votes of the legislatures and make the declaration that the amendments or additions have been adopted.

TITLE IX.—OF THE INVIOABILITY OF THE CONSTITUTION.

ART. 136. This constitution shall not lose its force and vigor even though its observance be interrupted by rebellion. In case that through any public disturbance a Government contrary to the principles which it sanctions be established, its force shall be restored so soon as the people shall regain their liberty and those who have participated in the Government emanating from the rebellion or have cooperated with it shall be tried in accordance with its provisions and with the laws arising under it.

TRANSITORY ARTICLES.

ARTICLE 1. This constitution shall be published at once and a solemn oath taken to defend and enforce it throughout the Republic; but its provisions, except those relating to the election of the supreme powers, Federal and State, shall not go into effect until the 1st day of May, 1917, at which time the constitutional congress shall be solemnly convened and the oath of office taken by the citizen chosen at the forthcoming elections to discharge the duties of President of the Republic.

The provisions of Clause V of article 82 shall not be applicable in the elections to be summoned in accordance with article 2 of the transitory articles nor shall active service in the army act as a disqualification for the office of Representative or Senator, provided the candidate shall not have active command of troops in the respective electoral district.

Nor shall the secretaries and assistant secretaries of executive departments be disqualified from election to the next Federal Congress, provided they shall definitely resign from office on the day on which the respective call is issued.

ART. 2. The person charged with the executive power of the nation shall immediately upon the publication of this constitution call for elections to fill the Federal offices; he shall see that these elections be held so that Congress may be constituted within a reasonable time, in order that it may count the cast in the presidential elections and make known the name of the person who has been elected President of the Republic, this shall be done in order that the provisions of the foregoing article may be complied with.

ART. 3. The next constitutional term shall be computed in the case of senators and representatives, from the 1st of September last, and in the case of the President of the Republic from the 1st of December, 1916.

ART. 4. Senators who in the coming election shall be classified as "even" shall serve only two years in order that the senate may be renewed by half every two years.

ART. 5. The Congress shall in the month of May next choose the justices of the supreme court in order that this tribunal may be constituted on the 1st day of June, 1917.

In these elections article 96 shall not govern in so far as the candidates proposed by the State legislatures are concerned: but those chosen shall be designated for the first term of two years prescribed by article 94.

ART. 6. The Congress shall meet in extraordinary session on the 15th day of April, 1917, to act as an electoral college, for the computing of the ballots and the determination of the election of President of the Republic, at which time it shall make known the results; it shall likewise enact the organic law of the circuit and district courts, the organic law of the tribunals of the Federal district and territories, in order that the supreme court of justice may immediately appoint the inferior and superior district and circuit judges; at the same session the Congress shall choose the superior judges and judges of first instance of the Federal district and territories, and shall also enact all laws submitted by the Executive. The circuit and district judges and the superior and inferior judges of the Federal district and territories shall take office not later than the 1st day of July, 1917, at which time such as shall have been temporarily appointed by the person now charged with the Executive power of the nation shall cease to act.

ART. 7. For this occasion only the votes for the office of senator shall be counted by the board of the first electoral district of each State or of the Federal district which shall be instituted for the counting of the votes of representatives. This board shall issue the respective credentials to the senators elect.

ART. 8. The supreme court shall decide all pending petitions of "amparo" in accordance with the laws at present in force.

ART. 9. The first chief of the constitutionalist army, charged with the executive power of the nation, is hereby authorized to issue the electoral law according to which on this occasion the elections to fill the various Federal offices shall be held.

ART. 10. All persons who shall have taken part in the Government emanating from the rebellion against the legitimate Government of the Republic, or who may have given aid to the said rebellion and later taken up arms or held any office or commission of the factions which have opposed the constitutionalist government, shall be tried in accordance with the laws at present in force, provided they shall not have been previously pardoned by the said constitutionalist government.

ART. 11. Until such time as the Congress of the Union and the State legislatures shall legislate on the agrarian and labor problems, the bases established by this constitution for the said laws shall be put into force throughout the Republic.

ART. 12. All Mexicans who shall have fought in the ranks of the constitutionalist army and their children and widows, and all other persons who shall have rendered service to the cause of the revolution, or to public instruction, shall be preferred in the acquisition of lots to which article 27 refers, and shall be entitled to such rebates as the law shall determine.

ART. 13. All debts contracted by working men on account of work up to the date of this constitution with masters, their subordinates, and agents are hereby declared wholly and entirely extinguished.

ART. 14. The departments of justice and of public instruction and fine arts are hereby abolished.

ART. 15. The citizen at present charged with the executive power is hereby authorized to issue the law of civil responsibility applicable to all promoters, accomplices and abettors of the offenses committed against the constitutional order in the month of February, 1913, and against the Constitutionalist Government.

ART. 16. The constitutional congress in the regular period of sessions, which will begin on the first day of September of the present year, shall issue all the organic laws of the constitution which may not have been already issued in the extraordinary session to which transitory article No. 6 refers; and it shall give preference to the laws relating to the rights of man and to Articles 30, 32, 33, 35, 36, 38, 107 and the latter part of article 111 of this constitution.

LUIS MANUEL ROJAS,

President.

G. AGUILAR,

First Vice President, General of Division.

SALVADOR GONZALES TORRES,

Second Vice President, General of Brigade.

DEPUTIES.

Aguascalientes: Daniel Cervantes.

Baja California: Ignacio Roel.

Coahuila: M. Aguirre Berlanga, Jose M. Rodrigues, J. E. von Versen, Manuel Cepeda M., Jose Rodriguez (alternate).

Colima: J. Ramirez Villarreal.

Chiapas: Enrique Suarez, Lisandro Lopez, Cristobal Ll. y Castillo, Daniel N. Zepeda, J. Amilcar Vidal.

Chihuahua: M. Prieto.

Distrito Federal: Gen. I. L. Pesqueira, Lauro Lopez Guerra, Gerzayn Ugarte, Amador Lozano, Felix F. Palavicini, C. Duplan, Rafael R. de los Rios, Arnulfo Silva, A. Norzagaray, Ciro B. Ceballos, Alfonso Herrera, R. Rosas y Reyes (alternate), Lic. Francisco Espinosa (alternate).

Durango: Silvestre Dorador, Lic. Rafael Espeleta, Antonio Gutierrez, Dr. Fernando Gomez Palacio, Alberto Terrones B., Jesus de la Torre.

Guanajuato: Gen. Lic. Ramon Frausto, Eng. Vicente M. Valtierra, Jose N. Macias, David Penafior, Jose Villasenor, Santiago Manrique, Lic. Hilario Medina, M. G. Aranda, Enrique Colunga, Eng. Ignacio Lopez, Dr. J. Diaz Barriga, Nicolas Cano, Lieut. Col. Gilberto M. Navarro, Luis Fernandez M., Eng. Carlos Ramirez Llaca.

Guerrero: Fidel Jimenez, Fid. Guillen, Francisco Figueroa.

Hidalgo: Antonio Guerrero, Leopoldo Ruiz, Lic. Alberto M. Gonzales, Raf. Vega Sanchez, Alfonso Cravioto, Matias Rodriguez, Ismael Pintado Sanchez, Lic. Refugio M. Mercado, Alfonso Mayorga.

Jalisco: M. Davalos, Federico E. Ibarra, Manuel Davalos Ornelas, Francisco Martin del Campo, R. Moreno, G. Bolados N., Juan de Dios Robledo, Ramon Castaneda y Castaneda, Jorge Villaseñor, Gen. Amado Aguirre, Jose I. Solorzano, Francisco Labastida Izquierdo, J. Ramos, Praslow, Lieut. Col. Jose Manzano, J. Aguirre Berlanga, Brigadier Esteban B. Calderon, P. Machorro y Narvaez and Coronel Sebastian Allende J.

Mexico: Aldegundo Villaseñor F. Moreno, E. O'Farril, Guillermo Ordarica, Jose Romero, A. Aguilar, Juan Manuel Giffard, Manuel A. Hernandez, E. A. Enriquez, Donato Bravo Izquierdo, Ruben Marti.

Michoacan: J. Ruiz, Alberto Peralta, Cayetano Andrade, Uriel Aviles, G. R. Cervera, O. Lopez Couto, S. Alcazar R., M. Martinez Solorzano, Martin Castrejon, Lic. Alberto Alvarado, Jose Alvarez, Rafael Marquez, J. Silva Herrera, Amadeo Betancourt, Francisco Mujica, Jesus Romero Flores.

Morelos: Antonio Garza Zambrano, Jose L. Gomez and Alvaro L. Alcazar.

Nuevo Leon: Manuel Amaya, Niceforo Zambrano, Luis Hizaliturri, Col. Ramon Gamez, Reynaldo Garza, Plutarco Gonzalez.

Oaxaca: Juan Sanchez, Leopoldo Payan, Lic. Manuel Cabrera, Col. Jose F. Gomez and Luis Espinosa.

Puebla: Dr. Salvador R. Guzman, Lic. Rafael P. Canete, M. Rosales, Gabriel Rojane, Lic. D. Pastrana J., Froylan C. Manjarrez, Lieut. Col. Antonio de la Barrera, Mayor Jose Rivera, Col. Epigmenio A. Martinez, Pastor Rouaix, Col. of Engineers Luis T. Navarro, Lieut. Col. Federico Dinorin, Gen. Gabino Bandera Malo, Col. Porfirio del Castillo, Col. Dr. Gilberto de la Fuente, Alfonso Cabrera, J. Verastegui. Queretaro: Juan N. Frias and E. Perusquia.

San Luis Potosi: S. M. Santos, Dr. Arturo Mendez, Rafael Martinez Mendoza, Rafael Nieto, Dionisio Zavala, G. A. Tello, Rafael Curiel, Coeme Davila (alternate). Sinaloa: Pedro R. Zavala, A. Magallon, C. M. Ezquerro, C. Aviles, Emiliano C. Garcia.

Sonora: L. G. Monzon, Ramon Ross

Tabasco: Lic. Rafael Martinez de Escobar, Santiago Ocampo C., and C. Sanchez Magallanes.

Tamaulipas: Pedro A. Chapa, Zef. Fajardo, Emiliano Prospero Nafarrate, F. de Leija.

Tepic: Lieut. Col. C. Liman, Maj. Marcelino Cedano, Juan Espinosa Bavara.

Tlaxcala: Antonio Hidalgo, Ascencion Tepal, and Modesto Gonzalez Galindo.

Vera Cruz: Saul Rodiles, Enrique Meza, Benito Ramirez G., A. G. Garcia, E. Cespedes, Josafat F. Marquez, Alfredo Solares, Alberto Roman, Silvestre Aguilar, Angel S. Juarico, H. Jara, Victorio E. Gongora, M. Torres, C. L. Gracidas (alternate), J. de D. Palma, G. Casados, F. A. Pereyra.

Yucatan: Enrique Recio, Miguel Alonzo Romero, Hector Victoria A.

Zacatecas: Adolfo Villaseñor, Julian Adame, Jairo R. Dyer, Samuel Castanon, A. L. Arteaga, Antonio Cervantes, Col. J. Aguirre Escobar.

Secretary: F. Lizardi, deputy from Guanajuato.

Secretary: E. Meade Fierro, deputy from Coahuila.

Secretary: Jose M. Truchuelo, deputy from Queretaro.

Secretary: Antonio Ancona A., deputy from Yucatan.

Subsecretary: Dr. J. Lopez Lira, deputy from Guanajuato.

Subsecretary: Juan de Dios Borquez, deputy from Sonora.

Subsecretary: Flavio A. Bojorquez, deputy from Sonora.

Queretaro de Arteaga, January 31, 1917.

[Telegram.]

MEXICO CITY, February 20, 1917.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington.

Minister for foreign affairs stated that he has no knowledge of any decree affecting rights of foreigners to real estate or mines to which such foreigners already have clear title, but that there are in existence decrees requiring the waiver of nationality in so far as concerns titles now under negotiation or to be acquired in the future. He has promised to send to the embassy copies of such decrees.

He further said that the legislation emanating from the new constitution, with respect to property rights, would, in his opinion, in no wise prejudice present property rights and at the same time called attention to article of the new constitution which provides that no laws may be made retroactive.

FLETCHER.

MEXICO, July 9, 1917.

The SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington.

SIR: With reference to the department's telegram No. 267, June 16, 3 p. m., relative to the refusal on the part of officials of the Mexican Government to grant permits to oil companies to drill wells acquired under leases of dates subsequent to February 5, 1917, I have the honor to inclose herewith copies and translations of my note verbale of June 22 to the minister of industry and commerce on the subject, and of his reply of June 28. I have the honor to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

GEORGE T. SUMMERLIN,
Chargé d'Affaires.

[Translation.]

The ambassador of the United States of America presents his compliments to his excellency, the secretary of industry and commerce, and has the honor to state that he has received a telegram from the Department of State of the United States in which he is informed that according to information which has been received, the officials of the Mexican Government decline to grant permission to petroleum companies to sink wells acquired under leases entered into since the 5th of February of the present year, on which date the new constitution was promulgated. It is said that various American companies acquired rights for the sinking of wells during the period between the 5th of February and the 1st of May based on statements of the Mexican Government that the new constitution would not go into effect prior to the 1st of May.

In view of the above, the ambassador, under instructions from his government, requests his excellency, the secretary of industry and commerce, to kindly inform him in the premises, for which he anticipates his thanks.

Mr. Fletcher avails himself of this opportunity to renew to his excellency, Mr. Alberto J. Pani, the assurances of his high and distinguished consideration.

Mexico, June 22, 1917.

[Translation.]

MINISTER OF INDUSTRY AND COMMERCE,
Mexico, June 28, 1917.

MR. AMBASSADOR: I have the honor to reply to your excellency's esteemed letter of the 22d instant, in which you are pleased to inform me that the Department of State of the United States of America, which has been informed that the officials of our Government decline to grant permission to companies to sink wells acquired under leases entered into since the 5th of February of this year, wishes to know the legal status of the said petroleum companies.

It is true that on the 24th instant the department of petroleum of this ministry issued to petroleum agencies, a telegraphic order prohibiting, until further notice, the issuance of permits for the sinking of petroleum wells, on lands leased on dates subsequent to the 5th of February, on which date the new Federal Constitution was promulgated. According to the text of article 27 in relation to the first of the transitory articles of our fundamental law, the direct control of petroleum and of all hydrocarbons corresponds to the nation as from the 1st of May. Leases, or contracts of whatever nature relating to the exploitation of these mineral products, entered into on dates prior to the promulgation of the constitution are presumed to have been made in good faith; but not those which were made subsequent to that date, because the subsoil from which the products are to be secured, and which is the basis of such contracts, does not belong, according to the said law, to the owner of the surface lands, by virtue of the nationalization imposed by the text referred to.

The prohibition declared is, therefore, but a part of the measures taken covering the constitutional text for the purpose of making the same effective.

I renew to your excellency the assurances of my consideration and personal esteem.

A. J. PANI.

[Telegram received.]

MEXICO, August 2, 1917.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Washington, D. C.

Confidential. In interview with President this morning I informed him that American oil and mining interests were concerned with regard to the attitude of the Mexican Government with reference to the so-called nationalization of these industries. In reply he assured me that they need not be; that it was not the intention of the Mexican Government to take over properties now in exploitation and distinctly stated that there would be no confiscation of these properties.

FLETCHER.

Cable message from the Department of State to the American embassy at Mexico City. No. 716. Paraphrase.]

JANUARY 23, 1918.

Department of State has information that as a result of views of attorney general and attorneys retained by different Mexican secretaries of State alien corporations can not exploit, in any manner, under article 27 of the constitution, the natural resources of the country and that American companies have lately been denied permission to sink oil wells on lands owned by them, regardless of the fact that such permission was invariably granted them previously.

See proper authorities and insist that no such action as that be taken pending the discussion and enactment of new legislation on the subject inasmuch as this action will entail serious consequences to the oil companies and precipitate a crisis in their affairs. You will also call attention to President Carranza's assurance, made to ambassador on August 2, 1917, and reported in embassy's telegram 3511 August 2, 7 p. m., to the effect that the Mexican Government did not intend to absorb the American oil and mining interests under development and that none of these would be confiscated. Remind authorities that present attitude of administrative officials seems to violate the spirit of those assurances and cable at once result of your protest.

POLK, Acting.

[Cable message from American embassy at Mexico City to the Department of State. No. 725. Paraphrase.]

JANUARY 27, 1918.

Your No. 716, January 23, 7 p. m., discussed with Pani, who answers in a memorandum of the 26th that alien corporations have not been prevented from sinking oil wells; that the views of the attorney general and lawyers consulted regarding article 27 does not prevent foreign capital from being invested in the oil business but demands that foreign capital shall submit to the new laws by waiving its nationality and organizing as Mexican corporations; that this does not mean meddling in the affairs of said companies, nor imply confiscation of their properties; that the position assumed by the present Government in its relations with foreign interests has accorded with the assurances given to Ambassador Fletcher by President Carranza, on August 2 last. Moreover that since the new constitution was enacted, the Government has adopted a friendly attitude toward American interests by giving them a chance to adjust their affairs to the conditions which the new law creates, and that any specific complaint which may arise wherein an American company may feel that its interests are endangered will be given careful attention when brought to the attention of his department.

SUMMERLIN.

[Cable message from the Department of State to the American embassy at Mexico City. No. 948. Paraphrase.]

APRIL 4, 1918.

Sr. Rouaix appears to assert that he placed the draft of article 27 of the Mexican constitution before the Constitutional Assembly, and he undertakes to interpret authoritatively the expression "dominio directo" which appears in that article as having application to all subsoil deposits, including petroleum. Those words, according to the statement of Sr. Rouaix, mean that the nation possesses all ownership in deposits of this character, both "private" and "absolute and original," and he adds that the constitution having been promulgated conflicting laws were at once repealed.

thereby, including naturally those which grant to the owner of the surface the right to deposits under the surface. The fact that Sr. Rouaix is connected with the Mexican Government, and the further fact that the nature of his interpretation is authoritative, seemed clearly to point out the correctness of the view set forth in the telegram of the Department of State dated March 19, noon, No. 895, that the petroleum decree, as promulgated, constitutes an attempt of an arbitrary character to separate rights as to surface and subsurface property, thus taking from owners, without due process of law, their property and with disregard to the provision of the constitution that "private" property shall not be expropriated except by reason of public utility and by means of indemnification.

You will communicate the foregoing to the Mexican Government in a note supplementing the representations you have made in virtue of the instructions given in department's No. 895, and you will make the further statement that if, as would seem to be the case, Sr. Rouaix is the spokesman of the Government of Mexico, this Government, acting on behalf of American citizens who have expended large sums of money in securing petroleum lands in Mexico, and who placed their reliance, as they were justified in doing, on the Mexican laws granting ownership of deposits under the surface to the owners of the surface, protests emphatically and solemnly against the petroleum decree, declaring it to be an act of despoilation and confiscation, and in the premises reserves all rights.

No. 815.

EMBASSY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Mexico, March 1, 1918.

The honorable the SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington.

SIR: Continuing my No. 812 of February 27, 1918, inclosing the unofficial text of the presidential decree fixing taxes on petroleum lands, and confirming my telegram No. 820 of March 1, 7 p. m., I have the honor to inclose herewith copy of the official text of said decree as published in the Diario Oficial under date of February 27, accompanied by an English translation.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

HENRY P. FLETCHER.

[Enclosure No. 1. Despatch No. 815.]

Venustiano Carranza, constitutional President of the United States of Mexico to the inhabitants, know ye that, using the extraordinary powers in the ministry of finance vested in me by Congress, I have issued the following decree:

ARTICLE 1. A tax is established on oil lands and on oil contracts executed prior to 1st May, 1917, having for their object the leasing of lands for the exploitation of carbides of hydrogen or permission to do so under an onerous title.

ART. 2. The annual rentals stipulated in the contracts cited in article 1 shall be taxed in the following proportion:

- (a) Those of 5 pesos per annum per hectare or less, with 10 per cent of their value.
- (b) Those of more than 5 pesos and less than 10 per hectare and per annum, with 10 per cent the first 5 pesos and with 20 per cent the rest.
- (c) Rents greater than 10 pesos per annum per hectare, with 10 per cent the first 5 pesos, with 20 per cent the next 5 pesos, and with 50 per cent anything exceeding the first 10 pesos.

ART. 3. All royalties stipulated in oil contracts are charged with 50 per cent of their value, in cash or in kind, as may be determined by the ministry of finance.

ART. 4. Properties worked by surface landowners are charged with an annual rental of 5 pesos per hectare and besides with a royalty of 5 per cent of the products, in cash or in kind, as may in each case be determined by the minister of finance.

ART. 5. The ministry of finance shall advise taxpayers during the last fortnight of each bimonthly period if they are to pay in cash or in kind the royalty corresponding to the bimonthly production ending in that fortnight.

ART. 6. The taxes fixed in article 2 shall be paid at the local stamp offices in the jurisdiction the lands belong to and should such lands belong to various jurisdictions at the office appointed by the finance ministry, after consulting the taxpayer. This payment shall be made in advance in the first fortnight of each bimonthly period.

ART. 7. The royalties payable in cash shall be deposited at the office cited in the preceding article on the same dates set therein at the end of each two months.

ART. 8. Payments of amounts mentioned in articles 2, 3, and 4 shall be made, using special stamps marked "Oil revenues."

ART. 9. Payers of taxes established in this law must present within the first fortnight of each bimonthly period a statement according to the authorized form of the general stamp office, giving rentals, production, and other necessary data for assessing taxes. These statements shall be made before the stamp offices referred to in article 6.

ART. 10. Transfer of contracts chargeable under this law shall be notified to the same offices mentioned in article 6 within 30 days after execution. Besides this obligation the contracting parties must immediately notify the general stamp office through the notaries before whom such transactions are effected.

ART. 11. All amounts corresponding to royalties or their fractions payable in kind shall be delivered at any of the storage stations belonging to the operator, as desired by the ministry of finance, which shall designate the place of delivery simultaneously with this form of payment.

ART. 12. When the royalties or fractions are payable in cash they shall be estimated taking the fiscal values of the products at ports of shipment as fixed by the bimonthly tariffs of the ministry of finance and deducting the cost of transportation by pipe line, according to the distance of the field of production from the port of shipment and the average public tariff authorized by the ministry of industry, commerce, and work for pipe lines in the district under consideration. The tax department of the ministry of finance must duly advise the local stamp offices as to the aforementioned values, so that such offices may judge the returns.

ART. 13. For oil lands not actually paying rent 5 pesos per annum per hectare shall be paid and for those at present not paying royalty 5 per cent of the products. Payments mentioned in this article shall be made under the same conditions which this law provides for other taxpayers.

ART. 14. Landowners who desire to work for their own account subsoil petroleum deposits and have not made any oil contract, as well as the last cessionaries of the right of exploitation in contracts mentioned in article 1 of this law, shall make a statement within three months from the promulgation hereof, with certified copies of their contracts of purchase, lease or of any other description, to the ministry of industry, commerce, and work, which shall revise such statements and reject those concerning baseless information. During this term all oil properties will be considered vacant which have not been registered in the form prescribed in this article, their denouncement and exploitation being governed by the regulations to be issued which shall determine those liable for the payment of taxes.

ART. 15. Contracts referred to in this law must be embodied in public deeds and those executed in private ones shall only be valid when the importance of the business does not require the formality of a public deed and which by other means of unquestionable evidence are shown to have been really executed on the dates indicated with clauses therein contained.

ART. 16. The royalties established in this law, fractions of the royalty fixed in article 3, the tax on rentals fixed in article 2, and the other rentals established in this same law shall be paid at the local stamp offices by the operators or the last cessionaries to the right of exploitation who when making payments to intermediaries or owners shall deduct the proportional part of the taxes corresponding to the latter so that the rentals and Federal royalties be distributed in the same proportion as the rentals and royalties now established on oil lands in the various existing contracts for oil exploitation.

ART. 17. Taxes not paid in the terms fixed by this law shall be subject to a fine of 10 per cent for each month of delayed payment.

ART. 18. The proceeds of this tax shall be distributed as follows: Sixty per cent to the Federal Government; 20 per cent to the State governments; 20 per cent to the respective municipalities, taking into account the situation of the lands. When they are in two or more municipalities or two or more States the finance ministry shall distribute the tax, taking into consideration the area in each jurisdiction, situation of the wells and their output, and other circumstances.

ART. 19. Transgressions of the precepts of this law shall be punished by fines varying from 50 to 1,000 pesos, according to the seriousness of the case, which will go to the courts should there be fraud to prosecute.

ART. 20. This law will become effective when promulgated.

Mexico, February 19, 1918.

[From American Embassy at Mexico City to Mexican Foreign Office.]

APRIL 2, 1918.

EXCELLENCY: The decree of the 19th of February, 1918, which was published in the Diario Oficial on the 27th of February, last, establishing a tax on oil lands and on oil contracts executed prior to the 1st of May, 1917, etc., has been brought to the attention of my Government, and I am under instructions to state to your excellency that my Government has given most careful consideration to the effect which this decree, if carried into operation, will have upon American interests and property rights in Mexico.

The said decree provides for the imposition of certain taxes on the surface of oil lands, as well as on the rents, royalties, and production derived from the exploitation thereof. It is noted also that among the provisions for the collection of such taxes is one requiring that payment in kind shall be delivered to the Mexican Government at the storage stations of the operators. Articles IV, XIII, and XIV of the said decree seem to indicate an intention to separate the ownership of the surface from that of the mineral deposits of the subsurface, and to allow the owners of the surface a mere preference in so far as concerns the right to work the subsoil deposits upon compliance with certain conditions which are specified. While the United States Government is not disposed to request for its citizens exemption from the payment of their ordinary and just share of the burdens of taxation so long as the tax is uniform and not discriminatory in its operation, and can fairly be considered a tax and not a confiscation or unfair imposition, and while the United States Government is not inclined to interpose in behalf of its citizens in case of expropriation of private property for sound reasons of public welfare, and upon just compensation and by legal proceedings before tribunals, allowing fair and equal opportunity to be heard and giving due consideration to American rights, nevertheless, the United States can not acquiesce in any procedure ostensibly or nominally in the form of taxation or the exercise of eminent domain, but really resulting in confiscation of private property and arbitrary deprivation of vested rights.

Your excellency will understand that this is not an assertion of any new principle of international law, but merely a reiteration of these recognized principles which my Government is convinced form the basis of international respect and good neighborhood. The seizure or spoliation of property at the mere will of the sovereign and without due legal process fairly and equitably administered, has always been regarded as a denial of justice and as affording internationally a basis of interposition.

My Government is not in a position to state definitely that the operation of the aforementioned decree will, in effect, amount to confiscation of American interests. Nevertheless, it is deemed important that the Government of the United States should state at this time the real apprehension which it entertains as to the possible effect of this decree upon the vested rights of American citizens in oil properties in Mexico. The amount of taxes to be levied by this decree are in themselves a very great burden on the oil industry, and if they are not confiscatory in effect—and as to this my Government reserves opinion—they at least indicate a trend in that direction. It is represented to the State Department that the taxation borne by the oil fields of Mexico very greatly exceeds that imposed on the industry anywhere else in the world. Moreover, it would be possible under the terms of the decree, in view of the fact that the Mexico Government has not storage facilities for the taxes or royalties required to be paid in kind, by storing the same in the tanks of the operators, to monopolize such storage facilities to the point of the practical confiscation thereof until emptied by order of the Mexican Government or by the forced sale of the stored petroleum to the operators at extravagant rates.

It is, however, to the principle involved in the apparent attempt at separation of surface and subsurface rights under this decree, that my Government desires to direct special attention. It would appear that the decree in question is an effort to put into effect as to petroleum lands, Paragraph IV of Article 27 of the constitution of May 1, 1917, by severing at one stroke the ownership of the petroleum deposits from the ownership of the surface, notwithstanding that the constitution provided that "private property shall not be expropriated except by reason of public utility and by means of indemnification." So far as my Government is aware, no provision has been made by your excellency's Government for just compensation for such arbitrary divestment of rights nor for the establishment of any tribunal invested with the functions of determining justly and fairly what indemnification is due to American interests. Moreover, there appears not the slightest indication that the separation of mineral rights from surface rights is a matter of public utility upon which the right of expropriation depends, according to the terms of the constitution itself. In the absence of the establishment of any procedure looking to the prevention of spoliation of American citizens and in the absence of any assurance, were such procedure established, that it would not uphold in defiance of international law and justice the arbitrary confiscations of Mexican authorities, it becomes the function of the Government of the United States most earnestly and respectfully to call the attention of the Mexican Government to the necessity which may arise to impel it to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico divested or injuriously affected by the decree above cited.

The investments of American citizens in the oil properties in Mexico have been made in reliance upon the good faith and justice of the Mexican Government and Mexican laws, and my Government can not believe that the enlightened Government of a neighboring Republic at peace and at a stage in its progress when the development of its resources so greatly depends on its maintaining good faith with investors and operators, whom it has virtually invited to spend their wealth and energy within its borders, will disregard its clear and just obligations towards them.

Acting under instructions, I have the honor to request your excellency to be good enough to lay before His Excellency the President of Mexico, this formal and solemn protest of the Government of the United States against the violation or infringement of legitimately acquired American private property rights involved in the enforcement of the said decree.

Accept, excellency, the renewed assurance of my highest consideration.

HENRY P. FLETCHER.

[Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., August 12, 1918.

Rush.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico City.

1357. As immediate action is necessary, you are instructed to seek an interview with President Carranza for the purpose of submitting the following request for extension:

"The American Government has been advised of the results of the conferences that have been taking place between representatives of the Mexican Government and representatives of certain American citizens and corporations whose rights and properties are affected by the following decrees. The decree of February 19, 1918, that of May 18, 1918, published the 21st of May, the decree of July 8, 1918, published the 13th of July, and certain fiscal orders which have reference to the disposition of oil lands and oil contracts and the taxation thereof. It is also advised that two new decrees have been issued by your excellency: That of July 31, 1918, published August 5, which purports to modify or repeal the decrees of February 19, 1918, and May 18, 1918; and the second, date of which is unknown, published on August 10, which purports to modify or repeal the decree of July 8, 1918. The American Government has not had an opportunity to examine the provisions or consider the effect of the last two decrees that are mentioned, for it appears they have only been published within the last two weeks.

"As I have not received an answer to my note of April the 2d, I am instructed to draw your excellency's attention to that note and to point out again the concern with which my Government entertains as to the possible effect of these various decrees upon the vested rights in Mexico of American citizens in oil properties. And to further direct your excellency's attention to the necessity which may arise, in order to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico, divested or injuriously affected by the said decrees, to impel the United States to protect the property of its citizens.

"It is understood by my Government that the date upon which these decrees will go into effect is August 15, 1918, and I am therefore instructed to request your excellency to postpone that date and suspend all operation of said decrees in order that the American Government may examine carefully and consider their provisions, purpose, and results as affecting rights and properties of American citizens."

Telegraph results.

LANSING.

[Paraphrase, telegram.]

MEXICO, August 13, 1918.

SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington.

Rush, 1382, August 13, 1918.

I presented in writing the request contained in your telegram 1357, August 12, to the President at an interview this afternoon. In reply he stated that it was impossible to postpone operation of the petroleum decrees further. In the fundamental question involved, i. e., the conflicting rights of the Government and private individuals to the subsoil products, he explained that the decrees were fiscal legislation merely, to pass laws that would give effect to article 27 of the constitution and to legislate as to the above question was the province of Congress. He stated that if the difficulty could not be settled except by war or intervention he was sorry, but was prepared to confront this alternative. Apparently he did not like the reference in the last communication and in my note of April 2 to the possibility of the United States Government having to protect the property of its citizens. In reply I stated that I believed and hoped that matters would not come to such a pass. He agreed and stated that the interested parties should appeal to the courts and that if and after legal remedies should fail there still remained the diplomatic channel.

In the event the American citizens concerned should feel that their legally acquired rights should not have received due recognition in the Mexican courts resort might further be had to arbitration or other peaceful means to decide the question at issue and referred to existing treaties between our two countries, and I informed him that I thought it would have a reassuring effect if I could inform the department of the above. The President replied that he would be willing to exhaust every peaceful means of settlement before resorting to force. He stated that the Mexican Government could not admit any interference in respect to the present matter, as it was purely fiscal, and he so informed the British Government. He did not deny that the decrees reached article 27 in their basic relation and apparently was anxious to stress the point that they were purely fiscal legislation.

He believed that companies should file their manifestations under protest if they so wished and without prejudice, he stated.

I again expressed my confidence that the question could and would be settled peaceably and satisfactorily, and he replied in the same spirit.

FLETCHER.

EMBASSY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Mexico, August 14, 1918.

No. 1312.

The SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington.

SIR: Continuing my dispatch No. 1283 of August 7, 1918, on the subject of the petroleum decrees recently issued by the Mexican Government, and confirming my recent telegrams, I have the honor to report the developments of the situation in the past weeks, as follows:

On August 13 the foreign office made public its reply to the note of the British Government dated April 30. The substance of this reply was telegraphed immediately to the department and the text and translation will be found in my dispatch No. 1306 of August 14.

Your telegram No. 1237 of August 12, 3 p. m., instructing me to seek an immediate interview with President Carranza and request a further postponement of the operation of the recent petroleum decrees, reached me yesterday morning.

I put this request in writing—copy inclosed—of which I also made a translation and arranged for an interview with President Carranza at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The interview lasted half an hour and the principal points and results thereof were immediately telegraphed to the department.

On opening the conversation, I explained to the president, that while the attorneys representing the various American citizens interested in the oil industry in Mexico had reported the result of their conferences with the representatives of the Mexican Government, to their principals and more recently to the Department of State, nevertheless, my Government had not had sufficient time to study the various decrees and to determine the effect which they would have upon American interests and property rights in Mexico, and that I had been instructed to present to him a request for postponement of the operation of the said decrees and handed to him the note above referred to in translation. The president read it carefully and replied that as a result of the conferences held between Messrs. Garfield and Rhoades and Messrs. Pani and Nieto, the Mexican Government had made a number of modifications in the petroleum decrees favorable to the companies concerned; that the decrees were merely fiscal; that it was the province of the Congress, which would meet on the 1st of September, to pass the laws which would put article 27 into effect, and that he believed such legislation—which would originate with him or with some member of Congress—would be one of the first subjects to be taken up by the legislature; that he had gone as far as he could in the matter, and could not further postpone the operation of the petroleum decrees.

He referred with evident displeasure to the part of the request which mentioned the necessity which may arise to impel the United States to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico and said that this was merely fiscal legislation, and, as he had pointed out in his reply to the British Government, Mexico in the exercise of its sovereign rights could not admit interference of foreign Governments in the matter, and said that if this meant war or intervention he was prepared to confront this alternative, however regrettable. I replied that I saw no immediate danger of matters coming to such a pass and referred to the peaceful means which, in my opinion, should and would be exhausted before this alternative need be met. He agreed in this and said that the parties interested should appeal to the courts, and that if and after the ordinary legal remedies should have been exhausted they still should feel aggrieved, there remained always the diplomatic channel through which to attempt settlement. Following that line of thought, I told him that I believed it would have a reassuring effect if I could say this to the department, and that every legal and peaceful means would be exhausted to reach a settlement of the judicial question involved, and I referred to the existing treaties between Mexico and the United States in this connection. The President replied that he was not a partisan of force, and stated his willingness to adopt peaceful means of settlement.

Throughout the conversation the President stressed the point that the decrees in question constitute merely fiscal legislation, and that he had not attempted in the decrees to put into practice and effect the provisions of the constitution relating to subsoil ownership, and that the congress only had this power and would decide the conflict with reference to subsoil ownership as between the nation and private individuals. I made it clear, however, that in my opinion the decrees were based on Article XXVII of the constitution, and that individual owners feared that compliance with the provisions of the said decrees might prejudice their legitimately acquired rights. He then spoke of the filing of manifestations and stated that in his opinion they should be filed; that they could be filed under protest if the companies so desired and without prejudice to their rights.

In conclusion I referred to the delicacy of the situation and to the very short time which would elapse before the decrees were put into effect, and expressed the hope that no precipitate action would be taken by the Mexican Government which would interfere with the peaceful, orderly, and judicial settlement of the matter in dispute, and my personal hope and belief that with patience and good will on both sides a satisfactory settlement would be reached. The President replied in the same spirit. The interview was extremely cordial throughout. The only way in which the President showed the slightest annoyance was in connection with what he considered a threat of the United States Government to protect its citizens in Mexico.

This morning there was published in all the local papers a new petroleum decree dated the 12th, providing that petroleum lands now under exploitation or acquired after survey would not be open to denouncement after the 15th instant, even though not manifested as prescribed by the petroleum decrees, and that such nonmanifested lands would pay an annual rental of 5 pesos per hectare and a royalty of 5 per cent on production.

I am informed that this new decree was prepared last night in the palace and antedated. I telegraphed this morning a translation of this last decree in full—in view of the fact that there remain only two days in which manifestations may be filed—to have the complete text.

Up to the present very few of the companies and individuals interested have filed the manifestations called for by the decree.

I might add that in the course of my interview with the President yesterday, he said that he was preparing a reply to my note of April 2, more or less along the lines of his reply to the British Government.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

HENRY P. FLETCHER.

[Inclosure No. 1, dispatch No. 1337.]

E. GARZA, PEREZ SUBSECRETARY, BY REASON OF ILLNESS OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS, TO HENRY P. FLETCHER, AMERICAN AMBASSADOR, MEXICO CITY.

[Translation.]

2772.

MEXICO, August 17, 1918.

By direction and under instructions from the President of the Republic, I have the honor to reply to note No. 290 which your excellency addressed to the Government of the Republic under date of April 2, this year, with regard to the decree of February 19 which established taxes on petroleum lands and petroleum contracts as well as to that addressed to the said high official on the 13th of August, last. In the first note your excellency presents through me to the President of the Republic a formal and solemn protest of the Government of the United States against the violation of private property rights legitimately acquired by American citizens, which it is considered the application of the decree mentioned will bring with it.

I must not conceal from your excellency the fact that it has been a matter of surprise for the Mexican Government to receive a diplomatic representation with reference to an act proceeding from the legitimate exercise of its sovereignty, such as the issuance of a decree, and that the said representation contained the proposition of affording undue protection to foreign citizens and interests, and which, if made good, would have the effect of placing them in a better and more privileged situation than Mexicans themselves.

Your excellency will understand that neither the one nor the other can be consented to by a government or a people conscious of its dignity and high duty of preserving unblemished the national sovereignty.

Of the principal questions covered by your excellency's note referred to one relates to the tax created by the decree on oil lands and contracts and another to the system of real property contained in article 27 of the political constitution of the Republic.

Now, in as much as the right of decreeing taxes is an attribute of internal sovereignty and the organization of property in the country is an attribute of territorial sovereignty, neither of the two questions can be made the basis of diplomatic representation, and less still of a formal and solemn protest such as that which your excellency makes in the name of and under instructions from your Government, as both of these things imply a real diplomatic intervention in the internal affairs of Mexico. The Mexican Government has not recognized and will not recognize that any country has the right to interfere in any form in its internal affairs nor even of protesting against acts exclusively within the exercise of its sovereignty.

The tax has been established by a general law which affects Mexicans and foreigners and is applicable in any section of the country where a petroleum deposit may exist or may be discovered. Nevertheless, your excellency announces that the Government of the United States might be obliged to protect the interests of its citizens from the application of said law; and while the character of this protection is not stated, it undoubtedly tends to place foreigners in Mexico in a privileged position, which your excellency will understand is contrary to every rule of right and wounds the dignity of the Mexican people.

The protection of national and foreign interests within the country is a duty and at the same time a faculty of the Mexican Government exclusively. By announcing protection by your excellency's Government, if necessity arises, the idea is clearly revealed of obtaining undue preference in favor of American interests and citizens, this fact being made more evident still when it is considered that Mexican companies and proprietors have made no move to escape the tax and that their recourse in case they believe it to be excessive, is to appeal to the courts of the Republic demanding protection and amparo, and this is the only means which foreigners also should adopt.

The Mexican Government can not consent to any measure whatsoever which the American Government may purpose to put into practice to place its citizens in a more favored situation than that of Mexicans in their own country, and in so doing is sure of the unanimous support of public opinion and of the nation in indorsing respect for its sovereignty.

The criterion of the Mexican Government in this matter is not an innovation in international law, but the simple application of the principle of the equality of nations, frequently forgotten by strong governments in their relations with weak countries. It is furthermore a principle which the President desires to see implanted and respected in the diplomatic, mercantile, and all other relations which may be established between countries, and which he himself has proclaimed on repeated occasions, in the following terms:

"No individual should aspire to a better situation than that of the citizens of the country to which he goes: legislation should be general and abstain from distinctions on account of nationality. Neither the power of nations nor their diplomacy should serve for the protection of particular interests or to exert pressure upon the governments of weak peoples with the end of obtaining modifications of laws which are disagreeable to the subjects of a powerful country."

In fiscal matters, this amounts to a declaration of perfect equality of nationals and foreigners in the collection of taxes decreed by the public power of a country.

The protection which Your Excellency states the Government of the United States may find itself in the necessity of extending to its nationals and which is ratified in the note of August 13, constitutes a threat which is in contrast with the pacific ideals of His Excellency President Wilson and does not concord with the reiterated manifestations of friendship and respect which he has proclaimed in regard to Mexico.

Whatever may be the intention of the American Government in this respect, the Mexican Government believes it necessary to state that it will not accept the interference of any foreign power in the arrangement of its internal affairs and that it will not admit any proceeding which under the pretext of protection to foreign interests wounds the national decorum or impairs the exercise of its sovereignty.

The issuance of the decree of February 19 is an act which of itself can not form the basis of diplomatic representations. If your excellency's Government does so it is because it believes the said decree deprives American citizens of acquired rights and the seizure or spoliation of these rights by the mere will of the sovereign without due process of law has always been held as a denial of justice and sufficient cause for diplomatic representations.

Your excellency states that this seizure or spoliation arises from the separation which our law makes between the surface and subsoil rights, which amounts to a denial of justice.

A denial of justice consists in that a judge refuses to impart justice when it is asked of him, or that any authority does not, either from negligence or a voluntary negative, pronounce its decision. In general language a denial of justice is every negative to accord to a person that which is his due.

The Mexican Government has no knowledge up to the present that either American citizens or anyone else who believe themselves prejudiced by the decree, have resorted to ordinary legal methods or to the appropriate authorities, for relief against the petroleum tax, since the discussions to which your excellency's second note refers were of a private character.

The petroleum tax embraces all the requisites which science assigns to every impost, but if it be considered that its application is unjust or the amount excessive, our laws assure the means of defense and our tribunals are prompt to decide as to the application of said laws. There is an individual guaranty established in article 22 of our political constitution which prohibits the confiscation of property, and this is equally afforded by article 17 of the same fundamental code, which provides that the courts shall be open for the administration of justice at such times and under such conditions as the law may determine. Nevertheless, the American interests which your excellency represents and defends have not resorted to the established legal remedies in order that the proper authority should decide with regard to the injuries and confiscations which they believe themselves to have suffered; and yet your excellency bases the diplomatic representation made in the name of your Government on a "denial of justice," which really has not taken place.

The seizure or spoliation of property by the mere will of the sovereign is exactly one of the things which our constitution prohibits and condemns in article 14. If such cases of spoliation or confiscation should be proven and our tribunals should deny judgment, or having pronounced judgment favorable to the complainant, the Mexican Government should refuse to respect the judgment, then there would be a denial of justice and reason for diplomatic representations. In the case which gave rise to your excellency's note, the courts have not yet intervened, and the expression "denial of justice," which is used as a basis for the representation, must have been taken in a sense distinct from that commonly assigned to it in international law.

The American doctrine in this respect is conclusive. It defines and considers the tax as a necessary attribute of sovereignty and teaches that as long as the impost is uniform in its execution and can be considered as an impost and not as a confiscation or arbitrary imposition, no representation may be made to a foreign government in aid of the foreigners who may be affected, inasmuch as the only safeguard against the abuse of the power of levying taxes is found in the structure of the Government itself, and reclamations or complaints on account of an excessive tax are properly questions within the competency of the local tribunals.

As a matter of fact, the tribunals alone are capable of passing judgment upon the equality of distribution of the tax and the other requisites, and it is not just that the very foreigners who are affected should judge and decide such questions. Otherwise it would be sufficient, in order to escape from a legitimately decreed impost, to allege the pretext that it is confiscatory. Furthermore, it is customary in all countries that diplomatic action should be the last to be exercised and that only after ordinary means have been exhausted.

Your excellency affirms that investments of American citizens have been effected under the guaranty of the good faith of the Mexican Government, which virtually has invited them to make such investments; and that it can not believe that now this Government will disregard its obligations, now that the country finds itself at peace and at a stage of progress.

Your excellency has interpreted faithfully in this part of your note the disposition of the Mexican Government with respect to foreign investments; since its conduct and intentions have been and will be in the future, the conciliation of foreign interests with the progress of the Republic and its legitimate rights, by means of a perfect equality before the law of Mexicans and foreigners.

Assuredly American interests are worthy of every protection and the Mexican Government recognizes that they may contribute to the industrial development of the Republic, particularly in the petroleum industry, and in precisely this spirit has the decree of February 19 been issued (aside from the fundamental question which consists in putting into practice the dominion of the Nation over the subsoil) because, respecting the existing situation, it impedes and prevents speculations in petroleum lands prejudicial to the operators and to the interests of the country.

With reference to the request which, on instructions from your Government, your excellency makes in the second note, to the effect that the petroleum decrees referred to be not made effective on August 15, the matter need not be specially considered, inasmuch as the time for making and the form of manifestations provided for by the said decree had been modified previously to its presentation.

The Mexican Government desires to live in peace and friendship with all nations and in good harmony with your excellency's Government. In order to accomplish this, it will endeavor to respect the dignity and the interests of foreigners and has no idea of passing legislation designed to molest a friendly country or its citizens. These may, with all confidence, continue to rely upon the laws and institutions of the Republic.

The Mexican Government hopes it has dissipated with these explanations, all ground for misunderstanding between two friendly peoples and all apprehension or fear on account of American interests invested in Mexico; and relying upon the profound knowledge which your excellency personally has of existing conditions, is certain your excellency will make plain to the Department of State the true object of the fiscal dispositions which brought forth your note, and the Mexican Government's reason for maintaining the perfect equality of nationals and foreigners before the law.

I renew to your excellency the assurances of my highest consideration.

By reason of illness of the secretary, the subsecretary:

E. GARZA PEREZ.

No. 799.

DECEMBER 13, 1918.

The Hon. HENRY P. FLETCHER,
American Ambassador, Mexico City.

SIR: The department acknowledges the receipt of your No. 1337, of August 21, 1918, with which you inclosed copy of a translation of note No. 2772, of August 17, 1918, from the foreign office, replying to your embassy's note of April 12, 1918, protesting against the so-called petroleum decree of February 19, 1918.

You state that amparo proceedings have been instituted in the courts of Mexico against the recent petroleum decrees; that you have been informed by a representative of the American oil companies that the proceedings are progressing satisfactorily, and that there is hope of obtaining what would amount to a preliminary injunction in our procedure, and that the issuance of the decree of August 12, 1918, has relieved the situation and removed the danger of arbitrary action against the companies by the Mexican Government.

You further stated that a new Congress would convene on the 1st of September, and that it would not be surprising if an entirely new petroleum law were proposed by the Government almost immediately: that should the decision of the courts uphold the contention of the Mexican and foreign companies and citizens as against the Government, the troublesome question of enforcing retroactively article 27 of the constitution would be removed and the way would be open for the Mexican Government to proceed along more moderate and more just lines with the so-called nationalization of petroleum producing lands.

You added that at any rate an acute crisis in the petroleum matter had been avoided and that the indications were that this difficulty, which seriously threatened the good relations between Mexico and the United States, would be adjusted by peaceful and legal methods.

The department is pleased to learn of the improvement in the situation, which seems to render unnecessary at the present time further representations in the way of protest to the Mexican Government.

However, the department deems it advisable at this time to take notice of certain statements contained in the note of the foreign office copied with your dispatch, both because silence on the part of this Government with respect to some of these statements might lead the Mexican Government to suppose, contrary to the fact, that this Government was disposed to acquiesce therein, and also since it seems entirely possible that the Mexican Government is still bent upon putting into effect by Executive decree, or by legislation, the confiscatory features with respect to oil-bearing lands, of article 27 of the constitution and the petroleum decree of February 19, 1918.

Therefore, you will please take suitable occasion to reply to the Mexican note of August 17, 1918, substantially as follows:

The Government of the United States has noted with pleasure that, as anticipated by it, the Mexican Government has the intention to conciliate foreign interests and that it regards American interests as worthy of every protection, recognizing that they contribute to the industrial development of the Republic of Mexico, particularly in the petroleum industry. The Government of the United States heartily reciprocates the expressed desire of the Mexican Government that the two nations live in peace, friendship, and good relation, and welcomes the statements that the Mexican Government will respect the dignity and the interest of foreigners and has no idea of enacting legislation designed to molest a friendly country or its citizens.

With these views animating the Mexican Government and their hearty reciprocation by the Government of the United States, it would seem that there should be no difficulty in adjusting in an amicable fashion any matters of difference between the two Governments.

The Government of the United States is not unappreciative of the disposition of the Mexican Government to translate on its part these friendly sentiments into action by the issuance of the decree of August 12, 1918, which tends to remove the danger, theretofore feared by the United States, of arbitrary proceedings against foreign oil interest, and the Government of the United States is encouraged by this action to believe that the entire petroleum question, as it affects American interests, will at a not distant date reach an adjustment equitable to all parties concerned.

While the present situation with respect to the matters which have been in difference between the Mexican Government and the petroleum interests, as the Government of the United States understands the matter, is in an orderly process of developing itself, with a strong possibility that the outcome will be a satisfactory adjustment between the interested parties, the Government of the United States considers that it would be appropriate for it to state briefly at this time, with the object of clarifying the situation and of avoiding all possibility of misunderstanding, its views with regard to certain allusions and statements contained in the note of the Mexican foreign office, No. 2772, of August 17, 1918.

The Government of the United States regrets to observe the critical attitude which the Mexican Government has assumed toward the efforts made by this Government through diplomacy to protect its citizens in Mexico from what appeared to it to be imminent spoliation of their vested rights in Mexico, and can not but believe that this attitude is based on a partial understanding of the causes and grounds leading this Government to express its views in its note to the Mexican Government of April 2, 1918. In justice to itself, the United States feels that it is entitled to point out that its diplomatic interposition in this case was consequent upon and flowed directly from the policies and actions of the Mexican Government itself, notwithstanding the unremitting efforts of the United States to explain informally the dire effects of these measures upon American interests in the petroleum fields. Moreover, the representations which the Government of the United States had made with respect to the Mexican petroleum decree of February 19, 1918, were not in any way inspired, as the Mexican Government appears to suppose, by the desire to obtain undue protection to American citizens and American interests, but solely to obtain for them that protection to which they seem to be entitled under the generally accepted rules and principles of international law.

The purpose of the Government of the United States was to call the attention of the Government of Mexico, with such earnestness as the critical situation of American interests seemed to demand, to what seemed to the Government of the United States an unwarranted course of action, against which ordinary legal proceedings might fail to provide a sufficient and timely remedy, with the confident belief that upon consideration of the views of this Government, the Mexican Government would appreciate the condition in which such American citizens would be placed by the action apparently contemplated against them and that the Mexican Government would, therefore, take such prompt steps as would relieve the condition and render unnecessary any further controversy over the matter. The Mexican Government's mistaken views of the attitude of the Government of the United States in these respects is believed to have been brought about by the conception which the Mexican Government asserts it has of the duties and obligations of a State to foreigners in its country. The Mexican Government appears to be of the opinion that so long as a State does not discriminate against foreigners and in favor of its own citizens, it is entitled to mete out to foreigners such treatment as it may desire; that foreigners must submit to their treatment, and that their Governments have no right of interposition to protect them against it, should it be unduly onerous and unjust, until local remedies have been exhausted in vain.

Applying this view to the petroleum situation the Mexican Government seems to contend that the decree regulating ownership of mineral deposits is a matter of internal and territorial sovereignty applicable to Mexican citizens and foreigners alike and therefore that there is afforded no rightful basis for interposition by the Governments of interested foreigners, even though the result of the decree should be, as was apparently its purpose, to deprive such foreigners of property rights which they had legitimately acquired under the laws of Mexico.

The Government of the United States believes that this contention of the Mexican Government and the basis upon which it seems to rest find no sound foundation in the principles of the law and practice of nations which in the past have been generally accepted by the Governments of the world, and that it could not, therefore, be fairly called upon to recognize or acquiesce in them in opposition to the usage of nations. The Government of the United States is firmly of the opinion that the great weight of international law and practice supports the view that every nation has certain minimum duties to perform with regard to the treatment of foreigners, irrespective of its duties to its own citizens, and that in default of such performance, it is the right of the foreign Government concerned to enter protest. Not the least of such duties, as the Government of the United States believes, is to refrain from measures resulting in confiscation of the vested property rights of foreigners, acquired in good faith and in accordance with the laws of the country in which the property is situated. While the Mexican Government may see fit to confiscate vested property rights of its own citizens, such action is in equity no justification for the confiscation of such rights of American citizens and does not estop the Government of the United States from protesting on behalf of its citizens against confiscation of their property.

To resist unjust encroachment upon their rights by the governmental agencies of their country, Mexican citizens are armed with a weapon which they may presumably use in addition to judicial remedies. I refer to the orderly processes by which the free people of a democracy may assert their will in respect of governmental policies. But Americans in Mexico have no such recourse. Aside from judicial remedies, they are limited to an appeal for the protection of their Governments. If they are to be denied that right of appeal they are clearly placed in a position of disadvantage as compared with citizens in Mexico who have both political and legal remedies at their command to right their wrongs. If the right of protection of this Government is to be denied, then one of the means of obtaining that parity of treatment to which the Mexican Government admits Americans are entitled is plainly destroyed.

The United States is ready to admit that legal remedies should as a rule be tried by its citizens to obtain reparation for or relief from wrongful actions against their property, and it is understood that the American interests affected by the petroleum decree are resorting to such remedies, but the United States can not admit that diplomatic representations is always premature if made on behalf of its citizens before they have exhausted their legal remedies in the courts of Mexico.

If it were necessary to substantiate this proposition, many instances of diplomatic action, before or during legal proceedings, might be cited from the practice of nations, in case of irreparable damage or highly arbitrary action, particularly where it is in the power of the Government to prevent or suspend either. The promulgation of the before-mentioned provision of article 27 of the Mexican Constitution, followed by the issuance of the so-called petroleum decrees indicated a settled purpose of the Mexican Government to put into execution this provision of the Constitution, without opportunity for full and fair consideration, and without regard to the legitimately acquired rights of American citizens. Such action might have been irreparable in its results, and certainly would have been arbitrary, and within the power of the Mexican Government to prevent or modify as subsequent events have shown. In the circumstances, friendly representations, without prejudice to the prosecution of legal remedies and in the interest of avoiding misunderstanding, can hardly be said to be out of place. On the contrary, the Government of the United States believes that happy results are often the outcome of diplomatic interposition, which therefore serves the best of ends, in the way of averting possible difficulties of a serious nature. Moreover, the argument of the Mexican Government as to the necessity of a resort to its courts by foreigners affected by the decree in question, prior to diplomatic interposition, would have more weight did the decree relate alone to matters of taxation, which is far from being the case, although a casual reading of the note under acknowledgment might lead to that conclusion.

As a matter of fact, the immensely important feature of the decree is the attempt made therein to carry out the provisions of article 27 of the constitution for the confiscation of the petroleum-bearing subsoil, and this was thoroughly brought out by the embassy's note of April 2, 1918, in which it was said, with reference to the taxation feature of the decree, that the Government of the United States reserved opinion on the question as to whether such taxation was confiscatory in effect. Furthermore, in mitigation of what this Government regards as the plainly confiscatory feature of the decree, the note under acknowledgement makes reference to the guaranty established by article 22 of the constitution. This Government is at a loss to understand this reference to article 22 as it would not seem to modify the effect of the decree in question, since the confiscation forbidden by that article of the constitution appears to relate to punishment for criminal offenses. This can not, therefore, be regarded as modifying the provision of the Mexican Constitution clearly applicable to this case, namely the following clause of article 27:

"Private property shall not be expropriated except for reasons of public utility and by means of indemnification."

Indeed, this provision seems to contemplate the establishment of judicial procedure for the expropriation of private property.

Therefore, the Government of the United States finds itself quite unable to accept the point of view of the Mexican Government, in respect to parity of treatment of Americans and Mexicans, and to diplomatic interposition in behalf of the former.

This communication should not be concluded without reference to the statement in the note under acknowledgement as to the inconsistency which the Mexican Government indicates that it finds between the action of the Government of the United States in respect to the petroleum controversy, and the utterances and ideals of the President of the United States. Regarding this it may be said that it is believed that the Mexican Government will confess itself unable to find any statement of President Wilson, which by expression or implication, pronounces against the exercise of the right of diplomatic interposition, upon suitable occasion therefore. The President has drawn a sharp contrast between the policy of armed intervention and that of diplomatic interposition. He has, on numerous occasions, stated in effect that he would not countenance armed intervention in the affairs of another State for the purpose of gratifying selfish interests, and the composite statement as presented by the Mexican minister of foreign affairs clearly comprehends such a situation. But the President has never stated that he would forego the right of diplomatic interposition in behalf of American citizens, a distinctly friendly method of supporting legitimate national interests in order to avoid injustice. On the contrary, the President had declared for diplomatic interposition no where better than in the following quotation from his address of January 29, 1916:

"America has not only to assert her right to her own life within her own borders; she has also to assert her right to equal and just treatment of her citizens wherever they go."

The Government of the United States asks no more than "equal and just treatment" for its citizens, and therefore cherishes the sincere hope that the Mexican tribunals whose prerogative it may be to pass upon the legal questions involved in the so-called petroleum decree will in the proceedings which it is understood have been initiated and which may hereafter be commenced protect the legitimately acquired rights of American citizens. Thus the controversy may happily be ended. However, should this hope unfortunately be disappointed, the Government of the United States must reserve to itself the consideration of the question of interesting itself further on behalf of American citizens concerned in this important and serious matter.

I am, sir,

Your most obedient servant,

FRANK L. POLK.

[Paraphrase—Telegram.]

MARCH 18, 1919.

AMERICAN EMBASSY, Mexico:

1921. Your dispatch 1842, February 25.

The department instructs the ambassador to protest against attempt apparently contemplated by circular February 18 to collect royalties from American petroleum interests and refers generally to objections previously urged by the American Government against Mexican petroleum decrees.

POLK, Acting.DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
*Washington, April 16, 1919.*AMERICAN EMBASSY, Mexico City:

Inform foreign office substantially as follows:

The attention of the Government of the United States has been called to the fact that certain oil properties in Mexico leased by American companies under Mexican law have recently been denounced by third persons; that American lessees have protested to the department of industry, commerce, and labor against such denouncements and petitioned that no titles or concessions covering the properties in question should issue in consequence thereof; and that in at least one case said department has required the leasing company to submit evidence of payment of rental and royalties to the Mexican Government and to couch its protest in the terms stipulated by the decree of August 8, 1919.

It seems quite clear that in these requirements an attempt is being made by the Mexican Government to coerce American companies into the performance of acts, the results of which would be to admit in advance of the final settlement of the questions at issue the correctness of the contention of the Mexican Government in the matter of ownership of oil deposits, against which the Government of the United States has made solemn protest as threatening confiscation of rights legally acquired by American citizens.

Therefore, the Government of the United States is constrained to renew the protest previously made against this measure of threatened confiscation and to utter a present protest against the attempted coercion of American interests into an admission of the lawfulness of the means which the Mexican Government has adopted in an attempt to put its confiscatory plan into effect.

You will add that it would be regarded by the Government of the United States as very unfortunate were the Mexican Government, pending a final solution of its difficulties with the petroleum interests, to complicate the situation by the issuance to third persons of titles to or rights in lands legally held by American citizens.

POLK, Acting.

[Paraphrase.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
*Washington, April 16, 1919.*AMERICAN EMBASSY, Mexico City:

1969. The ambassador is instructed to renew the protest of the Government of the United States previously made against the measure of threatened confiscation and to further protest against the attempted coercion of American interests into an admission of the lawfulness of the means which the Mexican Government has adopted in an attempt to put into effect its confiscatory plan.

The ambassador is further instructed to add that a complication of the situation by the issuance to third persons of titles to or rights in lands legally held by American citizens, would be regarded by the American Government as very unfortunate.

Specific reference is made to the fact that certain oil properties in Mexico leased by American companies under Mexican law have recently been denounced by third persons; that protest has been made by the American lessees to the department of industry, commerce, and labor against such denouncements and petitioned that no titles or concessions covering the properties in question should issue in consequence thereof; and that in one case the leasing company has been required by said department to submit to the Mexican Government evidence of payment of rental and royalties and to couch its protest in the terms stipulated by the decree of August 8, 1918.

The department is of the opinion that in these requirements an attempt is being made to coerce American companies by the Mexican Government into the performance of acts, the results of which would be to admit in advance of the final settlement of the questions at issue the correctness of the contention of the Mexican Government in the matter of ownership of oil deposits, against which the American Government has made solemn protest as threatening confiscation of rights legally acquired by American citizens.

POLK, Acting.

MEXICO CITY, June 2, 1919.

SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington, D. C.:

3006. Important. June 2, 3 p. m.

Under date of May 29 and received to-day. Foreign office has replied as follows to embassy notes of March 20 and April 21 based on department's telegrams 1921, March 18, 6 p. m., and 1969, April 16, 5 p. m., protesting against the department of hacienda circular issued February 19 last:

"The Government of Mexico sincerely deplores the fact that the American companies have ill-advisedly failed to comply with the laws which the former issued on the exploitation of petroleum, since they could have done so under protest and with the reservations that they might have considered compatible with their interests, and could have appeared before the proper authorities, requesting a (?) study of the question so that it might be decided in justice and according to law.

"Consequently, if the situation of the petroleum companies is complicated by the denouncements made by third persons, the companies mentioned are doubtless the only ones blamable, since it must be evident to your clear judgment that the protests of a foreign nation can not suspend the effects of the laws issued by the Government of another nation."

SUMMERLIN.

MEXICO CITY, June 3, 1919.

No. 2063.

The SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington.

SIR: With reference to the department's telegrams No. 1921 of March 18, 6 p. m., and No. 1969 of April 16, 5 p. m., instructing the embassy to protest against the circular issued by the department of hacienda on February 19, 1919, in regard to the proposed collection of royalties from petroleum companies and against the possibility that denounced concessions might be granted to third persons, I have the honor to forward herewith copy and translation of a note received from the foreign office dated May 29, 1919, the substance of which was sent the department in the embassy's telegram No. 3006, June 2, 3 p. m.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

GEORGE T. SUMMERLIN,
Chargé d'Affaires.

[Inclosure No. 1, dispatch No. 2063.]

ERNESTO GARZA PEREZ ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS, TO GEORGE T. SUMMERLIN, CHARGE D'AFFAIRES, MEXICO.

[Translation.]

1691.

MEXICO, May 29, 1919.

MR. CHARGE D'AFFAIRES: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your notes dated March 20 and April 21 of the current year which you were good enough to send this department; in accordance with instructions from your Government, protesting against the circular issued by the department of hacienda on the 19th of February, last, in connection with the collection of royalties from the petroleum companies and against the possibility that concessions might be granted to third persons who have denounced petroleum properties rented by American companies.

The Government of Mexico sincerely deplores the fact that the American companies have ill advisedly failed to comply with the laws which the former issued on the exploitation of petroleum, since they could have done so under protest and with the reservations that they might have considered compatible with their interests, and could have appeared before the proper authorities, requesting a detailed study of the question so that it might be decided in justice and according to law.

Consequently, if the situation of the petroleum companies is complicated by the denouncements made by third persons, the companies mentioned are doubtless the only ones to blame, since it must be evident to your clear judgment that the protests of a foreign nation can not suspend the effects of the laws issued by the Government of another nation.

I renew to you the assurances of my highest consideration.

E. GARZA PEREZ.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

*Washington, June 16, 1919.*AMERICAN EMBASSY, Mexico City:

Your 3006, June 2, 3 p. m.

Reply to note of foreign office substantially as follows:

"As the Government of the United States is informed and believes the only Mexican legislation on the subject of petroleum deposits with which American companies have failed to comply is the recent legislation covered by decree of February 19, 1918, and subsequent decrees on the same subject, compliance with which would constitute an admission of the correctness of the contention of the Mexican Government in the matter of ownership of oil deposits, against which the Government of the United States has made solemn protest which it now renews, as threatening confiscation of rights legally acquired by American citizens.

"When it asserted that the American companies in question could have complied with such legislation under protest and with the reservations that they might have considered compatible with their interests, the foreign office apparently failed to take into account the language used by the Government of Mexico in its reply, understood by the Government of the United States to bear date of August 25, 1918, to the contention of the petroleum companies and interested individuals in the case of the amparos demanded against the recent decrees of the Mexican Government.

"Therein, as a further ground for the contention of the Mexican Government that amparo was not in order, that Government referred to the quote constitutional doctrines unquote to the effect that when an individual has agreed to be governed as regards his property by a certain statute, he may not later raise the objection that said statute violates the constitutional precepts. In this connection the reply of the executive branch of the Mexican Government sets forth that some manifestations had been presented quote under protest unquote, but that quote such protest has no legal effect except in the cases precisely specified in the laws."

In view of the foregoing the Government of the United States can not admit that American companies are in any wise blamable for the complication of their situation by reason of denouncements made by third persons, and must reiterate its previous statement that it would regard it as very unfortunate were the Mexican Government, pending a final solution of its difficulties with the petroleum interests, to issue to their persons titles to, or rights in, lands legally held by American citizens.

PHILLIPS, Acting.

CABLE MESSAGE FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE TO THE AMERICAN EMBASSY AT MEXICO CITY.

No. 2052.

JUNE 18, 1919.

[Paraphrase.]

Answering your No. 3025, June 16, 6 p. m.

You will please make prompt protest, on behalf of American citizens whose interests are involved, against orders of President Carranza to cease drilling for oil except in cases where permits have been granted. Protest should be based on the fact that said permits could have been procured only through complying with recent legislation in consonance with presidential decree of February 19, 1918, and later decrees regarding same subject, and that acquiescence in same would have been equivalent to an admission that the Mexican Government had in issuing them acted within its rights in regard to ownership of oil deposits, against which assumption the Government of the United States has entered a vigorous protest as threatening to confiscate rights which its citizens have legally acquired.

You will simultaneously make reservation of rights for damages in behalf of American citizens whose interests are jeopardized by said decrees.

POLK, Acting.

No. 2241.

MEXICO, August 6, 1919.

The SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington.

SIR: I have the honor to confirm this embassy's telegram, No. 3097, of August 5, 12 noon, and to inclose, herewith, copy and translation of the official circular No. 9 of the petroleum division of the department of industry, commerce, and labor, dated August 1, 1919, which was forwarded to this embassy by the department of foreign relations, August 5, 1919.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

GEORGE T. SUMMERLIN,
Chargé d'Affaires.

[Inclosure No. 1, dispatch No. 2241.]

TRANSLATION OF OFFICIAL CIRCULAR NO. 9, ISSUED BY THE PETROLEUM DIVISION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRY, COMMERCE, AND LABOR, AUGUST 1, 1919, FORWARDED TO EMBASSY BY DEPARTMENT OF FOREIGN RELATIONS.

A seal which reads: "Department of industry, commerce, and labor. Petroleum Division. Circular No. 9."

Taking into consideration that various companies and individuals interested in the petroleum industry have not understood the liberal spirit which animated the Federal executive when he issued the decrees regarding taxes on oil lands and on oil contracts, nor have they understood the advantage which was intended for them by the presentation of the manifestations required by the decree of July 31, 1918, order whose object was the protection of rights acquired prior to May 1, 1917, and consequently did not present said manifestations:

That as a consequence of the failure to present the manifestations required the interested parties were deprived, by article 4 of the decree of August 12, 1918, of the right to execute new work in connection with the exploration and exploitation of oil on their owned or leased properties;

That for the same reason they can not fulfill their commercial promises previously contracted according to persistent declarations which they have made to the department of industry, commerce, and labor; and

That the inclination of the Federal Government always has been to encourage the development of the national petroleum industry:

The President of the Republic has seen fit to order that:

The owners of lands or the concessionaries of the right of exploitation who did not present the manifestations required by the decree of July 31, 1918, on taxes on oil lands and oil contracts, shall be able in the future to undertake oil exploration and exploitation work on the condition that on requesting the corresponding permission from the Federal Executive they obligate themselves to respect the precepts of the organic petroleum law which the Congress of the Union may enact.

The permits granted by this department in fulfillment of the above ruling shall have a provisional character and shall be revalidated in accordance with the organic law on petroleum when it may be passed.

In order to obtain the referred-to permits for exploration and exploitation, the petitioners shall present to this department of industry, commerce, and labor the documents which prove the possession of the lands where the referred-to permits are to be used.

Which is made known to the interested parties for proper action. Constitution and reforms. Mexico, August 1, 1919. The subsecretary in charge of the office.

LEÓN SALINAS.

This is a true copy of the original.

A. G. MORENA.

PARAPHRASE OF TELEGRAM, DATED OCTOBER 1, 1919, FROM THE ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE AMERICAN EMBASSY AT MEXICO CITY.

You will inform the foreign office substantially as follows:

The United States Government has learned that various corporations owned entirely or in large part by citizens of the United States hold oil leases executed before May 1, 1917, on privately owned lands in the State of Vera Cruz, by which the companies have the right to explore and exploit the subsoil deposits; that in some instances these lease contracts definitely required under penalty of forfeiture the drilling of wells within fixed and limited periods; that the companies in order to meet their contractual obligations and to enjoy their property rights have applied in the appropriate manner to the Mexican department of industry, commerce, and labor for permits to drill wells; that such permits have been denied in some instances and granted conditionally in other instances; that denials have been based on sole ground that companies have not manifested their properties as required by Mexican decree of July 31, 1918, and have not conformed to decrees of August 8 and 12, 1918, and that permits granted have been conditioned upon obligation of companies to conform to provisions of a petroleum law to be enacted in the future; that the companies have been notified that under the provisions of the Mexican circular of January 17, 1915, as reaffirmed March 20, 1919, the Government will take over all wells drilled without permits, and that on certain properties so held under leases the Mexican authorities have accepted denunciations by third persons in spite of companies' protests, which have been overruled because companies have not complied with provisions of decrees of August 8 and 12, 1918.

This would seem to be but another aspect of the situation affecting petroleum deposits in Mexico, which has been discussed in previous representations from the Government of the United States, and this opportunity is taken to reaffirm the position of this Government with regard to the matter as set forth in such representations.

In this relation, and with specific reference to the action of the Mexican Government as set forth in the foregoing, it may be observed that compliance with or acquiescence in the above-mentioned decrees of 1918 by the companies affected would seem clearly to imply a surrender on their part of rights and titles lawfully acquired and legitimately held under Mexican law. Moreover, the companies in question can not reasonably be expected to agree in advance to conform to the provisions of a law to be enacted in the future, concerning the terms of which they have no assurance that their rights will be respected.

In this view of the matter the Government of the United States, owing as it does to its citizens the duty of protecting them in foreign lands, both in their persons and their property rights, must strongly protest against the action of the Mexican Government as outlined above and characterize it as threatening confiscation and a denial of justice.

The Mexican Government is therefore strongly urged not to permit the circulars of January 7, 1915, and March 20, 1919, to be enforced in the cases to which reference has been made and to see to it that the interested companies suffer no loss or inconvenience on account of the denunciations upon their properties which appear to have been accepted as aforesaid, but to restore the companies to all the rights to which they are entitled under the leases held by them and the applicable laws of Mexico at the time when such lease contracts were made.

In communicating the foregoing the Government of the United States takes occasion to express the confident hope that pending the general settlement of the petroleum question by specific legislation of the Mexican Congress the administrative authorities of Mexico will respect the vested rights of American citizens and evince that respect by withdrawing its insistence that interested American citizens comply with the provisions of the decrees mentioned.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 14, 1919.

The Hon. ALBERT B. FALL,
Chairman Senate Subcommittee Investigating Mexican Affairs, Committee on Foreign Relations, United States Senate.

SIR: With further reference to my letter of October 25, I have the honor to transmit herewith additional copies of protests made by the Government of the United States to the Government of Mexico against certain decrees and proposed legislation held to be inimical to the interests of American citizens.

Documents 38 to 42, inclusive, relate to the proposed waiver of the rights of foreigners to appeal to their governments for protection and redress.

Documents 44 to 58, inclusive, relate to the so-called Agrarian law recently enacted by the Legislature of the State of Sonora.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

ROBERT LANSING.

[Telegram, plain.]

MEXICO CITY, MEXICO, August 10, 1916.

SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington, D. C.:

Order to notaries provides that in formation new corporations and particularly those for exploration, exploitation of oil lands, charter shall contain clause providing that foreign stockholders renounce their national rights as to company affairs, this meaning they waive all right to protection interest through their national representatives. Informed that this has been tried before, but failed and is not considered to have legal effect. Nevertheless it is undoubtedly dangerous and presumably contrary to treaty rights. Have filed general protest.

RODGERS.

[Paraphrase. Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., August 16, 1916.

RODGERS.

Special representative American Government, Mexico City:

295. The department refers to your telegram No. 278, and instructs you to advise the proper authorities that decree providing that new corporations are obliged to state in their articles of incorporation the clause of renunciation by foreign stockholders of their national rights as to company affairs will not be regarded by the American Government as annulling the relations existing between itself and its citizens who may own stock in such corporations or as extinguishing its obligations to protect them in case of denial of justice.

LANSING.

652.

EMBASSY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Mexico, January 9, 1917.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have the honor to refer to my telegram of January 8 relating to the publication of a further decree relating to the renouncing of citizenship rights by foreigners acquiring certain real properties in the Republic of Mexico, and transmit herewith a copy of said decree, together with a translation of same in duplicate. I also transmit a translated copy of the previous decree upon this same subject, as requested by the department.

I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

WALTER C. THURSTON,
In Charge of American Interests.

[Translation.]

CIRCULAR OF DECREE REQUIRING FOREIGNERS TO RENOUNCE THEIR NATIONAL PROTECTION WHEN ACQUIRING RIGHTS TO REAL PROPERTY IN THE REPUBLIC OF MEXICO.

On the 15th of August of this year, this office, by direction of the first chief of the constitutionalist army, in charge of the executive power of the nation, issued a circular setting forth the obligatory disposition relating to the requisitions which must be met by foreigners who attempt to acquire, within national territory, uncultivated or national land, waters of Federal jurisdiction, mining claims, or permission for the exploration or exploitation of natural riches, such as forest products, petroleum, fisheries, etc., warning them that they must previously present, through written document and before the department for foreign affairs, a formal, express, and final declaration that, in their capacity of proprietors or concessionaries, and for all effects and purposes relating to the properties they desire to obtain, they consider themselves as Mexicans, renouncing their rights as foreigners, and that of applying for protection or presenting complaints to their respective Governments.

In the third clause of that circular it was declared that all denouncements then filed before this office, or its administrative agencies upon any of the classes of properties above referred to should be suspended until the interested person should present the certificate mentioned, with the understanding that these denouncements should be placed in the files and considered forfeited unless the certificate were presented before the expiration of four months.

The citizen, first chief of the constitutionalist army, taking into consideration the fact that many foreigners, due to causes beyond their control have not been able to present said certificate, and he being desirous of preventing harm to those who have acquired in good faith legitimate rights, has seen fit to dispose that the period referred to in said third clause shall be extended four months longer, and will expire April 15, 1917.

December 15, 1916.

EDUARDO HAY,
Subsecretary (Fomento).

[Translation.]

DECREE REQUIRING FOREIGNERS TO RENOUNCE THEIR NATIONAL PROTECTION WHEN ACQUIRING RIGHTS TO CERTAIN REAL PROPERTY IN THE REPUBLIC OF MEXICO.

A seal reading: "Ministry of state and office of fomento, colonization, and industry, Mexico, office of the private secretary, No. 81."

The first chief of the constitutionalist army in charge of the executive power, considering that as a consequence of our fundamental laws whereby foreigners must enjoy in Mexico the same privileges as the Mexicans, it is natural and legitimate that they should have the same obligations, with a view that the liberality of our democratic institutions should not be understood nor carried to the extreme that foreigners, as owners of property in Mexico, be in better juridical conditions than Mexicans, as it has unfortunately happened and which would occur if they, besides the enjoyment of the rights, actions, and resources offered by the Mexican laws in regard to property and its juridical relations, could formulate claims before their respective Governments; the same first magistrate of the Republic, in view of the extraordinary faculties in him vested, has seen fit to direct the establishment of the following dispositions, obligatory in all the Republic:

First. Foreigners pretending to acquire real estate or national lands, mining claims, waters of Federal jurisdiction, or permit for the exploration or exploitation of the natural riches, as forestal products, oil, fisheries, etc., in the Republic of Mexico, shall present beforehand in writing, before the ministry for foreign affairs, a formal express declaration that in their capacity as proprietors or concessionaries and for all the effects and relations of the property which they desire to acquire, they consider themselves Mexicans, waiving their rights as foreigners and privileges of appeal for protection or claim to their respective Governments.

Foreign corporations can not acquire rights on any of the properties specified in this circular, unless they nationalize and submit to the Mexican laws making the aforementioned declaration.

Second. It is an indispensable requirement for the ministry of fomento, colonization, and industry in order to admit any denouncement or application made by a foreigner on any of the matters referred to in the previous article, even for a simple permit for exploration, that he should present to it with the first communication a certificate issued by the ministry for foreign affairs, bearing the declaration mentioned in the previous disposition.

Without this requirement the application must be refused emphatically, and all proceedings made before the presentation of this certificate will be null and void.

There shall appear in all property titles, as well as in the permits on the properties aforementioned, which should be granted by the ministry of fomento to foreigners, as well as in the contracts or deeds authorized by public notaries, the full text of the certificate prescribed in the first disposition, besides the reproduction of the text thereof as a special clause. Failure to insert the certificate or that clause will cause the annulment of the title, permit, contract, or respective deed.

Third. In all matters already moved by foreigners which may be before the ministry of fomento or its administrative agencies with relation to any of the properties referred to in this disposition, the proceedings will be suspended and shall not be renewed until the presentation by the interested parties of the certificate in question. If within the period of four months beginning from the date of these dispositions the certificate is not presented by the interested parties they shall be regarded as desisting from their purpose and their applications will be filed, the interested parties not having a right of appeal against this resolution.

The present dispositions are obligatory in all the Republic of Mexico and shall be published in El Diario Oficial, for its knowledge and due compliance, and shall be in force on the day of its issuance.

Constitution and reforms, Mexico, August 15, 1916.

The subsecretary in charge of the office of the ministry of fomento, colonization, and industry.

PASTOR ROUAIX.

[Telegram, plain.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., January 19, 1917.

WALTER THURSTON, Esq.,
Representing American Interests, Mexico City.

Advise appropriate authorities that Government of the United States can not regard provisions of decrees of August 15 and December 15, 1916, as annulling the relations existing between it and its citizens who may acquire properties in Mexico or as affecting its rights and obligations to protect them against denials of justice with respect to such properties.

LANSING.

[Paraphrase. Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., January 31, 1919.

AMERICAN EMBASSY, Mexico City:

1842. The department refers to the representations made through Thurston to the Mexican Government pursuant to the department's telegram of January 19, 1917.

You are instructed to advise the foreign office that the American Government maintains the position relative to the provisions in the Mexican constitution and laws of Mexico in which foreigners are required to waive their rights as nationals with respect to property purchased by them in Mexico, that such provisions annul the relations existing between this Government and its citizens who may acquire property in Mexico, and it further maintains the position that such provisions above referred to affect its rights and obligations to protect them against the denials of justice with respect to such properties.

POLK, Acting.

No. 263.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, Mexico, December 5, 1918.

Subject: Proposed agrarian and labor laws for the State of Sonora.

The SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I inclose herewith a rough translation of the law as it has been presented to the State congress. As will be seen by the department, the translation inclosed is evidently intended to divide up the large tracts of uncultivated land of the State of Sonora.

There is also being considered at the present time a labor law which is possibly more drastic than the agrarian law submitted herewith. However, representatives of the three large American mining companies have just returned from Hermosillo, where they went to discuss the proposed labor law, and they report that the law is not drastic, as the casual reading of the first draft will indicate, and they seem rather satisfied with the promises made to them on this subject. They are also of the opinion that the law will not pass in this session of the legislature.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

E. M. LAWTON, American Consul.

AGRARIAN LAW OF THE STATE OF SONORA, MEXICO.

PRELIMINARY TITLE.—GENERAL BASIS.

ARTICLE 1. The division of the agrarian property has been declared a public utility.

ART. 2. The water for the supply of the towns and for the irrigation of the lands has been declared a public utility, and therefore, the Government, by previous study, will propose to the central Government the nullification of concessions of water authorized previously to the present law, if said concessions are in detriment of the towns, or if the waters can give better service to a greater number of agriculturists.

ART. 3. The formation of small property, having for a basis the portion that constitutes the primordial part of the patrimony of the family, is the essential object of the present law.

ART. 4. The State will begin to bestow a portion of land to each head of the family, with preference to farmers, this adjudication being ad perpetuum and inalienable.

ART. 5. Persons who have served in the revolutionary army during the constitutional revolution will have a preference in the portions mentioned in the above articles; also those who have served in the Yaqui campaign and in the public schools with success.

ART. 6. Lots to be apportioned will be taken from national lands, from the property of the State and also from the large estates by means of expropriation proceedings by public utility and in the form expressed in this law.

ART. 7. Every person that resides or comes to reside in the State of Sonora, under 18 years of age, has a right to possess, if he wishes to cultivate it personally, a lot of land, which by means of his own labor he can obtain sufficient in order to sustain his family, maintaining thereby his economical independence in working for his well-being and that of the nation.

Foreigners adjudicated will be subject to national laws, so far as the present case is concerned, and will, therefore, not be able to allege any right as aliens.

ART. 8. The developments of agriculture and also of stock industry is declared a public utility, as these constitute the most solid foundation of national prosperity.

LAND OFFICES.

ART. 9. In compliance with the Federal law of January 6, 1915, and to the end that the precepts of the present law may be realized, there will be established in the State:

(I) The local land commission, that will reside in the capital of the State and that will be formed of five members named by the governor, who will constitute a body formed by a president, a secretary, and three voters, selected by the laws from the members of the commission.

(II) The executive committee will be composed of three persons; president, secretary, and a voter, selected by the law from the members of the said committee and said bodies will be commissioned by the governor of the State. Said bodies will be commissioned by the executive of the State with audience before the corresponding town councils, which will serve in each municipality.

ART. 10. The local land commission will organize its own form of government and that of the executive committee and these will serve with the authority given in said laws of January 6, 1915, and of the present law.

ART. 11. The members of the local land commission and the employees commissioned by the governor of the State at the suggestion of the said commission and the executive committee will receive the salaries fixed by the budget of the State.

ART. 12. The executive committee will work without any intermediary whatever with the local land commission.

ART. 13. As all the employees of the local land commission must be Mexicans by birth, the following can not form part of the said body:

- (I) Judicial and political authorities.
- (II) Military officers in active service.
- (III) Large land owners.
- (IV) Persons owning more than 25 hectares of farm lands and more than 1,000 hectares of ranch land.

(V) Individuals who served the Diaz administration or the enemies of the constitutional government, or even though they have not served their Governments maybe known of antirevolutionary sympathy.

TITLE SECOND.—CLASSIFICATION, DIVISION, AND ADJUDICATION OF LANDS.

CHAPTER I.—CLASSIFICATION.

ART. 14. For the effect of this law, the lands in the State will be classified in the following manner:

- (I) Agriculture lands—
 - (a) Irrigated.
 - (b) Not irrigated.
- (II) Ranch lands.

CHAPTER II.—DIVISION OF LARGE ESTATES.

ART. 15. The greatest extension of land that will be possible for one person or corporation to own in Sonora is as follows:

- (I) Irrigated farm lands—
 - (a) Within communal lands, 50 hectares.
 - (b) Outside of communal lands, 100 hectares, excepting from the last maximum limit of lands included in the previous case by the following article:

(II) Nonirrigated farm lands—

(a) Within communal lands, 500 hectares.

(b) Outside of communal lands, 300 hectares.

(III) Ranch lands, 10,000 hectares.

ART. 16. When the owner of the irrigated land, whose extension exceeds 100 hectares, but within the limits fixed for lands of this class, is able to, by his intelligent efforts and steadiness, make it permanently irrigated lands, and if it is comprised in the classification which is noted in the exception of fraction 1 of article 14 and for that reason, within the limits of the preceding article, the proprietor will be able to have the transformation realized in his property and will continue possessing it complete as it is, for his intelligence and work.

ART. 17. Within communal lands it will not be possible to hold rustic property whose extension exceeds 50 hectares.

ART. 18. The owners whose farm property exceeds the limit fixed in article 15 will proceed to their immediate division in the following form:

(I) Irrigated farm lands will be divided in lots from 5 to 50 hectares when they are within the communal lands and from 5 to 100 hectares when outside of communal lands, five hectares being the smallest parcel adjudicated.

(II) Nonirrigated farm lands will be divided from 5 to 50 hectares if they are within communal lands and from 5 to 300 hectares if they are outside of same.

(III) Ranch lands will be divided in proportions of 1,000 to 10,000 hectares.

ART. 19. If the owners refuse or neglect to divide their lands, the State will proceed in conformity to section C of fraction VII of article 27 of the general constitution of the Republic and in conformity with the proceedings indicated by this law.

ART. 20. When a property is to be divided, either by the owner or by the State, having a homestead, the proprietor may reserve, if he so desires, a lot of 100 hectares within which his homestead may remain, providing said lot is not within communal lands, in which case he can only reserve a lot of 50 hectares.

ART. 21. Ranch lands, which by reason of legal process may pass to the possession of the State, will be divided by the State in lots of 2,500 hectares, which will be assigned to those who may solicit same, in the form and terms provided by law.

CHAPTER 111.—ADJUDICATION.

ART. 22. Immediately after the publication of this law, parties interested in the acquisition of lands shall make application therefor to the governor of the State, and may acquire a lot of ground for farming and another for cattle raising if they so desire.

ART. 23. In their application they will state:

(I). The number of hectares they desire to acquire.

(II). The class of land that they wish to work, either for farming (irrigated or not irrigated), or for cattle raising.

(III). The place where the lot or lots requested are to be found, stating the name of the farm (and that of its proprietor) in which he is going to reside.

(IV). The nationality and the civil state of the solicitant and the number of members in his family that he has under his charge, if he has any one depending upon him, stating the sex and age of the members who form it.

(V). The services that he may have loaned in the constitutionalist revolution, in the campaign against the Yaquis or in the public schools if he has so acted.

(VI). The elements which he may have for the development of the lot or lots desired.

ART. 24. The governor of the State will pass this request to the local land commission who will carry a register of it to the end that they may proceed by order of priority to the adjudication of the lots solicited, when the division thereof may be made.

ART. 25. The lots adjudicated will be paid by the beneficiaries in twenty annual payments, the first payment being made two years after he has begun to exploit the land acquired, without prejudice that the solicitant may pay the total value of his lot before, if he can and desires to do so.

ART. 26. The owners whose lands have been designated for division and adjudication will receive as interest of the capital which the property represents, 5 per cent annually, which will be paid by the beneficiary jointly with the annual payment which he also is to pay.

ART. 27. When a beneficiary ceases to cultivate his lands for two consecutive years the State will reoccupy the same and assign it to the first solicitant and the first beneficiary will lose all the improvements which he may have made on the property, including that which he may have paid for it.

OBLIGATIONS OF THE LANDOWNERS AND THE BENEFICIARIES.

CHAPTER I OF THE THIRD TITLE—OBLIGATIONS OF THE LANDHOLDERS.

ART. 28. Within the month that this law is published the owners must comply with that which is provided in the eighteenth article of the same, giving notice to the governor of the State that they desire to divide their property, to the end that he may call together the persons that may desire to establish themselves, acquiring lots on the property that they are going to divide.

ART. 29. Having complied with the requirements of the preceding article, the governor of the State, by means of the local land commission will arrange the form in which the division shall be made, indicating the number of lots in which the property will be divided and also the size of the said lots.

ART. 30. The value of the property for its payment to the owner will be that which he may have manifested to the officers of tax and hacienda with an addition of 30 per cent ad valorem, the amount of the improvements introduced previously to the manifestation, and the expenses which have originated from the operation of the division.

ART. 31. When a large proprietor refuses to divide his property the governor of the State will order that the local land commission may make the division.

ART. 32. In the case of the preceding article the owner will receive as payment for his property the fiscal value thereof plus 10 per cent on said valuation.

CHAPTER II.—OF THE BENEFICIARIES.

ART. 33. The persons who may acquire lots of ground by this law will have the following obligations:

(I) On farm lands—

(a) To have entirely in cultivation within the second year after having possession of the lot or lots assigned to them remaining subject, those who do not comply with this requisite, to the provisions of Article 27 of this law.

(b) To procure agriculture developments, either by introducing all the possible improvements on their lands, studying in union with other farmers the best methods of cultivation which will tend to increase their products.

(II) On cattle-raising lands—

(a) To have at least 10 head of stock.

(b) To prevent immoderate destruction of the forests and to procure reforestation.

(III) To pay punctually the annual payments or installments on their farms and the interest which is related to such obligations.

ART. 34. The value of the lots for payment by the beneficiary will be that fixed by article 30 and article 32 plus the cost of division in both cases.

ART. 35. A special account will give the form in which owners of lands, which are to be divided by virtue of this account, will collect the value of their property, as also the manner in which beneficiaries will pay for the lots they may acquire.

TITLE FOUR.

CHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

ART. 36. Lots adjudicated in conformity with this law will pass to the beneficiary free from all incumbrances, excepting the rights of creditors of the divided property, to exercise the shares that are conferred upon them by the law relating thereto.

ART. 37. During the time that the price of the lots has not been paid completely, it can not be sold, mortgaged, or incumbered in any way, and any contract celebrated to such end is hereby declared void.

ART. 38. It is also prohibited to speculate with the said provisional titles, and any operation whatever which has this object in view is declared void.

ART. 39. The lots that by whatever reason remain vacant may be listed in conformity to the rules which the executive may issue for the case; meantime, the said lots are assigned in fee simple.

ART. 40. Immediately after a lot is assigned the beneficiary will have it registered in the tax office of his municipality and in the public register of property for the use of statistics and taxes.

ART. 41. Assignments will be made by personal selection, or by lot when the same lot is solicited by two or more persons.

ART. 42. When the adjudication of lots of any property there are lots belonging to foreigners, their lots, as far as possible, will be alternated with those of the Mexican citizens.

ART. 43. For the effectiveness of article 4, parcels of land which adjudicated under this law may only be transmitted by inheritance, being sufficient for this act, if by reason of lack of formality, otherwise, required by civil laws, the presentation of the certificate of the civil register which establishes the decendency of the legatee.

ART. 44. Special law will be passed immediately by the Congress of the State to return the property which constitutes the patrimony of the family as to the precepts that guarantee their protection and safeguard.

TRANSITORIES.

First. This law will commence to take effect from the day of its publication.

Second. The publication of this law will be made by solemn proclamation November 20 of the present year.

[Paraphrase, telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., December 24, 1918.

AMERICAN EMBASSY, Mexico City:

1745. You are instructed to address the Mexican Government in substantially the following tenor relative to the agrarian law of the State of Sonora, published November 20, which has been brought to the attention of this Government:

No provision is made for payment of compensation to the owner by the State of Sonora for lands to be taken by State and assigned to private interests, and will, therefore, point out that the proposed law is confiscatory in character. It clearly violates the following provisions of article 27 of the Mexican Constitution: "Private property shall not be expropriated except for cause of public utility and by means of indemnification." The confiscatory character is not obviated by provisions that persons to whom lands are transferred by State shall make annual payments to owners, beginning two years after transfer, no penalty being provided for nonpayment and the credit of the State is not pledged to assure payment.

It is further violative of the fourteenth article of the constitution: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, property, possessions, or rights without due process of law instituted before a duly created court, in which the essential elements of procedure are observed," when it provides for taking of property by purely arbitrary administrative action without due process of law or judicial determination.

You will further direct the attention of the Mexican Government to the fact that such safeguards as are provided for property owners by said provisions of article 14 correspond to provisions under which property is taken for public use in the United States and it is believed that this principle is followed generally throughout the world as in accordance with the general idea of justice and equity. In this principle the owner has the right to demand that an impartial tribunal shall pass upon question of compensation and that he be given an opportunity for a hearing.

Article 27 also provides for judicial determination of value of improvements on lands expropriated while in the proposed law no such provision appears.

You are therefore instructed to protest against the proposed enactment into legislation of the proposed law.

POLK, Acting.

[Paraphrase, telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
December 24, 1918.

AMERICAN CONSUL,
Nogales, Mexico.

Referring to your dispatch No. 263, the department instructs you to advise the appropriate State authorities that the American Embassy at Mexico City has been instructed substantially as follows.

You are instructed to address the Mexican Government relative to the agrarian law of the State of Sonora published November the 20th, which has been brought to the attention of this Government.

No provision is made for payment of compensation to the owner by the State of Sonora for lands to be taken by State and assigned to private interests and you will therefore, point out that the proposed law is confiscatory in character. It clearly violates the following provisions of article 27 of the Mexican Constitution: "Private property shall not be expropriated except for cause of public utility and by means of indemnification." The confiscatory character is not obviated by provisions that persons to whom lands are transferred by State shall make annual payments to owners beginning two years after transfer, no penalty being provided for nonpayment and the credit of the State is not pledged to assure payment.

It is further violative of the fourteenth article of the constitution: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, property, possessions, or rights without due process of law instituted before a duly created court, in which the essential elements of procedure are observed"; when it provides for taking of property by purely arbitrary administrative action without due process of law or judicial determination.

You will further direct the attention of the Mexican Government to the fact that such safeguards as are provided for property owners by said provisions of article 14 correspond to provisions under which property is taken for public use in the United States and it is believed that this principal is followed generally throughout the world as in accordance with the general idea of justice and equity. In this principle the owner has the right to demand that an impartial tribunal shall pass upon the question of compensation and that he be given an opportunity for a hearing.

Article 27 also provides for judicial determination of value of the improvements on lands expropriated while in the proposed law no such provision appears.

You are therefore instructed to protest against the proposed enactment into legislation of the proposed law.

POLK, Acting.

No. 52.

AMERICAN CONSULATE GENERAL,
Nogales, Mexico, March 13, 1919.

Subject: Proposed agrarian law for the State of Sonora.

The honorable the SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: Replying to the department's instruction No. 308 of February 8, 1919, file 312.115/367, I have the honor to report that the Congress of the State of Sonora, Mexico, is still in session at Hermosillo, and from the information furnished me by the Mexican consul at Nogales, Ariz., the much-discussed agrarian law has so far failed of enactment as a law by the said Congress. I have the honor to be, sir,

Your most obedient servant,

CHAS. W. DOHERTY,
American Vice Consul in Charge.

[Paraphrase, telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., March 20, 1919.

AMERICAN CONSUL,
Nogales, Mexico.

The department refers you to your dispatch No. 52 and instructs you to bring to the attention of the appropriate State authorities the fact that the American embassy at Mexico City has been instructed to renew protest previously made against agrarian law, referring to the advices given them pursuant to instructions contained in department's December 24, 6 p. m.

POLK, Acting.

[Paraphrase, telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., March 21, 1919.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico City.

1924. The department refers you to its telegram No. 1745 and instructs you to renew protest against proposed agrarian law for the State of Sonora, information having come to the department that the law failed of passage in last session of Sonora Legislature, but has been reintroduced in present session. You will bring to the attention of the foreign office this information of the department.

POLK, Acting.

[Paraphrase telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
Washington, D. C., July 16, 1919.AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico City.

2095. The American embassy at Mexico City is instructed to request of the foreign office whether the report is correct, that has come to the attention of the department, that the Legislature of the State of Sonora passed the agrarian law, about June 26. You are instructed to protest anew against the measure and urge that action be promptly taken to prevent the coming into force of a measure threatening American interests.

POLK, Acting.

[Paraphrase, telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
Washington, D. C., July 17, 1919.AMERICAN CONSUL,
Nogales, Ariz.

You are instructed to report whether the Legislature of the State of Sonora has passed the agrarian law, and if so, to forward a copy for the department's information. The American embassy at Mexico City has been instructed to renew protest against the measure, and you will inform the appropriate State authorities of this action.

POLK, Acting.

No. 151.]

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, Mexico, July 29, 1919.

Subject: New agrarian law of Sonora.

The honorable the SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have the honor to forward herewith five copies of a translation of the new agrarian law of the State of Sonora, approved June 23, 1919, and promulgated by the governor, July 3, to be effective July 27, 1919.

My request to the governor for copies of this law and a statement as to the points in which it differs from the law under consideration by the previous Congress of Sonora, if any, has not been yet complied with. I have the honor to be, sir,

Your most obedient servant,

FRANCIS J. DYER,
American Consul.

NO. 81. AGRARIAN LAW OF THE FREE AND SOVEREIGN STATE OF SONORA, APPROVED BY THE STATE CONGRESS, JUNE 23, 1919; PROMULGATED BY THE GOVERNOR, JULY 3, 1919—TO BE EFFECTIVE JULY 27, 1919.

CHAPTER FIRST.—GENERAL BASES.

ARTICLE 1. The present law has for its object to create and foment small properties in the State.

ART. 2. For the effect of the present law are of public utility:

- (1) The subdivision of the great estates.
- (2) The establishment of new centers of agricultural population with the lands and waters which may be indispensable to these.
- (3) The utilization of the waters for their equitable distribution and application to the cultivation of the lands; and
- (4) The others which may tend to realize the ends enunciated in the previous article.

ART. 3. Every inhabitant of the State who reunites the requisites which, further on are detailed, shall have the right to acquire a parcel in accordance with the prescriptions of this same law.

ART. 4. The parcels to which the previous article refers shall be taken from private properties or from those that by any concept can be disposed of by the State.

ART. 5. The lands of private property which must be partitioned shall be subdivided by their proprietors in accordance with this law, but if they do not proceed to the subdivision, or if they resist the effecting of it, the State, following the expropriation by reason of public utility, shall make the subdivision.

ART. 6. The procedure of expropriation shall be verified in accordance with the dispositions of the relative law, excepting in that which refers to the payment which shall be made in accordance with that which this same law provides.

CHAPTER SECOND.—AGRARIAN OFFICES.

ART. 7. The legal course of all matters to which this law relates shall be by conduct of the agrarian department of the State depending from the executive power, and which shall be in charge of one engineer, with the force of employees which the budget of expenditures establishes.

CHAPTER THIRD.—OF THE CLASSIFICATION OF THE LANDS.

ART. 8. For the effects of this law the lands shall be classified in the following form:

(1) Of agriculture.

(2) Of grazing.

ART. 9. By lands of agriculture shall be understood those which upon being applied for are in cultivation or which may be immediately cultivable.

ART. 10. By grazing lands shall be understood those which, upon being applied for, are not cultivable by any circumstances proper to the same lands, and those, which being susceptible of cultivation, require to this effect special primary works of irrigation, of defense, or of breaking.

ART. 11. The lands of agriculture in their turn shall be subdivided into:

(1) Of irrigation.

(2) Of "temporal" (watered by rains).

ART. 12. By irrigated lands shall be understood those which on being applied for count upon the water necessary to assure at least one crop on the agricultural year.

ART. 13. By lands of "temporal" shall be understood those whose watering depends exclusively upon the eventualities of showers.

CHAPTER FOUR.—OF THE MAXIMUM EXTENSION OF LANDS WHICH MAY BE POSSESSED.

ART. 14. The maximum extension of land which may be possessed by one person or legally constituted corporation is the following:

Fifty hectares in the lands of private property situated within the zone which was demarcated primordially as "ejidos" (commons) of the town.

Outside of the zone fixed in the preceding the maximum extension shall be the following:

(a) In irrigated agricultural land, 100 hectares.

(b) In "temporal" agricultural land, 300 hectares.

(c) In grazing lands, 10,000 hectares.

ART. 15. In the extension fixed in the previous article shall be comprehended that of one or of various lots belonging to one same proprietor whether they be located together or distant one from the other or situated in one or various municipalities.

ART. 16. The persons and institutions which conforming to the present law have the right to possess lands may possess at the same time lands of grazing, of irrigation, and of "temporal," always that said lands do not exceed the limits fixed in article 14.

ART. 17. When the proprietor of a land of "temporal" whose extension does not exceed the limits fixed for the lands of this class converts it to irrigated land he may continue to possess it integrally.

ART. 18. Grazing lands of the maximum extension which have been solicited for their cultivation shall be subdivided in accordance with official guidance with the prescription of this law relative to lands of agriculture.

ART. 19. When the proprietor of a grazing land whose extension does not exceed the limits fixed by this law for this class of land converts it in all or in part into land of agriculture he may continue possessing it integrally.

CHAPTER FIVE.—OF THE SUBDIVISION.

ART. 20. Every property which exceeds the extension fixed in article 14 and which belongs to one sole individual or legally constituted corporation shall be considered as a great estate and its owner shall be obliged by reason of public interest to subdivide the excess within the term which this law fixes.

ART. 21. From the date of the promulgation of this law the proprietors of great estates in the State shall give notice to the agrarian department of the preparatory operations of subdivision and legalized copies of the respective contracts consummated.

ART. 22. There is established 10 months to count from the promulgation of this law as the legal term within which the proprietors shall themselves make the subdivision of which the preceding articles treat.

ART. 23. The date establishes in the preceding articles having passed, the excess of lands which belong to one sole person or legally constituted corporation shall be subdivided by the Government in accordance with fraction 7 and the respective inserts of article 27 of the General Constitution of the Republic and the Law of Expropriation for cause of public utility of the State.

ART. 24. The governor of the State shall convoke, by means of permanent notices in the Boletín Oficial or by any other medium of publicity, the persons who wish to acquire lots in the properties which are to be subdivided, establishing conditions of acquisition, etc., and when he has received sufficient applications, shall proceed to the expropriation.

ART. 25. For the effects of the previous article it shall be understood that there are sufficient petitions when these amount to 10, or, when without amounting to this number, they cover an area of 50 hectares. In case that the portion expropriable does not exceed 50 hectares, it shall be sufficient that the application presented cover 50 per cent of said portion.

ART. 26. When a property is subdivided, the proprietor shall have the right to choose the extension of land which best suits him, always that it does not exceed the limit fixed in this law.

ART. 27. The expropriation of lands which are carried to a conclusion by the executive of the State by the applications of this law shall be limited to the extensions which have been applied for.

ART. 28. The lands which by the exercise of the faculty of economic coercion (facultad economic-coactiva) pass to the possession of the State shall be adjudicated to whoever applies for them in legal form and terms.

CHAPTER SIXTH.—OF THE APPLICATIONS AND ADJUDICATIONS.

ART. 29. The maximum extensions of adjudication shall be the following:

- (a) Of irrigated lands, 15 hectares.
- (b) Of lands of "temporal," 50 hectares.
- (c) Of grazing lands, 1,250 hectares.

Only in very special cases and when the applicants furnish sufficient elements within the legal term to construct primary works of irrigation, of defense, or of breaking can the executive cede as a maximum 100 hectares of irrigable land and 2,500 for the purposes of grazing when the applicant has sufficient elements to develop the land and improve the grazing.

ART. 30. The applicants for land shall address the governor of the State in writing, and shall express:

1. Surname and Christian names, profession or occupation, residence, nationality, civil state, and age.
2. The number of hectares which he wishes to acquire and the class of land.
3. The place where the lot or lots applied for are found and other data relative to their location, expressing the name of the property and of the proprietor.
4. The number of the family which he has in his charge, if he has any dependent upon him, expressing the sex and age of the members which compose it.

ART. 31. The applicants shall prove, in accordance with the respective regulations, the following:

1. To have the draft animals and elements for the cultivation of the agricultural land applied for, or, in the absence of these, the resources necessary to acquire them.
2. To have at least 15 head of greater cattle or 30 of lesser cattle, or, in default of these, the resources necessary to acquire them for the utilization of the grazing land which he applies for; and
3. That they prove that which is expressed in fraction (4) of the previous article if they are not proprietors of the lands, and if they are that they express the area of the lot or lots, their class, location, and other relative data.

ART. 32. When there may be various applicants for the same property, the procedure in order of preference shall be as follows:

1. Mexicans who have served in the constitutionalist army, those who have rendered or are rendering personal services in the Yaqui campaign, the children and widows of these, and other persons who have rendered services to the cause of the revolution lands applied for are located.

2. The persons mentioned in the preceding fraction who are not residents of the place in which the lands applied for are located.

3. Mexicans who are partners or tenants of the property which is to be divided.

4. The residents of the place.

5. Those others who reunite the requisites established in article 27 of the General Constitution of the Republic and in this law.

ART. 33. The governor of the State shall forward all the applications to the agrarian department, where a register shall be kept of these to the end of the proceeding, in order of priority, to the application of the lots solicited and in accordance with the preceding article.

CHAPTER SEVENTH.—OF THE ADJUDICATEES.

ART. 34. The adjudicatees of lots of subdivision shall have the following obligations, saving in case of proven superior force (force majeure):

1. If it treats of agricultural land which is in cultivation at the moment of its subdivision they must have it cultivated in its entirety within the first year to count from the date on which they are given possession of it.

2. If it treats of lands which is not in cultivation at the time of making the subdivision, but which may be immediately cultivable, they must put in cultivation within the first year 50 per cent and the remaining part within the second year.

3. If it treats of grazing land solicited for cultivation they shall enjoy 5 years within which to put all the land in cultivation, and must open each year to cultivation 25 per cent of the total extension adjudicated.

4. If it treats of grazing land solicited for this object they must maintain constantly on it at least 15 head of greater cattle or 30 head of lesser cattle.

5. The terms fixed in fractions 1, 2, and 3 having passed, they can not fail to cultivate the land during two consecutive years.

6. To pay opportunely the annual installments with which they have to amortize the value of the property and the interests which said value bears, as also the State and municipal taxes which are assigned to them.

7. While the price of the lot is not paid in its totality, they can not alienate, hypothecate, nor burden in any manner, nor speculate in any form with the titles of acquisition, any contract or operation celebrated to these ends being null by common right, and the ownership of the said lot shall be transmissible only by title of inheritance until its total value has been paid.

8. To inscribe the lot or lots in the municipal office of appraisal to which it belongs and in that of the public register for property for fiscal and statistical purposes.

9. To personally cultivate or administer the lot or lots adjudicated. Absentee cultivation shall not be permitted, nor the gratuitous cession of title, nor its renting in any form.

ART. 25. When the adjudicatee fails to comply with the precepts of fractions 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 9, of the preceding article, the Government shall declare the lot or lots which have been adjudicated open to application, publishing such declaration in the Boletín Oficial three consecutive times, eight days apart and making use of any other medium of publicity.

ART. 26. That ordained in the preceding article being complied with, the lot or lots shall be adjudicated to the first applicant who reunited the requisites demanded by this law and who shall pay on account 25 per cent of the sum covered by the departing farmer plus 50 per cent of the improvements incorporated with the lands, and the remainder of the price paid or to be paid in installments fixed in the contract of adjudication. The said 25 per cent shall be delivered to the first adjudicatee, the rest remaining in favor of the State, as also the price of the improvements, the expenses of transfer being for account of the State.

ART. 27. The adjudicatee who infringes the disposition contained in fractions 6 and 8 of article 34 shall be subject to the processes which the relative laws establish, and with respect to the annual installments with which they have to amortize the value of the property and the interests which said values bear shall be subject to that which the contracts of adjudication dispose.

CHAPTER EIGHTH.—OF THE PRICE AND PAYMENT OF THE LOTS.

ART. 38. The value of the property expropriated shall be paid by the government of the State with bonds of the agrarian debt, which shall be amortized in the time and in the form which the material law may fix.

ART. 39. The value of each lot shall be paid by the adjudicatees in 20 annual installments which shall amortize the capital and the interest which these shall earn at the rate of 5 per cent per annum.

ART. 40. The payment of the annual installments must be entered in the sub-department of the general treasury of the State within the first 15 days of the month of July.

ART. 41. The annual installments not entered within the term established shall be subject to the payment of the interest stipulated in article 39.

ART. 42. When the subdivision shall be made by the Government, the value of each hectare shall be that fixed or accepted in the appraisal of collection offices increased 10 per cent plus the amount of the improvements and the proportional expenses caused by the subdivision. The amount of the improvements shall be valued by experts, one named by the owner, another by the adjudicatee, and a third by the Government in case of discord.

CHAPTER NINTH.—GENERAL PROVISIONS.

ART. 43. The lots adjudicated conforming to this law shall pass to the adjudicatee free of all encumbrance, the rights of the creditors of the subdivided property to exercise the actions which the relative laws confer being saved to them.

ART. 44. The simulation of a contract of purchase-sale posterior to the promulgation of this law shall be adjudged as a direct act to evade compliance with the same law, and the lands which are the object of the simulated contract shall be by deed and by right for this sole circumstance subject to the same consequences as the great estates not voluntarily subdivided by their owners.

ART. 45. The difficulties which may be presented for the application of the present law shall be decided by the executive of the State.

TRANSITORY ARTICLES.

ARTICLE 1. The executive of the State is authorized to issue the necessary regulations for the application of this law, and to name the employees of the agrarian department.

ART. 2. This law shall be published by solemn proclamation (bando solemne) in all the State on the 27th of July of the current year, entering into force from that date.

ART. 3. For the application of the present law all dispositions which oppose it are declared without effect.

[Paraphrase, telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., August 14, 1919.

AMERICAN EMBASSY,
Mexico City.

2154. With reference to the agrarian law of the State of Sonora and the department's telegram to you of July 16, you are instructed to bring to the attention of the Mexican Government substantially the following:

That the law is ambiguous in many provisions as to the duties, rights, and obligations of the landowners thereunder—for example, the right of landowner to make divisions of his lands by private arrangements, payment of lands expropriated by the State, and the rights of creditors.

The provisions for fixing value of improvements violates article 117 of Mexican constitution, which provides that value of improvements shall be fixed by judicial determination and not by experts only, the form in which this provision provides. It would appear that such a constitution of the board to pass upon the value of improvements does not meet with the demands of even-handed justice.

That the measure provides for taking of property by purely arbitrary administrative action, without due process of law or judicial determination, which violates article 14 of the Constitution: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, property, possessions, or rights without due process of law instituted before a duly created court, in which the essential elements of procedure are observed."

It is believed that the safeguards provided by said provisions of article 14 prevail generally throughout the world as in accordance with the general idea of justice and equity.

The fact that wise safeguards of former article are just and equitable is not altered by the apparent conflict between said provisions in article 14 and article 27 for administrative expropriation of private property.

The Government of the United States is constrained to renew its protests against the coming into force of the measure in question, in view of the considerations mentioned, on the ground of its ambiguity, that it is confiscatory in character, and that it makes no provisions for due process of law and judicial determination. All rights are reserved in making this protest.

The Mexican Government is hereby advised that the American Government will be forced to take up this question with the Mexican Government for international adjustment and reparation in the event that absolute and even-handed justice is denied American citizens after they have exhausted all proper local remedies.

LANSING.

[Paraphrase telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, D. C., August 14, 1919.

AMERICAN CONSUL,
Nogales, Mexico:

With reference to your dispatch No. 151, you are instructed to inform the appropriate State authorities that the American Embassy at Mexico City is to inform the Mexican foreign office substantially as follows:

That the agrarian law of the State of Sonora is ambiguous in many provisions as to the duties, rights, and obligations of the landowners thereunder. For example, the rights of landowners to make divisions of his lands by private arrangements, payments of lands expropriated by the State, and the rights of creditors.

The provision for fixing value of improvements violates article of Mexican constitution which provides that value of improvements shall be fixed by judicial determination and not by experts only, the form in which this provision provides. It would appear that such a constitution of the board to pass upon the value of improvements does not meet with the demands of even-handed justice. Article 117, Mexican constitution.

That the measure provides for taking of property by purely arbitrary administrative action, without due process of law or judicial determination, which violates article 14 of the constitution, "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, property, possessions, or rights without due process of law instituted before a duly created court, in which the essential elements of procedure are observed."

It is believed that the safeguards provided by said provisions of article 14 prevail generally throughout the world as in accordance with the general idea of justice and equity.

The fact that wise safeguards of former article are just and equitable is not altered by the apparent conflict between said provisions in article 14 and article 27 for administrative expropriation of private property.

The Government of the United States is constrained to renew its protests against the coming into force of the measure in question, in view of the consideration mentioned, on the ground of its ambiguity, that it is confiscatory in character, and that it makes no provision for due process of law and judicial determination. All rights are reserved in making this protest.

The Mexican Government is hereby advised that the American Government will be forced to take up this question with the Mexican Government for international adjustment and reparation, in the event that absolute and even-handed justice is denied American citizens after they have exhausted all proper local remedies.

LANSING.

AMERICAN CONSULATE,
Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, September 21, 1919.

Subject: Governor of Sonora answers note of protest against new agrarian law.
The honorable the SECRETARY OF STATE, Washington.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose herewith the answer of the State Government to my communication of August 14, 1919, transmitting the protest of the Department of State against the new agrarian law of the State of Sonora.

Inasmuch as this is an important communication, I have had a copy made and carefully compared, and I am inclosing the original, one compared copy of the same, and a rough translation made in this office.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Your most obedient servant,

FRANCIS J. DYER, American Consul.

[Translation.]

(Seal.) Office of the Secretary to the governor of the State of Sonora, section of Government. No. 2737.

Replying to your note of the 15th instant, in which you say that under instructions from your Government you permit yourself to call the attention of the Government in my charge to the defects and unconstitutionality (referring to the Mexican constitution) of the Agrarian law of this State, passed by the State congress on the 23d of last June, I wish to advise you as follows:

The points which you touch upon in your note on the subject are expressed as follows:

1. The law is obscure and ambiguous.
2. It is contrary to article 117 of the general constitution of the Republic.
3. That in case the bonds to which the law refers are not paid, through negligence, recourse will be had to the diplomatic methods.
4. That it violates article 27 of the general constitution which provides that the value of the property must be fixed according to judicial determination.
5. That it also violates article 14 of the same constitution which prescribes that no person shall be deprived of his life, of his liberty and property except by process of law and before a competent tribunal.
6. That the law being confiscatory, protest is made against the execution of its provisions with respect to American citizens affected by it, and that they will have recourse to assistance, which is at their service if needed.
7. Finally, you warn this Government that in case justice is absolutely denied to such citizens (that is to say, that if the law be applied to lands possessed by Americans) the Government of the United States will be compelled to take the matter up with the Government of Mexico through the medium of an international tribunal for reparation.

The nature of the referred note being given and the manner in which it is couched, the Government under my direction considers it pertinent and necessary to inform you, first of all, that a State government is not competent to enter upon any discussion of this nature with representatives of foreign Governments, inasmuch as, according to the fundamental law of the nation, judicial notice of these subjects is the exclusive prerogative of the President of the Republic.

Having made this reservation merely as a courtesy to you and in consideration of the friendship and good relations which bind together the Mexican Nation and the United States, without establishing precedents and solely for this occasion, I will permit myself to give you some explanation of the justice and legality of all and each one of the points concerning which you have entered protest.

First point. You affirm that the agrarian law in force in this federative entity suffers from the infliction of obscurity and ambiguity as to several of its dispositions, but you did not indicate precisely which of those provisions were obscure and ambiguous. In virtue of the fact that this executive holds a very different view to yours. I must confine my explanations solely to those points particularly and definitely indicated by you.

You say that the agrarian law does not provide for the compensation that ought to be given to the owners of lands that are expropriated by the State, but it is enough to read article 38 of the said law to see that "the value of the finca expropriated shall be paid by the government of the State with bonds of the agrarian debt, which shall be amortized in the time and in the form that the law on that subject provides." It is necessary, then, to wait until the law to which article 38 refers is enacted in order to be able to judge accurately regarding the matter of compensation. That those bonds can be issued is a matter which is answered in the next paragraph.

Second point. Although you do not indicate which one of the provisions (or sections) of article 117 of the Federal constitution is the one that is violated by the plan laid down for paying those whose lands may be expropriated, it is clear that you meant to refer to VIII, which says textually:

"The States can not in any case issue bonds for public debt or contract obligations in favor of societies or individual foreigners when the titles or bonds must be issued to the bearer or transferable by indorsement." Moreover, the consul has not noticed that article 27 of the same general constitution, which bears precisely on the point of dividing or breaking up the large tracts of land, expressly orders that the "proprietors will be compelled to receive bonds of a special issue to guarantee the payment for the expropriated properties that the General Congress with that object would have to make a law authorizing the States to create an agrarian debt."

Therefore, there is no opposition between the provisions of the agrarian law and article 117 of the constitution, for the said constitution makes that exception to the prohibitions that it imposes on the States in a general manner.

Third point. That in case of negligence in the payment of the bonds, American citizens would be compelled to resort to diplomatic negotiations.

Leaving aside the threat of doubtful propriety that is made to the Government under my charge without necessity or in consequence of violating anything, because no (law or regulation) is yet in effect, in execution of the pending law; that is, the formation of the agrarian debt to which article 38 refers, you will permit me to say to you, that the foreigners, according to the laws and the principles of the judicial science, will not have any rights except to resort to local measures, the same as the Mexican nationals, and they could resort to diplomatic means only when they had exhausted all of the legal resources in the country, the Government would not apply the law to them in the same manner as to its nationals, and to the most favored foreigners, in accordance with the terms of treaty made with the United States, and then if the foreigner has not renounced the right to appeal to his Government, as wisely provided by our constitutional law, when making special concessions to foreigners, like acquiring a foothold in national territory. (Art. 27 of the constitution of 1917.)

Fourth point. That it violates article 27 of the general constitution, which prescribes that the value of the property is to be fixed by judicial determination. This is another error in your note, which I take the liberty of making plain: If there shall be judicial determination when making expropriation of the land or lands which are to be divided in accordance with the agrarian law of the State. Article 6 says: The procedure of the expropriation will be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the law on the subject. Well, then, the law of expropriation of the State of October 27, 1906, directs: "Article 8. Having made the declaration of public utility. The record shall be referred to the judge of first instance in whose jurisdiction is located the property expropriated, or whom the expropriated designates, if they happened to be in different districts."

The other articles refer to the method of fixing the price of the expropriated property, a matter which the judge will attend to. The procedure, then, is judicial, being in conformity with the mandate in the same article 27 of the general constitution: The laws of the federation and of the States in their respective jurisdictions will determine the cases in which the occupation of private property will be of public utility, and in accordance with said laws the administrative authority will make suitable declaration. The price that will be fixed as indemnity for the thing expropriated will be based on the fiscal value of it appearing in the offices of the tax collectors, and whether the value was declared by the owner or only tacitly accepted by him having paid his contributions on such basis, augmenting it by 10 per cent. The excess in value which that particular property might have because of the improvements that were made subsequent to the date upon which it was appraised will be the only thing which will remain subject to expert judgment and to a judicial determination. This same procedure will be observed with respect to objects whose value had not been fixed in the offices of the public revenues. This general arrangement is entirely in harmony with the provisions of article 42 of the agrarian law, which says: "When the division is made by the Government, the value of each hectare will be fixed or accepted in the tax offices, with 10 per cent added, including also the value of the improvements and the expenses proportionally apportioned to the subdivisions. The value of the improvements will be fixed by appraisers, one named by the proprietor, another by the grantee, and a third who will be nominated by the Government in case of disagreement." Furthermore, the same article 27 expressly enjoins the following precepts: "During the coming constitutional period the Congress of the Union and the State legislatures in their respective jurisdictions will expedite laws for the carrying out of the cutting up of the big properties, conforming with the following bases:

(a) In each State and Territory will be determined the greatest area of land which may be owned by one individual or one legally constituted society.

(b) The excess above the area determined upon shall be subdivided by the proprietor in the time fixed by the local laws, and the fractional parts will be put on sale under the condition that the various Governments approve, according to the same laws.

(c) If the owner should refuse to divide his property, it would be done by the Government, by means of expropriation.

(d) The value of the fractional portions will be paid by annual sums, which will amortize capital and proceeds in a term not less than twenty years, during which time the person who bought it can not dispose of it. The rate of interest will not exceed 5 per cent yearly.

(e) The proprietor will be compelled to accept bonds of a special debt to guarantee the payment of the expropriated property. With this aim the National Congress will at an early date enact a law giving the States the power to create an agrarian law.

(f) The local laws will guarantee the family patrimony, deciding how much property it should comprise, on the basis that it will be inalienable, and will not be subject to seizure or mortgage of any kind. It will not then in any way be contrary to the forms prescribed by the law nor to the manner in which the payments are made of the expropriated lands, and as it is applied equally to all, citizens and strangers, the latter have no right to appeal to their Governments, because they are under necessity of obeying and respecting the laws of the country which extends to them hospitality.

Fifth point. That is also violates article 14 of the same Constitution which provides that no person shall be deprived of his life, of his liberty, and property except by legal judgment and by a competent tribunal.

Having read the foregoing fourth point there remains not the least doubt that in no respect does the agrarian law violate that part cited from article 14 to which you allude. In fact, when depriving individuals of their properties for the purpose of dividing them into small parcels, the expropriation is decreed primarily on the score of public utility; this declaration being made, it goes to some competent judge (his qualifications being stated in the law itself) for the determination of the price. All this is in entire conformity with the postulados of that beneficent article of our Constitution, which you believe it violates, it may be because you did not make a deeper study of the concordance of both laws.

Sixth point. The conclusion that the said agrarian law may be confiscatory or of a confiscatorial nature is entirely a question pertaining to those concerned or affected by it, who will do well, if they so decide, to seek aid, which is the legal recourse that the inhabitants of the Republic have to protect themselves from abuses of the laws or the authorities that attack or presume to trample under foot, their individual privileges. It is righteous that they should proceed so, so that the Supreme Court of Justice of the Nation, the one supreme qualified judge of the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of an act may dictate as it sees fit the determination reached in each concrete case that is brought to its official knowledge.

Seventh point. The Government in my charge feels that the American consul has gone to the extreme challenge when, as already has been said, the law has not been applied nor the enabling laws dictated (creation of the agrarian debt, rules, etc.) that would present an impending menace warranting the tone of his note, all the more when a more detailed study of the agrarian law in question might have changed his excellent and illustrious judgment, for the Government feels that the foregoing explanations are clear and entirely sustained by justice.

In order to bring to a close this extended note, I take the privilege to add that, on treating of such delicate points as trying to make a country change the legislation that it wants to have executed in its own jurisdiction the authorities of the other nations have no right to intervene, as you yourself may be able to see, Mr. Consul, in the authors of the international laws whose literary texts do not allow me to cite, either in the space or in the character of this note, which is merely explanatory and which serves to efface prejudices and misunderstandings, creating good relations between the foreigners that inhabit this State or have property in it, and the authorities of the same, who on giving out laws such as the one treated of, have not wanted to attack the rights of the foreigners nor make their situation difficult, but rather to follow ideals of justice in behalf of which the natives and foreigners have to sacrifice part of their interests for the general good.

I will now take this opportunity to mention to you that President Wilson himself, on commenting about Mexico, when the two parties, Villistas and Carrancistas, were active, expressly declared that the United States would aid the party that would give more guarantee to carry out the ideals of the Mexican revolution, and one of those ideals, one of the most far-reaching, is relative to the division of large estates that make the immense majority of our farmers change into slaves worse than those of the feudal age.

In other words, I have already shown that knowledge or recognition of these matters is a function of the Federal Government, and that it will know how to find a legal and dignified solution of conflicts of this nature that arise.

Your note being answered, and hoping that you will see in the present one a sincere wish of acknowledgment, it affords me pleasure to present to you my distinguished consideration.

Constitutions and Reforms, Hermosillo, Sonora, September 13, 1919.

ADOLFO DE LA HUERTA,
Governor.

El Oficial 1/o.E. del D. General.

M. PINA.

Al SEÑOR FRANCIS J. DYER,
Consul Americano en Nogales, Sonora.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 18, 1919.

DEAR SENATOR FALL: My memorandum of yesterday will convey to you that I do not share completely the conviction that something definite is now likely to be done in the Mexican situation.

The new developments (evidence, etc.), which are available to your committee, may be regarded as of a character rather more startling than the usual run of facts in similar instances. Even so, it is a question whether the cabinet and Congress would regard it as sufficient to precipitate a situation in respect of Mexico which might be fraught with more serious consequences than that which now confronts us.

Should Congress adjourn within a few days, it is conceivable that the new evidence might be used as well after the new session and thus give you a chance to get more of a much needed rest. I do not wish to be considered as doing a thing, or being disposed to do a thing, to delay action for a moment. Having been through similar flurries before, I merely wonder whether this is the final one, which it is presumed, inevitably will come.

Very truly, yours,

B. O.

Hon. A. B. FALL,
Three Rivers Mexico.

For the press:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
August 14, 1919.

In view of the long series of murders and outrages of American citizens in Mexico, culminating in the murder of Peter Catron in San Luis Potosi last month, and the perpetration of other acts in disregard of American lives and property, the American Embassy at Mexico City, on July 22, by direction of the Secretary of State, made the following representations to the Mexican Government:

MEXICO CITY, July 22, 1919.

SIR: With reference to the embassy's note dated July 16, 1919, relative to the murder of Peter Catron near Valles, San Luis Potosi, on or about July 7 last, I have the honor to inform you that I am now under telegraphic instructions from my Government to urge upon the Mexican Government the capture and punishment of those responsible for this murder and the adoption of adequate measures to prevent a recurrence of the murder of American citizens.

I am also instructed to state that should the lives of American citizens continue to remain unsafe and these murders continue by reason of the unwillingness or inability of the Mexican Government to afford adequate protection, my Government may be forced to adopt a radical change in its policy with regard to Mexico.

Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

GEORGE T. SUMMERLIN,
Charge d'Affaires.

The Mexican reply, dated July 28, signed by Salvador Diego-Fernandez, in charge of the department of foreign relations, and dated July 28, follows:

"Mr. CHARGE D'AFFAIRES: The note which your honor was pleased to send me on the 22d instant advised me of the instruction which you had received to notify this department that if the lives of the citizens of the United States in Mexico continued in a state of insecurity, and if murders should continue because of the unwillingness or inability of the Mexican Government to give adequate protection, the Government of the United States would be compelled to adopt a radical change in its policy with regard to Mexico.

"In reply I have the honor to state that the fact that offenses against the lives of citizens of the United States have occurred in the territory of the Republic can not be notoriously attributed to unwillingness to give protection. The willingness to furnish this protection has been expressed repeatedly, and the material difficulties in the way of fulfilling a promise, supposing that it is not fulfilled, should not be confused with unwillingness to do so, especially as this willingness had been demonstrated by acts.

"Moreover, if we consider the protection of human life in absolute terms, that is to say, if in every case and wherever a citizen of the United States may be within Mexican territory he should enjoy special and effective protection to a degree such that his life may never be placed in danger it is not possible for the Government of Mexico to do this because so perfect a condition of security exists nowhere; with all the more reason is this true, considering the great territorial extent of the Republic, its scanty population, and the difficult conditions which prevail after a long civil war.

"The Government of Mexico has always endeavored as far as possible to give full security to the lives of foreigners as well as of its nationals, but the fact is that foreigners through ignorance, the lack of prudence, or rash eagerness for profit, venture to remain or to travel in dangerous regions, thereby incurring the risk of becoming the victims of offenses and even trusting to escape offenses because of their being foreigners.

"It should be remembered, moreover, that always when the Government of Mexico has had knowledge of an offense it has pursued the presumably guilty parties. The pursuit in such a case surely is not the same as that ordinarily made in cities in the case of ordinary crimes because the circumstances are different in a populous community.

"In the latter it is relatively easy to identify the guilty party, while in uninhabited places the band which committed the offense is located and pursued, is overtaken and as many as possible are killed without generally being able to identify the really guilty party, because even within the band of offenders itself it is impossible to determine as might be supposed which projectile of a volley caused a murder. The recent Cornell case proves that the Mexican Government following this procedure, which is the only possible one, is displaying the greatest activity, because immediately after this murder it was reported forces left in pursuit of the band and killed four of the villains.

"The Mexican Government has been constantly preoccupied with the pacification of the Republic and as a first step has destroyed the principal rebel groups and has conquered the most notorious leaders, as is demonstrated by the conclusion of the recent Villa movement, the death of Zapata, of Blanquet, and Inez Avila, without mentioning the operations against groups of minor importance. A necessary consequence of this progress in the labor of pacification is the existence of some bands, the weak remains of the large groups.

"The Mexican Government has been, and continues, animated by the best of intentions, to eliminate all those difficulties which might disturb its good relations with the Government of the United States and has so proven on repeated occasions. If the Government of the United States wishes its citizens to enjoy greater protection, the Mexican Government, anxiously desiring as ever a good understanding between both Governments, suggests the desirability that citizens of the United States concentrate in the populous places where complete guarantees may be offered them and that these citizens, when they find it necessary to visit the dangerous zones, request sufficient forces for their protection, which will be furnished by the Mexican authorities.

"In the Tampico region the paymasters of the petroleum companies have been offered escorts to accompany them for the safe transportation of funds, and the companies have refused on the pretext that the presence of the escort precipitates the attack of the rebels or that the individuals of the escort do not conduct themselves properly. These are unfounded assertions. Moreover the relation which has existed between those same petroleum companies and the rebels is notorious, it being also suspected that there may have been cases in which the paymasters were in accord with the supposed assailants. The Mexican Government, in order to demonstrate once more its willingness to furnish complete protection, has already formally promised to reimburse the sums which might be taken from the paymasters notwithstanding the presence of the escort, and if this last offer is not accepted the consequences will be the exclusive fault of those same interested parties.

"I believe I have made clear the true situation and the possibility of the Mexican Government giving daily increasing means of protection to life and property as it evidently has done and its undeniable desire to secure every class of guarantees within the national territory. In view of these facts, the menace embraced in your note has surprised the Mexican Government, all the more so since it seems strange that it should be exacted that even in depopulated regions human life should be protected in a more perfect manner than in the most populous cities of the most cultured countries where bloody crimes often occur without the respective governments thereby becoming the object of severe observations."

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
November 12, 1919.

Secretary of State Lansing made a statement to-day to make clear the Government's attitude on the question of responsibility of Mexico for the safety of Americans in that country. This statement, made in response to inquiries of newspaper correspondents in connection with the case of William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent at Puebla, Mexico, follows:

"The newspapers, in connection with the Jenkins kidnapping case made it appear that I had said that Americans in Mexico had no greater rights to protection than Mexicans. I regret that the context of my comments were not given in full because it would have shown that I was referring to a condition in which the Mexican authorities had employed every means which they possessed or should have possessed to protect the lives and property of aliens in a Mexican community. If the authorities failed to provide means of protection or to use such means the statement attributed to me would not apply.

"To avoid being misunderstood as to this Government's interpretation of the rule of international law on the subject of responsibility on the part of Mexico for the safety of Americans in that country I make the following statement:

"While in general there is presumed to be no difference between the rights of aliens and the rights of natives to be treated fairly and justly under local laws and by the local authorities, nevertheless should the operation of the local laws or the acts of commission or omission by local authorities result in injustice to Americans or lack of adequate protection of their lives or property, it is the privilege as well as the right of this Government, under international law, by diplomatic intervention to see to it that justice is accorded to its citizens and their rights given proper protection.

"The reason for this is that, when a condition of political unrest and lawlessness exists such as obtains in certain parts of Mexico, aliens being denied proper protection by the authorities must rely on their Government, operating through diplomatic channels, to obtain justice and security. This is a general statement and the basis of the policy followed by this Government, though it is necessarily subject to modification in particular cases.

"It should be borne in mind, however, that the accepted law and practice of nations is that, as a rule, it must be shown that a foreign government is responsible for injustice done to aliens or that its constituted authorities are negligent in protecting their lives and property, before liability is incurred."

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

November 20, 1919.

The Department of State to-day sent a note to the Mexican foreign office, through the American Embassy at Mexico City, calling for the immediate release of William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent at Puebla.

The note, which is based on the rearrest of Consular Agent Jenkins at Puebla, points out that the United States Government is "surprised and incensed" to learn of the reimprisonment of Mr. Jenkins, particularly in view of the suffering and losses already sustained by him in connection with his kidnapping through lack of protection by the Mexican authorities and in connection with his first arrest by Mexican officials.

The note expressed the view, based on the information in the possession of the Department of State, that his rearrest is absolutely arbitrary and unwarranted, and warns the Mexican Government that further molestation of the consular agent will seriously affect the relations between the United States and Mexico, for which the Government of Mexico must assume sole responsibility.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

November 21, 1919.

The following statement submitted to the Department of State by William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent at Puebla, regarding his recent kidnapping, is for immediate publication.

"PUEBLA, MEXICO, November 7, 1919.

"JOSEPH W. ROWE, Esq.,

Vice Consul in Charge, American Consulate General, Mexico.

"SIR: In compliance with your instructions of the 4th instant, I beg to make the following report on my recent experience in being kidnapped by a rebel band of this State:

"On Sunday night, October the 19th, about 9 o'clock, upon leaving my apartment to make a short inspection of the premises, as is my custom before retiring, I was attacked by five men, all armed with pistols, and was told by the leader that if I made any resistance or sound, I would be immediately killed. Knowing the desperate character of such men, and with the odds completely against me, I considered it useless to attempt any resistance, and was searched for weapons, none being found, and then my hands were tied. I thought that these men were mere robbers, as there had recently been in this city, as well as in Mexico, innumerable cases of holdups, and I thought that I was dealing with one of these bands. It is well to state that my residence is located in the southern extremity of this city, adjoining my cotton mill here, and the residence and mill occupy an entire block, therefore I do not have any neighbors nearer than one street away. However my residence is not any great distance away from the heart of the city, as Puebla, although a city of about 125,000 inhabitants, does not cover a very great extension of ground, and my place is only seven cross streets, from the principal street of the city, or a distance of about six hundred meters.

"Upon having my hands tied, I was told by the leader of the bandits to accompany them to the office, and there, the keys to the safes were taken from my pocket, and the entire contents of two safes was robbed, consisting of the sum of 50,263 pesos and 65 cents, Mexican gold and silver coin, as well as two wrist watches, worth about 150 pesos, one pistol worth 25 pesos, one rifle worth 25 pesos, and I discovered later that they had also taken one watchman's pistol worth 50 pesos and one watchman's clock worth 110 pesos, so that my total loss from the robbery was $50,623.65, 50,623 pesos and 65 cents, Mexican gold.

"It will be understood that in this city there are no banks where money can be deposited, as the Government confiscated all the banks long ago, and until the present time no private banks have been established here, and it is therefore necessary that every business man be his own banker, keeping in his own safe whatever money he may have on hand. It is also known that there is no paper money at present, and all money at present circulating is in coin. It is pertinent to mention that there was the sum of 105 pesos Mexican gold of consular funds in the money taken from my safes and that the office of the consular agency is in the same room as my private office; therefore it may be properly stated that the safes were in the office of the consular agency.

"As soon as the money had been taken from the safes the leader of the band dispatched two of the men with the money, and I neither saw nor heard of them again. I was then informed by him that I was to be taken, which was my first intimation that I was to be kidnapped, and I used every possible argument to dissuade him from that intention, explaining to him that my father had just suffered an apoplectic stroke, and that any great worry would probably prove fatal to him; that my wife was not well and could not stand any great nervous shock; that he had already taken an enormous sum of money from me and that I was not in a position to pay any further ransom. He immediately replied that as far as the payment of any further ransom was concerned I need not worry about it, as he did not want my money, but that he wanted the Mexican Government to pay, not only the ransom that he would demand but the money that he had taken from my safes as well, and that it was absolutely necessary for him to carry me away, on account of the fact that he desired to give a severe blow to the actual Government and could only do that by taking some one with an official character, and that he felt sure the United States Government would exact of the Mexican Government immediate reparation for all loss. I tried to explain to him that he was in error and that it would be very difficult, if not entirely impossible, to make the Mexican Government pay any ransom; that such a proceeding would be very long and tedious, and that in the meanwhile I, an innocent subject of his political plans, would suffer greatly and probably lose my life. He was very profuse in his explanations that he meant no harm to me personally and had nothing at all against me, but that it was indispensable to carry away a "consul" to make his blow be properly felt. Seeing the futility of further argument, I requested that he allow me to speak to my wife, which he very reluctantly permitted, and only after I had pointed out to him that his own plans would be facilitated by her knowing what had happened to me and being able to act more intelligently as regards my ransom. My wife during this time was in our apartments with my sister, and of course knew absolutely nothing as to what was going on.

"The leader of the band accompanied me, with his pistol constantly covering my body, to a point from which I could call my wife, and having called her he immediately made me return to the office, where we awaited her coming. When she came, I explained to her as best I could, considering the state of her excitement and my own, what had happened, and what the men proposed to do, and she united her pleas with my own to the leader of the band, that I not be carried off, offering him everything we had that he wanted, if he would desist from that intention, but it was entirely useless, as he repeated to her what he had told me: that his principal idea was to give a blow to the Government, and that this could only be effected by carrying me off in person. At my wife's request, my hands were untied, but it was impossible for me to make any defense, as the three remaining men held their pistols in constant readiness to shoot, and I knew that any effort on my part to make a defense would certainly be the death of myself or my wife, and probably both of us.

"The leader of the bandits then ordered my wife to call up the British vice consul here, Mr. William Hardaker, an intimate friend of ours, saying that he also wanted to carry him with me, but my wife replied that Mr. Hardaker was in Mexico, and the bandit said no more on the subject. But it is evident that it was his intention to carry Mr. Hardaker with me. It is probable that he intended making me call Mr. Hardaker, for it was certainly not his intention to allow my wife to come to the office, but after she had come, he very likely considered it better that she call him, and not that I do it. I have since learned that on that night there were several suspicious people immediately around Mr. Hardaker's house, and it is quite possible that it was their intention to capture him on his leaving his house, as he also lives in the extreme eastern limit of the city. The leader of the band had his face covered with a red handkerchief, so that it was difficult to form an intelligent idea as to his appearance, but from later knowledge I am absolutely certain that he was Federico Cordoba, one of the most daring and intelligent of all the rebel leaders that infest this region.

"When my wife and I saw the impossibility of avoiding my being carried off, I gave her brief instructions to what she should do; she requested permission to bring my overcoat, which was granted, and I was immediately taken from my home and conducted on foot to a lonely street behind the general hospital of the city, situated at some distance from my home, but in the same general section. To arrive at this place we had to pass through several streets, but as the city had very poor police service, we saw no police at all, and I was unable to make any effort to escape, especially so as upon leaving my house my arm was tied to the arm of the leader, and I could not get away. The leader and I went in front, and the two other men followed immediately behind me. At the street mentioned, or rather a road, for it is not an open street, we found other men waiting, and after a hurried conversation between them and the leader I was blindfolded, turned around several times to make me lose the sense of direction, and then we traveled on foot for a considerable length of time, more than a half hour, I think, where we found other men with horses, and I was mounted on a horse, my legs tied to the stirrup leathers, and with my eyes completely covered, we started out. My horse was led by the rider in front. We traveled all night, over a good road for a while, but afterwards over very rough country and about 5 o'clock in the morning we stopped, my eyes were unbound, and I found myself amidst a very rough and mountainous country, surrounded by low mountains, so that it was impossible for me to see any landmark from which I could judge my position. But as it seemed very cold to me, I judged that I had been carried to one of the neighboring volcanoes near Puebla, and thought that it was the Malintzi, a large mountain to the northeast of the city. However, this idea was banished later on by the fact that during the day it was very warm, and on account of so many mosquitoes, from which I deduced that I must be lower than I at first thought.

"I was kept busy that day (Monday) in a small cave, guarded by six men, but among them I was unable to recognize the leader of the band who had captured me.

"I was allowed to write to my wife, which I did, and delivered the letter to the man in charge of my guard, whom the men called 'Coronel,' and I presume that he was one of Cordoba's confidential men, and have reason to think he was Cordoba's brother, from later information.

"I was of course very anxious to know where I was, and who my captors were, but in reply to my inquiry as to my whereabouts, I was informed that I was in the mountains, and as to the identity of my captors, I was told that it was "Men of Caraveo." As Marcelo Caraveo is one of the most prominent of all the rebel leaders, I could not know if they were telling the truth or merely deceiving me, but decided on the latter, as I had not heard of Caraveo being near this region lately. However, later developments prove that it was true, as Cordoba belongs to the division of Caraveo and they both depend directly on Pelaez, the rebel leader near Tampico.

"When I first arrived at the cave mentioned I saw in the low mountain just across from the cave quite a number of armed and mounted men, probably about 100. I believe that they belonged to this same band, though I am not sure about it, nor did I ever see them again, as they left soon after my arrival there. I was kept in the cave that day and that night, but on Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock my guards and I mounted on horses and traveled for several hours again, my eyes again covered, and I was unable to judge the direction traveled. About daylight we arrived at the spot indicated for our next camp, and this time it was out in the open, on the side of a mountain and at the foot of a steep cliff, where I was hidden in the low shrubbery growing there. I was changed again on Wednesday morning and again on Friday morning, always moving just before day. I soon formed the conclusion that I was being hidden from other rebel bands, as every precaution was taken to not allow me to be seen, as well as the guards always hid themselves on the approach of anyone. Numerous natives were gathering wood from time to time near our hiding places, as well as charcoal burners, but great care was taken that we be not seen. I saw from time to time numerous bands of mounted men riding around on the mountains, and also many camp fires at night, from which I infer that the region is completely full of rebels.

"On Tuesday night it rained all night, and I was in the open and had no protection whatever from the rain. I was completely soaked, and on Wednesday morning did the best I could to dry my clothes in the sun. This same thing happened on Wednesday and Thursday nights, and on Thursday night I began to suffer severe pains from rheumatism in my right leg.

"This rapidly grew worse, and on Saturday I was in a most deplorable state, being unable to arise from the ground, and suffering constantly the most excruciating pain from my leg. I was unable to eat or sleep and began to have fever. Also the mosquitoes troubled me excessively, to such an extent that my face, neck, and hands were very swollen. For two days my left eye was swollen almost shut, but this might have been from the bite of some other insect. The guards did not treat me roughly, but did what they could, but as they had nothing to give me, I was unable to get any relief of any kind. In fact, I did not even have water to drink, as these men are all accustomed to drink out of the puddles found in the fields and roads, and I was not able to drink this water very well. I often suffered from actual thirst. The repeated wetting suffered by us all did not apparently affect them, and I suppose that they are used to it. Of course, we all passed the nights lying on the ground, with a blanket for a bed, and fortunately I had my overcoat for cover. During this time I had frequent talks with the coronel who guarded me, and until I was taken sick we discussed the press reports of my kidnapping, as we always received the Puebla papers the same day, and he was very angry that the Mexican Government did not at once offer to pay the 300,000 pesos that he demanded for my ransom. My captor had indicated to me and to my wife in my office, before carrying me away, that he would exact this ransom for my liberty. He said that he would hold me until they did, and repeated to me that he did not want me to pay 1 cent, but that the Government must pay. At that time I was not positive whether the "coronel" was the man who had entered my home or not, on account of being much taller and heavier than I had judged my captor to be. I failed to mention also that before I was carried away from my home, the leader told me and my wife that I would be immediately killed if any attempt was made to follow them or to attack them while I was held prisoner, and, of course, my wife's first efforts were to prevent any persecution being made until I was released.

"This was secured with difficulty, as the authorities wanted to at once give pursuit to the bandits, but fortunately it was avoided, and my life was thus saved, as I would have undoubtedly been killed in such a case.

"The coronel told me to tell my wife this in my letters, which I did. He also during the days I was with him, instructed me to write my wife to hurry as much as possible the arrangement of the ransom, and gave me a copy of certain conditions that he said had been sent to my wife, in which it was stated that unless the money was paid by a certain date, I would be shot.

"During this time, my friends had been very active to discover my whereabouts, finding great difficulty in doing this on account of the fact that I myself did not know where I was, and on account of the fact that the rebel Cordoba did not want it known that he had me prisoner.

"However, due to my intimate friend, Senor Lic. Eduardo Mestre, I was finally located, on the Friday following my capture, and on that day, Lic. Mestre in a conversation with Cordoba in his camp, secured the admission from Cordoba that he was holding me. I knew absolutely nothing of all this, as up to this time Frederico Cordoba had not presented himself to me, but on Saturday afternoon, October the 25th Cordoba himself came to where I was held in company with Lic. Mestre, and I talked with him for the first time.

"He repeated to me in the presence of Lic. Mestre what he had said the night of my capture, and what the "coronel" had told me many times that he regretted having to cause me so much trouble and suffering, but that he himself was only an intermediary, and could not alter the conditions of my ransom, and that it was impossible to release me for less than the sum of 300,000 pesos Mexican gold. As Lic. Mestre saw the deplorable condition in which I was at that time, and as I myself felt that I would not be able to live much longer without medical attention, as my leg was growing worse all the time, I told Lic. Mestre that something would have to be done, and while I had resisted the idea of paying the ransom still I agreed to it, in view of my grave condition. Lic. Mestre explained to Cordoba the impossibility of raising such an enormous sum on such short notice, as well as the inconvenience of trying to bring out such an amount of money in gold as Cordoba had demanded, pointing out to him that the weight of the gold would be about 600 pounds, and offering to pay the money in the form, time and place that Cordoba desired. Also it was pointed out to Cordoba that in case of my death, no ransom could be collected, and he himself saw that I was very ill. Lic. Mestre desired to carry me with him at once, but Cordoba flatly refused such an idea, but after leaving me, he and Lic. Mestre agreed that he would deliver me the next day against the payment of at least 30,000 pesos in gold, all the drafts that could be secured, and a document signed by friends of mine responding with their lives for the payment of this balance.

"The visit of Lic. Mestre was the first time that I knew exactly where I was, or in whose hands I was, although I had formed an approximate idea as to my location before. Cordoba passed the night with me that night, and probably seeing I was very ill, on Sunday morning early, he set out with me in the direction of Puebla. I had to be tied to my horse to keep from falling and at times the pain in my leg was so intense that I almost fainted. We traveled about three hours, arriving at a point called "The Dam," where we waited until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. I thought that I was waiting for my friends to come for me, but it developed later that Cordoba had not brought me to the place where Lic. Mestre was to come with the money, but to a point quite distant, and we were waiting for advice to come that the money had been paid, or was ready to be paid. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, a messenger came to Cordoba and he then advised me that my ransom had been satisfied and that I was free. He assisted me to a house down by the dam, where there was a telephone with Puebla, and I advised my friends where I was, and they immediately sent for me. Cordoba stayed with me until he knew that I was being sent for and then left. My friends sent for me immediately, and I arrived in Puebla about 6 o'clock on Sunday night, October the 26th. I was taken to the American Hospital here, where my wife was ill, and remained there a week and was then removed to my home. I am recovering rapidly from the effects of my experience and hope to be entirely well in a few days.

"Lic. Mestre waited at another point for Cordoba until late in the afternoon, when he finally arrived, and paid on account of my ransom the sum of 34,000 pesos in Mexican gold, 20,000 pesos in drafts, or a total of 54,000 pesos in cash. He also delivered to Cordoba a written obligation, by the terms of which five of my friends responded with their lives for the payment of the rest of the ransom money, which document Cordoba accepted as cash, and he extended a receipt for the entire 300,000 pesos, as well as for the sum of approximately 50,000 pesos that he had taken from my safes.

"Since my release further payments have been made on account of the balance due, and total payments now approximate 100,000 pesos. It is my intention to make arrangements as best I can for the immediate payment of all the balance due and recover the document that was extended to Cordoba, thus releasing my friends from the great responsibility they have assumed. I feel absolutely certain that any failure to comply with the obligations of that document would result in the immediate death of these friends and myself, as it is well known that the rebels can with all ease perpetrate most any crime that they desire.

"It is proper to say that the government of this State did not assist in any practical way to my release, for while they did arrest many people and create a great stir by their apparent activities, they did nothing at all of a practical nature, and their activities served more as a disturbance than as an assistance. My release was due to my own friends here. I feel that these men have been instrumental in saving my life, for it is due to their efforts that I was reached in time and ransomed when found.

"I will not say that the payment of this ransom and the money taken from my safe will result in any financial disaster to me, for I have property that is worth more, but it has placed me in an exceedingly critical condition for the moment, inasmuch as I do not have the money to make these payments, and I am therefore attempting to borrow the money for the moment and make the payment and then repay it as I am able to sell some property to pay it back. If I am unable to borrow the money I will be unable to comply with the obligation, as I have no way of realizing this amount of cash on short notice.

"It is worthy of attention to take note of the attitude of the State government of Puebla assumed towards this incident, for almost immediately after my capture the official paper of the governor published the opinion that I had been instrumental in my own kidnapping, and that I had formed a plot with the rebels and other friends of mine to cause international difficulties. Also that it was the intention to collect this ransom from the Mexican Government and divide it, etc. It is impossible to express my indignation at this outrage on the part of the local authorities, and they have persisted in persecuting me in every way possible until a few days ago. Even while I was in the hospital, unable to see anyone, the judge in charge of the case, in repeated instances, attempted to cause me trouble, and it was only by the stand taken by the director of the hospital that I was not annoyed. I am glad to say that the best element of this city has recognized in these attacks only an effort on the part of the governor to avoid the responsibility of his criminal neglect of the protection of the city, and it is a source of much satisfaction to me to have received assurances from thousands of people here in this city and from other places as well that the governor's plan is well understood.

"I will say in this connection that I am not, nor have ever been, an enemy of the governor, but on the contrary have always been on the very best of terms with him, and have been able during his term to render him valuable assistance at different times. This makes his action the more repugnant. It is believed that it was the intention of the authorities to arrest me, for they tried by every means to get me removed from the hospital to my home, and even resorted to having an examination made of my person by a corps of medical men of the city to determine if I could be removed.

"I accepted this examination only because I wanted to show the greatest willingness to assist them in their investigation, but their own doctors were forced to sign a report declaring that I was ill and could not under any circumstances be removed for the moment.

"I have given all the declarations asked for, and stand ready to give any further information that may be required of me.

"Even my friends have been persecuted, and Lic. Mestre, who was so instrumental in saving my life, has been arrested on trumped-up charges, and has actually been declared 'worthy of imprisonment,' and is out on bond.

"It is needless to say that I am assisting him in every way possible and will continue to do so until he is free from further trouble.

"I wish to say that I have always taken proper precautions for the protection of my home, and have a watchman during the whole night, but on the night of my capture the watchman had been overpowered and tied previous to the attack on me. I was told while in the mountains that they had gained access to my house by one of their men slipping into the factory on Sunday morning and hiding until night, when he assisted the others to enter. It is also in order for me to say that before this incident this city was not properly protected, as all the roads into the city were without guards and the rebels were free to come and go as they liked.

"I was told by them that they frequently came into the city on horseback in groups of four and five without suffering the least molestation.

"They always stated to me that it would have been easy for them to capture the city, but they recognized the fact that they did not have sufficient elements to hold it, and for that reason had not attacked the place.

"My home and the whole section in which I live has always lacked sufficient police protection, and before this incident the nearest policeman was five streets from my house. Naturally, the rebels had no fear from that source. I am asking for better protection in the future.

"A very important matter is that, although the local government could hardly be restrained from sending troops out immediately to punish my captors when they learned of my capture, they have made the slightest effort to do so since I returned 12 days ago, although they have been incited to do so, but excuse themselves by saying that they will do so.

"The rebels are only a few miles distant; they have been there for months and years; they plant, cultivate, and gather their crops entirely unmolested; the whole countryside is with them; and yet the Government apparently makes no effort to drive them away and give decent protection to this city. There are in the immediate vicinity of this city not less than a half dozen important bands of rebels, all of them well known to the Government, and no determined effort has ever been made to fight them. This is the situation as it is to-day of this city.

"My entire loss in this matter has been about as follows (Mexican gold):

"Ransom paid and to be paid.....	$300,000.00
"Money and effects stolen from office.....	50,523.65
"Money taken from my pocket.....	122.00
"Hospital fees for myself and wife.....	320.00
"Expenses for telegrams.....	435.26
"Expenses for messengers to mountains.....	170.00
"Expenses for automobiles and coaches.....	121.00
"Expenses Lic. Mestre while in Puebla.....	550.00
"To be paid to lawyers in his defense, as well as remuneration for himself, as he is a poor man.....	5,000.00

"Total..... 357,341.91"

The following is the text of the Mexican Government's reply, dated November 26, 1919, to the American note of November 20 regarding case of William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent at Puebla.

"Mr. CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES: I am instructed by the President of the Republic to reply in the form in which I am doing to note No. 1533 of November 20, which you addressed to the Mexican Government under instructions from the Department of State of the United States.

"I must not conceal from you that the attention of the Mexican Government has been called strongly to the fact that no legal foundation, no principle or precedent of international law, and not even a reason were invoked in demanding the immediate liberty of Mr. Jenkins who, as you know, is at the present moment placed under the authority of a judge in the city of Puebla. The Mexican Government does not see what foundation there may be for such a demand; it believes that it may not be solely the strength of the country which makes it, inasmuch as the United States has characterized itself by its desire expressed on various occasions that right and justice should be the motto of its diplomacy and respect for weak countries the basis of its international relations on the continent; and prefers to attribute the terms of the note to which I reply to an imperfect knowledge of our penal laws.

"The imprisonment of Mr. Jenkins is neither unjustified nor arbitrary as your note asserts, he himself having rendered and signed contradictory testimonies concerning the abduction of which he was the victim. The judge has had sufficient cause for supposing him to be responsible for the crime of rendering false judicial testimony, and this has merited his imprisonment. However, this imprisonment does not in itself signify that Mr. Jenkins is culpable, as this can only be established by a final judgment.

"You are aware that in Mexican penal procedure there are three classes of imprisonment: The preventive, when it is suspected that a person is criminally responsible in a crime; the formal, when there is sufficient evidence against the accused in the opinion of the judge to suppose him to be responsible for the deed; and ordinary imprisonment or the one imposed by a final sentence as a punishment properly so called for the duly proven crime and culpability of the accused. The first two classes of imprisonment are not legally penalties but simply restrictions on the liberty of the accused as a means of investigating the truth.

"The sentence may also establish the innocence of the accused. Mr. Jenkins suffered preventive detention and 72 hours later formal imprisonment. This is the reason for his having been rearrested, and this is the circumstance which appears to be considered by the Government of the United States as a persecution or as a series of molestations being unjustifiably inflicted on the consul.

"During the course of the prosecution the accused may at any time request and obtain his liberty under bail. Mexican law is very liberal in granting it, the request and deposit of the amount fixed by the judge sufficing. Mr. Jenkins, by refusing to exercise this right notwithstanding he has been invited repeatedly to do so, and that the judge has fixed as bond the sum of 1,000 pesos, can not strictly speaking call himself a victim of molestations which he voluntarily inflicts upon himself, and furthermore he is being held in prison with all the attentions and comforts compatible with his condition.

"He being, therefore, subject to a prosecution which is being conducted in accordance with the dictates of law under the authority of a judge whose acts are not secret but are under the constant vigilance of public opinion, which is interested in having the truth become known in this matter, the Mexican Government finds itself unable to grant the demand for liberty contained in the note under reply, and it is supported by strong reasons founded on the law of nations and considerations of a constitutional nature. Under the former it considers that no Government may make a diplomatic reclamation in favor of one of its subjects in foreign countries excepting in the cases of denial of justice or of a notoriously unjust sentence which is also under international law a case of denial of justice, and that the practice has invariably been followed of waiting till the tribunals handling a case concerning a foreigner have pronounced judgment, which I repeat, should it be notoriously unjust would be the sole basis on which a representation could be made.

"As regards the constitutional point of view our political constitution establishes as a mental principle the separation of the attributes of the executive power and those of the judicial department, and therefore the executive is not empowered to interfere in matters pertaining to the latter. Likewise the autonomy of the States is guaranteed by our charta, and by virtue of the federative structure of the Mexican Republic the federal power can not intervene in matters which, like that of Mr. ———, corresponds properly and exclusively to the authorities of the State of Puebla. For this reason the executive could not issue orders to the judge handling the case to have Mr. Jenkins placed at liberty, since that official would with reason refuse to obey the same in case it were given and the executive would thus violate the first principle of government with which he has always endeavored to comply—that is to say, respect of, and securing respect for, the laws of the country. Very well. This conduct, in the opinion of the Mexican Government, can not affect unfavorably the friendly relations which happily exist between Mexico and the United States, above all as the case is one of so simple a nature in which by complying with so small a requirement, Mr. Jenkins would be placed at liberty, since the equal application to nationals and foreigners alike of the laws of each of the two countries can never be the cause of friction between those countries.

"In the United States, on some occasions, Mexican consuls have suffered imprisonment for deeds coming under the scope of the laws and of the authorities of the country; and the Mexican Government, even though in its opinion such imprisonment was unjustified, has never permitted itself to make the slightest suggestion looking to the nonapplication in each case of the laws of the United States, inasmuch as its practice has invariably been to respect the laws of other countries, and it does not claim that Mexicans abroad should make of their Mexican citizenship a title for exceptions and privileges.

"Neither in the United States nor in Mexico may any citizen under prosecution be liberated by an order emanating from the Executive, and it would be strange that in Mexico an American citizen should have greater rights than those he has in his own country or greater than those which a Mexican citizen has in Mexico. Neither can the Government of Mexico concede to American citizens greater rights than those enjoyed in the United States by Mexicans.

"The Government of the United States appears to act under the conviction that Mr. Jenkins is absolutely innocent notwithstanding the fact that this matter is in the course of investigation. The Mexican Government, without attempting to claim that Mr. Jenkins is culpable, limits itself to submitting the foregoing considerations to the United States, trusting that the Department of State will postpone its judgment until the tribunals have pronounced their sentence, being assured that the officials of the Mexican Government have no intentions of causing molestations or persecutions to Mr. Jenkins, but solely a sincere desire to act with justice.

"This opportunity affords me, et cetera.

"S. MEDINA."

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
DIVISION OF FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE,
December 1, 1919.

The Secretary of State on November 29, 1919, sent a note to the Mexican Government, through the American embassy at Mexico City, renewing the request of the Government of the United States for the immediate release of William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent at Puebla, Mexico, who was kidnapped at Puebla, subsequently released on payment of ransom, and then arrested by the Mexican authorities at Puebla. The note is in answer to that of November 26, 1919, from the Mexican foreign office.

The note directs the American chargé d'affaires, Mr. Summerlin, to communicate the following at once to the Mexican Government:

"I have not failed to transmit to my Government the note of the Mexican Government dated November 26, 1919, with reference to the case of William O. Jenkins, American consular agent, at Puebla, and I am now in receipt of a reply from the Government of the United States which I am instructed immediately to transmit to you.

"The Government of the United States declines to be drawn into a juridical discussion of irrelevant matters or unimportant incidents brought forward in connection with this case. The Mexican Government can not be misled, as it intimates, by the citation by the United States of 'no principle or precedent of international law, and not even a reason' for Jenkins's release; for obviously no such citation is necessary for the enlightenment of a government of the present day. The Mexican Government believes, and rightly so, that the American request for Jenkins's release is not based on 'solely the strength of the country which makes it,' for it knows the request is founded on the justice of the right of an American citizen and United States consular officer to fair treatment while residing and discharging his duties within Mexican jurisdiction with the knowledge and approval of the Mexican Government.

"The Mexican Government may contend that the imprisonment of the victim is necessary for the investigation by a judge under the 'constant vigilance of public opinion' of the truth regarding his abduction and that a right of release on bail is a palliative for such wrongful imprisonment, but the United States is constrained to the opinion that such arguments are mere excuses. The Government of the United States invites and desires the fullest possible examination and investigation of this case, but it can not admit that it is necessary in order to ascertain the facts that Mr.

Jenkins should be retained in prison even with the privilege of applying for bail. My Government will not and is satisfied that Mr. Jenkins will not place any obstacle in the way of a complete and full examination of himself or his witnesses, or of the events, leading up to and connected with his abduction. The Mexican Government prefers to attribute the American note to an imperfect knowledge of the Mexican penal laws and proceeds to explain with refinement the intricacies of Mexican penal proceedings. But the Government of the United States fails to discern in their application to this case at the hands of Mexican authorities any approximation to impartial treatment of Jenkins, and the Mexican Government knows the absence of such treatment is the reason for the American request.

"The Mexican Government maintains that it can not grant the request of the United States for Jenkins's release for the reason that under international law no diplomatic intervention is appropriate unless a denial of justice has occurred and because the Mexican Government is not in a position to demand Jenkins's release in view of the separation of the executive and judicial powers under the Mexican form of Government and the independence of the State courts, by one of which Jenkins is held. The succinct answer to this contention is, as everyone knows, that a denial of justice has already taken place, and also because the Mexican constitution specifically gives the Federal tribunals jurisdiction of 'all cases concerning diplomatic agents and consular officers.'

"The United States is not to be driven by such subtle arguments into a defense of its request for the release of Mr. Jenkins. It is for Mexico to show cause for his detention, not for the United States to plead for his liberation. Stripped of extraneous matter, with which the Mexican note of November 26, endeavors to clothe it, the naked case of Jenkins stands forth: Jenkins, a United States Consular Agent, accredited to the Government of Mexico is imprisoned for 'rendering false judicial testimony,' in connection with the abduction of which he was the victim. This is the substance of the Mexican note.

"My Government is pleased to learn that the imprisonment of Jenkins stands on this single, and well-defined ground, and that the reported statements that Mexican authorities had caused the imprisonment of Jenkins because of collusion with his abductors and rebellion against the State are not seriously regarded by your Government.

"In whose interest then is the charge of false swearing brought against Jenkins? His abductors? He is in equity the complainant in the case of his abduction, not the defendant, as the Mexican Government now makes him out to be. The Mexican Government is prosecuting the victim instead of the perpetrators of the crime. While the outlaws, who endangered his life and took away a large part of his fortune, enjoy their freedom, the Mexican authorities now deprive Jenkins of his liberty. Moreover, the ground expressed for the imprisonment of Jenkins, namely, that he is supposed 'to be responsible for the crime of rendering false judicial testimony' must be taken—and my Government directs special attention to this point—as merely an expression of opinion on the part of the Mexican Government as it is entirely unsupported by evidence. There is not produced any of the testimony rendered by him, or any extracts from such testimony tending to show the correctness of this opinion. The Mexican Government can not expect the United States to accept in the grave circumstances of this case such a bare unsupported statement as a valid excuse for the imprisonment of an American consular officer, particularly in view of the fact that the investigation of the case by the representatives of the United States in Mexico, so far as it has proceeded, fails utterly to support this opinion of your Government.

"On the contrary the investigation gives the Government of the United States every reason to believe that Mr. Jenkins has not knowingly given any false testimony in respect of vital points in his case; although he has been harassed by Mexican authorities to give such testimony, even while lying in the hospital too weak and exhausted to make them as a result of his treatment by the abductors, and while he knew evidence was being obtained against him through intimidation of witnesses. So stands the single, unsupported, and my Government believes utterly unfounded, ground alleged for Jenkins's imprisonment.

"What conclusion is to be drawn from such a reply of the Mexican Government other than there has been a studied effort on the part of Mexican authorities to ensnare Jenkins in the intricacies of legal proceedings by alleging the commission of technical offenses, and by bringing unsupported charges against him, for a purpose: In the first place, to divert the attention of the American public and the American Government, and indeed of Mexicans themselves, from the actual situation, namely that Puebla, the capital of the State of Puebla, and perhaps the second largest city in Mexico, is without adequate protection from outlaws who infest the immediate neighborhood and who were accustomed openly and freely to visit the city without hindrance, that by the failure to furnish adequate protection in this district the Mexican authorities have, through their negligence, made possible the abduction of Jenkins, and that in harmony with such an attitude on the part of the Mexican authorities they have failed to carry out the duty and obligation incumbent upon them to apprehend and punish the bandits concerned in the crime of which Jenkins was the victim. And in the second place it appears to have been the purpose of the Mexican Government to assume a willful indifference to the feelings of the American people that have been aroused to the point of indignation by the exposure, hardships, and physical suffering endured by Jenkins during his abduction and his subsequent treatment at the hands of the Mexican authorities.

"In view of the considerations which have been set forth and in view particularly of the belief of my Government that the charge against Jenkins of deliberate false swearing is unfounded, the Government of the United States must renew its request for the immediate release of Consular Agent Jenkins from further imprisonment.

"LANXING."

No. 174.

LEGACION DE LOS ESTADOS UNIDOS DEL BRASIL,
Mexico, May 7, 1915.

The SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have been requested by the American Society of Mexico and the international committee to transmit to you the following document:

"The American Society of Mexico and the International Committee of Foreign Residents unit in an expression of thanks and appreciation for the efforts made by the American Government and representatives, through which 34 sacks of foreign mail have just been received here from the accumulations at Vera Cruz, the first from there since February.

"Urgent appeal is hereby made to the Washington Government that effective steps be taken to put the capital city of Mexico again into communication with the world, by the reopening of at least one railway line for traffic to Vera Cruz, or the northern border. Isolation has been almost complete since the beginning of the present year. The movement of passengers, freight and mails has been stopped, and private cablegrams are unwarrantably censored.

"The capital is suffering a lingering death. The indifference of those engaged in the present warfare of factions, toward the necessities of the great majority of the people of Mexico, native and foreign, is daily bringing about greater complications, which will render a solution of the Mexican problem still more difficult.

"The food situation is acute and there is much suffering in the city. Flour is selling up to 1 peso per pound (equal to the daily wage of a common laborer who can not indulge in such food); meat also up to a peso per pound, and corn 25 centavos a pound. Many articles of medical supplies in the city are exhausted and hospitals have been stripped of surgical instruments by outgoing troops. There is urgent need of carbons for street lamps and of other articles vital to public health and protection.

"The Washington Government two months ago renewed its advice that Americans leave Mexico until conditions become more settled and followed it with the suggestion from Gen. Carranza that other foreigners, also, leave Mexico City. Unfortunately there has been no way open to act upon the advice since it was given, even for those Americans and other foreign residents whose circumstances and responsibilities would permit them to leave.

Three travelers were shot last week while trying to get from this city to Pachuca, 50 miles away. A number of Americans who have attempted recently to leave by automobile or other conveyance have been turned back by armed men, regardless of passports some of which were signed by the convention president, Roque Gonzalez Garza.

"The censorship of private and commercial telegrams by the conventionalist authorities here, and also the Carrancistas at Vera Cruz, is so strict that residents can not explain to relatives or correspondents abroad either their situation or their actions. Cablegrams can not be sent if they refer to stoppage of mails or other abnormal conditions, although such interference with foreign service is in contravention of the cable company's franchise, while the country is not engaged in foreign war. Remittances can not be made by mail and this interference with cablegrams renders difficult or impossible arrangement by telegraph of maturing obligations, such as life-insurance premiums and commercial paper. Foreign residents who are awaiting mail remittances from abroad are, many of them, dependent temporarily on assistance from friends here or from relief committees.

"Fresh evidences of anti-American feeling are seen in proposed legislation in anonymous threatening letters, in public speeches, in utterances by delegates in the convention, and in the Mexican press. This attitude toward Americans is justified by Mexicans here, on the ground that the 'United States is showing partiality toward the Carrancista cause.'

"Attention must be called to the report that goods at Vera Cruz destined for the merchants of this city (on some of which the import duties have already been paid) and held for months in Government warehouses at Vera Cruz, because of closing of the railways, are now being removed, without hindrance by the authorities there, and sold or used by persons having no right or claim to warrant such action; and this despite the assurances of protection given by the Carrancista government when the American troops were withdrawn from Vera Cruz.

"The hope is expressed among foreigners here that the special representatives from the United States who are attached to particular chiefs may not be deterred by an excessive desire to maintain agreeable relations with those leaders from furnishing the Washington Government with complete, accurate, and impartial reports of what actually transpires in their locality."

With renewed assurances of my highest consideration, I have the honor to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

J. M. CARDOSO DE OLIVEIRA,
Brazilian Minister, in charge of American Interests in Mexico.

INVESTIGATION OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS

HEARING

BEFORE A

SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS UNITED STATES SENATE

SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS

SECOND SESSION

PURSUANT TO

S. Res. 106

DIRECTING THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS TO INVESTIGATE THE MATTER OF OUTRAGES ON CITIZENS
OF THE UNITED STATES IN MEXICO

PART 22

Printed for the use of the Committee on Foreign Relations

WASHINGTON
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
1920

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Massachusetts, Chairman.

PORTER J. McCUMBER, North Dakota.	GILBERT H. HITCHCOCK, Nebraska.
WILLIAM E. BORAH, Idaho.	JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Mississippi.
FRANK B. BRANDEGEE, Connecticut.	CLAUDE A. SWANSON, Virginia.
ALBERT B. FALL, New Mexico.	ATLEE POMERENE, Ohio.
PHILANDER C. KNOX, Pennsylvania.	MARCUS A. SMITH, Arizona.
WARREN G. HARDING, Ohio.	KEY PITTMAN, Nevada.
HIRAM W. JOHNSON, California.	JOHN K. SHIELDS, Tennessee.
HARRY S. NEW, Indiana.
GEORGE H. MOSES, New Hampshire.

C. F. REDMOND, Clerk.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

ALBERT B. FALL, Chairman.

FRANK B. BRANDEGEE.	MARCUS A. SMITH.
DAN M. JACKSON, Clerk.

INVESTIGATION OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 19, 1920.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Washington, D. C.

The subcommittee met, pursuant to adjournment, at 2.30 o'clock p. m., in Room 128, Senate Office Building, Senator Albert B. Fall, presiding.

STATEMENT OF ADMIRAL WILLIAM BANKS CAPERTON.

The CHAIRMAN. Admiral, we have been in the habit of administering an oath to the witnesses, but in your case that will not be required. You have taken an oath to support the Government and Constitution of the United States.

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You may state your full name?

Admiral CAPERTON. William Banks Caperton.

The CHAIRMAN. What has been your profession?

Admiral CAPERTON. The naval profession, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you enter the profession?

Admiral CAPERTON. June, 1871.

The CHAIRMAN. During recent years, particularly from 1915 down to and through 1919, what rank have you held in the Navy?

Admiral CAPERTON. I was rear admiral up to July, 1916, when I became a full admiral, and was commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you now retired?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you retire?

Admiral CAPERTON. June 30, 1919.

The CHAIRMAN. During the year 1915, or a portion of that year, where did your duties call you?

Admiral CAPERTON. In Haiti and the east coast of Mexico, the Gulf of Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you take charge on the west coast of Mexico?

Admiral CAPERTON. I took charge on the west coast of Mexico on July 28, 1916.

The CHAIRMAN. Admiral, the committee has been anxious to have your statement as to what you discovered generally about the conditions, what your ideas are about the conditions in Mexico, and your experience there in dealing with the Mexican Government, or any of the factions, your orders, etc., reports you may have made which you are able to give the committee, and we ask you to go ahead in your own language and make your own statement.

Admiral CAPERTON. I desire to preface my remarks with the statement that I was senior officer present on the east coast of Mexico from March to June, 1915, and was commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet from July 28, 1916, until April 30, 1919. I operated in the Pacific from the time I took command of the Pacific Fleet until the latter part of May, 1917, when the larger part of my force including myself in my flagship were transferred to the Atlantic to take part in war operations.

During the time I was senior officer present on the east coast of Mexico; that is, from March to June, 1915, Gen. Carranza was the head of the de facto government of Mexico with headquarters at Vera Cruz, but he had not as yet been recognized by the United States. Carranza was first chief of the Constitutional Army in charge of the executive power, and Gutierrez was in Mexico City as provisional President of the Republic elected by the convention of Aguascalientes. Villa and Zapata were both active against each other and against the other two as well. It is interesting to note that within three days after the evacuation of Vera Cruz by the American forces and approximately one month after his recognition by the United States Carranza found it desirable to transfer his headquarters to Vera Cruz, a seaport town at one end of his country.

I made arrangements at Tampico at a time when the Villistas were threatening the city, to use one of the German interned vessels as a place of refuge for foreigners. I sent a boat up the river to consult with the Villista general and this boat was fired upon but no damage incurred and the officers succeeded in communicating with the Villistas for the purpose of protecting foreigners in case of an investment of the city.

While I was at Vera Cruz and Carranza had his headquarters there, I consulted frequently with the State Department officials and from what I gathered, I trust that they did not transmit verbatim all the notes received from the Mexican authorities.

The CHAIRMAN. Admiral, might I ask you not as to the contents of those notes, but why you expressed the hope that those notes have not been transmitted verbatim?

Admiral CAPERTON. As I understand, they were not very complimentary and rather impertinent, and not such as I expected would be written to our Government.

The CHAIRMAN. They did not by any means meet with your approval, as to the character of diplomatic or other notes which should be submitted to a Government?

Admiral CAPERTON. No, sir. Of course, I did not see the notes, but that was generally understood.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was, at this time, if you know, acting as diplomatic representative of the United States in Mexico?

Admiral CAPERTON. I think Mr. John R. Silliman was special representative of the President.

The CHAIRMAN. Prior to or at the time that Carranza occupied Vera Cruz, do you know whether the affairs of the American Government generally had been placed in the hands of the representative of any other country—the Brazilian minister or other foreign representative?

Admiral CAPERTON. I can not recall that just now.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, you may proceed.

Admiral CAPERTON. West coast—conditions in the fleet when I assumed command. First. On July 28, 1916, I assumed command of the Pacific Fleet, at San Diego, Calif., hoisting my flag on the armored cruiser San Diego. I found that all available ships in the Pacific had in June been ordered to Mexican waters, and that Admiral Winslow whom I relieved had distributed them on the day I took command, as follows: Acapulco, U. S. S. Pittsburgh; Guaymas, U. S. S. Cleveland and U. S. S. Yorktown; La Paz, U. S. S. Milwaukee, U. S. S. Denver, supply ship, eight destroyers, and two colliers; Mazatlan, South Dakota; Topolobampo, Annapolis; Manzanillo, U. S. S. Maryland and U. S. S. Raleigh (en route); Salina Cruz, U. S. S. Colorado (Rear Admiral Fullam) and U. S. S. Chattanooga.

This distribution of ships to Mexican waters had been due to developments in Mexican affairs. Just previous to this our troops, entering Mexico as a punitive expedition against bandits, had been fired upon near Parral and a boat attached to the U. S. S. Annapolis had been fired upon by natives at Mazatlan. As I remember, Admiral Winslow's instructions as turned over to me were: (a) To order all available ships to Mexico, (b) not to land unless directed by the department.

The CHAIRMAN. What was about the date those orders were turned over to you?

Admiral CAPERTON. July 28.

The CHAIRMAN. In the year 1916?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, you may proceed.

Admiral CAPERTON. (c) To encourage Americans and other foreigners to leave Mexico until conditions became more settled and to facilitate the departure of such Americans and foreigners; (d) to allow no unnecessary communication with shore in Mexico.

Second. My instructions and policies outlined to me. In traveling from Haiti to assume command of the Pacific Fleet I was directed to proceed via Washington, which I did, reporting to Admiral Benson, Chief of Naval Operations. Admiral Benson impressed upon me very strongly the desire of the Government to keep out of trouble with Mexico. I was to take drastic steps in carrying out the instructions already given to Admiral Winslow to prevent the creation of any situation by the Navy which would involve the two Governments. I was not to start trouble and as far as possible I was to see that the Mexicans had no opportunity to start trouble with the Navy. In carrying out these policies I issued the following circular letters:

1. The commander in chief has not been informed of any change in the policy of the Government regarding Mexico since the instructions issued during the crisis in June. The situation remains acute and every endeavor must be made to carry out the wishes of the department that the Navy take no chance at causing or being a party to trouble with Mexico. All intercourse with Mexicans must be avoided, except such as may take place aboard our own ships or in making calls aboard Mexican men-of-war. Senior officers present at the various ports must not be misled by an apparent improvement in local conditions. The general condition of the country will eventually dominate. One irresponsible native, if he has the opportunity, may provoke matters. It is against such a contingency that we must always be on our guard. The policy remains that Americans should leave Mexico and our ships afford them refuge until transportation is available.

2. The department's message "Allow no unnecessary communication Mexican shore until further orders" will be interpreted as follows:

(a) Ships to anchor in such berths as to reduce to a minimum danger from attack by organized bodies or irresponsible individuals, and in such position that exit to sea can not be made hazardous.

(b) No officer or man to land on Mexican territory except in case of urgent necessity.

(c) Ship's boats not to go in to landings except when absolutely necessary. When officials or prominent people on shore are desired on board for the acquisition of information, and it is impracticable for them to come out in shore boats, ship's boats may touch at landings during daylight to bring them off and land them ashore, but ship's boats are not to remain alongside landing. Refugees may be brought on board under the same restrictions. In each specific case of a ship's boat going in to the landing, the senior officer present shall satisfy himself as far as possible that local conditions warrant such procedure.

(d) Fishing and boating parties should keep well clear of the shore.

(e) In all cases, the senior officer present at each port will be held strictly accountable for any future embarrassment to the Government, within his jurisdiction, which might have been avoided.

W. B. CAPERTON.

Third. In view of an apparent ignorance at Manzanillo concerning the reasons for our nonintercourse with shore, I transmitted the following confidential letter to the vessels of my command:

UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET,
U. S. S. "SAN DIEGO," FLAGSHIP,
Manzanillo, Colima, Mexico, August 14, 1916.

Confidential.

To: Commander reserve force, United States Pacific Fleet, commander coast torpedo force, United States Pacific Fleet, and all commanding officers, United States Pacific Fleet.

Subject: Nonintercourse with shore, Mexican waters.

1. The commander in chief has been informed that the inhabitants of at least one Mexican port are in ignorance of the Mazatlan incident and that they consequently misconstrue our lack of communication with shore.

2. The commander in chief desires that it be impressed upon Mexican officials, directly, when on board our ships, or through our representatives, that this condition of nonintercourse with shore has been brought about by the Mexican people themselves through the unfriendly acts of their countrymen at Mazatlan in an unwarranted attack by rifle fire upon one of our ship's boats; that the Navy regrets that its continued feeling of friendship toward Mexico has apparently not been reciprocated, as evidenced by the above occurrence; that, therefore, in its desire to avoid any possible future trouble by a repetition of the Mazatlan incident or by other unlawful acts of irresponsible persons, it is prompted to restrict communication with shore, and thus prevent subjecting its personnel to possible further insult; that our ships in the various ports are not to be regarded as a menace, but are there for the purpose of transporting to other parts our subjects, as well as those of other foreign countries who may desire to leave on account of unsettled conditions.

W. B. CAPERTON.

The CHAIRMAN. Admiral, would it interrupt you to ask you what induced you, or what caused you, to use the statement in the letters of instructions or orders which you have just quoted, to the effect that you knew that the people of at least one community had been misinformed as to the Mazatlan incident, and did not understand it?

Admiral CAPERTON. The general in command of the Mexican forces at Manzanillo came on board ship at my invitation and called upon me, and while there I was surprised to hear his remarks about why we did not land and were not communicating with the shore. I then repeated to him about what I said in this letter, and he was very much surprised to hear such remarks, and then he told me that he had heard, or had been instructed by the Government, that we had caused all the trouble, commenced the row, and that the fault was all ours.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he mention the name of his informant, who transmitted that information to him?

Admiral CAPERTON. To the best of my memory, he told me that Gen. Obregon had issued the letter, or informed him of that occurrence.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, that he had issued the letter to the subordinate under him who was in charge at Manzanillo.

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And the information he had was to the effect that the Mazatlan incident was due to the aggression of the Americans?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir; entirely.

The CHAIRMAN. And the fault was entirely theirs?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did he indicate to you any orders or instructions he had received in connection with that letter, or did he just simply mention it?

Admiral CAPERTON. No, sir; he just mentioned the incident, and was surprised when I told him the truth about it, was very much surprised.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well, you may proceed.

Admiral CAPERTON. General conditions. Upon assuming command I started out in my flagship to make a tour of inspection of the West Coast of Mexico, visiting the principal seaports. I did not go ashore at any of these places nor did anyone from my flagship. I would send a radio ahead to one of our ships that was in port and ask her commanding officer to arrange for the consuls and Mexican officials to come off to my flagship immediately upon my arrival. The commanding officer would arrange this by communicating ashore by radio or through private shore boats. I obtained all my information in this manner. The following is a summary of my report following this inspection:

The CHAIRMAN. That report was an official report made to your superior officer?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. In tabulated form?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Would it answer your purpose as well to file it and let the reporter put it in the record, instead of your reading it?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It can be returned to you afterward.

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir. I should like to have it returned. It belongs to my private file.

The CHAIRMAN. If you will allow us to use it, we will have a copy made for the record.

(The report referred to is as follows:)

SUMMARY.

La Paz: Americans and foreigners, 10; in vicinity, 5.
Salina Cruz: Americans and foreigners, 4; in vicinity, 60.
Acapulco, Americans and foreigners, 2.
Manzanillo, Americans and foreigners, 4; in vicinity, 90; number recently returned, 20 or 30.
Mazatlan, Americans and foreigners, 60; in vicinity, 200; number recently returned, large percentage.

Topolobampo: Americans and foreigners, none; in vicinity, 60; number recently returned, several.

Guaymas: Americans and foreigners, 2; in vicinity, 80; number recently returned, 70.

MEXICAN TROOPS.

La Paz, 100; one-half of these troops recently brought from Santa Rosalia account smallpox scare.

Salina Cruz, 50; Under command of Capt. Manuel Diaz C.

Acapulco, 150; Military operations in the State against Zapatistas reported successful.

Manzanillo, 100; About 900 troops in State of Colima under command of Gov. Juan Jose Rios.

Mazatlan, 500; Bulk of the State troops at Culiacan, under Gen. Flores, who is temporarily in Mazatlan.

Topolobampo, none; no regular garrison is kept at Topolobampo.

Guaymas, 500; no regular garrisons in valley proper; soldiers only at garrisons along railroad. About 6,000 in all, in these various garrisons.

FINANCIAL QUESTION—VALUE OF PAPER MONEY.

La Paz: With the exception of Mexican National Bank and State bank notes, the only money circulating at present in Lower California, is silver.

Salina Cruz: Since July 1 the standard money, declared legal tender, is the recent issue of infalsificables. This was placed on the market as elsewhere and ordered by the Government to be accepted at the ratio of 10 to 1. The 5 peso, 2 peso, and 1 peso issues of Vera Cruz paper money were allowed to circulate as small change. These being accepted at a 10 to 1 ratio on the infalsificable issue which makes this small change 100 to 1 "oro nacional." The Government will not accept paper money for duty, but requires silver or American gold. On July 23 an order was received from the director of telegraphs that infalsificables could be received at the ratio of 25 to one.

Acapulco: The money question continues serious. There is very little silver currency in town, but prices are quoted sometimes in silver rather than in paper, the former of course being lower. Infalsificables are quoted 40 to 1. The Vera Cruz issue, used for small change, is quoted at 10 to 1 on the infalsificables.

Manzanillo: Infalsificables are quoted here at the ratio of 20 or 25 to 1 despite the Government's edict of 10 to 1. Certain Vera Cruz bills up to 20 peso notes are accepted in the varying ratio of from 10 to 50 to 1 on the infalsificables. The same trouble exists in Manzanillo as elsewhere concerning importation. Firms do not care to import when the import duties must be paid in gold or silver and their sales bring them only paper money.

Mazatlan: Infalsificables are quoted at 30 to 35 to 1. Certain issues of Vera Cruz money are also accepted at a varying rate of from 10 to 30 to 1.

Topolobampo: Infalsificables at varying ratios.

Guaymas: Information was received that the Mexican Government has changed its attitude in regard to its insistence of the 10 to 1 standard on the infalsificable issue of paper money; that people would now be permitted to trade in this money according to local quotations. No solution to the financial question can be seen at the present time.

FOOD QUESTION.

La Paz: Food at present plentiful.

Salina Cruz: No flour in town. Natives live on bananas, corn, and such green stuff as can be obtained from the immediate interior. The peon will not suffer materially from the lack of food as there is a considerable amount of small gardening, but it will be very difficult in the near future for any of the higher class of people to exist satisfactorily.

Acapulco: Food question generally serious, but not immediately so, on account of produce being raised and foraged from woods.

Manzanillo: Not immediately serious. Very little flour in town; none coming in. Great deal of cattle outside of Manzanillo.

Mazatlan: Food situation improving, still very unsatisfactory. Very little corn available in city. Fresh products from the immediate vicinity is the principal source of supply.

Topolobampo: There is a general scarcity of corn, though the Indians and Mexicans have planted some during the rainy season. Corn is best obtained from Guasave, south of Mochis. No immediate shortage of food. Satisfactory at Mochis.

Guaymas: The food situation is better than it was some months ago. Crops are said to be sufficient to feed this part of the country in the immediate future. Little importation is going on. General restriction on shipments of food by merchants from one town in the State to another.

MILITARY ACTIVITIES.

La Paz: None.

Salina Cruz: Carranza garrisons now located at Salina Cruz, Tehuantepec, San Geronimo, Rio Verde, Rincon, and Santa Lucretia along the railroad. "Reactionaries" operating in Chiapas and against Gov. Castro at Oaxaca.

Acapulco: Military operations in the State against Zapatistas are reported as having been successful. No trouble with Zapatistas anticipated.

Manzanillo: Carranzistas in full control of the cities in the State but not in the outskirts. Villistas, numbering several thousand, under Gen. Norena and Gen. Guzman, operate in States of Michoacan and Jalisco. Villistas reported very strong in Michoacan. Have recently seized San Telmo light.

Mazatlan: The bulk of State troops are at Culiacan, the capital. Soldiers in the city carry arms only when on duty. Regular police also carry arms on duty. No military activity.

Topolobampo: None. Small guard of a few men at Mochis.

Guaymas: Conditions in Yaqui Valley reported very unsatisfactory. Carranza forces under Gen. Madrigal said to have been as destructive as the Indians. With the recent relief of Madrigal and withdrawal of troops, conditions as regards Mexican element expected to improve, but danger from raids by Broncho Yaquis is increased. Troops removed from valley proper, but stationed in garrisons along railroad as far inland as Buena Vista.

RAILROADS.

La Paz: None.

Salina Cruz: Railroad operates train daily; rolling stock in very bad shape; little business.

Acapulco: None.

Manzanillo: The railroad operates about one train per day. Mail service is in working order.

Mazatlan: Trains operate irregularly, due principally, it is claimed, to washouts.

Topolobampo: Trains operate about twice weekly.

Guaymas: Triweekly train service with the United States has been put in effect. The operation of the railroad has now passed from Government control back into the hands of the Southern Pacific Co.

TELEGRAPH AND RADIO STATIONS.

Las Paz: Telegraph to San Jose del Cabo.

Salina Cruz: The local office of the Central and South American Telegraph & Cable Co. is open for business, it being managed by Mr. William Wiseman, British vice consul. Small radio station is to be removed to Oaxaca.

Acapulco: Small Mexican radio station—telegraph generally out of commission.

Manzanillo: The local telegraph office is in operation. Radio station in operation.

Mazatlan: Radio station in operation. Telegraph occasionally in operation.

Topolobampo: Telephone to Los Mochis. Telegraph from Mochis.

Guaymas: Radio station and telegraph in full commission.

SHIPPING.

La Paz: American steamers Golden Gate, Anvil, San Pedro; occasionally Mexican, Korrigan II.

Salina Cruz: Small British steamers, occasional Japanese and small American steamers.

Acapulco: Generally none except gunboat Guerrero, which brings food.

Manzanillo: American steamer Centralia and others with dynamite for mine companies, and general cargo.

Mazatlan: Little shipping, occasional vessel stops in with general cargo.

Topolobampo: Scarcely any shipping at all.

Guaymas: Negligible amount of shipping.

Soon after submitting the above report I received the following telegram from the department:

SEPTEMBER 9, 1916.

Department of State desires to obtain immediately, for information American commissioners, telegraphic report covering new developments in Mexico as follows: First, political conditions; second, financial conditions; third, food and economic status; fourth, resumption of work in mining districts; fifth, manifest betterment or reverse in transportation facilities since recognition; sixth, general attitude authorities and populace toward foreign interests. Submit telegraphic report to Navy Department.

I replied to his telegram as follows:

SEPTEMBER 10, 1916.

GOVT. OPNAV., Washington.

First. Government forces in control principal towns and in general control west coast. Villistas reported active in States of Jalisco, Colima, and Michoacan. Reactionaries active in State of Oaxaca. Zapatistas in State of Guerrero passive at present. Yaqui Indians questionable factor in State of Sonora. Mayo Indians reported broken up as unit. No apparent interest recent municipal elections; no voting at all Manzanillo; few votes elsewhere. People generally indicate passive faith in government except Guavamas district, where antagonism de facto government said to be growing.

Second. Financial question considered very serious and present greatest problem. Business interests are demanding sound financial basis. Enforcement by military authorities of various paper currency on people, its depreciation and subsequent annulment, and frequent changes in paper currency have stagnated business. People have no faith in paper currency. No silver in circulation except Lower California and small amount Manzanillo. Latest issue infalsificables greatly depreciated. Merchants will not import because duties must be paid in gold or silver and sales made for paper.

Third. Food question improved somewhat since June, especially La Paz, and not immediately serious for peon class, but improvement considered only temporary, due to general cessation agricultural pursuits. Very little importation and general scarcity corn and flour. Foodstuffs generally under supervision military authorities, who restrict shipments and occasionally commandeer paying in paper. Food in general use is uncultivated products from surrounding country. Economic conditions bad, because capital lacks confidence and labor lacks employment.

Fourth. Mines reported resuming work to certain extent, taking chances rather than close. Strikes occasionally agitated. Trouble experienced obtaining supplies. Laborers prefer payment in food and supplies rather than depreciating paper currency. Military authorities State of Jalisco and Colima have facilitated shipments for mine companies to and from Manzanillo. Richardson Co., Yaqui Valley, and United Sugar Co., Mochis, rather inactive, awaiting developments. Industries as a whole not operating to any extent.

Fifth. Transportation by rail generally improving. Rolling stock greatly deteriorated. Train service with irregular schedules reported in operation Guaymas, Topolobampo, Mazatlan, Manzanillo, Salina Cruz. Little shipping by sea.

Sixth. General outward attitude authorities cordial, populace indifferent. Believed generally suspicious Americans and would be actively antagonistic slightest excuse. Americans returning Yaqui Valley found peons occupying farms reluctant to move off claiming Mexican authorities in June authorized confiscation American owned lands.

Attention invited my written report August 21.

CAPERTON.

The CHAIRMAN. That telegram or radiogram which you have just read was in answer to the department's inquiry?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Based upon the fact that the commission wanted that information?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall what commission that was? Was it the Mexico-American mission headed by Secretary Lane on the one side and on the other by the later Mexican ambassador, Bonillas, Luis Cabrera, and others?

Admiral CAPERTON. I am unable to state, sir. I do not know.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not know what commission wanted that information?

Admiral CAPERTON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You had, however, prior to the receipt of this telegraphic request already covered these various matters in your report?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. If the Navy Department had examined your report they could have ascertained these facts without wiring you specifically for them, I presume?

Admiral CAPERTON. It should have been in the department at that time, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well; you may proceed.

Admiral CAPERTON. Impressions of political situation. General warfare has now been going on in Mexico for a number of years. The peon has been weaned away from agriculture and other peaceful pursuits in order to ally himself to one or another of the various leaders that have obtained local control. I believe that the peon has wearied of the continuous strife, and were it not for the ambitious agitators he would gladly resume his work of tilling the soil or mining its products provided he can be protected and has not become so hardened as to prefer the probably more profitable and less-irksome occupation of serving some chieftain in local power for the time being.

However, there is no incentive for him to return to profitable peaceful pursuits, for no sooner are his crops harvested or success attained in some other line than raiders appear or taxation and confiscation otherwise rob him. I do not believe that peace and law and order can be restored in Mexico except by a dictator, be he from within or from without. The country to my mind is disintegrating into the tribal state. At one time I learned of a considerable movement of Mexican troops from Sonora to Jalisco and vice versa. I learned that this was being done because the troops that were in Sonora originally came from Jalisco and therefore they did not care to fight in Sonora, and on account of the discontent they had to be returned to Jalisco. The same seems to apply to all troops that were sent out of their own States to fight.

I do not believe that the majority of the military leaders purpose to serve any central government except as may be personally agreeable or profitable. There may be some who are anxious to really have a strong central government, but I do not think that any central government can muster enough adherents or strength at this time to enforce itself throughout Mexico. The many years of strife have so rent the country that it would certainly take a phenomenal Mexican to piece and hold together the scattered remnants. The Mexicans travel little.

The residents of one State do not know much of the other States. They have their own interests and do not care to have officials of other States unknown to them dictate their affairs. A central government means to them only additional taxation interference. I do believe that a great number of the better class of Mexicans have endeavored to keep clear of political and military developments and are as anxiously as we awaiting a return to more settled conditions.

A number of them have exiled themselves until the establishment of a central government that can really rule. I have always found the authorities most polite and courteous. It is a trait of the Latin race. I believe that at least some of our difficulties with Mexico have been the result of our lack of understanding of the Latin race and temperament. To obtain a desired result, the method of approach and conduct with a Latin should be different from that accorded an Anglo-Saxon or other race.

Foreign activities in Mexico. (a) Movement of Japanese subjects along the coast: On various occasions I was informed of a possible concerted movement on the part of the Japanese to smuggle immigrants into the United States through Mexico. The Japanese maintain a line of steamers to Salina Cruz and occasionally to Manzanillo, and upon arrival at these ports it would be reported that some Japanese would be landed. As far as I could ascertain there is without doubt a certain unlawful influx into this country of Japanese via Lower California and the mouth of the Colorado River, but it is not believed that this indicates a general organized movement on the part of the Japanese, but is simply for the commercial benefit of the individuals or companies concerned. No activities other than unlawful entry into the country have been discovered. As far as could be determined, the Japanese along the coast were engaged principally in the fishing business.

In February, 1917, the Japanese steamer Kotohira Maru arrived at Manzanillo from Japan and landed 900 cases, ranging in weight from 100 pounds to 10 tons each, which contained machinery for an ammunition plant, and machine guns, rifles, and potash. The alleged destination of the material was Mexico City.

(b) Activities with Salvador: In November, 1916, it was reported that the Mexican transport Jesus Carranza had sailed for Salvador to obtain some arms and ammunition that had been taken there when the Huerta forces evacuated Guaymas, Manzanillo, and Mazatlan in 1914. This activity in Salvador caused a suspicion that the arms and ammunition might be intended for the discontents of Nicaragua, of which there were some due to the presidential elections held shortly before. It had been reported that Irias, who was active in Nicaraguan affairs and who had taken part in the revolution of 1912 might possibly be fomenting trouble for the Nicaraguan Government, especially in view of his recent failure to establish himself in Nicaragua. It was known through rumors and through the press that Irias was contemplating the establishment of a supergovernment of Central America with himself at the head. German agents were supposed to be active in this plot, basing their activities from Mexico City. Irias was to head revolutions in Nicaragua, Salvador, and Costa Rica, and then overthrow the other countries. The existence of this plan was confirmed by persons in Guatemala when I visited that country in May, 1917, to thank President Cabrera for breaking relations with the Imperial German Government. I ascertained at this time that the reasons that Guatemala had broken with Germany in reality:

(a) Fear of aggression by Mexico and Salvador.

(b) Opportunity to increase friendship of United States with consequent advantages in trade and protection.

(c) Opportunity to confiscate large German estates.

(d) Desire to strengthen Cabrera administration. Therefore, it could well be believed that the activities of the Jesus Carranza might be in connection with this superplot concocted by German agents in Mexico and Central America and by Irias.

I directed two of my ships to quietly shadow the Jesus Carranza. I was informed that the Jesus Carranza had taken on arms and ammunition at Acajutla and at La Libertad, and one of my vessels trailed her sufficiently to determine that she was destined for a northern rather than a southern port. About November 29, 1916, the Buffalo at Manzanillo reported the arrival of the Carranza at that place and that she had discharged about 100 miscellaneous packages of ammunition and quite a number of Mauser and Remington rifles. These were shipped supposedly for Mexico City. Some weeks later the Jesus Carranza fitted out for a return trip to Salvador, and on January 8, 1917, sailed for Manzanillo carrying complete radio outfit, including towers and an aeroplane said to be a present from the Mexican Government to the Government of Salvador. The Jesus Carranza returned to Manzanillo on February 13 with another shipment of arms and ammunition.

Conclusion: While in command on both coasts, I made every endeavor to be nearest the possible scene of trouble and to make dispositions to protect Americans and other foreigners. In case of fighting ashore in the cities between the various factions, I endeavored to have the leaders establish neutral zone. I knew that it was my mission not to be a party to bloodshed or the use of force unless directed by the department, and my protection consisted, therefore, mainly of protests and asylum.

The CHAIRMAN. Admiral, you have stated as one of the reasons for Guatemala breaking relations with Germany their desire to strengthen the Cabrera government. The Cabrera government to which you refer is that of Estrada Cabrera, the President of Guatemala?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This general summary of your impressions, with reference to political as well as other conditions in Mexico, represents your impressions of those conditions or your judgment of those conditions at the present date, does it? That is, of a recent date, as well as at the time you were actually in command on the west coast?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You have referred to the firing upon a boat of yours at Tampico in 1915? Who made the attack upon this boat at that time, if you know?

Admiral CAPERTON. As I remember, it was made by persons on shore, on the wharf.

The CHAIRMAN. You do not know to what faction they belonged, whether to the Carrancistas or Huertas?

Admiral CAPERTON. Of course, that was before I took command.

The CHAIRMAN. The incident I am referring to took place at Tampico, when you sent a boat up the river.

Admiral CAPERTON. Oh, I was thinking about another incident.

The CHAIRMAN. That was in 1915, when you sent a boat up the river.

Admiral CAPERTON. They were fired on by the Villistas.

The CHAIRMAN. Were the Villistas at that time attempting to attack Tampico?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. By whom was Tampico held at that time?

Admiral CAPERTON. It was held by the Carrancistas.

The CHAIRMAN. Was any representation of official character or any protest made to anyone on account of the firing on your boat?

Admiral CAPERTON. I think not, because after reaching the headquarters of the general, he explained to us that his forces were roving all through the country around him, and that he, as I remember, regretted the incident; but still we found them at every turn, on returning the next day, at every point very aggressive and bitter, you might say, and at times we were very fearful of the lives of the party.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you recall whether you made a report of that incident of the firing upon this boat to Washington?

Admiral CAPERTON. Oh, I think I did, sir, because I have a copy of the instance somewhere in my possession, and I am sure I made an official report, as I always reported all such incidents. When I said a moment ago that I had not made a protest, I thought you meant by telegraph or radio.

The CHAIRMAN. You did get into communication with the general, or someone who claimed to be in command of these Villistas who fired upon your boat?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And he explained it as you have indicated?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And you are confident that you did report the incident to Washington?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You did not take command of the fleet and were not on the west coast until after this Mazatlan incident occurred, to which you have referred?

Admiral CAPERTON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So that, personally, you are not cognizant of the facts, except through reports that you have seen?

Admiral CAPERTON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. There is present with you now, I think, one of the officers who was with the fleet when you took command on the west coast?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir; Commander Beauregard, who was my secretary after I took command, and who had been flag lieutenant with Admiral Winslow.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was your predecessor?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir. Commander Beauregard became my flag secretary when I took command.

The CHAIRMAN. Admiral, you have stated as your conclusion and in your judgment, that order and peace can not be restored and maintained and a central government established in Mexico, except by a dictatorship, from within or without. Could you, from your knowledge of the leaders in Mexico at that time and up to the present time name anyone whom you think could, if he wanted to, and would if he could, establish an orderly and peaceable government, and could maintain such in Mexico—any man in Mexico?

Admiral CAPERTON. I do not believe that I could pick out such a man. There may be some, but under present conditions, and having had the experience that I have had while on both the coasts, I do not believe that I could do so.

The CHAIRMAN. Not directing your attention to any particular name, of course, or making any invidious distinctions, the statement you have made applies generally, does it?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You came in contact with this man Irias, who was a revolutionist in Nicaragua and a candidate for the presidency of Nicaragua, personally, in the discharge of your official duties, did you?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Where was that?

Admiral CAPERTON. That was in Managua, the capital of Nicaragua.

The CHAIRMAN. Under what circumstances, might I ask, or have you any hesitancy in stating what the circumstances were which brought you together? Of course, if I ask you any questions which you prefer not to answer, I withdraw them.

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir. At the time that I mention, I was in the Gulf of Fonseca, making a survey of that Gulf, with a view to establishing a naval station.

The CHAIRMAN. You were making a survey following the Nicaraguan treaty with this Government?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir; I communicated with the minister at Managua, who asked me to pay him a visit. I went to Corinto with my flagship and with part of my staff, went by rail to Managua, and there saw the minister and remained with him some time, as the election was approaching at that time and the various candidates of the different factions were drawing together in Managua. Among that number was Julian Irias and a Dr. Espinosa and many others, and it was while I was there that I met all these various candidates of the different factions.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have any talk with him about his aspirations, or what he was trying to do?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir. I met him on several occasions, and on one occasion I met him at our legation, and was present at an interview he had with our minister at that time, in regard to the elections generally and his candidacy, and the general situation, as our minister was holding such conferences with the various factions.

The CHAIRMAN. The purpose of such conferences, so far as we were concerned, through our minister, I presume, was to prevent any armed disturbance or factional disturbance of a violent character during the election?

Admiral CAPERTON. Yes, sir; that was the general idea. He was trying to have the elections pass off peacefully at that time, as they had been very much to the contrary at other times.

The CHAIRMAN. As a result of this conference, and immediately following the conference, what became of Julius Irias and his candidacy, if you know?

Admiral CAPERTON. During the conference, I might say. Mr. Irias was so well convinced that he would not make a good candidate that he announced at that time that he would withdraw from the candidacy, and also would not allow any one of his party to run.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the general business of this gentleman Irias, as far as you were able to ascertain, in Central America?

Admiral CAPERTON. As far as I could hear, he was a general disturber and agitator, and a man of not very enviable reputation.

The CHAIRMAN. From what you learned in your investigations concerning Irias, and also in your investigations concerning Mexico, was there any connection between Irias and the Mexicans, aside from the machinations of the Germans in the City of Mexico? That is, were the machinations carried on through the instrumentality of Mexicans or were they carried on by Germans?

Admiral CAPERTON. That I could not tell exactly. There were some Germans; in fact, many of them in Nicaragua at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Was the sympathy, as nearly as you could understand it, of the Mexican officials in Mexico at that time with or against Irias in his ambitions and aspirations?

Admiral CAPERTON. It was our impression that they were with him, and were more or less behind him.

The CHAIRMAN. Admiral, we are very much indebted to you, sir, for the statement which you have made, and for being kind enough to attend the sessions of the committee, and we thank you very much.

STATEMENT OF COMMANDER A. T. BEAUREGARD.

The CHAIRMAN. You may state your name.

Commander BEAUREGARD. A. T. Beauregard.

The CHAIRMAN. Commander, you were with Admiral Winslow when he was in command of the fleet on the west coast of Mexico, were you?

Commander BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; I was serving on his staff.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you, during this time, at Mazatlan, Mexico, or near there?

Commander BEAUREGARD. We were off Mazatlan shortly after the firing upon one of the boats of the Annapolis.

The CHAIRMAN. The Annapolis was one of the American ships under the command of Admiral Winslow?

Commander BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; engaged at that time in the American patrol of Mexico, and at that time happened to be at Mazatlan.

The CHAIRMAN. In the performance of your duties do you know just what occurred with reference to the firing upon the boat of the Annapolis?

Commander BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir. I saw all the reports upon the occurrence, and likewise read the court of inquiry in the matter.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the date of the occasion, Commander?

Commander BEAUREGARD. To the best of my knowledge, it was approximately June 15, 1916.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, will you kindly state what occurred there, what that incident was?

Commander BEAUREGARD. The flagship was in United States waters, and we received a radiogram from the Annapolis reporting that her boat, a motor sailer, I think, had been fired upon; that one man had been killed and others injured, and that two officers were being held ashore. I think that is the general tenor of the first news that we had. I think, to sum up, that the commanding officer of the Annapolis sent his boat ashore, as he desired to send a message by an officer to the American consul, or whoever was acting as American consul at that time. The boat had arms, but they were concealed. That was in view of the general tenseness of the situation. As soon as the boat ran alongside of the pier and the two officers landed, they were immediately seized by Mexicans, and, as I remember, one of those that did the seizing wore a Mexican uniform of some sort, probably a customhouse officer or one of the Carranza officers.

Efforts were then made by the Mexicans to seize the boat and crew, but the officer in charge, divining their motive, shouted out to the boat crew to shove off quickly and return to the ship. This they did, whereupon the Mexicans opened fire upon the boat. All during this time the American flag was flying on the boat. After being fired upon, and while returning to the ship, the boat crew broke out their arms and ammunition and in their defense returned the fire.

The officers were marched up to the local authorities and were imprisoned, various threats and menaces being inflicted upon them, both during their way through the town as well as after they arrived.

Later, I do not recall whether it was the same day or the next, through concerted efforts of Americans and others on shore, and after an investigation, the officers were allowed to return to their ship; but their progress through the city was extremely dangerous, and they themselves, I understand, attribute their escape, we might say, back to the ship as due to the efforts of a Mrs. Brown, who was the Mexican wife of an American there, who seemed to have great influence with the Mexicans, and who accompanied them down to the boat; in fact, off to the ship.

A report of the matter was made by Admiral Winslow to the department. The commanding officer of the Annapolis, in view of the policy of noninterference on shore, withheld the fire of his battery from protecting his boat, as he saw that there would be a useless loss of innocent lives, as the docks were somewhat crowded.

The CHAIRMAN. Was there any official demand made by Admiral Winslow, or those under his command, for the release of the officers?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. The report of their release was received so soon after the original report that the admiral, I do not think, had time to take any action on that particular matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Did the admiral make a protest, or require of the Mexican authorities at Mazatlan, or the authorities at Mexico City, any apology or explanation for the firing upon his boat and seizure of his officers?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. No, sir; that entire matter was referred to the department in Washington. In view of Admiral Mayo's experience acquired when his boat was insulted at Tampico, you might say, it was considered proper to leave that to the department.

The CHAIRMAN. In view of these conditions, and of the orders from the department to the admiral in command, as has been shown in the testimony of Admiral Caperton, it was not considered the duty of the admiral or officer in command at Mazatlan, or in general command of the fleet, to himself take any action in the way of a protest, or demand for an apology, or reparation, but to refer the matter entirely to Washington for action and instructions?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir. The admiral could have recourse only to protests, not demands. Shortly after Admiral Mayo's ultimatum at Tampico the naval regulations were amended, to make sure that no officer issued any ultimatum to any government or official until the department had been communicated with and had approved such action.

The CHAIRMAN. Then, under the orders as they stand now, and as they stood at the time of the Mazatlan incident, if you were in charge of an American ship in foreign waters, and your boat, under your flag and manned by your sailors, was fired upon, you would not consider that you had the authority or would be justified in returning the fire, or in later demanding an explanation or reparation, without referring the matter to Washington?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. It would depend a good deal upon the circumstances. The regulations provide that if force is used to seize one of your boats, force must be used to repel the same. Of course, the different methods of action would depend upon the seriousness of the situation and existing instructions. If a good many innocent people would be affected, I do not think any American commander would deliberately shell so as to injure them.

The CHAIRMAN. Ordinarily, would not an American commander demand an explanation of the authorities in command at such a port as Mazatlan, for action similar to that which you have described?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; an explanation would be requested of the official in charge, military or otherwise, and endeavor would be made to obtain the release of any of our persons arrested, but under existing conditions and instructions force is not to be used, as I understand it.

The CHAIRMAN. Aside from the question of using force, was any explanation demanded by the commander of the Annapolis, or any apology demanded by him?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I do not recall that particular feature, but I do know that this was brought to the attention of the Mexican authorities in Mexico City, and that Gen. Obregon sometime later sent out the Mexican version of the Mazatlan incident.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you that version?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I have a copy of it. It is a telegram from Mexico City, June 18, to the military commander of the port of Manzanillo, received June 19, 1916, and reads as follows:

To-day at 11.30 a. m., while two American officers bringing a message from the captain of the ship Annapolis to the American consul were disembarking at the wharf of this port, some drunken individual who happened to be there, fired upon them. The crew who brought them in returned the fire, and several of our soldiers, who accidentally happened to be on the scene of activities, in their turn answered the fire of the crew, the fusillade of the crew resulting in the wounding of two constitutional soldiers, and of the individual who started the shooting. The American officers were detained at the commandancia militar of the port, and explanations having been made I allowed them to return on board the Annapolis, in this manner considering the incident closed.

Affectionately, the minister,

A. OBREGON.

The CHAIRMAN. Were either of the members of the crew of the ship Annapolis or the boat crew from the ship Annapolis injured in the firing?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. One man was killed, and I think others were wounded.

The CHAIRMAN. From your investigations and your knowledge of the facts, was the statement of the local commander to Gen.

Obregon, afterwards given out by Gen. Obregon, as in the dispatch that you have read, correct, as to how the difficulty started?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Not as reported by the commanding officer of the Annapolis, or as reported in the court of inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. Captain, how long have you been in the naval service?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I entered the Naval Academy in 1903.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you join the Navy off the coast of Mexico?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I have served several times off both coasts of Mexico. I served on the staff of Admiral Winslow and Admiral McLean on the east coast of Mexico, and with Admiral Winslow and Admiral Caperton on the west coast of Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. During the period of your service, have you served in South American and Central American waters?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; I have cruised four times to South America and about as many times to Central America.

The CHAIRMAN. Captain, may I ask you what State you are a native of?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I am a native of Texas.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you speak any other than the English language?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Spanish and French fairly well.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you speak either of those languages prior to entering Annapolis?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; both.

The CHAIRMAN. You were then able to confer with the natives of Mexico, Central America, and South America in their own tongue?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; I have done that sort of work for the admirals on whose staff I have served.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you acted as interpreter or translator for the admirals in the performance of their duties?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You have thus come in contact with many of the officials of the Mexican Government, as well as of the other Governments in Latin America, have you not?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; I accompanied the admiral and spoke for him on nearly all occasions when the official upon whom we called could not talk English, but only Spanish.

The CHAIRMAN. You have been interested, more or less I presume, in Mexican conditions during the last few years, have you?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; I have been intensely interested in all Latin-American affairs, as I have met so many people in those countries.

The CHAIRMAN. In that portion of Texas where you were born, are there many descendents of the Spanish race?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. There are a great many Mexicans. My father owned a ranch near San Antonio, Tex., and until I was 11 years old I grew up among Mexicans on the ranch.

The CHAIRMAN. You have had a somewhat extensive acquaintance among those who have been more or less prominent in Mexico during the last few years, have you?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; I have met several, and have read and followed quite a good deal of the operations of some of the others.

The CHAIRMAN. We, as a committee, are directed by the Senate of the United States, to report to that body suggestions as to how to avoid, if possible to do so, in the future the many lamentable occurrences of the past few years, resulting in deaths, outrages, loss of property, etc., to American citizens in Mexico, and of course, as a part of that inquiry to go into conditions in Mexico generally, and to form some conclusion, if possible to arrive at any conclusion, as to what may be looked forward to for Mexico itself as to the rehabilitation, the establishment, and maintenance of law and order and peace in that country. What is your judgment upon that matter? Do you believe that the Mexicans themselves, living in Mexico, are capable of forming and maintaining a responsible, orderly, and peaceable government?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I think that a good many of the people would welcome law and order again, but I do not think that the leaders would all pull together. I think that has been demonstrated by the number of breaks that have already occurred since the time of Porfirio Diaz.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know any prominent native or Mexican in Mexico at this time who you believe can, through instrumentalities in Mexico itself, establish and maintain a central government, peaceable and orderly and capable and willing to perform international and national duties? Can you, in running over them in your mind, picture such a man?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I can not picture one that could actually control the whole country. I think there are probably a number of men that would be good presidents of Mexico, but I do not think that they could keep the necessary support that would make a strong centralized government. The States, I think, due to the long period of revolution, have absorbed a good deal of the central power, and now do not care to give it up. I think that is particularly true of Lower California, and probably some of the western States.

The CHAIRMAN. So long as the different States can of themselves maintain practically a separate government from the central government, it gives an outlet for the ambitions of individuals, which outlet would be somewhat closed to ambition if there was a central government which all should support, as in the United States?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; I think a good deal of the trouble there is due to the agitators, and of course, any strong central Government must be capable of promptly suppressing such agitators, in order to hold itself in power.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the situation in Mexico complicated also because of racial and other differences existing in the character of the citizens of the different States of the Republic?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I think that the Yaqui Indians hold themselves rather aloof from the Mexicans proper, and so do a number of those in the southern States, and, according to our investigations, those in Oaxaca have never recognized the authority of Carranza, and still more or less profess to be adherents of old Porfirio Diaz.

The CHAIRMAN. You knew something of the basic stock of the citizens of Sonora, for example, including the Yaqui Indians, did you not?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Very little of that, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the basic stock of all Mexico?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Indian and Spanish.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there very many different and distinct tribes of Indians?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir; it is a mixture, as I understand it, of Spanish and the various Indian tribes.

The CHAIRMAN. And those Indian tribes themselves, do not at any time constitute a homogeneous population of what is now the Mexican Republic?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So that all of those are graftings of the Spanish blood upon the Indian stock, and not upon one stock, but upon a variety of Indian stocks, as I understand it?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there any similarity that you have been able to see between the Opatas, Pima Altas, the Yaquis, or Papagos, in Sonora and the northern part of the country, and the original stock of Yucatan, for example?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. I do not recall that. I have never actually been in Yucatan.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, in southern Mexico, Tampico and Vera Cruz, are the Mexicans of very similar appearance and characteristics to those of Sonora?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. No, sir; they are somewhat different. That was especially noticeable when Gen. Carranza entered Vera Cruz, because we could detect the northern troops distinctly from those of the southern and eastern States. We could see those differences.

The CHAIRMAN. It was very noticeable?

Capt. BEAUREGARD. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that is all, Captain. Thank you very much.

The committee will adjourn, subject to the call of the chairman.

(Whereupon, at 4.45 p. m., the committee adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman.)

INVESTIGATION OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1920.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
SUBCOMMITTEE OF COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS,
Washington, D. C.

The subcommittee met, pursuant to the call of the chairman, at 12 o'clock noon in room 128, Senate Office Building, Senator Albert B. Fall presiding.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order. Captain, you may be sworn. Will you give your full name, please?

TESTIMONY OF CAPT. W. M. HANSON.

The witness was duly sworn by the chairman.

Capt. HANSON. My name is W. M. Hanson.

The CHAIRMAN. Where do you live?

Capt. HANSON. I live in San Antonio, Tex.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you lived in Texas?

Capt. HANSON. All my life.

The CHAIRMAN. You are a citizen of the United States, of course?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What is your present official position, if any?

Capt. HANSON. Senior captain of the Texas State Rangers.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you been with the subcommittee on Mexican affairs, investigating?

Capt. HANSON. Since September 1, 1919.

The CHAIRMAN. Captain, what official positions, if any, have you held prior to your present position as captain of the Texas Rangers—senior captain?

Capt. HANSON. Deputy sheriff and deputy United States marshal from 1884 to 1898; then deputy United States marshal of the western district of Texas, 1898 to 1902, stationed on the Rio Grande border. Then I was appointed United States marshal for the southern district of Texas under Mr. Roosevelt in 1902 and served in that capacity until 1906. I was reappointed, resigned, and went to Mexico, in the ranch business.

The CHAIRMAN. What year did you go to Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. In 1906.

The CHAIRMAN. Why did you go to Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. Mexico was an undeveloped country, and I saw the tide of immigration turning south. I interested some friends in St. Paul and went there to buy ranch property and to make it my permanent home.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you purchase property there and reside there?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; we purchased the Hacienda el Conejo.

That was the main ranch, situated on the Guallejo River, about 80 miles northwest of Tampico, on what was then the Mexican Central Railway, later the Monterey branch of the Mexican National Railways of Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. What business were you proposing to engage in on this ranch—cattle ranch, stock ranch, or what?

Capt. HANSON. Cattle and farming. We planted 600 acres of citrus fruit, and in addition to that we improved the ranch very highly and we were raising stock, cattle, and horses and mules.

The CHAIRMAN. In raising the crops and in developing this ranch, did you depend upon the rainfall or did you use—

Capt. HANSON (interposing). No, sir; we had irrigation; 14,000,000 gallons of water a day that we brought through a canal by gravitation to the property.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you purchase or secure your water rights for the use of this water and rights of way for the canal under the laws of Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. We purchased the water with the ranch. The owner of the ranch had previously secured the rights from the Mexican Government.

The CHAIRMAN. From whom was the title to this ranch derived, and about the date of the original title, if you know?

Capt. HANSON. We had titles dating back to 1802 that were carried down to the owner, to the man that we bought it from, Mr. Manuel de Leon.

The CHAIRMAN. Your original titles then, dated back prior to the organization of the present so-called Mexican Republic; that is, prior to 1821?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you at any time have any serious question concerning your titles, either to water or to your land while you were there?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; everything up the time I left—that is, during Diaz's régime, was perfectly quiet, and we received fine protection and every assistance, and we worked in connection with the Government, both the Diaz and Madero Government, for the betterment of Mexico.

The CHAIRMAN. You have spoken of having 600 acres in citrus fruits. How old were the trees?

Capt. HANSON. They were just coming into bearing in 1914—4 years old. We had just gathered our first grapefruit off of the first 10-acre plot. In addition to that, we had about 1,000,000 trees; a great many of them budded in nursery form.

The CHAIRMAN. What other farm crops were you raising besides fruit?

Capt. HANSON. Corn, principally.

The CHAIRMAN. About what was the acreage in corn?

Capt. HANSON. About 2,000 acres.

The CHAIRMAN. About how many cattle did you have on the ranch or adjoining ranches?

Capt. HANSON. When we purchased the ranch we got 2,000 head of cattle with it. Then, in addition to that, we bought a few more and never sold any. We butchered a few cattle for home consumption.

The CHAIRMAN. What were the conditions of the country with reference to order and peace and law being observed and enforced prior to the Madero revolution?

Capt. HANSON. I think that the conditions there were much better even than they were in the United States. There was no one who went armed, and, to give you an idea, I had a very large ranch house there, and I never had a key in my doors and never lost 10 cents' worth of stuff out of the house, and the Mexicans on the ranch—several hundred—had access to it.

The CHAIRMAN. You say there were several hundred Mexicans on the ranch. What was the labor which you used principally?

Capt. HANSON. The native labor, altogether.

The CHAIRMAN. Mexican labor?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How many Americans were in your employ?

Capt. HANSON. Oh, one or two. Probably two or three, during the whole time. But I had two citrus fruit experts employed all the time, one from Cornell University and the other from California.

The CHAIRMAN. Were they employed as experts in the raising of citrus fruits?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; they were in charge of our citrus fruit industry.

The CHAIRMAN. Why did you employ them from the Cornell University and California, respectively; why did you not employ men from Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. Well, they did not understand much about the citrus fruit industry, and we bought the best brain we could. We employed the Cornell University man through the department here. We asked them to give us the best—to refer us to some one and they gave us this name—Prof. Crawford.

The CHAIRMAN. What were his duties, and those of the California man?

Capt. HANSON. Well, the California man, Mr. J. W. Heir, was in charge of the propagation of our citrus grove. He attended to the budding, the planting, etc., and Prof. Crawford, of the Cornell University, came down to assist the Mexican Government, our association, and our citrus fruit growers in that section of the country in fighting what is known as the Trypeta Ludens fly, a fly that predares on the fruit. He was in charge of that, in connection with the Mexican Government.

The CHAIRMAN. By whom was he paid?

Capt. HANSON. He was paid by our company, which was the Mexico Land Co., and the Gulf Coast Citrus Fruit Association, which was composed of citrus fruit growers of the States of Tamaulipas, Nuevo Leon, Veracruz, and San Luis Potosi. I was president of that association. This association was formed under the laws of Mexico and was composed of Americans and Mexicans who worked in perfect harmony, and we were assisted from Mexico by their experts, Profs. Gandera and Millen. Our objects were to eliminate the pest before referred to, "Trypeta Ludens," and to arrange for marketing our fruit in foreign countries.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you speak of the California expert having charge of the budding, etc.; was he able to do all the work himself, or did he have help, assistants?

Capt. HANSON. Prior to his coming there, I employed Prof. Stiles, of Texas, who is an expert citrus-fruit man, to come down and spend 10 days with me to teach some of my Mexicans how to bud. I paid him $500 and his expenses. When he arrived I picked out six of my best men; they were ignorant; only one or two could read and write; but they were very apt, and he taught them to bud. Then when Mr. Hair came down they assisted him. They got to be quite expert before I left there and could bud from two to three or four hundred trees a day.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, did the Mexicans—were there any Mexicans in that country who understood modern up-to-date citrus-fruit farming, budding, etc.?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; the natives, laborers, thought it a very foolish enterprise when he told them that we were going to plant citrus fruit there. Prof. Gandera and Prof. Millen, of Mexico City, were educated along that line, but inactive in our section.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you say you were gathering your first crops. Were there any other bearing orchards in your neighborhood, larger or smaller?

Capt. HANSON. Only one, Mr. K. H. Merrem, of the Hacienda la Victoria, had probably 40 or 50 acres, and there were a few small groves near Monterey, Linares, Montemoraes, Ciudad Victoria, Colonia, Tampico, Rio Verde. In each colony there were minor developments along this line, but you may say exclusively by Americans. This industry was in its infancy, but the development had proven its future success.

In addition to that, I want to state that during all this time that I was propagating the nursery any Mexican in the country was welcome to come and take trees away. I was trying to introduce the citrus-fruit industry into that section of the country. A great many of them availed themselves of this opportunity, and had a few trees in different portions of that section.

The CHAIRMAN. How long had Merrem's orchard been in bearing?

Capt. HANSON. They were about the same age as ours.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you did not know what your orchard would have done; you had nothing to go by as to what it might have done had it been further developed?

Capt. HANSON. Only judging by the citrus-fruit industry at Tampico. Mr. MacDonald had 14 acres of oranges 11 years old that produced about 10 boxes to the tree, that he sold for $4 a box. Mr. Hopps also had a successful grove.

The CHAIRMAN. American gold?

Capt. HANSON. American gold, f. o. b. Tampico. They were shipped to Minneapolis and St. Paul, and that is what gave us the idea of that being a citrus fruit country. In addition to that, we had experts from California and Utah, and other places, who are thoroughly conversant with the citrus fruit industry, and we had our soil and water analyzed, and after making a very extensive investigation we concluded that in as much as it was below the frost line, and with the climate and conditions that section was adapted to the citrus fruit industry.

The CHAIRMAN. How many Mexicans did you employ, or were you employing before you came out, in your operations there?

Capt. HANSON. Upon our purchase of this ranch there was about 20 or 25 families. It was an old broken down ranch, unimproved; had been formerly a cow ranch for many years, and the Mexicans were a little skeptical as to the Americans when I first arrived there. After employing these few that were on the ranch, they found that we were all right, and they much preferred to work for us, because we paid them better wages and treated them better, and housed them better than some of the Mexican ranch men in that country; therefore, they began to flock to us and there was never a time up to the time I left there, but what there was always a surplus of labor.

The CHAIRMAN. What were the average wages paid when you went there for that character of work?

Capt. HANSON. Mr. DeLeon was paying 50 cents, Mexican money; when I left there we were paying as high as 2 pesos a day. We gradually increased their wages as we taught them how to do the work, and paid them in accordance with their capabilities.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, did you furnish houses for your laborers to live in?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; we furnished wood, water, and houses, and we put a sewerage system all over the place, and that was all free to them; we did not charge them anything for that, and in addition to that, we kept about a $4,000 commissary that we sold the goods at cost and carriage. We also furnished free medical attention and free drugs.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you have any experience while you were there, in the attempt to provide, or to offer opportunity to the Mexican laborers and others for providing themselves with their own homes?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir. After Mr. Madero went into power it seemed that his policy was to divide the land and give each Mexican in the country a home. I cut off on the opposite side of the river about a quarter of a mile from the main ranch, a town site divided into lots 40 by 80 meters, and every lot fronting on the river. I offered any Mexican regardless of whether he worked on our place or not, that would come and build a house, that I would deed him the land the first night he moved his family into it. And there was to be no restriction with the exception of the sale of liquor.

He was not to sell any liquor. He could sell the next day if he wanted to, or he could do anything with it, and he was under no obligations even to work for our company, but all we wanted him to do was to build him a house, and I went so far as to offer to give him the palm to roof it with, and the wood, the logs out of the woods to build it with, and loan him teams, wagons, and carts to haul it, and to pay him wages while he was doing it, to be taken out 50 cents every two weeks, in order that he might live and support his family while he was building a house.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, you mean to say that you would take 50 cents out of his wages every two weeks to repay for hauling and so forth?

Capt. HANSON. No, not for hauling, but to repay the money advanced him to live on while he was building his house.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, you would deduct from his wages 50 cents to be applied upon his account?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir, for advances.

The CHAIRMAN. How many availed themselves of this offer?

Capt. HANSON. Three. They explained to me that they would much rather live on the ranch and not have the house and lot.

The CHAIRMAN. They had a house furnished them free of rent?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. As well as water, and so forth, in addition to their wages running from 75 cents up to $2 a day?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Were there any schools in the neighborhood?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; there were schools at a little town, Xicotencatl.

The CHAIRMAN. On the ranch itself there were no schools?

Capt. HANSON. No; not at that time. A few times we had schools. It was pretty hard to get teachers, but our standing offer was that we would pay for the school and all expenses of it, and on this town site that I was telling you of across the river, I had in contemplation the building of a school house and church, and had arrangements made with the Catholic priest in that vicinity to take charge of it.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the feeling between the Americans there—yourself and others—in that community, and the native Mexicans?

Capt. HANSON. It was splendid. There was no bad feelings at all, and we were never treated better even in the United States than we were under the Diaz régime or while he was in power. The natives had learned to know the Americans and appreciated them, and I never had any trouble with a single Mexican while I was on the ranch during the entire eight years that I lived there.

The CHAIRMAN. When did you last see the ranch?

Capt. HANSON. In January, 1914.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you had any information since that time with relation—with reference to the condition, the physical condition of the ranch after you left?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; I saw the ranch, as I say, in 1914, in January, and it was destroyed. The windows were broken in, and robbed—

The CHAIRMAN. You mean the house?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; the house; and it was very finely furnished, with something like eight or ten thousand dollars' worth of furniture in the house—beds and so on. That was all destroyed and taken away. They destroyed the pillows. I had a great many feather pillows on the place and they cut them open and threw the feathers out to the winds and used the pillow slips for maletas; that is, for sacks to carry food in.

The CHAIRMAN. What became of the live stock?

Capt. HANSON. They were all taken away. Mr. ——— informs me that there is not a mule or horse, nor a cow of any description on the ranch, with the exception of probably some wild ones in the woods.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the condition which you saw in 1914 with reference to the citrus fruit growing?

Capt. HANSON. It was not so bad at that time, but later on it was burned—burned up completely.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean to say that there are none of the trees growing there?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; there may be a few scattered trees, but my information is that it was completely burned.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, what was the date upon which you left there?

Capt. HANSON. I left there on the 14th day of January, 1914.

The CHAIRMAN. How did you happen to leave?

Capt. HANSON. In November previous to that time Consul Miller had notified us that the United States Government had requested all Americans to come to Tampico and get under the guns of our ships, which were placed there for the protection of the Americans in that country. We remonstrated, but he insisted and said that our Government wanted us to be patriotic and get out of there, as it might cause complications if we attempted to stay out on the ranches. I went to Tampico and when I received word that the property was destroyed—that was along in the latter part of December, 1913—I went to Consul Miller and he advised that I go to the ranch.

It was a little bit dangerous to go, because they were fighting between there and for 50 miles out of Tampico on out in that direction, Carrancistas and Huertistas, and finally I took a man who was very friendly to the Carrancistas, secured permission, and went through both lines and on to the ranch with the intention of making a list of what I had lost and what damage had been done, and go up to see the governor at Victoria, which was the capital of the State, and secure from him, if possible, an officer to go down with me and check up my losses and give me a receipt for them in order that I would not have to put in a claim against the Mexican Government at that time. I did not want to antagonize the Carrancistas, because it was very evident that our Government was backing them against Huerta and that his fall was sure. Therefore I did not want to antagonize them and wanted simply to get a receipt and make no report of it, because it would do no good.

The CHAIRMAN. What happened to you when you went back?

Capt. HANSON. When I arrived at Victoria I stayed all night, in company with my attorney, Judge McCabe, and bookkeeper and cashier, Mr. Gonzales. Next morning I went up to call on the governor, and he arrested me and virtually sentenced me to death that evening. He kept me under guard of 50 Mexicans until about 8 o'clock that night. He finally allowed me to return to my room, and next morning there was a court-martial instituted, and I was tried then by court-martial for the next 10 days.

About the tenth day, Consul Miller, of Tampico, got to me with two friends of mine and finally prevailed on the governor to not shoot me. He finally agreed to send me out of the country, which they did; in fact, they sent me to Matamoros by automobile—but I paid $300 for the automobile to get out—and delivered me to Gen. Pablo Gonzales about 11 o'clock in the morning, and through the efforts of United States consul and others he ordered me put across the river that afternoon about 3 o'clock.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the charge against you for which you were tried first and upon which you were deported?

Capt. HANSON. That I was in favor of intervention and a Huerta spy. There was no government recognized in Mexico at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you taking part in the revolution or in the troubles there?

Capt. HANSON. Not at all; no, sir. I had nothing to do with it. I had been sick three months in Tampico in the Southern Hotel and had taken no part directly or indirectly in anything connected with the Mexican trouble; in fact, it made no difference to me, and I voice the sentiments of all other Americans in Mexico when I say that the Americans in Mexico do not care who is president of Mexico, just so they have peace and protection.

The CHAIRMAN. Had you been making any reports with reference to the friends of Huerta or to the Huerta government?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; the only reports that I ever made when Miss Gourd was ravished out of Tampico. Consul Miller asked me to take Mr. Gourd's statement, which I did, and we sent 16 copies of that, sworn to before the consul, to yourself and other Senators and Representatives in Washington, as well as the departments here. It seemed that the fact that I had been active in reporting that matter had gotten back to the Carranzistas, and that probably was one of the reports that they alluded to, that I had made.

The CHAIRMAN. And that was to your own Government or officials or citizens of the United States?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And not to the Mexicans?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. In what month were you deported by Gen. Gonzales?

Capt. HANSON. In January, 1914.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you return to Mexico thereafter, and, if so, to what part?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; the following April I returned from Texas City by boat to Tampico, arriving there about the 10th of April.

The CHAIRMAN. How long did you remain there?

Capt. HANSON. I remained there until I was shanghaied out of there together with 2,800 Americans on the 22d of April, 1914. (For list see Galveston News of April 28, 1914.)

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean by you were "shanghaied"? Just what occurred there at that time?

Capt. HANSON. On the 20th of April there was a notice posted on the "Commandancia" to the effect that the Americans had invaded Vera Cruz, and Gen. Huerta called on all patriotic Mexicans to arm themselves and defend their beloved country. That was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. At once Mexicans began to go up to the "Commandancia" and get guns and ammunition, and a mob began to form, and they began their cry of "Death to the Americans" and rioting. About 6 o'clock the Americans concluded it was best that they house up, and each one went to some place that he considered to be safer than on the streets. Together with about 150 Americans, men and women, I took refuge in the Southern Hotel. That was where I was living. And about 6.30 o'clock we had closed all the doors and barred them, with the exception of one, and there was a crowd of Americans standing inside watching the Mexicans go by, rioting and so forth, a rock was thrown through the door and hit an old man about 70 years old, who was a reporter on the Times, tearing his cheek off.

About 10 or 15 minutes later another rock was thrown through and hit one of the Pierson Oil Co. geologists in the head, cutting him across the forehead, laying his scalp open. Then we closed the doors and formed ourselves into a party for defense. After getting all the guns we could together we found we could arm 32 men. They appointed Capt. Ed Williams and myself to take charge of the men. We divided them 16 upstairs and 16 downstairs. We barred the doors and they began at once to break in the plate glass drug store of Sanborn Bros., in the corner of the building, and shooting through the top of our house and at our American flag which floated over the building. About 9 o'clock there was a rap on the door that could be distinguished from the mob, and the commanding officer of the steamboat Dresden came in and told us that he believed we were going to be massacred and if we so desired he would take care of our women and children. After consultation several of the ladies, American ladies, went through the mob with him, to the ship.

About 11 o'clock he returned and told us that he had just notified Gen. Zaragoza that he must clean the streets of this mob or he would sweep them with lead.

The CHAIRMAN. Who was Gen. Zaragoza?

Capt. HANSON. General Zaragoza was the commander in charge of the Huertistas who were defending the town against the Carrancistas. You understand, there had been a battle going on since about the 10th of the month and an incessant battle, firing over us; three battleships were throwing their shells over our building, over Tampico, into the Carrancista ranks on the north of Tampico, and at this conversation—or consultation—between Capt. Koehler, Mr. Williams, and myself, I asked him why he did not wire our ships.

The CHAIRMAN. What ships?

Capt. HANSON. Our ships that had left there that morning.

The CHAIRMAN. You say our ships?

Capt. HANSON. That is, the United States ships.

The CHAIRMAN. Battleships?

Capt. HANSON. Battleships. The ships that were in port that had been there for our protection. They left there that morning; left us alone, and he said that his wireless was not strong enough. I asked him why he did not go to the English ship. He said he had been to them, that they refused to send a message, stating that they were neutral. He said that he and two Americans, who accompanied him, had requested the commander of the English ship—asked him if, in case it was necessary—would land his marines and assist him in defending the many foreigners in Tampico. He told him that he would not; that he was neutral, and he then said "I am ready to die with you."

The CHAIRMAN. This was Capt. Koehler?

Captain HANSON. Yes, sir; "I am ready to die with you if necessary, but I want it distinctly understood that it is an act of humanity and not for any other reason, and that the first American officer that puts his foot on the shore I will be very glad to retire and turn the matter over to him." It wore on until about 2 o'clock. In the meantime, Zaragoza had in a manner dispersed this mob. About 2 o'clock Capt. Koehler came back and left one of his officers with us with a searchlight and with orders that in case they went to dynamite the building or commit any act of violence he was to flash this searchlight three times on the Pierson buildings (that could be viewed very readily from the ship and from the Southern Hotel) and he would come with his force. And he held his force in readiness and in arms—none of them slept that night—to come to our assistance if they had attempted the massacre, as it was supposed they would do.

The next morning about 7 o'clock I went out and asked the leader of this mob, or rather the mob, if they would allow me to go to the consul's office. They said I could go if I would go without arms; so I laid my arms aside; pulled off my coat, so they would be very sure to know that I did not have any arms and went to the consul's office. When I arrived I found Consul Miller and several men that were with him as his assistants and bodyguard the night before and for several days, and who had not slept for probably 36 hours, lying around with their clothes on, perfectly worn out. I roused him and told him of the situation on the outside; that the mob was forming again and that it could not be delayed very much longer, and that I was afraid that I could not hold our people very much longer; they were getting very anxious to get busy.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you mean by "get busy"?

Captain HANSON. To fight. There had been insults of every description hurled at us all night long and we were afraid that a shot would be fired, and if they had attempted to kill us it would have been impossible to have held those men any longer. They would have defended themselves to the last. So, realizing just what a few shots would do to start the thing, Consul Miller went up to see Gen. Zaragoza and he advised that we get out. I asked Consul Miller—that was about 8:00 or 8:30 a. m.—I asked him if he had heard anything from our Government. He said that he had not; that he had done his best to notify them, but that he had not heard a thing from our ships or from the Government. I went on back to the hotel and was in consultation there with the Americans when word came for us to get to the ships the best way we could through this mob.

The CHAIRMAN. What ships?

Capt. HANSON. The German, English, and Dutch. They had agreed to take us out; besides, I think there was an American oil steamer there, but floating a foreign flag. They were not allowed to float an American flag and we got out of there the best way we could with just what we had on our backs—men, women, and children. The bank in the Southern Hotel, belonging to the Fouts Brothers, was sealed, and I think with an English seal on it, in order that it would be respected. We went out to the ships and the next morning we found them in motion and looked out and asked where we were, and where we were going, and they said "You are going to Galveston." We objected.

The CHAIRMAN. What boats were you on?

Capt. HANSON. The Des Moines, and I think there probably was something like 18 or 20.

The CHAIRMAN. American boats?

Capt. HANSON. American ships.

The CHAIRMAN. You had been transferred?

Capt. HANSON. Transferred; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How far were you out from Tampico when you were transferred?

Capt. HANSON. Tampico, the city, is about six miles from the mouth of the Panuco River, and the ships——

The CHAIRMAN (interposing). That is, from where the Panuco River flows into the gulf?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, and just out in deep water, just the other side of the jetties, there our ships were all lined up cleared for action. There was something like 18 gunboats, destroyers, and battleships

The CHAIRMAN. And you were taken out by the German, Dutch, and English ships, and oil tankers, and were transferred to our battleships—gunboats?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And our battleships and gunboats which you found in motion next morning?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And informed you you were going to Galveston?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Were you transferred over to the American boats—were you informed at that time that you were going to be taken away?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir. You will understand that in several battles that had previously occurred in Tampico the Americans had been taken on board ships and taken out to sea until the battle was over and then returned to their homes and business, and we naturally supposed that when we got on the boats that we were just going out as usual, out to sea, and we were very much surprised when we found that we were going to Galveston, because every one had simply left there as they were, many of the ladies had left their dishes unwashed, and their houses virtually open, and with no change of clothes or anything of that kind, and only the clothes that we had on our backs.

Now, with reference to the leaving of the ships: On the evening of the 20th, my understanding was, through the consul and others, that Admiral Mayo had been ordered to take his ships and leave that port. Consul Miller sent three messages, very strong messages, protesting against the removal of the ships and stating to the department in Washington, the conditions, that the battle had been raging there for 10 days; the streets were full of people, and that he did not believe it was right to take the ships out; but he received no answer, and when Admiral Mayo—I did not see the messages, but my understanding was that when Admiral Mayo received the orders to leave he could not believe it, and wired for confirmation of orders, and he received them, and was ordered again to take his ships and get out. And he did it, very reluctantly; but they left us alone.

The CHAIRMAN. You were taken to Galveston then, were you?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; we were taken to Galveston.

The CHAIRMAN. And that is what you meant by saying that you were shanghaied?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir. We were taken out without our consent or knowledge.

The CHAIRMAN. Were any protests made to the officers of the boats?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; and they told us, "that was orders"; that they had orders to take us there, and they were going to do it, and they did.

The CHAIRMAN. From Galveston, where did you go?

Capt. HANSON. When we arrived at Galveston we held a few indignation meetings and "resolved and whereased" a while and came to Washington as a committee. I had the honor of being on that committee that came to Washington to deliver personally a protest and about a thousand sworn affidavits of outrages that had been committed in that country, to our Government.

The CHAIRMAN. Whom did you see here?

Capt. HANSON. When we arrived we saw Mr. Garrison.

The CHAIRMAN. The Secretary of War?

Capt. HANSON. The Secretary of War, who treated us very nice, was very sympathetic, and listened to our stories, and promised to do all that was within his power. Then we went to see Mr. Daniels. During the conversation he asked us what we were kicking about. We told him that we thought the Government had treated us very badly by taking the ships out and leaving us there unprotected, after depending on them for so many months and being assured of protection from this Government, and he asked us the plain question as to whether or not we thought that this Government should use her Army and Navy to protect a lot of filibusters, schemers, and adventurers, who had gone to Mexico to exploit the Mexican people.

That brought on a kind of a scrap and things got a little personal and we left.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you see the President?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; we did not. We tried but did not see him.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you do then?

Capt. HANSON. Some of the committee saw Mr. Bryan. I was not present at the conference, but the chairman of our committee, Mr. Lucas, had several interviews with Mr. Bryan and he treated us very nicely, so far as part of our requests were concerned. You see our people were starving in Galveston; that is, they would have starved if it had not been for the good people of Galveston coming to their relief, and also from other portions of the State, and we wanted money sent down there to feed our people at Galveston. He granted that very readily, and sent money there, and then we asked him for transportation to get them to where they used to live, not to their homes, but a great many of them wanted to go back to where they had acquaintances that they thought they could depend on, and through Mr. Bryan we received transportation for them to wherever they wanted to go in the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. They did not get transportation back to Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; he would not agree—I think it was three weeks that we stayed here and worked before we got anything from the department and they finally agreed to put a transport at Galveston and allow such men as had business there to return, but no women, with the exception of some nurses—three or four nurses that were formerly in a hospital in Tampico. But prior to getting on the transport they all had to sign a document to the effect that they did not hold this Government responsible, or something of the kind. I was not there—I do not know, but it is in the testimony before this committee as to the nature of that document that they signed, under Mr. Lester's report.

The CHAIRMAN. You refer to the Lester report in Part 16 of these hearings? Were you there in Tampico when the sailors, the United States sailors, and the launch supposed to be seeking a supply of gasoline, were arrested by Zaragoza's troops?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir. During the battle of December, 1913, between Carrancistas, 8,000 strong, attacking the Federals or Huertistas, 3,500 strong, there were a few Americans, that, knowing our Government was against Huerta and backing the Carrancistas, wanted to make friends with the Carrancistas, and on various occasions requested passports from Gen. Zaragoza to go out of the city on different excuses, but in truth, some of them went to report to the Carrancistas where the Federals were stationed, and what they were doing. In other words, to give them information against the Huertistas.

After fighting some 10 or 12 days the Carrancistas ran out of ammunition and retired, and between that time and the time of their next attack, the following April, Gen. Zaragoza had found that some of these Americans had not been true to the trust that he had reposed in them, and had given information to the Carrancistas; therefore, on the following April, when the Carrancistas returned to attack them, he gave orders that no one should leave the city without an order from him—and he refused to give it—in order that the Carrancistas might not be informed as to their movements inside of Tampico.

My understanding was that this boat from one of our battleships started down below, or passed the Iturbide Bridge, where the arroya ran into the Panuco River in the city of Tampico. As they were passing they were halted by the captain in charge, who was guarding that point, and brought ashore. He turned them over to a petty officer and started them up to the headquarters—Zaragoza's headquarters. He met an officer of superior authority who asked him what he was doing with those marines. He answered that they had attempted to go by the mouth of this arroya down the Panuco River, against his instructions, and he ordered him at once to turn them loose.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, the superior officer?

Capt. HANSON. The superior officer ordered him to turn them loose at once and put them back in their boat and send them back to the ship, which was done. Gen. Zaragoza, immediately upon hearing of this incident, wrote a note of apology to Admiral Mayo. Admiral Mayo refused to accept it and demanded that he come in person, and, if I am not mistaken, I went with Consul Miller to the firing line and summoned Gen. Zaragoza to go before Admiral Mayo.

Upon his arrival there Admiral Mayo demanded an apology, and he apologized in every possible way that he could, but told him that he could not comply with the demand that Admiral Mayo made, which was to erect an American flag on Mexican soil and fire a salute of 21 guns, but Gen. Zaragoza told him that he had no authority to do that; that that was a diplomatic matter and that he would have to refer the matter to President Huerta. He gave him until 6 o'clock the following day to do so. I understood that he wired this information and demand to Gen. Huerta, and that he wired back, acquiescing in it, provided Admiral Mayo would accept the apology by answering him with 8 guns, which was refused, as it might have been construed an act of recognition.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, to return a moment to the condition of your property. You say that the orange grove has been burned and the house looted, the furniture destroyed, etc., and there is no stock remaining. What about—what became of your commissary?

Capt. HANSON. The commissary was taken, the same as everything else.

The CHAIRMAN. There was no attempt to take any of this property by judicial procedure?

Capt. HANSON. Oh, no, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Were there any receipts issued for it?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. By any officers or soldiers or anyone else?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. They just simply were confiscated, like a train robber would confiscate an express package?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; and they did confiscate the ranch, but through the influence of Mr. Merrem, who remained on one of the adjoining ranches, it was finally released to him for us.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, in this attempt to confiscate the ranch, what do you mean by "attempt to confiscate"?

Capt. HANSON. They took charge of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Again just like a train robber who would confiscate an express package?

Capt. HANSON. Just the same thing. They forced a great many of my workmen into their army, murdered a lot of them, and my information is, took a great many of the women folks with them.

The CHAIRMAN. Are you familiar with any other American settlements or colonies, or others engaged in agriculture or pursuits of like character in that country?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; there were something like 15 or 20 colonies of American citizens scattered all over that country.

The CHAIRMAN. About what was the size of these colonies?

Capt. HANSON. Well, they ran from 10 families to 350.

The CHAIRMAN. Engaged in general agriculture?

Capt. HANSON. And stock raising.

The CHAIRMAN. What were the classes of these Americans? Where did they come from?

Capt. HANSON. They came from the United States, different portions, and they were a splendid class of gentlemen.

The CHAIRMAN. Did they have their families with them? Wives and children?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; wives and children. They built school-houses and churches and went there to make that their home and lived there and obeyed the laws, and during the time I was there in Mexico I never heard of one American being arrested for any offense or any violation of the laws in all these colonies; that is, while Diaz was in power.

The CHAIRMAN. Were these men engaged in speculation of any kind?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; they were poor people, the majority of them.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, what character of agricultural implements did they use generally in these colonies?

Capt. HANSON. American, imported from the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. What agricultural implements were the Mexicans using, when these colonies went there?

Capt. HANSON. They were using wood plows and oxen, tied up around the heads.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, you mean that instead of using the ox bow, as we would use it, they drive the oxen with ropes and a stick tied to the horns?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; a stick tied across the head—the ancient method. You see pictures where they did the same thing hundreds of years ago.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, you say they had wooden plows, Were the plows made anything like ours—double-handled?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; one handle. They would cut a long pole and then put another upright piece down here and on the end of that they would get some kind of a piece of iron or something else, and tie it on, or rivet it in some way, and that is what they used for a plow, one handle.

The CHAIRMAN. Before the Americans were driven out of there, had the Mexicans begun to learn, or were they learning the use of up-to-date agricultural machinery, plows, and so forth?

Capt. HANSON. Oh, yes; immediately upon our taking charge of this ranch we discarded everything of a Mexican nature, and we bought all our wagons, buggies, hacks, and all kinds of farming implements, including sprayers, high-power sprayers, gasoline sprayers, for our trees—everything was imported—saddles, American saddles, American harness, and, in fact, everything American. The Mexicans all over the country there, the Mexican ranch men, and the Mexican farmers, would come over and watch us use them, and then they wanted one like it, and I would order plows from this country for my Mexican neighbors, and there got to be such a demand that C. Holck & Co., of Monterey, secured the agency for the Pony Disc plow. I remember that, and they received them by the carload and were sold all over that country from the samples that we had taken in to this one ranch. Now, every other American in that country had a like experience in every section where he lived. The Americans, by using American manufactured implements and harness, saddles, etc, flooded that country all over with American implements and American manufactured goods.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Mexican did get an American stock saddle, would he use that in preference to the old Mexican saddle?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; they were wild about them; all the ranch men in that country wanted saddles just like mine that I had purchased in San Antonio, Tex.—that also applied to buggies and hacks. I ordered several of these mountain hacks for my Mexican neighbors.

The CHAIRMAN. Then these Americans were not only engaged in attempting to benefit themselves and establish homes there, but were also the direct cause of increased trade with this country?

Capt. HANSON. Oh, yes.

The CHAIRMAN. In the sale of agricultural implements and general articles, such as you have described?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; and I want to say in connection with this, that every American in that country, without exception, when he settled in Mexico, and went there to make it his home, worked for the upbuilding of that country, and the institutions of that country, just the same as the Americans do in any section of the United States in which they may live.

The CHAIRMAN. Then, did the Americans pay the same wages that the Mexicans were earning in like character of work? Did they pay the same wages that the Mexicans themselves employing that labor, paid?

Capt. HANSON. No; they paid increased wages, and that was the only friction between Mexican ranchmen and the newcomers or the Americans there; they objected to us raising the price of the native labor.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you, or your company, or the people that were associated with you, ever received any money or anything of value for your investment there in Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. Not one dollar. Our damages up to date from the best information that I can get will run right around $400,000 gold, and we have never received one cent.

The CHAIRMAN. How much actual cash that you know of did you invest there, aside from the increased value of your property—just actual cash invested?

Capt. HANSON. We invested about $400,000, in improvements.

The CHAIRMAN. And that, together with increased value which you place upon the land, has been approximately a total loss?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. The raw land, I suppose, is still there?

Capt. HANSON. The raw land is there, but the fences and everything else destroyed. If we go back we will have to commence from the ground up and build over.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you hope to go back?

Capt. HANSON. Well, I hope to go back; but, of course, I would not go back under the present condition of things there. If this Government ever straightens up and does the proper thing in Mexico and gives the American pioneers guaranties for life and property, I would be glad to go back and make that my home. I like Mexico and I like the people.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean to say that you would take your family—you are a man of family?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean to say you would take your family back there and live there?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; I have educated two boys; given them a collegiate education with the expectation of taking them to Mexico with me.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, as to the other colonists who have been driven out of there, as shown by the testimony in this case, with which you are familiar, would these colonists who have been driven out, as you were, go back there if they could?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You know many of them, do you?

Capt. HANSON. Yes; personally I know a great many of them, and I want to say those colonists as a rule were poor people; they would sell their homes in this country, take the proceeds and go to Mexico, and invest in land and build themselves a home there. Those homes have been destroyed, just as mine has, and they have been brought out of that country; ran out of that country; and many of them have been living in poverty and want in this country since their departure from Mexico.

They are in a horrible condition, many of them that I know personally, and they are as good people as the sun ever shone on, and they deserve more consideration than they have received; they are in a very bad shape and have shown themselves to be very deserving people, and good Americans.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean that they deserve decent consideration, at any rate?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; different consideration than they have received.

The CHAIRMAN. What has been the effect upon the minds of the Mexicans generally in Mexico of the policy pursued by this Government in allowing the colonists and settlers, American citizens, to be driven out of Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. Well, they have simply lost all respect for us. When we went to Tampico and that section we were considered first-class, and given every attention possible; in fact, we were given better attention than any other foreign nationality, and when I left there a Chinaman was better respected than any American. They have no faith in our Government, and especially since their treatment at Vera Cruz. Our Government went in there; they expected help; and thought we were there to stay; they helped our Government and soldiers in every conceivable way possible, only to be left there and shot down like dogs after we left. That has caused the Mexican people not to have very much confidence in our Government. That is one of the reasons, because they trusted us, and felt that when we went in there we would never leave until we established a government with guarantees, and after we left them they were shot down because they had assisted the American soldiers.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose that the United States were to develop another policy, would tell the Americans who were driven out of these colonies that this Government would protect them if they desired to go back into Mexico, and to take over their homes again, and start to build them up, what, in your judgment, would be the effect on the minds of the Mexicans of that community?

Capt. HANSON. They would receive them with open arms and with gratitude.

The CHAIRMAN. Would you be able, do you think, to secure labor from the Mexicans themselves?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; all we might need. The Mexican people are friends of the American people; that is, the submerged class, the 80 per cent. They want the Americans there; they like them because they make money out of them, and receive humane and good treatment for themselves and families. I had Mexicans on my ranch to tell me that they were receiving better treatment during those eight years that we were there, and others in that community, than they had received before, and they were tickled to death that the Americans were there.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think that the Americans would be welcome again if it is understood that the United States would protect its citizens there, and enable them to protect themselves, and thus to afford protection for the Mexicans who wanted to work for them?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, who is it in Mexico who are against the Americans and against their return? What class of Mexicans?

Capt. HANSON. Well, it is a class of people that have come to the front under the Madero revolution. It started along in that time and when Diaz was overthrown; since then it has been conducted to a great extent by ignorant people, who rose to influence by loot, by theft, and by murder to the high places, and they have controlled by the iron hand, and the policy of our Government has been to arm those people. Naturally, that bunch has disarmed the 80 per cent, and if one of the 80 per cent does not agree with their policies or has anything to say about them, he is murdered; he is killed; and the 80 per cent of the people are under the guns of the people whom this Government has armed.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, what was the policy of the Mexican Government with reference to arms throughout Mexico prior to this revolution?

Capt. HANSON. They were not allowed to have any kind of arms. Diaz would not allow it. If a man had a shotgun on his place he would think he was a revolutionist—would not allow any of them to have any kind of arms without permission. Of course, if a man could get a license to have arms he would be all right, but there were very few allowed to have a gun.

The CHAIRMAN. Was the American or the Mexican traveling through that country, horseback or on foot, or in a vehicle of any kind—was he safe from attack?

Capt. HANSON. Perfectly, more so than he would be in this country.

The CHAIRMAN. Were there soldiers, large numbers of soldiers, a large standing army, in Mexico? Were their soldiers around in your vicinity?

Capt. HANSON. We had no soldiers. We had a few policemen over at this little town, but no soldiers. It was not necessary. I want to say another thing, that during my knowledge of Mexico, up to the time of the revolution, I never knew of one bank robbery: during the time I have known Mexico—for 25 or 30 years—I have never known but one train robbery during the Diaz régime in Mexico. And in the 8 years that I lived there, up to the time of the revolution, my stock ran all over the country and I never lost but one animal that I knew of by theft.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, since you were finally brought out of Mexico, run out, and then by your Government brought out, in order to protect you, what have you been engaged in generally?

Capt. HANSON. When I came out of Mexico the last time I at once went to work as special agent of the San Antonio Uvalde & Gulf Railroad, with headquarters in San Antonio, Tex.

The CHAIRMAN. On a salary?

Capt. HANSON. On a salary of $150 a month. And on the 1st day of January, 1918, I was requested by my friends to accept a captaincy in the Texas Rangers, and at that time the Texas Rangers were mostly stationed on the Rio Grande border, and inasmuch as there was a great deal of German propaganda and anti-Americanism throughout Mexico and along the border, and on account of my acquaintance with the Mexicans and the country and the people, they requested me to accept this position, which I did, at $125 a month. I served in that capacity up to the present time. I still hold my commission as senior captain of the State Rangers, but secured a furlough on the 1st day of September, 1919, to assist this committee in their investigation work.

The CHAIRMAN. You speak the Spanish language, do you?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Does your family speak the language, your sons?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; my boys all speak it.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, in your work as special agent of the railroad company along the border, and then as ranger, have you had reason to have your attention brought, directed to this German propaganda of which you speak?

The CHAIRMAN. You also, of course, are familiar with what is known as the Plan San Diego that has been testified to here?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You saw the operation of that plan by the Mexicans?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Were the Germans, in their propaganda and their work, in accordance with this Plan San Diego?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You have read, of course, the Zimmerman note to Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that along the line of this, along the line of the Plan San Diego?

Capt. HANSON. Along the line of it; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know whether the same plan of San Diego and the plan of the Zimmerman note are still received as something that might be carried out by Mexican agitators?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You have, in assisting the committee, investigated the activities of Mexicans in connection with propaganda along the river, the boundary?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are familiar with the letters that have been introduced here, photostatic copies of letters from Carranza and from officials of the Carranza Government to agitators?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. They are extreme radicals?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And part of your duty with this committee has been to investigate, to run down and check up reports of that kind?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Then you think that up to the time you left the border, that is, the latter part of March of this year, Mexicans were still engaged in agitating against this Government?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; they were.

The CHAIRMAN. On both sides of the border?

Capt. HANSON. On both sides of the border.

The CHAIRMAN. And with what element generally on this side of the border were they connected, if you know?

Capt. HANSON. Well, with the radical element.

The CHAIRMAN. What particular name is given to that radical element generally?

Capt. HANSON. The I. W. W. and communists.

The CHAIRMAN. It has been testified to in various hearings in this case, and by various witnesses that armed raids and acts of violence have been committed by people coming from Mexico across the international border and committed against or upon the lives and property of American citizens in the United States. Have you in your experience or within your knowledge ever learned of any raid by Americans upon the other side of the border at any time?

Capt. HANSON. I have never heard of anything of the kind.

The CHAIRMAN. Have the Texas Rangers been allowed to go across the international border when they chose to do so?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; only with soldiers.

The CHAIRMAN. That is, with regular soldiers of the United States?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So that, of your own initiative or acting under orders from your own State government, you have not been allowed to pursue even raiding parties?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; we could pursue them to the river, but never across.

The CHAIRMAN. So, if you were on a hot trail you were not allowed to cross?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You have, however, cooperated with the regular forces of the United States?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; the Rangers have been over several times but always under command of the United States Army.

The CHAIRMAN. Now, since the year 1911, we will say, have American citizens from Texas been allowed to go across the border with arms?

Capt. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. By whom were they prevented from carrying arms into Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. By their own Government.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know what the rule was with reference to our soldiers guarding the border if they saw any American attempting to go across with arms?

Capt. HANSON. They would arrest him.

The CHAIRMAN. Then American citizens having business in Mexico or desiring to cross the border were prevented both by the orders of the Mexicans and by our own armed forces from carrying arms even for their own protection?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. So that Americans who have crossed have been compelled to go unarmed?

Capt. HANSON. Unarmed, absolutely, and without protection.

The CHAIRMAN. During these raids, or any of them, from Mexico into the United States, did many Mexicans lose their lives at the hands of officers from this side, or soldiers, troops, or citizens?

Capt. HANSON. Well, of course, I don't know just how many have lost their lives, but the condition growing out of that plan of San Diego was this: The first thing they knew of it the Mexicans began raiding across the border, but they didn't consider it very serious at first, until finally they captured a copy of the plan of San Diego and saw that all Americans were to be murdered, and Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, and so forth, taken back by Mexico; and then they woke up. The first act then was to concentrate their women and children into the little towns around, and they began to guard the roads into them.

The CHAIRMAN. You are speaking of American citizens in Texas.

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; Mexicans and Americans who lived in Texas—citizens. The Mexican population was just about as much excited over it as the Americans were—that is, I mean the Americans of Mexican origin, Mexican blood.

The CHAIRMAN. Who are American citizens residing on this side?

Capt. HANSON. American citizens; yes, sir. And they appealed for aid, and it didn't get there quick enough, and these raiding parties began to come over and wantonly destroy ranches, murder, and rob until it got to be unbearable, and the people, the citizens themselves, rose en masse, and it is true they did kill a good many Mexicans, but the Mexicans that they killed were either raiders, sympathizers, or harborers of the people of the other side.

The CHAIRMAN. And under conditions of that kind, where people were taking the law into their own hands and operating for their own defense, not being protected by their own Government, and on their own soil, I presume that unfortunately some instances may have occurred where innocent people were killed?

Capt. HANSON. Probably so. That is always the case with an uprising. They are blind when they get to that stage, but they were very careful. I know that the rangers and citizens and others were very careful not to commit acts of that kind. Probably they may have done so, but I know the majority of people that were killed on that border were either sympathizers, aiders, or abettors of the people from the other side.

The CHAIRMAN. Or actual raiders.

Capt. HANSON. Actual raiders; yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. There is a large Mexican population on the lower Rio Grande in Texas, is there?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the general character of that population among those who were born here?

Capt. HANSON. They are peaceable, good citizens, as a rule.

The CHAIRMAN. Were the majority in actual sympathy with any attempt to take back Texas and add it to Mexico?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir; not the majority. The minority probably were.

The CHAIRMAN. Captain, you are more or less familiar, of course, with Texas history; do you know many of those people, the descendants of Mexicans, residing upon this side, who are the descendants of those who joined the Texans in the fight for liberty?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir. The Benevidas family, for instance, at Laredo, there are not more loyal Americans on earth than they are.

The CHAIRMAN. As a matter of fact, which is generally lost sight of by those who are not familiar with that history, one very prominent Mexican, Zavala, led a full regiment of natives and assisted materially the Americans under Houston and others in the overthrow of Santa Anna and the attainment of independence by the State of Texas.

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir. Many of their descendants live in San Antonio, Tex., and around there. Miss Zavala lives there now.

The CHAIRMAN. Zavala was the first lieutenant governor of the State of Texas.

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Has there been any change in the feeling of the people of Mexico with respect to law and the rights of property, etc., engendered by the last 10 years of lawlessness in that country, do you know?

Capt. HANSON. Well, I haven't been in Mexico for several years, but my understanding is there are a great many peaceable, law-abiding, hard-working Mexicans that have been forced by the revolutionists into their armies and have been taught to rob, steal, murder, and depredate on people. The younger generation, of course, have been raised now for 10 years right up under that. They have seen nothing but atrocities, and therefore the conditions with reference to the people of Mexico are very much worse now than they were before. They never had any idea or dreamed of anything of that kind under the Diaz régime, but having been taught by these people how to do these things, and when they see their colonels and generals and their officials from the top to the bottom committing these depredations, naturally they felt that they had license to do the same thing.

The CHAIRMAN. Could order and respect for law and the rights of property and human life be restored in Mexico by a firm government?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; with help. Of course they would have to have outside help.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean to say that in your judgment the Mexicans themselves have so lost their sense of proportion and of national or international obligation, or of respect for central government that it would be necessary for any central government to have some active support or help?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; a certain class has. They must have help from the outside.

The CHAIRMAN. Captain, in your operations in Mexico you were necessarily in Tampico more or less?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. You are familiar with the oil districts there, are you?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. During the period of your residence there the oil industry has grown to very large proportions?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How are the oil companies there looked upon, the American oil operators, by the Mexicans generally?

Capt. HANSON. As their saviors. When the oil men went to Mexico, the Mexican laborers were getting from 50 to 75 cents a day, and were uneducated and ignorant. The oil men in every instance where it was possible have employed native labor and mixed with them, their superintendents, and experts in the production of oil and the manufacture of oil products; and a Mexican, while he may appear ever so ignorant, is smart, naturally smart and quick to catch on.

The CHAIRMAN. An imitator?

Capt. HANSON. An imitator. And a great many of these people have become very proficient in the different lines of work in the oil business, and as they would understand their work better and do it better the oil companies in every case have always raised their wages, until now they are getting as high as 16 to 20 pesos a day. There are men there in very responsible positions that have been educated by the oil men. Those men have, as a rule, taken care of their money and many of them own little homes in Tampico and have a few chickens, and hogs, etc., and are getting along nicely, doing better than they ever had before. They dress better than they ever did and are educating their families. It is all due to the education and wages paid by the oil men.

The CHAIRMAN. In your investigations for this committee, you had some correspondence with reference to radical propaganda?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; here are the original papers [handing papers to the chairman].

The CHAIRMAN. In your correspondence, among others to whom you wrote and from whom you received letters was one Arthur Thompson, who has been a witness before this committee.

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It is in testimony that he received a letter signed "Gus Klumpner," to which he replied. Who was Gus Klumpner?

Capt. HANSON. That was myself. I signed that letter "Gus Klumpner."

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Thompson asked the chairman of the committee during the hearing as to why the name "Gus Klumpner" was signed to the letter to him, to which he had replied. What was your reason for using this name?

Capt. HANSON. It is a German name, and after reading his book, I thought he was a German propagandist, or had been during the war, and was not an American, and I thought he would respond to that name quicker than he would to an American name.

The CHAIRMAN. I notice in one of the letters, a portion of this correspondence, you suggest to Mr. Thompson that you would be glad to have him come before this committee, or suggest to him that he should do so, and give the committee and the people of the United States through the committee the benefit of his knowledge of Mexico and of its people.

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Did you think from what you had seen of his writings, etc., that he had any knowledge of Mexico and its people?

Capt. HANSON. I did not. After reading his book I knew he had not.

The CHAIRMAN. And your idea was that rather the people of the United States might understand the colossal ignorance of Carranza propagandists?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Having read the testimony of Mr. Thompson, I suppose you satisfied yourself upon that point?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. As the committee has in various portions of the evidence already offered testimony along this line, we will not put into the record at this time the correspondence itself, but we will keep that in the files of the committee.

Capt. HANSON. I was requested to get a picture of the destruction in Mexico. This photograph shows the Monterrey R. R. depot before, and then it shows it after they had destroyed it—after they had burned it.

The CHAIRMAN. The witness is explaining certain photographs showing the Monterrey depot, both before and since its destruction by the revolutionary forces or bandits in Mexico, which will be filed in the committee's records.

In the investigations carried on by this committee among various colonies which are mentioned, I notice the colony of Manuel. Where was that colony?

Capt. HANSON. That was about 40 miles northwest of Tampico, on the railroad.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, how many people were there; do you know?

Capt. HANSON. There were about 10 families.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the value of the property lost there, if you know?

Capt. HANSON. About $100,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is the colony of Rio Verde?

Capt. HANSON. Rio Verde is on the San Luis branch of the Mexican National Railways, between Tampico and San Luis Potosi.

The CHAIRMAN. About how many families were there?

Mr. HANSON. Twenty.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the amount of the loss there, if you know?

Capt. HANSON. Approximately $200,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is the colony of Vallas?

Capt. HANSON. It is on the same railroad, near Rio Verde.

The CHAIRMAN. And there were about 50 families there?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. A total loss of about how much?

Capt. HANSON. About $500,000.

The CHAIRMAN. Where is the colony of Victoria?

Capt. HANSON. At the capital of the State of Tamaulipas. There are about 20 families there yet.

The CHAIRMAN. And the loss was approximately $200,000?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir. These figures are approximated.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know anything about where Thomas Ewing was?

Capt. HANSON. No, sir. The committee has some letters there from those people.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has received certain letters from parties whom you name, and which letters are here now before the committee, one from Thomas Ewing, claiming a loss of $342,518.12. You have examined that letter, have you?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. And from the examination of the letter are you satisfied—have you satisfied yourself of the approximate truth of the statements contained in it?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir; so far as I know it is supported by sworn affidavits.

The CHAIRMAN. There is a letter here from L. Gunter, claiming a loss of $8,640. You have examined that letter, have you?

Capt. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. There is a letter here from John W. Glaze, claiming a loss of $3,531. That contains an itemized account.

I will state that these letters will be placed in the record, following the testimony of this witness.

We have a letter from L. J. Kolklosch, claiming a loss of $89,800. Also a statement from J. Lilywhite, with reference to the Morelos Colony. This J. Lilywhite was a witness whom the committee attempted to secure—the attendance of whom the committee attempted to secure at Tucson, and was unable to do so because of the breaking down of his automobile. That statement will be placed in the record also.

(The letters referred to appear in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Capt. HANSON. Here is something—I don't know whether it ought to go into the record, but it ought to go into the files of the committee. You might put the whole thing in, leaving the name out.

The CHAIRMAN. This statement which you have handed the committee, being a statement of L. Witzke, was taken by yourself, or in your presence, and also in the presence of an intelligence officer of the United States Army.

Mr. HANSON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. This statement of Witzke will be filed with the testimony.

(The statement referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

This is a statement obtained by the investigator from one Rowe with reference to his kidnapping, the statement being made at San Antonio, December 3, 1919, which will be published as part of this hearing.

(The statement referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

This is a list of Americans killed in Mexico not in the "murder maps." The deaths of these men have all been checked up from other portions of the testimony, and it will now be incorporated in the record, simply as containing the names, dates, etc., of the deaths.

(List referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

The Chairman will offer as part of the hearing in this case, to be printed in this part of the hearing, executive document No. 98, Thirty-sixth Congress, first session, being the Treaty of Transit and Commerce with Mexico, with a message from the then President of the United States under date of January 4, 1860, containing also a letter from the then minister, Robert McLean, to the Secretary of State, Mr. Cass, under date of December 14, 1859; also containing a convention to enforce treaty stipulations.

(The document referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

There will also be printed in the record at this time, although not in the proper place, the written memorandum referred to in the testimony of Mr. Kellogg, given heretofore, concerning the oil laws of Mexico.

(The memorandum referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also there will be filed and printed in this record the transcript of the judgment of the Texas court of criminal appeals in the case of Jose Antonio Arce et al., appellants, v. State of Texas, of April 17, 1918, which will be printed in the record.

(The paper referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also the affidavit of E. E. Dickason, repealing the testimony of Henry Forrest, containing on page 1187 of the printed record, in so far as that testimony mentions Mr. Dickason. The affidavit will be printed in justice to Mr. Dickason without any expression of opinion from the committee as to the veracity of the testimony or the affidavit.

(The affidavit referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also an affidavit of Mrs. R. L. Sanford, concerning outrages upon herself, the affidavit being executed before a notary public of the State of Texas on the 19th day of April of this year.

(The affidavit referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also the affidavit of ———, made on the 30th day of January, 1920, which will be printed with the name of the party making the affidavit in blank for the protection of such party. After the printed record is completed the original will be returned to the committee for its executive files. Any American names mentioned in the affidavit will be stricken out. This man is still doing business in Mexico.

(The affidavit referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also the statement of ——— with reference to his capture by and experiences while with Francisco Villa, executed on the 30th day of January, 1920, which will be printed with the names in blank, and the original will be returned to the committee for its executive files.

(The paper referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also the affidavit of Charles S. Dolly, made on the 19th of August, 1919, with a letter accompanying same, which will be printed in full.

(The affidavit and letter referred to appear in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also letter with an accompanying account from W. A. Lyon, which will be printed in full in the record.

(The letter and account referred to appear in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also affidavit and letter from Charles F. Simon, which will be printed in full in the record; these affidavits containing claims for damages.

(The affidavits and letter referred to appear in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

Also affidavits of Mrs. R. L. Fisher, B. H. Brown, and Joe Stempfle, with relation to the murder of Wilford O. Robertson, which will be printed in full in the record.

(The affidavits referred to appear in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

These affidavits and letters have been received by the committee and full credit given them, as it was impossible for the committee to reach and secure the attendance of each witness of whom it knew, and therefore it directed letters to be written to various parties with the statement that their affidavits or letters concerning their claims or subjects of interest would be received and printed in the record, which is now being done.

Also there will be printed in this part certain portions of Army intelligence reports concerning radical activity and bolshevist propaganda in Mexico. The direct source of this information will not be given, as it might interfere with the work of another department of this Government still being carried on in other places than Washington.

(The extracts from reports referred to appear in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

In connection with the last document there will be printed the report of special agent Capt. Hanson, as made by him to the adjutant general of Texas, and also to this committee.

(The report referred to appears in the appendix following the testimony of this witness.)

With the printing of this record the hearings before the committee at this immediate time will be concluded, to be taken up from time to time at the call of the chairman; the committee, under the instructions of the Foreign Relations Committee, continuing its investigations when, in the opinion of the chairman, the same is necessary.

(Whereupon, at 2.30 o'clock p. m., the committee adjourned.)

APPENDIX.

SAWTELLE, CALIF., March 13, 1920.

Maj. DAN M. JACKSON,
San Diego, Calif.

DEAR SIR: I had not been informed that the Senate committee on investigation of Mexican affairs was to be in Los Angeles until I seen in the papers where the committee had arrived and departed for San Diego, with the expectation of returning to Los Angeles at a later date, so if you will notify me when this committee is to convene in Los Angeles I will be very pleased to place my claim before them and give such information as may be required.

Thanking you for past favors, I remain
Yours, respectfully,

THOMAS EWING,
Box 378, Sawtelle, Calif.

SAWTELLE, CALIF., March 18, 1920.

Maj. DAN M. JACKSON,
Secretary Senate Investigation Committee on Mexican Affairs,
Los Angeles, Calif.

DEAR SIR: At your request I hereby give the amounts of the different claims that I am filing with the Secretary of State, at Washington, D. C.:

Claim.	Ewing's loss.
A. Loss of Ewing Mine, loss to Ewing & Stroyick.....	$10,000.00 $5,000.00
B. Loss of La Descada, loss to Ewing & Cornick.....	30,000.00 15,000.00
C. Loss of La Blanca Mine.....	10,550.00 10,550.00
D. Loss of San Antonio Mine, loss to Ewing & Dudley....	45,000.00 17,500.00
E. Loss of San Antonio No. 2, Ewing & Cornick.....	40,000.00 20,000.00
F. Loss of San Antonio No. 3, Ewing & Cornick.....	40,000.00 20,000.00
G. Loss of San Miguel Mine, San Miguel-Sonora Gold Mining Co., S. A., Thomas Ewing, president.....	525,000.00 205,078.12
H. Loss of San Bernardino No. 2, Ewing & Stroyick.....	15,000.00 7,500.00
J. Loss of San Bernardino No. 3, Ewing & Stroyick.....	15,000.00 7,500.00
K. Loss of Turkey Track Mine, Ewing & Cornick.....	57,000.00 27,500.00
L. Loss of personal property on his ranch.....	6,890.00 6,890.00
Total claim.....	794,440.00 342,518.12

THOMAS EWING,
Soldiers Home, Calif.

KERENS, TEX., January 30, 1920.

Maj. DAN M. JACKSON,
Secretary of the Subcommittee on Foreign Relations,
El Paso, Tex.

DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of letter dated January 24, from Senator Albert B. Fall, chairman of Committee on Foreign Relations, from his office in San Antonio, Tex., requesting that I write your detailing the circumstances, and amount of loss suffered from Mexican thieves.

I lost from thieves, believed to be from Mexico, 125 head of cattle, about one-half of these were three and four year old, steers, and balance were cows, and two-year olds, which were valued at that time at about $60 each. I also lost 19 head of saddle or cow horses, which I valued at $60 each.

These horses and cattle were stolen from my ranch in Duval County, Tex., during and between the years 1913 and 1915, about the time the country was overrun by Mexican thieves believed to be from Mexico, as some of the horses were traced back almost to the Rio Grande River, and believed to have been carried into Mexico.

Trusting this is the information wanted, and awaiting your reply, I am,
Yours very truly,

L. GUNTER.

FILLMORE, OKLA., February 2, 1920.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS,
El Paso, Tex.

DEAR SIR: My father, John W. Glaze, is sick, so will send in his list for him.

John W. Glaze's Mexico damages.

1 good saddle horse.....	$50
1 American mule.....	200
1 American mare.....	125
5 cow yearlings.....	100
6 young American cows.....	300
3 Mexican mules.....	150
1 American saddle.....	32
70 acres of field grown up.....	350
300 yards of 1-inch water piping.....	100
Household stuff.....	200
Chicken wire.....	100
30 bearing orange trees.....	180
50 bearing banana trees.....	50
2 dozen chickens.....	24
Farming tools.....	70
House and barn.....	1,500
Total.....	3,531

C. L. GLAZE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on this 2d day of February, 1920.

[SEAL.]

H. J. GREEN, Notary Public.

My commission expires September 30, 1922.

FILLMORE, OKLA., February 2, 1920.

SUBCOMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

DEAR SIR: Am a member of the Blalock Mexico Colony, located at Chamal, Tamps, Mexico.

My place was not bothered much till in January, 1915, 200 Villa soldiers camped in my cornfield, carrying off and destroying most of corn.

From this time on things grew from bad to worse, as soon as Carranza's soldiers got possession of country in which our colony is located. I went before the head officer and asked for protection. He laughed at me and told me to let the poor fellows have what they wanted.

Had to keep work stock tied in brush to keep soldiers from taking them. We were uneasy all the time, because we knew that we did not have any protection.

Carranza's soldiers forced Americans to give up all guns and pistols where they found out we had any.

It got so bad that in June, 1916, my family and myself and other Americans decided to leave Mexico. As we passed through Mexican town to railroad station, Carranza's soldiers threatened to hold us there and not let us go on. At railroad station we had to pay conductor on train $100 to hold train long enough for us Americans to load our own baggage on train.

When we boarded train at Tampico for Monterey, two of Carranza's soldiers, armed with pistols, robbed my wife of her watch and chain and $5 United States money.

In Monterey American women were insulted at waiting room by Carranza's soldiers.

After Carranza was recognized, the Americans in Mexico were treated like dogs.

I reached the border without a dollar, and have worked by the day and rented land ever since.

Respectfully,

C. L. GLAZE.

This is an itemized statement of my losses in Mexico:

9 head of cattle, at $30 per head.....	$270
1 wagon.....	50
1 saddle.....	10
25 head of hogs, at $10 per head.....	250
Farm implements.....	150
Household stuff.....	100
Watch and chain.....	50
American money stolen.....	5
2 dozen chickens.....	12
600 bushels of corn.....	600
Provisions.....	20
1 team of mules.....	200
Damage to buildings.....	500
Damage to fences.....	300
For 20 acre field growing up.....	60
Loss of rent on 60-acre field for 3 years.....	900

3,477

I made out this statement to the best of my ability.

C. L. GLAZE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2d day of February, 1920.

[SEAL.]

H. J. GREEN, Notary Public.

My commission expires September 30, 1922.

LAREDO, TEX., January 28, 1920,

To the Subcommittee to Investigate Mexican Affairs, Hon. Albert B. Fall, Chairman.

GENTLEMEN: I am one of those who went to Mexico during the Diaz administration. We were invited there by the Government of Mexico and encouraged by our Government at Washington. I believed with all others who went there that we could depend on the protection vouchsafed by both Mexico and the United States in our rights of lives and property.

We could not have asked more than we were accorded in protection and respect by the Mexican Government and people under the incumbency of President Diaz. Not until the overthrow of the Diaz régime and the election of Francisco Madero as president of Mexico, did we feel seriously affected in our colony at Columbus, Tamulipas.

One summer morning we were hunted at our houses and fields in and around Columbus as if it were a round-up of cattle. That is fully described in my complaint to the State Department at Washington, D. C., during the incumbency of Mr. Bryan, Secretary of State. Up to that time we did not feel the force of the criminal laws in Mexico, and now only by a "frame-up" against our colony. We felt as safe from harm heretofore as we ever felt in our homes in the United States.

There were no robberies, no bandit raids, no kidnapping for ransom, no killings of both native and foreign peoples, no ravishing of women and young girls, no ruthless destruction of property, no intimidation of people to cause them to flee from the country, no question of the rights of possession and use of property purchased, no question of surface and oil rights, no question of the rights to buy and sell lands, no question or reservation excepting, I think, to land along the northern boundary, no objection to the issuance of the Translacion de Dominio necessary to transfer real property from one "American" to another, no talk of "Mexico for Mexicans," no decrees abridging the rights of our people in anything excepting franchise which we did not desire nor expect, no decrees carrying force of confiscation of our vested rights in our lands, no extortion in the rates of taxation, and no interference in transportation of produce and passenger service by railroads. Now all is changed.

The fields are retaken by the wild jungle, most of the houses have been carried away or burned, the fences have disappeared, and the whole colony would remind a person of an old abandoned graveyard. The landowners and home builders have one privilege left, and that is to pay taxes at several hundred per cent advance on lands made fruitless by wars, raids, intimidations, and presidential decrees and laws. The final spike that nailed the coffin being the famous article 27 of the new constitution.

Here the picture of homes, fields, and groves was blurred. The dreams of peace and protection were now of destruction and waste. Treaty rights were ignored and promises were entirely ignored. Property rights were as if written in the sands. Patents to the lands were no more binding than political platforms to carry elections, only good during the campaigns.

We can see a waste of possibly $500,000 in the Columbus colony alone, where small investors dropped in many cases all they had, and were invited to hasten to the United States and depend on charity of friends. Ask why all this? Later, truth may tell.

I am not of those who may say that the Mexican people are all bad. I would estimate that 95 per cent of them are inclined to peace and industry. Not over 5 per cent rule the masses and are responsible for the reign of terror in Mexico.

The masses are as helpless to defend themselves against that small minority as a flock of sheep against a wolf in their midst. The minority is increasing daily. The majority is daily growing weaker. The minority will never reform within themselves. They are in a normal state from centuries of bandit activity, curbed for a season by President Diaz, and liberated by Francisco Madero. The opening of prison doors was easy. The round-up of the lawless has not been within the power of any leader in Mexico.

What can be done? What will happen, and when?

DAMAGE AND LOSSES.

I have suffered losses, and mental and physical harm that can not easily be estimated:

I bought one-third interest in land.....	$16,000
Spent preparatory to colonization.....	16,000
Protocalization and taxes, approximately.....	2,000
Schools and teaching.....	500
Gifts and charities.....	300
Expenses in various sums.....	5,500
Damages, article 27, decrees.....	50,000
Total.....	89,300

The above is exclusive of the damages for arrest, abuse, and imprisonment, as per complaint resting in the Department of State, and minor outrages to my person by a Mexican thief, working for the National Lines, whom I caught stealing my onions, and a special outrage I suffered in an attack by a German and a Swede at Columbus. I could get no action by the courts in either case.

Balance on hand for old age, zero.

I inclose the few pages, with the "reservations" that they are not for the press. As you doubtless know, we have no immunity and I have not been immersed in the River Styx, and I still hope to get something out of Mexico. I know not what to do. I am now losing everything in way of crops and rentals by not feeling safe to go. I was selected for kidnaping when I left there last May, through the warning of Mexican friends.

Can not get any one to collect anything for me. I must not be under the ban in Mexico. I did not name the butchery of one of our citizens as I suppose others have done so.

Loyally,

L. J. KALKLOSCH.

THE STORY OF THE THEFT OF THE LAND OF THE COLONY MORELOS (MORMON) IN THE STATE OF SONORA, MEXICO.

[As told to me in person by J. Lillywhite, now head man of the colony.]

The Mormon colony Morelos was established in Sonora on the Bavispe River about 1901. It was founded by about a dozen families, mostly from Utah. In 1910 the colony numbered about 700 persons and was in a prosperous condition. The colonists had purchased their land—some 27,000 acres—partly from Cole & Cameron, an American firm of cattlemen, and partly from Mexican owners.

The colonists built some 50 brick dwelling houses, a flour mill, a fine schoolhouse, and fenced and irrigated their lands, adding greatly to the value of their holdings. The farms were stocked with well-bred cattle, horses, hogs, and chickens. The colonists engaged in general farming, the crops consisting of wheat, corn, barley, potatoes and other vegetables, and fruits of many kinds. One year their wheat crop amounted to 47,000 bushels. An imported stallion owned by a few of the colonists cost $2,299. Other blooded animals were imported by the colonists.

When Diaz was driven out the colony was flourishing. In the spring of 1912, when Orosco's Red Flaggers overran Chihuahua, the colonists were asked by the American Government to come out. They complied with the request, but left Mexican caretakers on their property. A few never went back, not having the means. Others went back as soon as they could to take care of their own and of the property of their associates.

Those who went back took in with them an American consul named Dye, who went with them and gathered up along the valley merchandise which had been looted from their stores. Mexicans owning the homes searched invariably denied that they had anything belonging to the colonists, but in the face of these denials goods stolen from the colonists were found in nearly every home. Consul Dye took photographs of the wrecked and looted stores and houses and sent them to Washington.

The mill was destroyed. More than a ton of books, charts, and school paraphernalia had been taken away and destroyed, or were scattered over the country for miles around.

The mill was rebuilt and the machinery replaced by the Lillywhite Brothers. The colony resumed operations and went along with more or less interference by the revolutionists, who dynamited the irrigation dam and helped themselves from time to time to the cattle, horses, and produce of the colonists.

In 1915, when Carranza joined up with Gen. Calles in Sonora and they marched east into Chihuahua, the Mexicans living near the colony had already decided to seize the land of the colonists. Carranza stopped at Colonia Morelos, and these Mexicans appealed to him to divide the lands up among them. When they had finished their plea, J. Lillywhite took Carranza into his buggy and drove him over the colony, pointing out the brick houses, the mill, the growing orchards, and the fields of grain and the irrigation dam, and then, by comparison with 200-year old towns like Fronteras, argued with Carranza that what the Mormons had accomplished in five years would not have been accomplished by native Mexicans in two centuries. Carranza agreed with him and promised to protect the colonists in their rights. On their return he replied to the clamorous Mexicans by saying that he would not have the colonists disturbed; that they had paid for their lands and developed them and made them productive, and were entitled to all they had accumulated. Then he told J. Lillywhite to recall all the missing colonists, saying they were just the class of people the country needed, and he promised then and there to issue permits to the colonists to bring in free of duty any live stock or machinery that they needed to carry on their development work, and also that he would guarantee the colonists protection for life and property.

For a time thereafter the colonists were subjected only to those annoyances arising from marauding visits of occasional bands of revolutionists and bandits.

When Villa was on his way to take Agua Prieta in Sonora, Gen. Calles sent down to the colony a demand that the mill be dismantled at once so that Villa could get no flour. Calles' men took away an important part of the machinery and put the mill out of commission. Villa's men, in trying to get what flour remained in the mill, completely wrecked the machinery. The mill was again rebuilt, but the two crops of wheat then on the ground—one in the stack and one ready to harvest—were seized by Carranza forces before they could be got in. This was at the time that the Pershing punitive expedition started in and when the country was expecting intervention.

Just after this Gen. Calles seized all the land belonging to the colonists and turned it over to the Mexicans who had been clamoring for it. The colonists held the houses then occupied by them and J. Lillywhite held the mill and a small piece of ground which he refused to give up. The Mexicans took the rest of the land, vacant houses and most of the farming tools without compensation to the colonists.

The Mexicans were unable to raise enough to feed themselves, and J. Lillywhite went into other districts and bought and shipped in wheat in order to fill his contract to supply El Tigre Mining Co. The Commissary of the Mexicans who were living on the land belonging to the colonists then appeared at the mill and demanded the flour milled for El Tigre Mining Co. They wanted all there was, but "compromised" on a ton, which was delivered to them. Then they promptly demanded the rest, and had got two tons more when the millman crippled the engine so that they could not get the rest. The Mexicans then appealed to the presidente of the district at Agua Prieta, who went to the colony and arranged with J. Lillywhite for a thousand pounds more of flour on the condition that the Mexicans would pay for it at the next harvest. Only a small part of the three tons and a half was ever paid for. Bad wheat was received for some, and some poor labor was done for another small part. J. Lillywhite's loss on this wheat was more than a thousand dollars.

Since that time the Mexicans have been in possession of the land. They have destroyed many of the buildings and torn up a good many fences, moving the wire to other parts of the country and selling it. They cut down bearing fruit-trees to plant corn, and used about as much judgment in their other farming operations.

Many of the colonists gave up in disgust and came out after turning their claims over to J. Lillywhite. He remained and protested vigorously to the Mexican authorities against the vandalism of those who had seized the properties of the colonists. He was told that he had nothing to do with the properties by the Mexicans in control, and the Mexican authorities simply ignored his protests.

Mr. Lillywhite stated that quite recently the Mexican authorities had made a demand upon him for payment of taxes on the property which had been taken from him and the other colonists.

And that is the way the matter stands at this time.

I have read over the above statement and certify to its truth.

(Signed) J. LILLYWHITE,
Post-office box 413, Douglas, Ariz.

DOUGLAS, ARIZ., November 5, 1919.

L. Witzke, 24 years of age; German citizen; left Germany 1912, arriving in San Francisco 1916. Left United States in March, 1914. Arrested January 31, 1918, at Nogales, Ariz. Since then in custody.

I went to Mexico because I feared a declaration of war between the United States and Germany. I got hold of a Russian passport and the legation secretary sent me to Janke who was the head of the German secret service at Monterrey. He was living in a house belonging to a Mexican, Calle Guerrero 18. He took care of the Germans coming from the United States.

Janke told me that von Eckhardt and Carranza had an agreement and were working together. There was no go-between. Carranza and von Eckhardt always conferred personally. The latter part of 1917 von Eckhardt tried to float a loan for Carranza and I don't know whether he was successful or not, for I was arrested before it was completed. Von Eckhardt offered to put up German securities. When Carranza wanted von Eckhardt he would send for him and he would go in an auto and call on him publicly. As to what took place no one would know for their business was formal. Meetings always took place in Carranza's office in the National Palace.

Swertz was a major in Carranza's Army. He was a German citizen; a noncommissioned officer in German Army. Received his commission in 1916. He had been arrested since arrival in the United States and escaped to Mexico. Gov. Calles being very much pro-German gave him a commission.

Gen. Kloos was a German citizen; now an officer in the Carranza Army. Of course he was very much pro-German.

Ninety per cent of the Mexican Army were anti-American and pro-German since the war started.

There was a proposal to Mexico from Zimmerman to Carranza that if the United States went into the war Germany, Japan, and Mexico were to make an alliance against the United States, and Mexico was to get Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California for her part. This was before the war. Carranza tried to get Japan to join, but failed. Carranza's secret service men would make their reports to the Mexican Government, and anything they reported that was of interest to us we would get it through official channels. Von Brandt was our agent in Nuevo Laredo; he was a saloon man. His son was one of the means of communication across the river. Also taxi driver.

Gens. Obregon, Pablo Gonzales, who has a German wife, Murguia, Elias Calles, Serano, Gen. Garza, of Mexico City, were all strong pro-German. Everbush said he also paid Pelaez. The Mexican consul at Laredo was very kind to me and in 1917 viséd my passport. I did not have a picture but he passed me. He knew I was a German secret service agent. He asked my name and I told him, and he at once said all right.

The German Government through Spain had Mexico to be neutral, for the purpose of having that as a refuge for the German secret service, etc. We thought the United States might force an issue with Mexico; hence we sent our agents to Tampico to keep peace as far as possible between the Mexicans and the oil people.

We received our notices and news from Germany through Laredo, Tex., and El Paso principally and by wireless in Mexico City in the Chapultepec Park. At first it was not strong enough and the Mexican Government put it up higher. We received our news over the wireless in code. We could not send messages, but could receive which were relayed.

It is against the law in Mexico for a foreigner to send code messages. All I had to do was to tell nearly any Carranza general who I was and my business, and he would at once allow me to send code messages especially enumerated above.

Gov. Cantu is anti-Carranzista and pro-American. Prior to the United States' entry into the war it was Germany's wish for Mexico and the United States to get into war so as to keep the United States occupied here and not have opportunity to consider European matters. My understanding was that Mexico was to harass the United States border prior to the war with Germany so she would not enter the war against Germany. Carranza soldiers would raid on the border under the guise of other parties. Mauro Mendez, minister of telegraph, was under pay from the German Government. His pay was paid through Carranza, who was repaid by the German citizens of Mexico.

Carranza was pro-German because he thought it the salvation for his country. To keep himself in favor had to be anti-American, for the Mexican people are anti-American.

SAN ANTONIO, December 3, 1919.

ACCOUNT OF THE ROWE KIDNAPING AS TOLD BY HIMSELF.

About a month ago some seven rebels entered the mining camp. There were about 100 men employed around the camp. A man had been placed on a near-by hill to warn of the approach of rebels; he failed to warn of the approach of this same bunch of seven. When the bunch arrived at the mine, a Frenchman started to run from the office to his room; he was shot in the stomach, later he was killed. The Englishman Rowe was carried away. That night a man came and said he would be released for 2,000 pesos. The money was sent out, but for various reasons the delivery could not be made. Soldiers were near by, so the money was returned; a later effort of this nature failed. A few days after they kidnaped Rowe they went into a small village and carried off a girl, the captain took her; a few days later the second in command thought he should have the girl; he killed his superior and took the girl. Some days later another of the party, a friend of the captain, killed the second who had been in command originally; this killer took the girl for himself. Later another of the bunch, a friend of the first killer, killed the last one who got the girl; this killer run away, thus leaving only three in the bunch. During all the time they were or had been skipping from pillar to post, dodging around, always guarding Rowe. Some three weeks after he had been taken the bunch deliberately hanging him to a tree in order not to be bothered with him any more. He prevailed upon them to allow him his liberty and he would send them 1,000 pesos. They cussed him out, but eventually accepted the proposition; they carried him to a near-by village and allowed him to go. He had to rest a week in the village; he was in a very bad shape; eventually he arrived at Fresnillo and gave this account of his experiences. He means to send the thousand pesos, as next "gringo" they caught they might not take his word. Just as the vice-consul in Zacatacas heard of the matter, he complained: many soldiers were sent out, but they had no part in the "rescue" as reported by the press.

Fresnillo is a small place, 40 miles north of the city of Zacatacas. The mining camp herein mentioned is 6 miles from Fresnillo.

LIST OF AMERICANS KILLED IN MEXICO, NOT IN MURDER MAP.

Darrow Berris, Nuevo Buena, 1913.
De Fabir, C. G., Cerecruz, soldier.
Bruce, Bruce, Ner Guerrero, 1916.
Echold, ———, Temoachic, 1914.
Earnest Howell.
Goodman, child, Acapulco, 1911.
Goodman, child, Acapulco.
Goodman, child, Acapulco.
Jones, Harry J., Texas, 1915, soldier.
Johnson, Guy, Chihuahua, 1916.
Keane, Peter, 1916.
Martinez, Luciano, Tampico district, 1913.
Martinetto, A., Cumpas, 1915.
Miller, Chas. De Witt, Columbus.

Morris, J. L., Cumbre Tunnell.
 Patrick, Glennon, Alamo, Lower California, 1911.
 Pearson, George F., Western Chihuahua, 1916.
 Pelham, Oscar, Santa Gertrudis Mine, Pachuca, 1911.
 Price, Scott, Mexico, 1912.
 Riche, A. C., Columbus.
 Snell, Benjamin, Ner Minaca, 1916.
 Stell, Dr. A. T., Near Guerrero, 1916.
 Stevens, William J., Pacheco, 1912.
 Smith, Barron, Mexico City, 1915.
 Wolf, U. G., Sonora, 1913.
 Taylor, S. E., 1915.
 Thomas, Robert.

[Confidential.]

[Thirty-sixth Congress, first session. Executive, No. 98.]

TRANSIT AND COMMERCE WITH MEXICO.

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES TRANSMITTING A TREATY OF TRANSITS AND COMMERCE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE MEXICAN REPUBLIC; ALSO A CONVENTION TO ENFORCE TREATY STIPULATIONS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE MEXICAN REPUBLIC, BOTH SIGNED AT VERA CRUZ ON THE 14TH DAY OF DECEMBER, 1859.

January 4, 1860. Read, and, on motion by Mr. ———, referred, together with the treatie and accompanying documents, to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate.

March 6, 1914. Injunction of secrecy removed, and ordered printed for the use of the Senate.

To the Senate of the United States:

I transmit to the Senate for consideration, with a view to ratification, a "treaty of transits and commerce between the United States of America and the Mexican republic;" and also a "convention to enforce treaty stipulations" between the same parties, both of which were signed by the plenipotentiaries of the respective governments, at Vera Cruz, on the 14th December ultimo.

I also transmit a copy of a despatch of the minister of the United States accredited to the Mexican government to the Secretary of State relative to these instruments.

JAMES BUCHANAN.

WASHINGTON, January 4, 1860.

Mr. McLane to Mr. Cass.

No. 56.]

UNITED STATES LEGATION,
 Vera Cruz, December 14, 1859.

SIR: I have the satisfaction to forward herewith a treaty concluded with the government of Mexico, by which it will be perceived that my negotiation for transits and rights of way across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, and from the Rio Grande and Arizona to the Gulf of California, is successfully closed, and that this government consents to all the stipulations deemed important by the President to insure the safety of the same.

I have also concluded and forward herewith a convention with the government of Mexico to enforce treaty stipulations, and to maintain order in the territory of the republics of Mexico and the United States, by which it will be perceived that, while the independence of Mexico is in no degree compromised, the United States acquires the right to intervene in support of its own treaty rights and the security of its own citizens whenever Mexico may be unable to guaranty the same, without incurring the obligation or necessity of a general intervention in the domestic affairs of that country.

The treaty of transits and commerce is based upon the resolutions or project of Mr. Ocampo, submitted to me with his letter of the 9th July, 1859, a copy of which was transmitted to you as exhibit A of my despatch No. 23. The articles of this project have been modified in pursuance of your instructions communicated in your No. 10, which modifications were refused by Mr. Fuente in his note of August 30, a copy of which was transmitted to you as exhibit A of my despatch No. 33, and again on the 24th November, in a personal conference with me, after which he retired from the government, President Juarez having decided that it was his duty to conclude the negotiation on the basis of your instructions already noted. Mr. Ocampo then having resumed the post of Minister of Foreign Affairs, I held several conferences with him, in which I advised him that I had no desire to press the views of my government further, and that I should not resume the negotiation unless the views of the President in relation to the protection of the transits were promptly and fully conceded. In reply to which he informed me that he had received instructions to accept the proposition I made to Mr. Fuente in August, to wit: that the article in the treaty with the republic of Nicaragua relating to the protection necessary and proper to insure the safety of the transits should be adopted as a satisfactory solution of the question.

I accepted this concession, and proceeded with the examination of the other articles of his project, all of which were modified to meet the views of the government of the United States, except in relation to the limitation proposed by me on the dividends that might be made by companies possessing the privileges of transit. In the exercise of the discretion confided to me I did not press this proposition, as Mr. Ocampo manifested unusual sensibility in reference to it, and persisted in his opinion that such a limitation ought not to be enforced upon companies that invested capital in Mexico, where the value of money was so much greater than in the United States or in Europe; but I deemed it expedient to extend and enlarge the demand I had made concerning the commercial privileges to be enjoyed at the termination of the transits. With this view I proposed that a list of articles should be agreed upon, being the growth, product or manufacture of the two republics, and that the Congress of the United States should select from the list at its discretion which articles could be imported into either republic at these transits on terms of perfect reciprocity, whether free or at a fixed rate of duty. In this list I embraced everything that was included in the project of a reciprocity treaty formerly negotiated between Mexico and the United States, with some additional articles of considerable importance, especially all grains and breadstuffs, and manufactures of cotton and leather.

I consider this arrangement, when taken in connection with the warehousing regulations provided for in the original project, to be of great importance, not only to the frontier population between Mexico and the United States, but to the general commercial interests of both republics, more particularly to the agricultural interest of the west, and the manufacturers of cotton and leather, whether in the west or east; and as it is embodied in the treaty of transits and commerce, the original project of which has already received the sanction of the President, I indulge the hope that he will find in it an additional reason for receiving with satisfaction the result of my negotiation.

- This treaty of transits and commerce, as concluded, cedes to the United States in perpetuity the right of way across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and from the Rio Grande and Arizona to the Gulf of California, with free passage of goods, merchandise, and mails, troops and munitions of war. Warehouses are to be erected at the termini of the transits, and regulations established for storage of goods for sale in Mexico or for reshipment, and transit free of duty, with a schedule of articles to be imported into either republic on terms of a perfect reciprocity. Power is conceded to the Government of the United States to use its military force to insure the safety of these transits and that of its citizens who may enjoy the same. These provisions, with the stipulation exempting them from forced loans and guaranteeing religious freedom and worship in chapels or private houses, will give to the citizens of the United States in Mexico great advantages, and on the line of the transits as well as on the inland frontier contribute to the welfare and general prosperity of both republics.

The amount of four millions is stipulated as the sum to be paid to Mexico in compensation for its loss of revenue for the free passage of goods through its territory between our Atlantic and Pacific States or destined for consumption in Arizona, and in consideration of the concessions embraced in the other stipulations of the treaty. Two millions of this amount are reserved for the satisfaction of claims of citizens of the United States against the government of Mexico.

I have commented upon all these stipulations in former despatches, and expressed to you the opinion I entertain of their value; it is not necessary, therefore, that I should extend my observations in this despatch, my purpose being simply to recapitulate the stipulations embraced in the treaty as it has been concluded by me.

In reference to the convention to enforce treaty stipulations and to maintain order in the territory of either republic, I have little to add to what I have repeatedly brought to your attention in connection with the inability of any government that may exist in Mexico as a central government to perform properly its functions as a supreme government, and in discussing Mr. Ocampo's project of a treaty of alliance between Mexico and the United States. I do not doubt now, and I have never doubted, the ability of the constitutional government to sustain itself against the church and military government that has possession of the capital, but I cannot foresee when or how the struggle between them will terminate; and until such a termination is reached citizens of the United States in Mexico will be exposed to danger, and treaty stipulations will be violated. Under these circumstances, although I have on all occasions represented to the constitutional government that I was instructed to adhere to the fixed policy of the United States and avoid all intervention with the domestic administration of Mexico, yet I have steadily insisted that it was the recognized duty of the government of the United States to intervene and interfere whenever its own security, or what was due to itself in the abstract, or in virtue of treaty stipulations, required such intervention, as also to protect and defend the lives and property of citizens of the United States within the territory of Mexico.

Keeping this general principle in view, and pursuing the spirit of your instructions on this point, I have endeavored to come to such an understanding with the constitutional government as would permit such an intervention with the least possible disturbance of the friendly relations that ought to be maintained between the two republics, and without any real departure from the policy of the United States in this connection.

It has been with much difficulty that I induced the constitutional government to recognize its obligation to seek the aid of the government of the United States when it was unable to perform with effect its proper functions as a government; and it was only when I represented that sooner or later the government of the United States would act without reference to it or any other government or authority, in defence of its treaty rights and to protect its citizens, that I was able to come to any conclusion satisfactory to myself on this point.

The principle of mutuality or reciprocity that prevails in the convention I have concluded and now submit for the consideration of the President seems due to the self-respect of the government of Mexico, and was justified practically by recent events on the Rio Grande frontier; and I adopted it willingly, and with confidence that it gave greater strength to the convention than if I had only contemplated the contingency that the weakness of the Mexican government rendered such intervention necessary.

I am aware that I have acted very much on my own discretion and responsibility in concluding this convention, though I have endeavored to follow the spirit of your instructions; and I am persuaded that if the government of the United States declines the responsibility imposed upon it by the adoption and ratification of this convention, further anarchy will prevail in Mexico, until it will be terminated by direct intervention from some other quarter in the federal politics of Mexico, or by an intervention of our own, caused by some sudden and unforeseen provocation that will expose us to the responsibilities of a general war, and a conquest that few would desire to undertake or consummate.

I beg to call your attention to my despatch, No. 5, in connection with the value of the transit from Guaymas to Arizona, and to my despatches Nos. 8, 10, 17, and 22, in reference to the Tacubaya assassinations, and the demand addressed to the Miramon government for redress, and also to my No. 54, referring to the assassination of Ormond Chase; and in this connection I invite your particular attention to the necessity of adopting some measure in concert with the constitutional government, or independent thereof, to enforce these demands. All the facts connected with these transactions urge strongly the adoption of the convention herewith transmitted.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT M. McLANE.

HON. LEWIS CASS,
Secretary of State, Washington City.

[Confidential.]

[Thirty-sixth Congress, first session. Executive, No. 98.]

TREATY OF TRANSITS AND COMMERCE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE MEXICAN REPUBLIC, DATED AT VERA CRUZ, DECEMBER 14, 1859.

January 4, 1860. Read, and, on motion by Mr. ———, referred, together with the treaties and accompanying documents, to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate.

March 6, 1914. Injunction of secrecy removed, and ordered printed for the use of the Senate.

Whereas the ratifications of a treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation were exchanged between the United States of America and the United Mexican States on the fifth of April, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one; and whereas the ratifications of a treaty for the alteration of boundary and the regulation of a transit or right of way across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec were exchanged between the same two republics on the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four; and whereas, it is deemed expedient to amplify and extend some of the stipulations of the aforesaid treaties, and thus render more firm and inviolable the true and sincere friendship now existing between the United States and Mexico:

Wherefore the following stipulations have been agreed upon by means of a treaty of transits and commerce.

For which important object the President of the United States of America has appointed Robert M. McLane, a citizen of the United States, and envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States of America near the Mexican government, with full powers; and the President of the Mexican republic, in the exercise of the executive power, having conferred like full powers on the citizen Melchor Ocampo, Secretary of State and Foreign Affairs; and the aforesaid plenipotentiaries, after having compared and exchanged in due form their respective powers as aforesaid, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

As an amplification of the eighth article of the treaty of the thirtieth of December, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, the Mexican republic cedes to the United States and its citizens and property, in perpetuity, the right of way, by the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, from one ocean to the other, by any kind of road now existing, or that may hereafter exist, both republics and their citizens enjoying it.

Considerando que las ratificaciones de un tratado de amistad, comercio, y navegación fueron cangeadas entre los Estados Unidos dos Méjicanos y los Estados Unidos de América á los cinco dias de Abril, del año de mil ochocientos treinta y uno, y por cuanto que las ratificaciones de un tratado para la alteracion de los linderos y los reglamentos de un tránsito ó derecho de via al traves del Istmo de Tehuantepec fueron cangeadas entre las mismas dos repúblicas, á los treinta dias de Junio del año de mil ochocientos cincuenta y cuatro; y por cuanto se juzga conveniente amplificar y estender algunas de las estipulaciones de los antedichos tratados, y de esta manera volver mas sólida e inviolable la verdadera y sincera amistad que ahora existe entre Méjico y los Estados Unidos.

Por lo tanto las estipulaciones siguientes han sido convenidas por medio de un tratado de transits y comercio.

Para cuyo importante objeto el Presidente de la república Méjicana, en el ejercicio del poder ejecutivo ha conferido plenos poderes al ciudadano Melchor Ocampo, Secretario de Estado y del Despacho de Relaciones Exteriores y el Presidente de los Estados Unidos de América al ciudadano Roberto M. McLane, enviado extraordinario y ministro plenipotenciario de los Estados Unidos de América cerca del gobierno Méjicano; y los susodichos plenipotenciarios despues de haber comprobado y cambiado sus respectivos plenos poderes, han convenido en los articulos siguientes:

ARTICULO I.

Como amplification del artículo 8 del tratado de 30 de Diciembre, de 1853, la república Méjicana cede á los Estados Unidos en perpetuidad, y á sus ciudadanos y propiedades el derecho de via por el Istmo de Tehuantepec, des de un oceano hasta el otro por cualquiera clase de camino que exista hoy ó existir á en lo de adelante, gozando de ello ambas republicas y sus ciudadanos.

ARTICLE II.

Both republics agree to protect all routes now existing, or that shall hereafter exist, over the said isthmus, and to guaranty the neutrality of the same.

ARTICLE III.

Simultaneous with the first bona fide use of any route across the said isthmus for purposes of actual transit, the republic of Mexico shall establish two ports of deposit—the one on the east, the other on the west of the isthmus. No duty shall be levied by the government of Mexico upon foreign effects and merchandise which may pass bona fide by the said isthmus, and which may not be intended for the consumption of the Mexican republic. No incumbrance or tolls shall be imposed upon foreign persons and property which may pass by this road beyond those that may be imposed upon the persons and property of Mexicans. The republic of Mexico will continue to allow the free and untrammelled transit of the mails of the United States, provided they pass in closed mail bags, and they be not for distribution on the road. Upon such mails none of the charges imposed, nor of those which may hereafter be imposed, shall be applied in any case.

ARTICLE IV.

The Mexican republic agrees that it will establish for each of the two ports of deposit—the one on the east, the other on the west of the isthmus—regulations that will permit the effects and merchandise belonging to citizens or subjects of the United States or of any foreign country to be entered and stored in warehouses, which shall be erected for that purpose, free of all tonnage or other duties whatever, except the necessary charges for cartage and storage, which said effects and merchandise may be subsequently withdrawn for transit across the said isthmus, and for shipment from either of the said ports of deposit to any foreign port, free of all tonnage or other duties whatever; and they may likewise be withdrawn from the said warehouses for sale and consumption, within the territory of the Mexican republic, on the payment of such duties or imposts as the said Mexican government may be pleased to enact.

ARTICULO II.

Ambas repúblicas convienen en proteger todos los caminos que existen hoy ó existan en lo de adelante y en garantizar la neutralidad de los mismos.

ARTICULO III.

Simultaneamente con el primer uso bona fide de cualquiera ruta por medio de dicho istmo, con motivos del tránsito efectivo del mismo, la república de Méjico, establecerá dos puertos de depósito, el uno al este, y el otro al oeste del istmo. Ningun derecho se recandará por el gobierno de Méjico sobre los efectos y mercancías extranjeras que pasen bona fide por dicho istmo, y que no sean destinados para el consumo de la república Méjicana. Ningun gravamen ó derechos de portargo se impondrá á las personas y propiedades extranjeros, que pasen por este camino, mas de los que se impongan á los personas y propiedades Méjicanas. La república de Méjico continuará permitiendo el franco y libre tránsito de las balijas de correo de los Estados Unidos, siempre que pasen sacos cerrados y que no sean para repartirse en el camino. Sobre tales balijas ningunos de los gravámenes impuestos ni de los que los en sucesivo se impongan se aplicarán en ningun caso.

ARTICULO IV.

La república Méjicana conviene en establecer, para cada uno de los dos puertos de depósito, el uno al este, y el otro al oeste del istmo, los reglamentos que permitan la entrada y el almacenaje de los efectos y mercancías pertenecientes á los ciudadanos ó á los súbditos de los Estados Unidos ó de cualquier país extranjero, libres de todo gravamen de tonelada ú otro derecho cualquiera, con escepcion de los gartos necesarios para el acarreo y almacenaje de dichos efectos, para los cuales se construirán almacenes propios; los dichos efectos y mercancías pod ran ser sacados del depósito para el tránsito de dicho istmo, así como para embarcarlos desde cualquiera de los dos puertos de depósito, con destino á cualquier puerto del extranjero que dando siempre libres de todo derecho de tonelada ú otro impuesto cualquiera; igualmente podran ser sacados de dichos almacenes para ser vendidos y consumidos dentro del territorio de la república Méjicana, previo el pago de derechosé impuestos que tenga por bien decretar el dicho gobierno Méjicano.

ARTICLE V.

The republic of Mexico agrees that should it become necessary at any time to employ military forces for the security and protection of persons and property passing over any of the routes aforesaid, it will employ the requisite force for that purpose; but upon the failure to do this, from any cause whatever, the government of the United States may, with the consent or at the request of the government of Mexico, or of the minister thereof at Washington, or of the competent legally appointed local authorities, civil or military, employ such force for this and for no other purpose; and when in the opinion of the government of Mexico, the necessity ceases, such force shall be immediately withdrawn.

In the exceptional case, however, of unforeseen or imminent danger to the lives or property of citizens of the United States, the forces of said republic are authorized to act for their protection without such consent having been previously obtained; and such forces shall be withdrawn when the necessity for this employment ceases.

ARTICLE VI.

The Mexican republic grants to the United States the simple transit of its troops, military stores, and munitions of war, by the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, and by the transit or route of communication referred to in this convention from the city of Guaymas, on the Gulf of California, to the Rancho de Nogales, or some suitable point on the boundary line between the republic of Mexico and the United States near the one hundred and eleventh degree west longitude from Greenwich, immediate notice thereof being given to the local authorities of the republic of Mexico. And the two republics agree, likewise, that it shall be an express stipulation with the companies or enterprises to whom hereafter the carriage or transportation is granted, by any railroads or other means of communication, on the aforesaid transits, that the price for conveying the troops, military stores, and munitions of war of the two republics shall be, at most, one-half the ordinary fare paid by the passengers or merchandise which may pass over the said transits; it being understood that if the grantees of privileges already granted, or which hereafter may be granted, upon railroads or other means of conveyance over said transits, refuse to receive for one-half the price of conveyance the troops, arms, military stores, and munitions of the United States, the latter government will not impart to them the protection spoken of in articles second and fifth, nor any other protection.

ARTICULO V.

La república de Méjico conviene en que si fuere necesario, en cualquier tiempo el emplear fuerzas militares para la seguridad y proteccion de los personas y propiedades que transiten por cualesquiera de las rutas antedichas, ella empleará la fuerza necesaria con este fin; pero en caso de omision en hacerlo por cualquier motivo que fuere, el gobierno de los Estados Unidos, podrá con el consentimiento, ó á pedimento del gobierno de Méjico, ó al de su ministro en Washington, ó al de las autoridades locales competentes y legalmente nombradas, sean civiles ó militares, emplear tal fuerza para este efecto y no para ningun otro; y cuando en el juicio del gobierno de Méjico cese esa necesidad, la tal fuerza se retirará inmediatamente.

En el caso escepcional sin embargo de un peligro imprevisto ó inminente para las vidas ó propiedades de los ciudadanos de los Estados Unidos, las fuerzas de dicha república tendrán facultad de obrar para la proteccion de ellos, sin que dicho previo consentimiento haya sido obtenido, y tales fuerzas se retirarán cuando concluya la necesidad para su empleo.

ARTICULO VI.

La república Méjicana concede á los Estados Unidos el simple tránsito de sus tropas pertrechos y municiones de guerra por el Istmo de Tehuantepec, y por el tránsito ó ruta de comunicacion de que se habla en este convenio, desde la ciudad de Guaymas sobre el Golfo de California, hasta el Rancho de Nogales, ú otro punto conveniente sobre la frontera entre la república de Méjico y los Estados Unidos, cerca del grado 111° de longitud oeste de Greenwich dándose aviso de ello á las autoridades locales de la república de Méjico. Y las dos repúblicas convienen igualmente en que será estipulacion espresa con las compañías ó empresas á las que en lo sucesivo se conceda el acarreo y trasporte, por cualesquiera ferro-carriles ú otros medios de comunicacion, en los ante dichos transits, que el precio de conduccion de las tropas, pertrechos y municiones de guerra de las dos repúblicas será cuando mas la mitad del precio comun que paguen los pasajeros ó las mercancías que pasen sobre dichos transits; entendiéndose que si los concesionarios de privilegios ya acordados ó que en lo sucesivo se acordaren sobre ferro-carriles ú otros medios de conduccion en dichos transits rehusan recibir por mitad del precio de conduccion las tropas, armas, pertrechos y municiones de los Estados Unidos, este último gobierno no les impartirá la proteccion de que hablan los Artículos II y V, de este tratado, ni ninguna otra.

ARTICLE VII.

The Mexican republic hereby cedes to the United States in perpetuity, and to their citizens and property, the right of way or transit across the territory of the republic of Mexico, from the cities of Camargo and Matamoros, or any suitable point on the Rio Grande, in the State of Tamaulipas, via Monterey, to the port of Mazatlan, at the entrance of the Gulf of California, in the State of Sinaloa, and from the Rancho de Nogales, or any suitable point on the boundary line between the republic of Mexico and the United States, near the one hundred and eleventh degree west longitude from Greenwich, via Magdalena and Hermosillo, to the city of Guaymas, on the Gulf of California, in the State of Sonora, over any railroad or route of communication, natural or artificial, which may now or hereafter exist or be constructed, to be used and enjoyed in the same manner and upon equal terms by both republics and their respective citizens, the Mexican republic reserving always for itself the right of sovereignty which it now has upon all the transits spoken of in the present treaty. All the stipulations and regulations of every kind applicable to the right of way or transit across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec that are or have been agreed upon between the two republics, are hereby extended and applied to the foregoing transits or rights of way, excepting the right of passing troops, military stores, and munitions of war, from the Rio Grande to the Gulf of California.

ARTICLE VIII.

The two republics likewise agree that, from the list of merchandise here annexed, the Congress of the United States shall select those which, being the natural, industrial, or manufactured product of either of the two republics, may be admitted for sale and consumption in either of the two countries, under conditions of a perfect reciprocity, whether they be considered free of duty, or at a rate of duty to be fixed by the Congress of the United States; it being the intention of the Mexican republic to admit the articles in question at the lowest rate of duty, and even free if the Congress of the United States consents thereto. Their introduction from one to the other republic shall be made at the points which the governments of both republics may fix upon, at the limits or boundaries thereof ceded and granted

ARTICULO VII.

La república Méjicana por este artículo cede á los Estados Unidos en perpetuidad y á sus ciudadanos y propiedades, el derecho de via ó tránsito por el territorio de la república Méjicana, desde las ciudades de Camargo y Matamoros ú otro punto conveniente del Rio Grande en el Estado de Tamaulipas, por via de Monterey, hasta el puerto de Mazatlan, á la entrada del Golfo de California, Estado de Sinaloa; y des de el Rancho de Nogales, ú otro punto conveniente sito en las fronteras entre la república de Méjico y los Estados Unidos cerca al 111° grado de longitud oeste de Greenwich, por via de Magdalena y Hermosillo hasta la ciudad de Guaymas sita en el Golfo de California, Estado de Sonora, por cualquier ferrocarril ó via de comunicacion, natural ó artificial, que por ahora ó en lo venidero existiere ó que se que se construyere para el uso y goce mutuo, y bajo las mismas condiciones, de ambas repúblicas y sus respectivos ciudadanos, reservándose siempre para si la república Méjicana el derecho de soberania que hoy tiene sobre todos los tránsitos de que habla el presente tratado. Todas las estipulaciones y reglamentos de cualquiera clase aplicables al derecho de via ó tránsito por el Istmo de Tehuantepec, y sobre los cuales estan de acuerdo y se han convenido entre las dos repúblicas, por este artículo se estienden y se aplicana á los antedichos tránsitos ó derechos de via, á escepcion del derecho de pasar tropas, pertrechos y municiones de guerra, desde el Rio Grande hasta el Golfo de California.

ARTICULO VIII.

Conviene igualmente ambas repúblicas, en que, de la liste de mercancías aqui adjunta, elija el Congreso de los Estados Unidos las que, siendo producto natural, industrial ó manufacturado de cualquiera de las dos repúblicas sean admitidas para su venta y consumo en cualquiera de los dos países, bajo condiciones de una reciprocidad perfecta, sea que se les considere libres de derechos, ó con tal cuota como sea fijada por el Congreso de los Estados Unidos, puesto que la intencion de la república Méjicana es admitir los artículos de que se trata á los mas bajos derechos, y aun libres, si el Congreso de los Estados Unidos consintiere en ello. Su introduccion de una á otra república se hará por los puntos que los gobiernos de ambas repúblicas determinen en los limites ó términos de ellas, cedidos y concedidos para los tránsitos y enperpetuidad por este con-for the transits, and in perpetuity, by this convention, either across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec or from the Gulf of California to the interior frontier between Mexico and the United States. If any similar privileges should be granted by Mexico to other nations at the termini of the aforesaid transits upon the Gulfs of Mexico and California, and upon the Pacific ocean, it shall be in consideration of the same conditions and stipulations of reciprocity which are imposed upon the United States by the terms of this convention.

Schedule annexed to article VIII.

Animals of all kinds.
Plows and loose iron bars.
Rice.
Poultry and fresh eggs.
Quicksilver.
Stone coal.
Fresh, salted, and smoked meats.
Wood and iron houses.
Raw hides.
Horns.
Chile or red pepper.
Drawings and models of large machinery, buildings, monuments, and boats.
Boats of all sizes and classes for the navigation of the rivers on the frontier.
Brooms and material for their manufacture.
Bridle bits.
Fresh, dried, and sugared fruits.
Type, spaces, plates for printing or engraving, rules, vignettes, and printing ink.
Printed books of all classes bound in paper, (pamphlet bound).
Hops.
Timber, unwrought, and firewood.
Butter and cheese.
Geographical and nautical maps and topographical plans.
Marble, wrought and unwrought.
Machines and implements for agriculture, farming, mining, for the development of the arts and sciences, and their fixtures, either loose or for their repair.
Dyewood.
Fish, tar, turpentine, and ashes.
Plants, trees, and shrubbery.
Slates for roofing purposes.
Common salt.
Riding saddles.
Palm-leaf hats.
Plaster of Paris (gypsum).
Vegetables.
Undressed sheepskins.
Grain of all kinds, and from which bread is made.
Flour.
Wool.
Lard.

venio, ya al traves del Istmo de Tehuantepec, ya desde el Golfo de California hasta la frontera interior entre Méjico y los Estados Unidos. Si algunos privilegios semejantes fueren concedidos por Méjico á otras naciones, en los términos de los ante dichos tránsitos sobre los Golfos de Méjico y California y el oceano Pacifico, será en consideracion de las mismas condiciones y estipulaciones de reciprocidad que son impuestas á los Estados Unidos por los términos de esta convencion.

Lista indicada en este artículo VIII.

Animales de todas clases.
Arados y rejas sueltas.
Arroz.
Aves y huevos frescos.
Azogue.
Carbon de piedra.
Carne frescas, ahumadas y saladas.
Casas de madera y de fierro.
Cueros al pelo.
Cuernos.
Chile.
Diseños y modelos de bulto de máquinas, edificios, monumentos y embarcaciones.
Embarcaciones de todos tamaños y clases para navegar en los rios de la frontera.
Escobas y material para hacerlas.
Frenos.
Frutas, frescas, secas, y cubiertas.
Letra, escudos, espacios, plectas, viñetas, y tinta de imprenta.
Libros impresos de todas clases á la rústica.
Lúpulo.
Madera sin labrar y leña.
Mantequilla y queso.
Mapas geográficos, náuticos y cartas topográficas.
Mármol labrado y en bruto.
Máquinas y aparatos para la agricultura, la industria, la minería, las artes y las ciencias, y sus partes sueltas ó piezas de refaccion.
Palo de tinte.
Pez, alquitran, trementina y cenizas.
Plantas, árboles, y arbustos.
Pizarra para techos.
Sal comun.
Sillas de enontar.
Sombreros de palma.
Yeso.
Vegetales.
Talca.
Granos de toda especie que sirvan para hacer pan.
Harina.
Lana.
Manteca.
Sebo.

Tallow.
 Leather, and manufactures of leather.
 Every species of textile or woven fabric of cotton, excepting that called brown sheeting (mantatrigueña.)

ARTICLE IX.

As an amplification of the fourteenth and fifteenth articles of the treaty of the fifth of April, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, in which that which relates to the exercise of their religion by the citizens of Mexico was stipulated, the citizens of the United States will be permitted to exercise freely in Mexico their religion, either in public or in private, within their houses or in the churches and places which may be assigned to worship, as a consequence of the perfect equality and reciprocity which the second article of the same treaty states was taken for its basis. The chapels or places for public worship may be purchased, and shall be held as the property of those who may purchase them, as any other common property is purchased or held, excepting therefrom, however, the religious communities and corporations to whom the present laws of Mexico have prohibited entirely and forever and a day the obtaining and holding anything whatever in propriety. In no case shall citizens of the United States residing in Mexico be subject to have forced loans levied upon them.

ARTICLE X.

In consideration of the foregoing stipulations, and in compensation for the revenue surrendered by Mexico on the goods and merchandise transported free of duty through the territory of that republic, the government of the United States agrees to pay to the government of Mexico the sum of four millions of dollars, of which two millions shall be paid immediately upon the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty, and the remaining two millions shall be retained by the government of the United States for the payment of the claims of citizens of the United States against the government of the republic of Mexico, for injuries already inflicted and which may be proven to be just, according to the law and usage of nations and the principles of equity; and the same shall be paid pro rata, as far as the said sum of two millions will permit, in pursuance of a law to be enacted by the Congress of the United States for the adjudication thereof, and the remainder of this sum shall be returned to Mexico by the United States, in case there be any such remainder after the payment of the claims thus found to be just.

Cuero y manufacturas de cuero.
 Toda especie de tegidos de algodón, exceptuando el llamado mantatrigueña.

ARTICULO IX.

Como amplificación de los artículos 14° y 15° del tratado de 5 de Abril, de 1831, en que se estipuló lo relativo al ejercicio de la religion paralos ciudadanos de la república de Méjico, se permitirá á los ciudadanos de los Estados Unidos que ejerzan libremente en Méjico su religion en público ó en privado dentro de sus casas ó en los templos y lugares que se destinen al culto, como consecuencia de la perfecta igualdad y reciprocidad que el Artículo II, del mismo tratado dice que se tomaba por base de él. Las capillas ó lugares para el culto divino podrán ser comprados y serán poseídos como propiedad dequienes los cómpren como se compra y posee cualquiera otra propiedad comun, exceptuándose sin embargo á las comunidades ó corporaciones religiosas á las que las actuales leyes de Méjico han prohibido del todo y para siempre obtener y conservar nada en propiedad. En ningun caso que darán los ciudadanos de los Estados Unidos sujetos á que se les cobreu préstamos forzosos..

ARTICULO X.

En consideracion de las anteriores estipulaciones, y en compensacion de las rentas á las cuales renuncia Méjico sobre los efectos y mercancías transportadas libres de derecho por el territorio de dicha república, el gobierno de los Estados Unidos conviene pagar al gobierno de Méjico la suma de cuatro millones de pesos, de los cuales, dos millones se pagarán luego que se verifique el cange de las ratificaciones de este tratado, y los dos millones restantes serán reservados por el gobierno de los Estados Unidos en pago de las reclamaciones de los ciudadanos de los Estados Unidos contra el gobierno de la república de Méjico, por perjuicios que se les hayan causado, y que sea probado que son justas conforme á la ley y uso de las naciones y á los principios de la equidad: las cuales serán adjudicadas y pagadas pro rata hasta donde alcance la dicha suma de los dos millones, de conformidad con una ley que será decretada por el Congreso de los Estados Unidos pata la adjudcacion de esas mismas reclamaciones, y devuelta á Méjico la parte que sobre en el caso de que pagadas las reclamaciones justas quede algun sobrante.

ARTICLE XI.

This treaty shall be ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and by the President of Mexico, in virtue of his extraordinary and actual executive functions, and the respective ratifications shall be exchanged at the city of Washington, within the exact period six months from the date of its signature, or sooner if possible, or at the seat of the constitutional government, if any alterations or amendments be proposed by the President and Senate of the United States, and accepted by the President of the republic of Mexico.

In testimony whereof, we, the plenipotentiaries of the contracting parties, have hereunto affixed our hands and seals, at Vera Cruz, the fourteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, in the thirty-ninth year of the independence of the Mexican republic, and the eighty-fourth of that of the United States.

ROBT. M. McLANE. [L. S.]
M. Ocampo. [L. S.]

ARTICULO XI.

Este tratado será ratificado por el Presidente de Méjico en virtud de sus funciones ejecutivas extraordinarias actuales, y por el Presidente de los Estados Unidos de America, con la anuencia y consentimiento del Senado de los Estados Unidos, y las ratificaciones respectivas cangeadas en la ciudad de Washington, ó en la residencia del gobierno constitucional si se propusieren algunas alteraciones ó enmiendas por el Presidente y el Senado de los Estados Unidos, y se aceptáren por el Presidente de la república de Méjico, en el preciso término de seis meses contados desde el día en que se firme ó antes si fuere posible.

En fé de lo cual, nosotros, lo plenipotenciarios de las partes contratantes, lo hemos firmado y sellado en Vera Cruz el día catorce de Diciembre del año del Señor mil ochocientos cincuenta y nueve, trigésimo noveno de la independencia de la república Méjicana y octogésimo cuatro de la de los Estados Unidos.

M. Ocampo. [L. S.]
ROBT. M. McLANE. [L. S.]

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE MEXICAN REPUBLIC, DATED AT VERA CRUZ, DECEMBER 14, 1859.

Convention to enforce treaty stipulations and to maintain order and security in the territory of the republics of Mexico and the United States.

Whereas, in consequence of the existing civil war in Mexico, and particularly in view of the disturbed condition of the inland frontier of Mexico and the United States, occasion may arise when the forces of the two republic may find it necessary to act in concert and coöperation to enforce treaty stipulations and to maintain order and security in the territory of either republic; wherefore the following convention has been agreed upon:

ARTICLE I.

If any of the stipulations of existing treaties between Mexico and the United States are violated, or the safety and security of the citizens of either republic are endangered within the territory of the other, and the legitimate and acknowledged government thereof may be unable from any cause, to enforce such stipulations or to provide for such safety and security, it shall be obligatory on that government to seek the aid of the other in maintaining their due execution, as Convencion para ejecutar las estipulaciones de los tratados y conservar el orden y la seguridad en el territorio de los repúblicas de Méjico y de los Estados Unidos.

Considerando que por resulta de la guerra civil que existe en Méjico, y en vista particularmente del estado desordenado de la frontera del interior entre Méjico y los Estados Unidos, puedan suscitarse ocasiones en que las fuerzas de ambas repúblicas se vean necesitadas de obrar de acuerdo y en coöperacion para ejecutar las estipulaciones de los tratados y para conservar el orden y la seguridad en el territorio de cualquiera de las dos repúblicas, por cuyo motivo se ha convenido en la siguiente convencion:

ARTICULO I.

Si cualesquiera de las estipulaciones de los tratados vigentes entre Méjico y los Estados Unidos fueren violadas, ó el resguardo y seguridad de los ciudadanos de cualquiera de las dos repúblicas fueren arrisgados dentro del territorio de la otra, y que el gobierno legítimo y reconocido de ella no pueda, por cualquier motivo, ejecutar tales estipulaciones ó prevenir tal resguardo y seguridad, será obligacion de aquel gobierno solicitar el socorro del otro para mantener la debida ejecucion well as order and security in the territory of that republic, where such violation and discord occur; and in every such special case the expenses shall be paid by the treasury of the nation within whose territory such intervention may become necessary; and if disorder shall occur on the frontier of the two republics, the authorities of the two republics nearest to the place where the disorder exists shall act in concert and coöperation for the arrest and punishment of the criminals who have disturbed the public order and security of either republic, and for this purpose the parties guilty of these offences may be arrested within either republic and delivered over to the authorities of that republic within which the crime may have been committed; the nature and character of such intervention, as well as the expense thereof, and the manner of arresting and subjecting to punishment the said criminals shall be determined and regulated by an agreement between the executive branches of the two governments.

ARTICLE II.

This convention shall be ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and by the President of Mexico, in virtue of his extraordinary and actual executive functions, and the respective ratifications shall be exchanged at the city of Washington within the exact period of six months from the date of its signature, or sooner if possible, or at the seat of the constitutional government if any alterations or amendments be proposed by the President and Senate of the United States, and accepted by the President of the republic of Mexico.

In testimony whereof, we, the plenipotentiaries of the contracting parties, have hereunto affixed our hands and seals, at Vera Cruz, the fourteenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, in the thirty-ninth year of the independence of the Mexican republic and the eighty-fourth of that of the United States.

ROBT. M. McLANE. [L. s.]
M. OCAMPO. [L. s.]

de ellas, y tambien el orden y la seguridad en el territorio de aquella república en donde tal violacion y desorden sucedan; y en cada caso especial semejante, los gastos serán pagados por el Tesoro de la nacion dentro de cuyo territorio semejante, intervencion se haga necesaria; y si el desorden sucediere sobre la frontera d las dos repúblicas, las autoridades de ambas repúblicas mas inmediatas al lugar adonde el desorden ocista, obrarán de acuerdo y en coöperacion para el arresto y castigo de los criminales que han interrumpido la tranquilidad y seguridad pública de cualquiera de las dos repúblicas, y con este fin los reos de estas faltas podrán ser arrestados dentro cualquiera de las dos repúblicas, y entregados á las autoridades de aquella república dentro de la cual el crimen haya sido cometido; el genero y el carácter de tal intervencion como tambien los gastos de la misma, y la manera de prender y someter al castigo los dichos criminales, serán determinados y arreglados por un convenio entre los ramos ejecutivos de los dos gobiernos.

ARTICULO II.

Esta convencion será ratificada por el presidente de Méjico en virtud de sus funciones ejecutivas extraordinarias actuales, y por el Presidente de los Estados Unidos de America con la anuencia y consentimiento del Senado de los Estados Unidos, y las ratificaciones respectivas cangeadas en la ciudad de Washington, ó en la residencia del gobierno constitucional si se propusiere algunas alteraciones ó enmiendas por el Presidente y el Senado de los Estados Unidos y se aceptaren por el Presidente de la republica de Méjico, en el preciso término de seis meses contados desde el dia en que selfirme ó antes si fuere posible.

En ié de lo cual, nosotros, los plenipotenciarios, lo hemos firmado y sellado en Vera Cruz el dia catorce de Diciembre del año del señor mil ochocientos cincuenta y nueve, trigésimo noveno de la independencia de la república Méjicana y octogésimo cuarto de la de los Estados Unidos.

M. OCAMPO. [L. s.]
ROBT. M. McLANE. [L. s.]

[Confidential.]

[36th Congress, Ex. Session. Executive.]

TREATY WITH MEXICO.

AMENDMENT TO BE PROPOSED BY MR. SIMMONS.

June 26, 1860,

On motion by Mr. Mason,

Ordered, That it be printed in confidence for the use of the Senate.

March 6, 1914. Injunction of secrecy removed and ordered printed for the use of the Senate.

In article eight, strike out all after the word "agree" in line one, and insert the following:

—that from the "two lists" of merchandise here annexed, the Congress of the United States may select those which, being the natural industrial or manufactured product of the republic of Mexico, shall be admitted into the United States for sale and consumption therein, and also those which, being the natural industrial or manufactured product of the United States shall be admitted into the republic of Mexico for sale and consumption therein, under conditions of a perfect reciprocity as to the duties to be imposed thereon, it being agreed that the duties, if any, shall be the same in each of the two lists and operate alike in the two countries on all articles reciprocally received by the two republics; and the duties, if any, which shall be imposed by the Congress of the United States upon the articles of merchandise received therein which are not received by Mexico, shall be the just measure of the duties to be paid to Mexico upon the articles of merchandise which are received by that republic and not received from Mexico into the United States, it being the intention of the Mexican republic to admit the articles in question at the lowest rates of duty, or even free, if the Congress of the United States assents thereto.

¶ The following articles of merchandise, being of the growth or produce of the republic of Mexico, shall be admitted into the United States for sale or consumption therein, in conformity with the foregoing stipulations:

Animals of all kinds.

Ashes.

Brooms, and materials for their manufacture.

Boats of all sizes and classes, for the navigation of the rivers on the frontier.

Coffee.

Cotton.

Drawings and models of large machinery, buildings, monuments, and boats.

Fresh fruits.

Fresh, salted, and smoked meats.

Flour.

Fish.

Grain of all kinds, and of which bread is made.

Geographical and nautical maps and topographical plans.

Lard.

Marble, wrought and unwrought.

Machines and implements for the development of the arts and sciences, and their fixtures, either loose or for their repair.

Poultry and fresh eggs.

Plants, trees, and shrubbery.

Plaster of Paris. [Gypsum.]

Palm-leaf hats.

Quicksilver.

Rice.

Tar.

Tallow.

Timber, unwrought, and fire-wood.

Tobacco, unmanufactured or manufactured, other than segars and snuff.

Turpentine.

Types, spaces, plates for printing or engraving, rules, vignettes, and printing ink.

Agave fiber, dressed or undressed, or made into rope, hammocks, or bags.

Cocoa, cocoa shells, cocoa leaves, and cocoa nuts.

Cochineal.

Dye woods of all kinds and extracts thereof.

Horns and horntips.

Indigo.

Jalap.

Mahogany or other woods, used in the manufacture of furniture.

Raw hides.

Sarsaparilla.

Undressed sheep skins or goat skins.

Wool, the value of which, when exported, shall not exceed eighteen cents per pound.

And the following articles of merchandise being of the growth or product of the United States shall be admitted into the republic of Mexico, either free of duty or upon the payment of the same rates, or amount of duty, as shall be imposed by the Congress of the United States upon the articles of merchandise hereinbefore enumerated to be admitted into the United States from the republic of Mexico:

Animals of all kinds.

Ashes.

Boats of all sizes and classes, suitable for the navigation of the rivers of the frontier.

Brooms, and materials for their manufacture.

Butter and cheese.

Cotton.

Coffee.

The drawings and models of large machinery, buildings, monuments, and boats.

Every species of textile or woven fabric of cotton, excepting that called brown sheeting. [Manta trigüeña.]

Fresh fruits.

Fresh, salted, and smoked meats.

Flour.

Fish.

Grain of all kinds, and from which bread is made.

Geographical and nautical maps and topographical plans.

Lard.

Leather, and all manufactures of leather.

Machines, of all kinds, and implements for agriculture, farming, mining, for the development of the arts and sciences, and their fixtures, either loose or for their repair.

Marble, wrought or unwrought.

Palm-leaf hats.

Plants, trees, and shrubbery.

Plows, and iron in bars, loose.

Poultry and fresh eggs.

Printed books, of all classes, bound in paper. [Pamphlet bound.]

Plaster of Paris. [Gypsum.]

Quicksilver.

Rice.

Stone coal.

Screws, of all sizes.

Tar and turpentine.

Tallow.

Timber, unwrought, and firewood.

Tobacco, unmanufactured or manufactured, other than segars, and snuff.

Types, spaces, plates for printing and engraving, rules, vignettes, and printing-ink.

Wood and iron houses.

Their introduction from one to the other republic, as stated, shall be made at the points which the governments of both republics may fix upon, at the limits or boundaries of the transits ceded and granted in perpetuity by this convention, and at all other ports of entry now fixed, or which may hereafter be provided, in either of the two countries within the jurisdiction of either of the two governments now contracting for the entry of merchandise from other countries, and upon such proofs as may be required that the articles of merchandise so entered are of the growth or manufacture of the republic from which they are exported.

If any similar privileges shall be granted by Mexico to any other nation, at the termini of the aforesaid transits, upon the Gulfs of Mexico and California, and upon the Pacific ocean, or at any other ports of entry of the republic of Mexico, such grant of privileges shall include a reciprocal trade between such other nation and Mexico in the same articles of merchandise, and other reciprocal benefits, with those herein stipulated between the United States and Mexico, and shall not be granted without the payment of a proportionate amount of money, in advance in each case, as an equivalent and compensation for the revenue which may be surrendered by Mexico in relinquishing the specific or other duties imposed upon others upon the introduction of the articles of merchandise herein enumerated into that republic. The amount to be paid in money by such other nation shall bear the same proportion to the amount of its trade with Mexico in the articles of merchandise herein enumerated, as the sum of four millions of dollars bears to the amount of the trade from the United States to the republic of Mexico in the same articles of merchandise, and shall be computed and apportioned in each case upon the amount of the actual trade of the nations, respectively, to Mexico, in said articles of merchandise, for the five years next preceding the time of the ratification of the present treaty; and all such commercial privileges shall terminate simultaneously with those herein granted.

ART. —. Strike out all after the word "stipulations," line 2, and insert the following in lieu thereof:

—and as a commutation, equivalent, and compensation for the revenue surrendered by Mexico, upon the merchandise from the United States to be entered for consumption in, or to be transported through, the territory of the republic of Mexico free of duty, the government of the United States of America agrees to pay to the government of Mexico the sum of four millions of dollars, of which two millions shall be paid to Mexico immediately upon the exchange of the ratification of this treaty, and the remaining two millions shall be retained by the government of the United States, for the payment of the claims of citizens of the United States against the government of Mexico for injuries already inflicted, and which may be proved to be just, according to the law and usage of nations and the principles of equity; and after the claims shall be ascertained, and a list of the names of the claimants is reported to Congress, with the amount due to each respectively, in pursuance of a law to be enacted by the Congress of the United States for the adjudication thereof, the said two millions shall be appropriated by Congress for the payment of said claims, in full, if the said sum retained is sufficient, and pro rata if insufficient, to pay the whole; and the remainder of the two millions shall be paid to Mexico by the United States, in case there is any remainder after the payment of the claims thus proved to be just.

The stipulations contained in the eighth article of the present treaty are to continue for ten years, and thereafter until one or the other of the said republics shall have given one year's previous notice that they desire to terminate the same; and these and all other stipulations shall take effect when the two millions agreed to be paid to Mexico shall be paid, and the necessary laws to carry the same into operation shall be passed by the Congress of the United States.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING THE RIGHTS BOTH UNDER MEXICAN AND INTERNATIONAL LAW OF AMERICAN PETROLEUM COMPANIES OPERATING IN MEXICO IN RESPECT OF PETROLEUM PROPERTIES ACQUIRED BY THEM PRIOR TO MAY 1, 1917.

The following is a statement of the principal facts and questions of Mexican and of international law involved in the controversy between the Federal Government of Mexico and the American oil-producing companies operating in that country.

STATEMENT OF FACTS.

1. The commercial development of petroleum in Mexico was commenced by Messrs. Edward L. Doheny and Charles A. Canfield, of the Mexican Petroleum Co., in the year 1900, in which year these gentlemen acquired their first petroleum properties in Mexico.

2. Not a single acre of oil land was then or has at any time since been acquired by these gentlemen or their companies, or any of the other American petroleum producers from the Mexican Government. No "concession" or grant of any kind has been made to any such company since the beginning of the development period. In every instance petroleum rights have been acquired by purchase or lease made with private owners who held under titles extending back in many instances more than 250 years.

A concession covering public lands was granted by the Government of Mexico to a Mexican company owned by the leading English oil interests, but up to the present time no petroleum development has taken place under it.

3. The only important concessions as to petroleum lands which have been granted at any time since the beginning of the Diaz régime, with the exception of the English concession above alluded to, are concessions granted within the last few months by the Carranza government itself to its own friends and favorites. These concessions, if legally upheld, effect the confiscation of certain lands belonging to the American petroleum companies, for they purport to permit drilling upon and along the beds of streams running through the oil region despite the fact that the land underneath these streams is, subject to certain easements of passage, owned to the center of the stream by the owners of the adjoining uplands.

In other words, it remained for the Carranza government, purporting to repudiate alleged concessions, to itself enter largely into concession-granting activity.

4. In reliance upon the provisions of the Mexican laws which we shall hereafter quote, American concerns have since 1900 made enormous investments in the purchase and acquisition by lease or contract of oil lands, and in the establishment of a very large system for the collection, distribution, transportation, and refining of the products of these fields. Every dollar of this investment was made in reliance upon the guaranties of the Mexican constitution of 1857, and upon the laws (dating from 1884) declarations, announced policy, and supposed good faith of the Mexican Government.

5. In 1917 the Carranza government procured the adoption (by entirely ultra-constitutional methods) of the so-called Queretaro constitution, in which a clause is found declaring for the first time in the history of Mexican legislation that the Mexican Republic possesses what is called "direct dominion" over petroleum.

No attempt was made to construe the meaning of this clause, or to put it into effect until February, 1918, when the first of a series of decrees relating to the subject was issued. These decrees emanated solely from Mr. Carranza as dictator, were not the result of legislative action by the Mexican Congress, were wholly without legal sanction and were in no sense valid laws of the Mexican Republic.

In substance these decrees purport to construe the constitutional provisions as retroactively affecting properties theretofore acquired by American companies under the terms of preexisting laws, and attempt to confiscate these properties and take them from their owners with no pretense of compensation.

6. Direct enforcement of these laws was at first attempted by the Carranza government; but the petroleum companies, acting with the full knowledge and with the support of the United States State Department, refused to comply with their terms and to admit their validity. Thereafter the Carranza administration sought to accomplish indirectly, by preventing the actual enjoyment of the properties in one way or another, the objects which they had been unable to accomplish directly, but in this they likewise have failed owing to the determined and continued insistence of the American companies upon their rights both under the laws of Mexico and internationally.

7. No questions of taxation are involved in this controversy.

Attention is called to the following points of law:

POINT I.

During the entire period of the acquisition of these petroleum rights by the American companies, and up to May 1, 1917, no doubt exists but that under the laws of Mexico the title to petroleum beneath the surface of privately owned lands belonged to the owner of the surface itself.

From the time when Mexico gained its independence to 1884, no mining code or Federal legislation regarding title to substances found beneath the surface of the land had been promulgated.

On December 14, 1883, however, the constitution of 1857 was amended by authorizing Congress "to promulgate mining and commercial codes which shall be binding throughout the Republic, etc." (Constitution 1857, art. 72 as amended, Sec. X.)

On November 22, 1884, the first Federal mining law of the Republic of Mexico was promulgated under the foregoing provisions of the constitution of 1857. This mining law contained the following clause:

"ART. 10. The following substances are the exclusive property of the owner of the land who may, therefore, develop and enjoy them without the formality of entry (denuccio) or special adjudication: IV * * * salts found on the surface, fresh and salt water, whether surface or subterranean; petroleum and gaseous springs * * *"

The provisions of this law leave no room for argument as to the absolute ownership of petroleum by the owner of the surface of any given tract of land.

These provisions were not and could not have been the result of any pressure brought to bear upon the Mexican Government by interested parties, for the commercial development of petroleum did not commence until 16 years thereafter.

On June 4, 1892, a further mining code was enacted, which contained the following provisions:

"ART. 4. The owner of the land may freely work without a special concession in any case whatsoever the following mineral substances: Mineral fuels, oils, and mineral waters.

"ART. 5. All mining property legally acquired and such as hereafter may be acquired in pursuance of this law shall be irrevocable and perpetual, etc."

This was the law in force at the time when commercial petroleum development first commenced in Mexico.

A further mining code was issued on November 25, 1909, containing the following clause:

"ART. 2. The following substances are the exclusive property of the owner of the soil: I. Ore bodies or deposits of mineral fuels of whatever form or variety. II. Ore bodies or deposits of bituminous substances."

These are the only basic laws relative to the subject which were promulgated in the Republic of Mexico between the date of its independence and the adoption of the Queretaro constitution in 1917.

Their terms are distinct and unquestioned, and the officers of the Mexican Government themselves have never attempted to seriously claim that they are capable of any interpretation other than that given to them by the petroleum companies.

Each of these laws comprises an unequivocal invitation to foreign capital to enter into the petroleum business in Mexico and contains ample assurance that all such enterprises could safely and properly deal with the owner of the surface of supposed petroleum lands; and all of the great petroleum properties owned by American companies prior to May 1, 1917, were thus acquired by them by private treaty with such owners and in reliance upon the foregoing provisions.

POINT II.

At a special session of the academy of jurisprudence of Mexico held in 1905, the meaning and effect of these laws were considered, and it was held that petroleum rights belonged to the owners of the surface and could not be taken from them at the whim of the Government of Mexico.

Shortly after the beginning of the century the success of the first petroleum enterprise in Mexico became apparent. Thereafter it occurred to certain persons that their interests might be promoted if petroleum could be declared to be the property of the nation and subject to acquisition by denouncement instead of by private treaty with the owners of lands.

They, therefore, brought about a session of the academy of jurisprudence to discuss this subject and this session took place in 1905. There were in attendance practically all of the leaders of the bar of Mexico. The presiding officer was Senor Lic. Luis Mendez, universally considered as the leading lawyer of the country at that time.

The subject received the fullest consideration from every point of view and as a result two resolutions were adopted by the unanimous vote of every lawyer present except the one who had brought about the conference. These resolutions were:

First. That petroleum beneath the surface of lands belonged to the owner of the surface and not to the Mexican Government; and Second. That these petroleum rights could not be taken from the owner of the surface by the Mexican Government under any claim of superior ownership.

It would have been impossible to have obtained any more authoritative declaration as to the meaning and scope of the preceding petroleum legislation in Mexico than the one which was given to it by this eminent body of jurists.

POINT III.

The Carranza attempts to confiscate these petroleum rights were made pursuant to a series of Executive decrees which purported to interpret the constitution of 1917 as being retroactive in its application, and as vesting the Government with petroleum rights previously acquired under preexisting laws by private operators.

It will be observed in this connection that the language of the constitution of 1917 is, to say the least, ambiguous upon this point. It provides in article 27 that the Mexican Republic possesses "direct dominion" over petroleum. Possibly this clause taken by itself might be construed as referring to all petroleum, whether situated beneath lands previously acquired by private owners or beneath the surface of public lands.

But article 14 of this constitution expressly states that "no law shall be given retroactive effect to the prejudice of any person whatsoever."

And later on the further provision is found:

"ART. 126. This constitution and the laws of the United States of Mexico which shall be made in pursuance thereof * * * shall be the supreme law of the land."

In other words, the constitution itself, including article 27, is by its own terms declared to be one of the "laws" of Mexico, and as such should not be given retroactive effect under its own terms.

President Carranza, however, paid no attention to these articles of the constitution; and commencing in February, 1918, issued a series of decrees based upon the theory that article 27 was retroactive in its effect and that it deprived private owners of all petroleum rights in lands theretofore purchased by them; and that in order to obtain any right to extract petroleum from these lands they must admit the paramount title of the Government to the petroleum, apply for licenses to operate their own properties, and must pay "rentals and royalties" to the Government in consideration of obtaining permission from them to carry on their respective enterprises.

The dates of these decrees are February 19, 1918; May 18, 1918; July 8 as amended August 8, 1918; July 31, 1918; and August 12, 1918.

POINT IV.

These executive decrees were wholly beyond the power of President Carranza to issue.

Prior to the first of these decrees Mr. Carranza had been vested by Congress with the power to legislate matters relative to the national finances.

He had, however, pursuant to the terms of his own constitution, no power whatever to exercise the functions of Congress in any other regard.

Disregarding entirely this limitation and refusing to await congressional action, he hastened to endeavor to revolutionize this most important department of the law and to change the entire preexisting theory of land titles and of subsoil rights.

These facts are illustrative of the utter disregard for due process of law which has been evinced by the Carranza government, and of the dictatorial power which President Carranza has assumed to exercise in this and other matters.

The oil companies immediately commenced court proceedings against these decrees, which proceedings have been pending in the supreme court of justice for over a year, but were never allowed to come to a hearing.

It is entirely possible that even the Carranza attorneys recognized the hopelessness of endeavoring to obtain a decision upholding the validity of edicts so transparently unauthorized.

POINT V.

The Carranza government attempted to justify its confiscatory project by claiming that the Mexican Republic formerly had title to all petroleum, and that the effect of the present constitution is to revert the Government with its original rights.

The foregoing argument is frequently set forth among the excuses advanced by the apologists of the Carranza régime. With regard to it, the following points are to be noticed:

I. Even if it were true as a matter of historical fact (which it is not) that Mexico formerly owned all petroleum beneath its subsoil, the truth nevertheless remains that from 1884 onward her laws expressly repudiated any such claim of ownership, declared that the petroleum belonged to the owner of the surface, and invited the world to act in reliance upon these assurances.

This invitation was accepted, and enormous investments were made in reliance upon such assurances.

In this connection it will be noted that the constitution of 1857 which was in force at the time that these investments were made, contained the following express provisions:

"ART. 16. No person shall be molested in his person, family, domicile, papers and possessions, except by virtue of written order of competent authority which shall have been the basis of due process of law."

"ART. 27. Property of individuals shall not be taken without their consent except for causes of public utility and upon previous indemnization."

"ART. 33. Foreigners * * * shall be entitled to the guaranties set forth in section first, title first of the present constitution" (this being the section and title in which articles 16 and 27 are found).

Irrespective of any claim of former title of the Mexican Government with regard to petroleum, we find that the actual situation is—

First. That the Mexican Government expressly declared for a period of at least 33 years that it had no such title so far as related to petroleum beneath the surface of lands which had passed into private ownership.

Second. That, on the contrary, its laws set forth unequivocally that such petroleum was owned by the owner of the surface and could be sold and dealt with exactly as the surface itself was sold and dealt with, free from any license on the part of the Government.

Third. That this express recognition of property rights in the private owner of the surface was reinforced by the provisions of the constitutional bill of rights above quoted, fully protecting the property rights of every individual except after due process of law and due indemnity.

Fourth. That these provisions were expressly made applicable to foreigners.

Fifth. That Americans placed full reliance upon the foregoing and invested immense sums of money on the faith thereof.

Sixth. That all such foreigners are amply justified in insisting that the rights thus acquired be protected, whatever might formerly have been the position of the Mexican Government with regard to petroleum under lands that had not passed into private ownership.

II. Upon an examination of the ancient laws of Spain relating to this subject, it will be found, moreover, that the Mexican Republic never became vested with the title of petroleum beneath the surface of privately owned lands.

(a) The first law of importance to be noted is the edict of Felipe II of Spain, dated January 10, 1559. This law provides that on account of their great benefit and utility there are taken over into the royal patrimony "ores of gold, silver, quicksilver, and other metals."

It will be noted that the general word used is "metals" and not "minerals."

An interesting feature of this law is that although the edict covered ores beneath the surface of privately owned lands as well as beneath the surface of the public domain, yet careful express provision was made for due indemnity to all private parties who were affected by the operation of the decree and whose property was thus taken from them.

It remained for the president of a supposedly democratic republic to issue decrees upon this subject in 1918, which were more arbitrary, confiscatory, and unjust than the one promulgated in the sixteenth century by one of the most absolute monarchs of Europe.

(b) In 1783 certain ordinances were issued in the time of Charles III, which referred in general language to the "mines being the property of the crown of Spain." The word "bitumen" is used in one of the clauses.

It is upon a forced construction of the language of these ordinances that the claim of the adherents of the Carranza régime is based, disregarding subsequent laws, to which we will now refer.

(c) At some time during the later years of the eighteenth century the commercial importance of coal became recognized. Questions arose as to whether coal mines belonged to the royal patrimony or did not, and in any event as to how best to provide for the extraction of coal from any deposits where it was found. To meet this point a further royal decree, dated December 28, 1789, was issued, which reads as follows:

"For the purpose of clearing up the difficulties met in the use of deposits of coal, and to simplify the method of taking it without prejudice to the owners, and with due reference to public utility, I have seen fit to decree, declare, and order the following:

"(1) Since coal is not a metal or a semimetal, nor any other of the articles comprehended in the laws and ordinances which specify that mines are the property of the royal patrimony, its extraction and traffic shall be free by sea and land throughout all of my kingdom, and its exportation by sea for the purpose of being dealt with in foreign countries shall not be impeded.

"(2) These mines must belong to the proprietors of the lands in which they are found, it being understood that the term proprietor means the direct owner or the enjoyer of the usufruct without there being any need of asking a license from any tribunal or authority in order to extract from, lease from, sell from, or grant from, but if the proprietor, after a mine has been discovered, shall refuse to develop his property in any of these manners, so that they may be turned to account, my council and the intendente of the province or the corregidor of the district shall have power to adjudicate their use to the discoverer, who shall give to the owner the fifth part of the production obtained from it."

It will be observed that by the operation of this law it was established—

(1) That coal was not one of the metals or semimetals which had previously been reserved to the Crown.

(2) That the direct owner of the land is expressly declared to be the owner of this hydrocarbon—which at the time was the only hydrocarbon recognized as having any commercial value, and that the reason for this rule was expressly stated to be that it was not a metal or semimetal.

(3) That although provisions are made guaranteeing the public the use of coal from any mines, yet this provision is expressly conditioned on the full recognition of ownership and the payment of a royalty to the owner on all coal extracted.

(d) Even after the promulgation of the foregoing edict, there was still evidently some uncertainty as to the exact scope and effect of the former laws upon this subject, and for the purpose of clearing up the entire matter, a further edict of August 24, 1792, was made, which contains the following express provisions:

"(1) Despite any interpretation which might have been given or may be given to the laws and ordinances to the effect that every kind of mines, although not expressly named in those laws, belong to the Crown, mines of coal shall be of free availability as are by ancient custom mines of iron and other substances which are extracted from the bosom of the earth.

"(2) Nevertheless the Crown shall preserve the supreme right of incorporating to itself such mines as it may require or as may be convenient for the use of the royal navy, foundries, machines, or other objects whatsoever and public service. Such mines as may be found in unclaimed or public lands, may be thus incorporated without recompense, but if they belong to local council, communities, or individual owners, there shall be paid to them their just value.

"(3) The direct owners who are the proprietors of the lands where mines of coal exist, whether they are council, communities, or individuals, may discover them, work them, and enjoy them for themselves alone, or permit others to do so, or may rent them or sell them as they see fit, without any license or formality other than that which may be required to enjoy, rent, or sell the land which contains them."

It is difficult to see how, after this final ordinance, any possible doubt can exist as to the fact that coal, which was the only hydrocarbon then supposed to possess any value, belonged not to the Crown, but to the private owner, and that the reason for this was that the prior laws were intended to establish a distinction between metalliferous minerals and nonmetalliferous minerals. And in every case where any provision is made in these edicts which looks toward the utilization of this substance by any person other than the owner, his right to full compensation is expressly and specifically recognized—again in strong distinction to the arbitrary and spoliatory policy which Mr. Carranza thought fit to subsequently adopt.

(e) No express provision is made in these later statutes as to petroleum for the simple reason that petroleum was not then known to possess any commercial value of importance whatsoever. But the principle upon which coal was decreed to be exempted from the royal patrimony is that it was neither a metal nor a semimetal; and this principle is, of course, controlling in the analogous case of petroleum.

(f) The Republic of Mexico obtained its independence in 1821, and thereafter a treaty was entered into with the Kingdom of Spain, whereby the royal patrimony as it then existed was transferred to the Republic of Mexico.

(g) Despite the apparently clear and conclusive language of the decrees quoted, further questions were raised as to the rights of the nation with regard to hydrocarbons generally. The theory was advanced that the laws of 1789 and 1792 did not apply to Mexico. After some litigation on the subject had taken place, the Mexican nation amended its constitution so as to provide for the issuance of mining codes; and the only authority having the right to finally settle this subject, to wit: the Mexican Congress, acting under the provisions of the amended constitution, adopted the code of 1884 which has hereinbefore been quoted and which was intended to and undoubtedly did place the matter forever at rest, establishing conclusively that the nation accepted the interpretation of the preexisting laws which we have hereinbefore set forth, and disclaimed any rights whatsoever in or to hydrocarbons lying beneath the surface of privately owned lands; and this statute in its express language included the word "petroleum."

(h) This interpretation was again discussed and approved in the celebrated session of the Academy of Jurisprudence in 1905, above referred to; and no further question regarding the matter was ever raised until the Carranza propagandists, in their desperate efforts to find some sort of a basis upon which the spoliatory and confiscatory acts of their Government could be defended, resurrected this ancient argument from its grave, and, disregarding its complete refutation which we have hereinbefore presented, attempted to utilize it for the purpose of misleading the uninformed.

(i) For the foregoing reasons it is submitted that under the municipal laws of Mexico, and even under the constitution of 1917 itself, the acts of Mr. Carranza in attempting to take from private owners, without compensation, the petroleum rights which they had validly acquired prior to May 1, 1917, are wholly unwarranted.

POINT VI.

Pursuant to the principles of international law, it is submitted that the confiscatory scheme of Mr. Carranza with respect to petroleum under lands validly acquired by citizens of the United States prior to May 1, 1917, is in violation of the principles of natural justice, and that citizens of the United States are entitled, if necessary, to be protected by their Government against its effects.

This point is specifically covered by the note of the United States addressed to the Mexican Government and dated April 2, 1918, signed by Ambassador Fletcher, in which it is said:

"The United States can not acquiesce in any procedure ostensibly or nominally in the form of taxation or the exercise of eminent domain, but really resulting in the confiscation of private property and arbitrary deprivation of vested rights.

"Your excellency will understand that this is not an assertion of any new principle of international law, but merely a reiteration of those recognized principles which my Government is convinced form the basis of international respect and good neighborhood. The seizure or spoliation of property at the mere will of the sovereign and without due legal process fairly and equitably administered has always been regarded as a denial of justice and as affording internationally a basis of interposition. * * *

"In the absence of the establishment of any procedure looking to the prevention of spoliation of American citizens, and in the absence of any assurance, were such procedure established, that it would not uphold in defiance of international law and justice the arbitrary confiscations of Mexican authorities, it becomes the function of the Government of the United States most earnestly and respectfully to call the attention of the Mexican Government to the necessity which may arise to impel it to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico divested or injuriously affected by the decree above cited."

The same principle is upheld in the note of the British Government of April 30, 1918, addressed to the Mexican minister of foreign relations, in which it is said:

"The provisions of the decree are in the opinion of the Government of His Majesty in open conflict with laws and contracts in force, according to which considerable investments of British capital have been made in petroleum-bearing lands and in the petroleum industry in Mexico. * * * It would be contrary to the principles of the Mexican Constitution and those of justice to separate surface rights from subsoil rights which now belong to those land owners who have invested capital in the petroleum-producing zone."

We also call attention to the note of the French Government to the Mexican Government, dated May 13, 1918, in which similar protests were made, and in which it is said:

"These regulations, strict compliance with which might entail confiscation, rest on principles of law wholly different from those on which was based the legislation in force when their investments in petroleum in Mexico were made. At that time no attempt was made to establish differences between surface rights and those flowing from subsurface ownership."

These notes, as stated in the American note of April 2, do not establish any new principles of international law, for acts of the description protested against had always been regarded as denials of justice and as affording the basis for international action.

"The Government of the United States will not permit, without interposition on its part, the spoliation by Peru of the property of American citizens invested in that country by the invitation of its own authorities. * * * And even were there such a tribunal, its decrees, validating in defiance of international laws such confiscation, could not bind the citizens of foreign states thereby despoiled.

"This is not, it will be understood, the assertion of any new principles in international law. The seizure or spoliation of property at the mere will of the sovereign and without due legal process, has always been regarded as in itself a denial of justice and as affording the basis for international interposition." (Letter of Mr. Bayard, Secretary of State, to minister to Peru, Jan. 19, 1888, cited Vol. VI, Moore's Dig. Int. Law, p. 253.)

In enumerating various classes of unquestionable denials of justice, the following language is used:

"Among the first class of acts, in which the denial of justice is predicated upon wrongs inflicted by governmental authorities prior to trial, in willful disregard of due process of law, may be mentioned * * * seizure or confiscation of property without legal process * * * the detention and confiscation of vessels without legal process, etc." (Borchard Dip. Prot. of Citizens Abroad, p. 336. (Citing 2 Wharton's Dig. Int. Law, S. 235, and numerous other authorities.)

So reprehensible are departures of this sort from the principles of international law that it has been expressly declared that—

"By such a declaration of rules for the guidance of her conduct in international relations, Ecuador placed herself outside of the pale of international intercourse." (Letter of Mr. Rives, Assistant Secretary of State, Oct. 24, 1888, cited Vol. I, Moore's Digest Int. Law, p. 6.)

"The State which disclaims the authority of international law places herself outside of the circle of civilized nations." (Sir Henry Maine, Int. Law, pp. 37, 38.)

POINT VII.

The attempt of Mr. Carranza's government to confiscate these petroleum rights is in sharp contrast with the pledges which he gave to the United States prior to and at the time of such recognition as was afforded him by our Government.

The de facto recognition of Mr. Carranza took place on October 19, 1915.

Prior to that date the following formal declaration had been made by Mr. Arredondo, the special personal and official representative of Mr. Carranza in this country, to Secretary of State Lansing:

"Mr. Venustiano Carranza, depositary of the executive power of Mexico, whom I have the honor to represent in this country, has authorized me to say that his public declarations of December 12, 1914, and June 11, 1915, bear the statement that the Government he represents, in its capacity of a political entity, conscious of its international obligations and of its capability to comply with them, has afforded guaranties to the nationals and has done likewise with regard to foreigners, and shall continue to see that their lives and property are respected in accordance with the practices established by civilized nations and the treaties in force between Mexico and other countries."

Subsequently when the Mexican ambassador was received by President Wilson at the White House, the President, as reported in the New York World, said in substance that he would "welcome convincing evidence that a constitutional Government had been established in Mexico willing and able to guarantee life, property, and justice to Americans the same as other foreigners. The United States asks no more and can accept no less."

Again, before Mr. Fletcher, our ambassador to Mexico, presented his credentials to the Mexican Government, he was instructed by our Government to ask the Mexican minister of foreign relations whether the New Mexican constitution which had then been drafted would be subject to retroactive application with confiscatory results. This was not a mere casual conversation, but was a definite diplomatic inquiry. The answer of the Mexican minister of foreign relations was:

"Legislation emanating from the new constitution with regard to property rights would, in his judgment, in no way prejudice present property rights."

At the same time Gen. Aguilar called Mr. Fletcher's attention to the provisions of the constitution prohibiting retroactive laws.

This answer was reported by Mr. Fletcher to the State Department, was accepted as official, and has been embodied in a form letter issued by the State Department to Americans who have made inquiries as to the effect of the constitution of 1917 upon previously acquired property rights of foreigners.

POINT VIII.

The breach of international obligations resulting from the confiscatory plan of the Carranza government is not excused by the fact that its own citizens have received or may receive similar treatment.

"But where a government asserts that its citizens in a foreign country have not been duly protected, it is not competent for the government of that country to answer that it has not protected its own citizens, and thus to make the failure to perform one duty the excuse for the neglect of another.

"It is true that in this way foreigners may enjoy an advantage over the citizens of a country. This, however, is not a matter for foreign governments to consider. They have no power to regulate the relations of another government to its citizens; nevertheless, they are bound to ask that their own may be protected." (Moore's Digest of International Law, Vol. VI, pp. 803, 804.)

"The measure of one country's international obligations is the measure of the other country's right. The rule of obligation is perfectly distinct and settled. Each country is bound to give to the nationals of another country in its territory the benefit of the same laws, the same administration, the same protection, and the same redress for injury which it gives to its own citizens, and neither more nor less, provided the protection which the country gives to its own citizens conforms to the established standard of civilization. There is a standard of justice, very simple, very fundamental, and of such general acceptance by all civilized countries as to form a part of the international law of the world.

"The condition upon which any country is entitled to measure the justice due from it to an alien by the justice which it accords to its own citizens is that its own system of law and administration shall conform to this general standard. If any country's system of law and administration does not conform to that standard, although the people of that country may be content or compelled to live under it, no other country can be compelled to accept it as furnishing a satisfactory measure of treatment to its citizens." (Address of Secretary Root before Am. Soc. Int. Law. Apr. 28, 1910.)

Other declarations are:

"International law recognizes on the part of each member of the family of nations certain forms or attributes of government for the purpose of assuring the rights of the individual. * * *

"The rules of international law in this matter fall with particular severity upon those countries where law and administration frequently deviate from and fall below this standard; for the fact that their own citizens can be compelled to accept such maladministration is not a criterion for the measure of treatment which the alien can demand, and international practice seems to have denied these countries the right to avail themselves of the usual defense that the alien is given the benefit of the same laws, the same administration, and the same protection as the national. * * * The individual * * * will be protected * * * when his rights * * * as measured not necessarily and finally by the local, but by the international, standard, are invaded." (Borchard on Dip. Protection of Citizens Abroad, pp. 27-28. (Citing Pillet, A., Recherches sur les droits fondamentaux des etats, Paris, 1899, pp. 19-28, and other authorities. Also Pillet, Principes de droit Int. Privé, Paris, 1903, pp. 169, 194.)

"The alien therefore, is not bound to accept the treatment accorded to nationals if such treatment is in violation of the ordinary principles of civilized justice, and notwithstanding the fact that the national has no immediate remedy against the injustice." (Borchard, p. 107.)

This point has been well discussed and fully covered in the notes of the United States Government to the Government of Mexico with regard to the petroleum confiscation program.

The question in all such cases is whether the principles of natural justice have been violated.

In all such cases the rights of the foreigner are not measured by the rights of the national.

And in the present case, where enormous investments have been made by Americans upon the faith of the perfectly explicit preexisting laws of Mexico, it is submitted to be clear that the principles of natural justice are violated by Mexico when it attempts, without pretense of compensation, to arbitrarily change its laws for the express purpose of confiscating the properties which had been acquired, developed, and shown to be valuable by the courage and initiative of foreigners.

POINT IX.

For the foregoing reasons it is submitted that the confiscatory plan of the Carranza government with relation to these petroleum rights can not be defended on the principles either of Mexican municipal law or of international law or practice, that no nation can prosecute such an illegal and immoral campaign without constituting itself an international outlaw, and that citizens of this country who have made large investments in reliance upon the good faith of the Mexican Nation and whose interests are threatened by a repudiation of that nation's previous pledges and laws, are entitled to the protection of their own Government in case of need.

Respectfully submitted.

FREDERIC R. KELLOGG,
52 Broadway, New York,
General Counsel of the Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co.

TEXAS COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS. JOSE ANTONIO ARCE ET AL., APPELLANTS, V. STATE OF TEXAS.

[Tex. Crim. Rep. —, 202 S. W. 951.]

CRIMINAL LAW—OFFENSE UNDER WAR—JURISDICTION TO PUNISH.

1. A State has no authority to punish depredations by citizens of a foreign country who have invaded its territory for the prosecution of a war existing between such country and the United States. (For other cases see Criminal Law, III, in Dig. 1-52 N. S.)

ARMY—LIABILITY OF SOLDIER FOR OBEYING COMMAND.

2. A soldier is not answerable in a civil court for killing an enemy soldier in a battle in which he was directed to engage by command of his superior officer. (For other cases, see Army and Navy, in Dig. 1-52 N. S.)

April 17, 1918:

Appeal by defendants from a judgment of the district court of Webb County convicting them of murder. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. M. Henry and George & Townes for appellants.

Every person is entitled to have a fair and impartial trial by an impartial jury, uninfluenced by any other consideration than the evidence adduced on the trial.

Randle v. State (34 Tex. Crim. Rep. 45, 28 S. W. 953); Coffman v. State (62 Tex. Crim. Rep. 88, 136 S. W. 779); Richmond v. State (16 Nebr., 388, 20 N. W. 282); Streight v. State (62 Tex. Crim. Rep. 453, 138 S. W. 742); Meyers v. State (39 Tex. Crim. Rep. 500, 46 S. W. 817); Barnes v. State (—Tex. Crim. Rep. —, 59 S. W. 882, 14 Am. Crim. Rep. 415, 83 S. W. 1116); Gallaher v. State (40 Tex. Crim. Rep. 296, 5 S. W. 393, 11 Am. Crim. Rep. 207); Dobbs v. State (51 Tex. Crim. Rep. 629, 103 S. W. 918).

Justice to the military subordinate and the necessities and efficiency of the service require that the order of the superior should protect the inferior, leaving the responsibility to rest where it properly belongs—upon the officer who gave the command.

United States v. Clark (31 Fed., 710; McCall v. McDowell, 1 Abb. U. S., 212, Fed. as. No. 8673; Com. ex rel. Wadsworth v. Shortall, 206 Pa. 165, 65 L. R. A. 193, 98 Am. St. Rep. 759, 55 Atl. 952; Riggs v. State 3 Coldw. 85, 91 Am. Dec. 272; People v. McLeod, 25 Wend. 483).

Messrs. Hamilton & Greer, also for appellants.

Mr. E. B. Hendricks, Assistant Attorney General for the State.

Davidson, J. P., delivered the opinion of the court:

Jose Antonion Arce, Vivinte Lira, Pablino Sanchez, Jesus Cerda, Isabel de los Santos, and Fredrico Gutierrez Zapata were charged with killing William Oberlies. Four of these defendants were placed upon trial for the homicide, namely, Arce, Lira, Sanchez, and Cerda, and given the death penalty for the killing of Oberlies, who, it seems, was a corporal in the United States Federal Army.

There are many interesting questions presented for revision in various ways. The motion to change the venue, application for continuance, exception to the jury, and incidental matters will not be discussed. They may not arise upon another trial, if one should occur; and should they, will be presented in a different light and from a different view, perhaps, as set forth in the record.

A condensed substance of the facts will show that during the recent trouble on the Rio Grande and in Mexico there was trouble between the United States and Mexico. We know, as a matter of history of the current events attending this trouble, that the United States invaded Mexico with a column of troops under Gen. Pershing, and there may have been other like occurrences on the Rio Grande by the United States troops. It is not the purpose of this opinion to go into the history of the trouble between the two countries, and the incidental fights and battles that may have occurred in connection with these troubles. Suffice to say, they did occur, and, under the authorities, this brought about a condition of "war" between the two countries. It was not what the authorities may term a complete state of war, but rather in the nature of an incomplete state of war. There was no formal declaration of war, as we understand the history of the times, between the two countries, where a state of war was recognized as existing between the two countries. During these troubles, among other things that occurred was a force organized at Monterey by the direction and under the authority of the Carranza de facto government. It is shown by this record that, when this command was completed and the plan laid, it was done with the view of invading Texas and attacking some of the Federal troops located just below Laredo at San Ygnacio. There was a company of Cavalry of the Regular Army stationed at this point, with trenches and other means incident to resistance to attack. These Mexican troops made an attack upon this troop of United States Cavalry at night. On the night of the attack, another troop of United States Cavalry reached the point where the first troop was camped to spend the night en route to Zapata County, and when the fight came off that night both troops were in action. Four or five United States soldiers were killed and nine or ten of the Mexicans. Three of the Mexicans and one that was wounded were captured. These were tried under this indictment in the Texas State courts and, on conviction, given the death penalty. The evidence makes it clear that these Mexican troops were commanded by Carranza officers. One of these officers was killed during the fight, who seemed to rank as a lieutenant colonel. The commanding officer of the Mexicans was De los Santos, who, it seems, was later captured by the forces of Villa and executed. His name was in this indictment, but he was never arrested. That a state of warfare existed between the two countries is not questioned. Brig. Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, Judge Advocate, United States Army, has the following to say in an official opinion:

"It is thus apparent that under the law there need be no formal declaration of war; but that under the definition of Vattel a state of war exists, so far as concerns the operation of the United States troops in Mexico, by reason of the fact that the United States is prosecuting its rights by force of arms and in a manner in which warfare is usually conducted. The statutes which are operative only during a period of war have been interpreted as relating to a condition and not a theory. * * * I am therefore of the opinion that the actual conditions under which the field operations in Mexico are being conducted are those of actual war. That within the field of operations of the expeditionary force in Mexico, it is a time of war within the meaning of the fifty-eighth article of war."

There are also in connection with this record, in the motion for new trial, exhibited to the court excerpts from a communication from the district attorney of Webb County to John L. Wroe, secretary to Gov. Ferguson, as follows: "The jury returned the verdict of guilty and assessed the punishment of death. These four Mexican citizens testified under oath that they belonged to the constitutionalist army of Mexico; that the band that attacked San Ygnacio consisted of 75 men; and that they were publicly organized and equipped in Monterey and Jarita with the full knowledge of the de facto Government of Mexico. The recent trials in Webb County of the bandits who murdered our soldiers at San Ygnacio, the fact that they were publicly organized and equipped in Mexico, that they met and mingled with the forces and officers of the de facto government, that they were furnished transportation in the three railroad cars from Monterey to Jarita, that it was widely proclaimed at Monterey that these bands were going to make hostile incursions into Texas, that men high in the councils of the de facto government were cognizant of the unlawful enterprise, and yet not a finger was raised by that government to frustrate the mission. I charge the de facto government with full responsibility for the recent raids committed in my district, and I charge that these raids were conducted with the knowledge and consent, if not the approbation, of the de facto government."

It might also be stated in this connection that it is a question for judicial cognizance and knowledge that this battle at San Ygnacio was never disavowed by the de facto government of Mexico. It seems also to be within accurate statement that the organization of these expeditionary forces attacking San Ygnacio was by and under the direction of Gen. Nafarrette, Gen. Fierros, Gen. De la Rosa, with Col. Cavañas, Col. Isabel de los Santos, Col. Cruz Ruis, and others, and these were officers of the constitutionalist or de facto Carranza government. Col. Cruz Ruis was killed in the battle.

This, we think, was a state of warfare. See, in addition to what has been quoted from Bas v. Tingy (4 Dall., 37, 40, 1 L. ed., 731, 732), United States Supreme Court Reports, as follows: "It may, I believe, be safely laid down that every contention by force between two nations in external matters, under the authority of their respective governments, is not only war, but public war."

While the invasion of Mexico by Gen. Pershing's column was not a public or complete war, or not preceded by a declaration of war against Mexico by the United States, it was an act of war, and, under the definition given by Gen. Crowder and the authorities generally, it was technically and within the limited meaning of the word "war." It was not made with the consent of the de facto government of Mexico, but rather, in fact, over the protest of that country. In the case of Montoya v. United States (180 U. S., 261, 45 L. ed. 521, 21 Sup. Ct. Rept., 358) it was said: "To sustain a claim under this section it is incumbent upon the claimant to prove that the Indians taking or destroying the property belonged to a band, tribe, or nation in amity with the United States. The object of the act is evidently to compensate settlers for depredations committed by individual marauders belonging to a body which is then at peace with the Government. If the depredation be committed by an organized company of men constituting a band in itself, acting independently of any other band or tribe, and carrying on hostilities against the United States, such acts may amount to war, for the consequences of which the Government is not responsible under this act or upon general principles of law." (United States v. Pacific R. Co., 120 U. S., 227, 234, 30 L. ed. 634, 636, 7 Sup. Ct. Rept., 490.)

This extract is made from Prize Cases (2 Black, 635, 17 L. ed. 476): "War has been well defined to be 'that state in which a nation prosecutes its rights by force.' The parties belligerent in a public war are independent nations. But it is not necessary, to constitute war, that both parties should be acknowledged as independent nations or sovereign States. A war may exist where one of the belligerents claims sovereign rights as against the other."

The Montoya case was a claim by a citizen against the United States for depredations by an Indian band commanded by the Chief Victoria. Some of the troop of which Victoria was chief were friendly to the United States; many of them were not. Victoria organized a band of his own tribe and Indian warriors from other tribes, and depredated upon the people of New Mexico, and finally went into Old Mexico. There was a fight between the band of Victoria and United States troops. A claim was made for a depredation made by Victoria and was held not valid because it was not brought within the terms of the law which makes the United States responsible only for depredations by tribes friendly to the United States.

It occurs to the writer that, according to the principles laid down in these decisions, and under the general rules with reference to warfare, the Mexican column that attacked the troops at San Ygnacio came within those rules, and that, if they are to be dealt with for crossing the river and fighting our troops, it should be done by the United States Government and not by the Texas courts. Texas has no authority to declare war against Mexico nor create a state of war. This must be done by our General Government at Washington, by the special delegated authority in the Constitution of the United States. Whatever may have been the rights of these Mexicans, the authority to punish, the writer feels, is within the jurisdiction of the United States and not the courts of Texas. If there was a state of war between the two countries, actual and complete, or inchoate and incomplete, then it became an international or Federal question, and not a State matter.

It might be interesting, but of no practical value, to follow this matter with reference to some fighting that occurred in Mexico at the time Gen. Pershing's column invaded that country, in which some of our soldiers were killed and some captured. The principles above laid down, as far as our information goes, controlled the relation between the de facto Government and the United States, with reference to that battle and our soldiers who were captured. They were not tried by the Mexican courts, but turned over to the United States, as we gather the history of the transaction. So, from this viewpoint, we are of the opinion that this judgment should be reversed.

We might also refer to the invasion of Mexico by the United States Army and Navy at Vera Cruz, under the command of Gen. Funston. Our soldiers, if captured, would have been subject to trial and punishment in Mexican courts, under the same rules as their soldiers would in our courts.

There is another interesting question or two in the case which may be mentioned incidental to the other question. Gen. Mann was used as a witness, as were other Federal officers, among them the two captains who commanded the two troops of Cavalry on the night of the fight. From their testimony, a general statement may be made to the effect that these Mexican soldiers would be controlled by their officers in command, and be obedient to them; that the command was organized under the authority of the Carranza or de facto Government of Mexico, and was in fact a military command. By this testimony it seems that, wherever under such circumstances, the soldiers must obey the orders of their superiors, and failure to do so would subject them to discipline, which rates from minor punishment to death, according to the rules which have been violated, by those under authority.

When a soldier is ordered to fight, it is his duty to do so, and he may forfeit his life on refusal to do so. If he deserts under certain circumstances, he may be shot or executed. These Mexican soldiers were ordered by their officers, commanded by the officers, headed by the officers, to make the fight; the officers led them into the battle and they fought. Some were killed, others escaped and fled. Some were wounded, one of whom was captured and is under sentence in this case. It seems while being tried he was suffering severely from a wound. One at least of the defendants claimed to have been forced to go into battle by his commanding officer. He did not desire to fight, but under the rules of warfare if he deserted he would be tried and would be shot, or if he disobeyed orders and failed to engage in the fight he might forfeit his life.

If the State courts had jurisdiction of these defendants, we are of opinion the conviction is erroneous.

From any viewpoint of this case we are of the opinion that this judgment should be reversed and the cause remanded.

Pendegrast, J., absent.

ANNOTATION—LITIGATION ARISING OUT OF MEXICAN REVOLUTION.

The earlier cases on this subject are collected in the annotation following O'Neil v. Central Leather Co. (L. R. A. 1917A, 280).

The decision of the New Jersey court of errors and appeals in the O'Neil case, there annotated, was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court (Oetjen v. Central Leather Co. (U. S. Adv. Ops., 1917-18, p. 367), 246 U. S., 297, 62 L. ed.—38 Sup. Ct. Rep., 309), without considering, as the New Jersey court did, the validity of the levy of the contribution made by the commanding general.

The Supreme Court took the position that, under the rules of international law, the subject was not one for reexamination by it or any other American court, and that the act in that respect came within the principle that the conduct of one independent government can not be successfully questioned in the courts of another, that principle being as applicable in a case involving the title to property brought within the custody of a court as it is to cases in which claims for damages are based upon acts done in a foreign country, since it rests at last upon the highest considerations of international comity and expediency. The Supreme Court in this case took judicial notice that the Government of the United States had recognized the Government of Carranza as the de facto Government of the Republic of Mexico, on October 19, 1915, and as the de jure Government on August 31, 1917, and it further held that recognition of that Government as the de jure Government was retroactive in effect and validated all the actions and conduct of the Government so recognized from the commencement of its existence.

In the Oetjen case (United States) supra, the Supreme Court, in reply to the contention that the seizure of the property by a general acting under the Carranza Government was contrary to the provisions of the Hague Convention of 1907 "respecting laws and customs of war on land," said that it would perhaps be sufficient answer to say that the Hague Conventions are international in character, designed and adapted to regulate international warfare, and that they do not, in terms or purpose, apply to civil war. The court also suggested certain considerations making it doubtful whether the seizure in question would be in violation of the "regulations" referred to. The court, however, did not definitely decide these points, but placed its decision upon the application of the principles already referred to.

In Ricaud v. American Metal Co. (U. S. Adv. Ops., 1917-18, p. 370), 246, 301, 62 L. ed.—38 Sup. Ct. Rep., 312), the United States Supreme Court, answering questions certified by the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit, held, in effect, that the action by Gen. Preryra, who in 1913 was the commander of a brigade of the Constitutional Army of Mexico, of which Venustiano Carranza was then first chief, in seizing bullion within Mexico in behalf of that Government and selling the same, was binding, and could not be questioned on the merits, in a suit by the former owner to enjoin the collector of customs at El Paso, Tex., from delivering the bullion to other defendants, who had derived their title through said sale. In reaching this conclusion, the court took judicial notice of the recognition by the United States of the government of Carranza, first as a de facto and later as the de jure Government of Mexico, and declared that such recognition was retroactive in effect and validated all the acts of the Carranza Government from the commencement of its existence, and that the act in question came within the principle that the courts of one independent Government will not sit in judgment on the validity of the acts of another, done within its own territory. In reply to the contention based upon the fact hypothesized in one of the certified questions, that the ownership of the bullion was in a citizen of the United States, who was not a resident of Mexico at the time of the seizure and condemnation, the court observed that whatever rights such an American citizen may have can be asserted only through the courts of Mexico, or through the political departments of our Government. The circuit court of appeals rendered judgment accordingly (Ricaud v. American Metal Co., C. C. A.—250 Fed., 853).

The conduct of the foreign relations of our Government is committed by the Constitution to the executive and legislative—"The political"—departments of the Government, and the propriety of what may be done in the exercise of this political power is not subject to judicial inquiry or decision. Oetjen v. Central Leather Co., (United States), supra.

In the Ricaud case (United States), supra, the petition which stated the required diversity of citizenship to give the Federal district court jurisdiction alleged that the bull ion was the property of the plaintiff, and that it had been forcibly taken from his possession in Mexico by unknown persons, but made no reference to a state of war prevailing at the time and place of seizure. The court held that neither the jurisdiction of the district court nor its own jurisdiction was affected by the facts in regard to the seizure under the authority of the Carranza Government, although the action in that respect was binding and conclusive on the merits, and must be accepted by the court as such. In this connection, the court observed that to accept a ruling authority and decide accordingly, is not a surrender or abandonment of jurisdiction, but is an exercise of it.

In De la O. v. Consolidated Kansas City Smelting & Ref. Co. (1918) (—Tex. Civ. App.—202 S. W., 1027), as action against the smelting company for conversion of the proceeds of ores, a judgment for plaintiff was affirmed upon the ground that the defendant was estopped by the terms of its contract from asserting a title based upon confiscation by the Mexican Government. The court, however, observed that while, under the decision of the United States Supreme Court, it would take judicial notice of the fact that Carranza was the head of the military government in northern Mexico at the time the ores were imported (September 29, 1914), and that such Government could seize and sell property for military purposes, and that by any such sale, by its authorized officers title would pass to the purchaser, it concurred with the finding of the trial court that the record did not distinctly show that the officer or agent making the seizure and sale of ore in question was duly authorized to do so.

In Bartlettsville v. Compania Minera Ygnacio Rodriguez Ramos, S. A. (1918) (—Tex. Civ. App.—202 S. W. 1048), an action for the conversion of ores in which the defense was that the ores had been seized and confiscated by Francisco Villa as a military necessity, and sold to parties in Mexico, from whom it was purchased by the defendant in good faith, the jury found that civil war existed in Mexico during the time the ores were taken, and that the armies led by Francisco Villa were opposed by the armies of Carranza; but further found that the cars of ore sued for were not taken "by any force or government in possession and control of the territory where plaintiff's mine was, or by any agent of such force or government acting by authority of such government or force. Nor was it taken by Francisco Villa, or any of his agents or officers, acting by his authority or directions; nor were the proceeds thereof intended for the benefit of the faction dominated by Villa." The court held that the question covered by the finding quoted was a proper one for the jury to determine, since, while the evidence was uncontradicted that the ores were purchased from Hipolito Villa, and that he was the financial agent of Gen. Villa, there was no positive statement that the ores were taken for the use of the armies; and that, while there were circumstances tending to show that they were taken by him as a representative of Gen. Villa for the army, there were also circumstances tending to show that they were taken for his own private use. The judgment in favor of the plaintiff in this case, however, was reversed, because of the improper admission of testimony as to the acts of Villa, such as mistreating prisoners, killing women and children and Chinamen, the court apparently being of the opinion that such testimony might improperly prejudice the jury against the recognition of any title based upon a confiscation by Villa's officers or agents. In this connection, the court observed that a material inquiry in the case was whether or not the ores were confiscated and sold by Villa's officers or agents, as such, for the reason that under the settled law of the United States, a sale by such would confer title.

In Bartlettsville Zinc Co. v. Compania Minera Ygnacio Rodriguez Ramos, S. A. (Tex., supra), it was held that the court did not err in charging the jury not to consider the decree of Carranza confiscating the property in question, and other property, for the reason that it was promulgated at a time when he and Villa were acting together, while at the time the ore was seized and confiscated they had divided, and each taken leadership of a faction contending against the other; hence Carranza's decrees had no probative force in determining whether the ore was confiscated in fact by Villa or his officers.

It will be observed that the opinion in Arce v. State (ante, 358), bases its decision that the soldiers of the Mexican Government engaged in the fight at San Ygnacio were not amenable to punishment by the state of Texas for murder because of their acts in that fight, upon the view that an incomplete state of war existed at that time between the United States and Mexico. The opinion makes a valuable contribution on this subject.

In De Orozco v. United States (1916) (151 C. C. A. 70, 237 Fed. 1008), a proceeding by the United States to forfeit a bail bond given for the release of the principal, who had been arrested upon a warrant issued upon a complaint charging him with having conspired "to begin and set on foot and provide and prepare the means for a military expedition to be carried on from the territory and jurisdiction of the United States against the territory and dominions of the United States of Mexico, with whom the United States of America are at peace;" and also charging as an overt act, the purchase and shipment to and storage at a warehouse "at Fifth and Santa Fe Streets," of military supplies, the court in answer to the contention that the preparation of such a military expedition was not a violation of Sec. 13 of the penal code, because the government of Carranza had not been recognized at that time as the legitimate Government of Mexico, said that the case of the Three Friends (1879) (166 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 897, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495), shows that the prior recognition by this Government, of legitimacy or belligerency of the government or faction against which the expedition is directed, is not necessary to make such provision applicable.

In the De Orozco Case (Fed., supra), the court in answer to the objection that the complaint failed to allege the name of the city where the supplies were shipped and stored, and therefore failed to show an overt act within the jurisdiction of the district court for the western district of Texas, said that the jurisdiction may be determined by the place of the formation of the conspiracy, as well as that of the commission of the overt act; and that the allegation that the conspiracy was formed at El Paso in the western district of Texas was sufficient in that regard.

G. H. P.

APRIL 20, 1920.

Hon. A. B. FALL, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have read (p. 1187 of printed records of testimony before your investigation committee) the testimony of Henry Forres, and hereby certify to the following facts:

1. That said testimony of Henry Forres, in so far as I am concerned, is a fabrication, pure and simple.
2. That I have no oil interests or leases or denouncements in Mexico, and have never had any at any time, and never had any connection whatever with oil in Mexico, except to assist said Forres in securing a lease about five years ago, and which he allowed to expire six months later.
3. That I know nothing about any such transaction as he mentioned in his testimony.
4. That I know of no reason whatever for his having connected my name in any way with any such transaction or any other transaction connected with any lease or denouncement of any nature, in Mexico, or anywhere else.
5. That I am reasonably certain that I am the party referred to as "Dr. Dixon," recently discharged from the United States Army," as I served as a captain in the Army, and am the only physician from here that has been discharged from the Army. I now hold a captain's commission in the M. R. C.
6. That said Forres admitted to me this morning, after I had given him a severe "calling down," that his testimony was based on hearsay, and that he refused to name any party or parties that had given him the information.

E. E. DICKASON, M. D.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 20th day of April, A. D. 1920.

[SEAL.]

E. M. MONROE,
Notary Public.

SWORN STATEMENT OF MRS. R. L. ——— RELATIVE TO HER CAPTURE NEAR WASHINGTON PARK, BEING TAKEN ACROSS THE RIVER INTO MEXICO AND THERE ASSAULTED BY MEXICANS.

My name is Mrs. R. L. ———; I live at 4103 ——— Street, El Paso, Tex.; my husband is a soldier attached to the headquarters troop of the Eighth Cavalry at Fort Bliss, Tex.; I have lived here in El Paso for about three weeks; I was married on April 9 last to R. L. ———; I was a nurse overseas before coming to El Paso; I landed in New York from overseas on March 4, 1920; I was with the old Ninety-first Division; I came back with the First Infantry and came directly from New York to El Paso.

On April 12 last my husband and I were intending to go horseback riding; when I was ready to go my husband was busy and could not go, and he arranged for me to go with two boys out of the Medical Corps at Fort Bliss—Tom and Arthur Griffith; they are brothers; we left my home at 4103 ——— Street, near Washington Park, El Paso, Tex., about 2.15 in the afternoon; we went right down past Washington Park; when near the boundary line on the American side of the river we saw a Mexican, armed; he halted us; as soon as he pulled his gun the two boys with me ran, and I presume expected me to do likewise; the Mexican caught hold of the bridle to my horse and I could not do so, he having put his gun in my back; the Mexican spoke in Spanish and I could not understand him, that is, what he said, but from his gestures I understood that he wanted me to dismount; I then dismounted; he walked me about half a mile to the river; when we reached the river he had me mount my horse and swim the river; this Mexican did not have on a uniform, just overalls, a big Mexican hat, and belt and pistol; when we got on the Mexican side of the river there were 17 other Mexicans there and two other officers; I knew these two men were officers because they had on belts with cartridges and pistols like the Mexican that had me in charge; none of them had on uniforms; one of these Mexicans spoke a little English, and he told me the best thing I could do would be to accompany this man that had me in charge to Juarez; when we come across the river these two other Mexican men that I supposed to be officers went on up the river; the other Mexican officer that brought me across the river took me to a little adobe house near by; at this adobe house I was assaulted by these Mexicans; the one that captured me and brought me across the river was the first one; when we got across the river and to this house it was about 2.45 p. m.; we got to Juarez about 4 o'clock; in Juarez this Mexican took me to the customhouse; there was no one there that could talk English; after a while a little Mexican came in that could understand English and I told him that I wanted to see the American consul; pretty soon the American consul came over to the customhouse; they did not lock me up; they detained me in the customhouse; it was about 6 o'clock when the American consul obtained my release; in my excitement I did not give my correct name to the American consul in Juarez; I did not want to give my right name nor to tell about this affair on account of the publicity that would be given to it; I did not say anything about the Mexicans assaulting me until I told my husband; the two boys that were with me and had gotten away came back and told about me being captured; after I told my husband about it he advised me to tell the officials. The next morning Maj. Hill, a doctor of the Medical Corps at Fort Bliss, came to see me; Maj. Hill made a physical examination of me; I do not know what he found; he never told me, but he told me not to worry; I know he must have found evidence that would corroborate my statement regarding the assault. I know it was quite evident to a doctor that I had been assaulted.

On Friday, April 16, I went to Juarez, Mexico, in company with Capt. Counts, the district intelligence officer, United States Army, and the American consul, Mr. Dow; we first went to the judge of letters, and he advised us that he did not have jurisdiction of the case, to go to the district judge, and I made my statement to him; the man that captured me and took me to Mexico was brought in and I identified him as the man that had captured me and as one of the men that had assaulted me; it developed that he was a Carranza customs officer; the district judge informed me that I would have to employ a Mexican lawyer, make my statement to him and have him reduce it to proper form and properly present by case, and that I would have to submit to an examination by a Mexican doctor. I identified the man, in Juarez before the district judge, that captured me and took me to Mexico, and I can identify him again; I can also identify the two Mexican officers that were on the Mexican side of the river when my captor took me over there.

On April 14 last Capt. Matlack, Tom and Arthur Griffith, the boys that were with me at the time I was captured, and I went down to the point near the boundary line where I was captured by this Carranza customs officer; and there Tom and Arthur Griffith and I showed Capt. Matlack the place where I was captured, and Capt. Matlack saw a plenty of evidence there that would indicate that the place we showed him was the place of my capture; there were the tracks of the horses of the two boys, Tom and Arthur Griffith, where they had wheeled and run and my tracks where the Carranza customs officer made me dismount; Capt. Matlack stated after his observation that the point where I was captured was fully a quarter of a mile of the boundary line on American territory.

Mrs. R. L. ———.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, a notary public in and for the County of El Paso, Tex., on this 19th day of April, 1920, at El Paso, Tex.

J. W. SCHMID,
United States Commissioner Western District, Texas.

SWORN STATEMENT OF ———.

After leaving Mr. ——— in Villa's hands, ——— and myself proceeded to the railroad, under the escort of ———. ——— took the train north to Juarez to arrange with our officials about getting the money. I went south to Villa Ahumada to attend to company business. On my arrival there I was immediately summoned before the officer in charge of the garrison, Lieut. Col. Quiroga. I was thoroughly interrogated by him regarding my movements and asked regarding Villa. I told him that I had been with Holguin and then turned loose 40 miles from the railroad instead of on the railroad. These were my instructions from Villa, so he would not be located, and for the safety of Mr. ———. Quiroga said that I had not told the whole truth and it would be best to put a rope around my neck to see if I would not tell the truth. Thinking better of it, he said: "We will send you to Chihuahua, where they certainly will put a rope around your neck." Next day I was placed under guard, along with Mr. ———, of the ———, and sent to Chihuahua. We were very much abused by these officers, who wanted us to ride in the gondola in which the guard traveled. This we refused to do and got into the first-class coach without a ticket. At Motezuma we were told by the conductor we would have to buy a ticket, but the guard would now allow us to purchase same, saying, "Give us the money and we will buy a ticket for you." Mr. ——— gave the captain of the guard a $20 gold piece and that is the last we heard of ticket or money. That was the Carrancista guard.

On getting on the train again Mr. ——— gave the conductor a check for the amount of our fares to Chihuahua. This matter was reported to Col. del Arco, who belonged to the Juarez garrison, and who was on the train. Just this much to show that robbery is not confined to the bandits.

On our arrival at Chihuahua we were met by practically the entire American colony who assisted us in many ways out of our apparent difficulties. We were driven to the military headquarters and there detained overnight in a room 12 by 12, without chairs, beds or anything, and in the middle of the night some three intoxicated peons were thrown in with us. Next day at 11 o'clock we were brought before Murguia's chief of staff. I was again interrogated in a very nice way by Murguia's chief of staff, who assured me that Lieut. Col. Quiroga had exceeded his authority and that he would immediately telegraph him not to molest me in carrying on the affairs of the ———. He also gave me a safe guaranty that I would not be molested further by Carranza soldiers.

After coming to the border I rendered such assistance as I could to get the money to Villa and obtain the release of Mr. ———; which was accomplished in the Bosque Benito country about the 15th of November.

I would like further to state that the Villista who seized us close to the mine was a man by the name of Jose de la Paz, who immediately, with his men, proceeded to take everything we had in the shape of watches, money, clothes, guns, etc. Jose de la Paz was a lieutenant colonel on the staff of Martin Lopez. Since the attack on Juarez this Jose de la Paz was arrested by the secret service men in El Paso, placed in jail, and released on bond of $750, and since has returned to Mexico.

Before his release I identified the man in the office of the Department of Justice and told them "This is the man responsible for our capture." I may further state this man's family lives in El Paso and his children are being educated there at the expense of the American taxpayers.

It is impossible for us to make an exact estimate of our total loss in the way of supplies and provisions taken from the mine and on the road to the mine and lost at Villa Ahumada and paid in ransoms, but we estimate our total loss by Villista raids and taken by Carrancistas from the time we begun operations up to June the 20th of this year at $30,000.

In June, 1918, a man by the name of Jose Saldana came to our office and represented himself as an agent of Francisco Villa and offered to give us protection, providing the company would pay him a certain sum of money monthly. We refused to have any dealings with this man.

STATE OF TEXAS, County of ———, ss:

Before me, ———, a notary public in and for ——— County, Texas, on this day personally appeared ———, personally known to me to be the person who executed the above and foregoing instrument and acknowledged to me that same is true and correct.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 13th day of January, A. D., 1920.

[SEAL.]

Notary Public in and for ——— County, Texas.

STATEMENT OF ———.

This company has been doing business mining lead and silver ores at the ——— mine since September, 1916.

This mine is situated in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, 80 miles south of ——— and 40 miles east of ———, a station on the Mexican Central that runs between Juarez and Chihuahua.

Shortly after beginning operation raids were begun by various bandits calling themselves Villistas. These raids have been kept up continuously up to the 20th of June of this year, when we were finally compelled to stop operations.

We appealed to the Carranzista authorities ——— many times for protection. Several times they sent troops out to the mine, but never stationed any garrison at or near the mine or gave us any protection.

In response to various appeals made to the military authorities in Chihuahua for protection, we received the following reply from Gen. F. Murguia, who was at that time in command of the military forces of the State of Chihuahua. This communication was directed to Mr. F. Honigman, government inspector of mines, a free translation of which reads as follows:

Answering your official communication of the 9th instant, of which I have taken due notice relative to the protection and security of the mineral districts to which you refer and manifest to you that this head of operation has the firm intention to give this same security to all centers of work and industry within its power and in accordance with the workings of the military operations in the zone under his command, I am disposed to guard attentively these districts, such as Parral, Santa Barbara, Naica, and others which are on the railroad or at a convenient distance from the same, under the condition that the owners, representatives, or companies which direct them put them in operation.

In regard to the other mining camps, which are completely isolated from said lines or in distant parts of the State, at an opportune time we will give them the same guaranty, which for the time is not possible.

I reiterate to you my attentive consideration.

J. DE LAS O. M. F. MURGUIA,
Constitution and Reform.

CHIHUAHUA, May 14, 1917.

Seeing that it was impossible to get protection from the Government, and being in a position where we were compelled to work the property, we found it necessary to continue operations without protection and to make the best arrangement possible with the bandits who visited our place continuously.

We were compelled to submit to these raids and allow the bandits to carry off my supplies they desired. Many times our employees and workmen were threatened with violence at the hands of these robbers unless their demands were complied with. Several times the workmen were all driven from the property, work was completely suspended, and all supplies at hand were disposed of by the bandits.

We invariably notified the Carranzista authorities of these visits, but they were not able to prevent the Villistas from robbing the commissary whenever they so desired.

The Carranza authorities made very little real effort to capture these bandits.

Here is the detailed statement of robberies and raids on our properties, as reported to me by ——— who was superintendent of the ——— mine at the time.

"Operations at the ——— mine were started during the month of September, 1916, and for two months we were not molested by the Carranza and Villa forces.

"In the month of November Epifanio Holguin put in his appearance. When I was in ——— the foreman at the mine advised me of the fact and recommended me not to come out for the time being. On this visit he took practically everything which was then in the commissary, amounting possibly to 500 pesos. On this trip he had about 10 men with him.

"He made repeated trips to the mine during November, December, and January, taking small amounts of provisions each time and leaving word with the men to tell me that he was very anxious to see me and for me not to be afraid, because he was our friend.

"During the month of January, 1917, we had in all 16 visits from different bands of Villistas, each one taking small amount of provisions.

"In the month of February Holguin, with 16 men, encountered me at a watering station on the road and informed me that he was Villa's representative in this district and that he had instructions to get $5,000 gold from us to help out the Villa cause, but that being a good friend of ours he would let me off upon the payment of 3,000 pesos. This was eventually reduced to 2,000 pesos, which was paid. This was supposed to release us from any further assessment or robberies on the part of Villa.

"It has been proven since that Holguin was a free lance, and not connected with Villa.

"All this time the Carranzistas in ——— were kept informed of the movements of these different bands of Villistas, but refused absolutely to do anything. On one of these occasions I advised the general in charge of ——— that Holguin and a party of 15 men were then within 3 miles of ——— and no action was taken.

"In June, 1918, I advised the major in charge of the garrison that Holguin was then about 6 miles from ——— and had taken charge of two wagon loads of provisions, which were then on the road to the mine, and that if he would send men out immediately that he would be able to get Holguin and prevent the provisions falling in his hands. The major advised me he could not do anything in the matter without first reporting it to Chihuahua to get instructions. On this occasion Holguin stayed with the provisions until they arrived at the mine, two days later, where he took all the provisions, leaving the workmen absolutely without anything to eat and burnt the wagons in which the provisions had been hauled to the mine.

"During all the time that I was in charge of the mine our freighters were suffering loss of mules and our men were repeatedly sent into ——— and told not to come back to work. Many times the workmen at the mines were not only out of provisions, but the small amount of water for drinking purposes was consumed by the different bands of Villistas for their horses, then forcing the men to abandon the mine and come into ——— on foot.

"On several occasions we were instructed to close the mine down and not to open it up again under a threat of having the property blown up and destroyed.

"Conditions became so bad during December, 1917, that I went to ——— to see if some kind of protection could not be given to us. At this time I had a contract for the extraction of ore from the mines and being a ——— subject called upon my consul at Chihuahua City to get him to go with me to see the proper authorities regarding this protection.

"I was advised by him to do absolutely nothing in the matter, as Francisco Murguia, who was the general in command, was absolutely pro-German; that nothing could be gained by seeing him, and, in fact, that we would be insulted by him, and more than likely, he thought, advised that he was pro-German and had no use for anyone who was a subject of any one of the allied nations, and that it would be better to try and get the protection from the local authorities. However, this was impossible, as the general in command at ——— was always drunk and had absolutely no command over his men.

"On occasions when requests were made for protection to the local authorities, they put up as excuses that their men had not been paid for several months, and that in case of an encounter they would not fight, fearing desertion at any time that they saw the possibility of getting away.

"On November 24, 1918, Villa took ——— after a fight of about 30 minutes, killing several of the garrison and capturing 37, whom he afterwards shot.

"Evidently before this attack was made he gave instructions to his men that the officers and employees of the company should not be molested, as soldiers were placed in front of the office and none of the Villistas were permitted to enter. He, however, took from me personally close to 7,000 pesos worth of provisions and clothing.

"A few days later Murguia, with seven trainloads of soldiers, arrived in ——— and took possession of the town without a fight, as Villa had already left.

"During the occupancy of the town by Murguia and 2,500 soldiers they practically destroyed the automobile belonging to the company, taking off the wheels and tires, and everything that was movable, part of which we recovered by buying them from the Carrancistas' soldiers, as Murguia was inaccessible to anybody.

"No attempt was made at this time to try and round up Villa, who was known to be some 15 miles west of ———, where he stayed during the entire time that Murguia was in the town.

"During Villa's stay in ——— he remarked to me that he was not a bit afraid of Murguia, intimating that they had a tentative agreement for Murguia to operate on the railroad and Villa in the mountains.

"After Murguia left ——— Col. Boliva Sierra was left in charge, and immediately sent for me and ordered me to take the other machine, which was still in running order, and go after hay and corn for his animals. I told him in the first place that the machine was not in working order, and that in the second place, if it was, that the first obligation which I had would be to get provisions out to the men at the mine, as they had been without provisions for several days and probably were starving. He kept insisting on our using the machine for his purposes, and upon my refusal to do so, he insulted us and called us Villistas.

"During his stay in ——— he lived in the adjoining house, and he and his staff were intoxicated practically all the time, and on one occasion they shot at the chimney of the house in which we lived and stated it was a pity the "Gringos" were not there so they could take a shot at them also; in fact, pandemonium reigned the whole time he was in charge of the garrison.

"From the time that Villa's forces left ——— to the closing of the mine, on the 20th of June, 1919, there were several visits made to the mine by Villistas, but very little in the way of provisions was taken.

"Upon Villa's return south, after his defeat at ———, he occupied the office of the company, taking clothing, bedding, supplies, and furniture such as he needed.

"Upon the occupancy of the town by the Carrancista forces they looted the company's office, and their soldiers sold many of the articles belonging to the company to people living in ———.

"On June 21, 1919, the Carranzistas took the town. Upon my arrival in ——— a few days later, I was able to get back a few of the articles which the Carranzistas had stolen, as some of them were loaded on trucks belonging to the garrison.

"The offices of the company were in possession of Gen. Ferede, and a demand was made upon him for the delivery of the office, which he refused to do, stating he had no other place to live in and that he would deliver the house when he got ready to leave. Since that time repeated requests have been made to turn the house over to us, but without avail."

These raids finally culminated with the capture of ———, president of the company, ———, general manager, and ———, mining superintendent, ———, by Epifanio Holguin, who had been operating in this section for several years as a Villista. We were taken by Holguin and, after traveling for eight days, were delivered to Francisco Villa. Holguin at first demanded a ransom of $50,000 American gold, or the alternative would be to deliver us to Villa; of course, we could not pay the $50,000, so he took us to Villa.

Upon reaching Villa, he said to Holguin: "Where did you get these Gringos?" Holguin answered: "At the ——— mine." "Why did you not hang them there and be done with it, and save me the trouble of doing it here?" was Villa's rejoinder to Holguin.

Villa asked ———: "By whose orders are you working those properties? Don't you know that they are in my territory, and no one can work without my permission? If you wish to work, all right; but you must first make arrangements with me."

Then Villa began a long harangue about the persecution he had received at the hands of our Government, particularly from the President and other officers, which was about as follows:

"Wilson caused me to lose the battle of Celaya, because he refused me permission to pass two carloads of ammunition that I had at El Paso; for this reason the ammunition did not reach me in time, and I lost the battle. Later he recognized Carranza as President, when he had led me to believe that I was the one to be recognized as President. Still later he allowed Carranza to move 3,000 troops from Eagle Pass to Agua Prieta, which caused me to lose the battle of Agua Prieta. He allowed Carranza to move his troops across American frontier in order to defeat me. American guns were fired at my men at this same battle. This was not sufficient. My brother, Hipolito, was arrested and held for a ransom of $300,000, and was not allowed to go free until the last dollar was paid. I thought they would surely kill him. I hid from my men and cried like a child; but no, they did not execute him. When the last dollar was paid, they turned him loose.

"This was not all. I could stand all of this, for this was a fight between men; but then they arrested my wife at the bridge at Juarez and treated her like a dog—took the money from her purse and tore the rings from her fingers, amounting in all to $25,000.

"For all this persecution that I have received at the hands of your President and your Government you people must pay, and pay with your lives."

A little later Villa said that if we would pay him the $300,000 paid for his brother he would allow us to go free. This sum was later reduced to $50,000. Upon our insisting that it was impossible for us to pay this amount of money he reduced the demand to $25,000, the amount of money in cash and jewelry alleged to be taken from Villa's wife at El Paso. He ultimately reduced the amount to $20,000, with these words: "Pay me $20,000 and do not talk any more about it. It is your business to get the money."

It was then agreed that ——— and ——— were to be released to secure the money and ——— be held until the money was paid. After being held in all 25 days, and after having paid the amount of money demanded by Villa, I was released at the border and instructed not to give out the information I had seen Villa nor that I had paid any ransom. That this money was to be considered a loan, and if I would do as he advised me the money would be returned. If on the contrary I gave out the information that I had been with Villa and had paid a ransom that myself and my property would suffer the consequence later on.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this — day of —.

[SEAL.]

Notary Public.

FORT MADISON, IOWA, August 18, 1919.

Senator ALBERT B. FALL,

Chairman Subcommittee on Mexican Conditions, Foreign Relations Committee, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: Having recently read in the newspapers that a subcommittee headed by Senator Fall had been delegated to secure information as to the losses sustained by American citizens in Mexico, I wish if possible, to file a statement with the subcommittee as to my interests and losses.

From 1900 to 1912 I made heavy investments in Mexico and in 1906 took up my residence in Mexico City, becoming a director of the United States Trust Co., Mexico City, S. W. Rider, president. I remained in Mexico City until 1912, when in conformity with the recommendations of the United States Government communicated to me by the United States Ambassador to Mexico, the Hon. Henry Lane Wilson, and by the United States consul general to Mexico City, Mr. Arnold Shanklin, I abandoned my Mexican interests and left the country.

I am a native-born American citizen, physician, biologist, and chemist by profession; my permanent residence is in the town of Nelson, State of New Hampshire, and I maintain a winter residence in Nassau, Bahama Islands, where I am a registered medical practitioner and president of the Bahamas Plantation Co. (Ltd.). My record is briefly sketched in "American Men of Science" and in "Who's Who in America."

I have not as yet filed any claim with the Department of State, but now that there appears to be a bona fide effort to protect American interests in Mexico, I desire to place my claim on record with the hope that the United States Government may assist me in gaining peaceful possession of my properties and a just compensation for losses sustained in being deprived of them for the past eight years.

The statement attached hereto will serve to show the nature of my interests in Mexico and I will, when desired, certify the same and present full documentary evidence.

Very respectfully,

CHARLES S. DOLLEY.

STATEMENT AS TO THE INTERESTS OF CHARLES S. DOLLEY, M. D., AND HIS WIFE,
ADELAIDE C. DOLLEY, IN THE REPUBLIC OF MEXICO.

1. Twenty-five thousand acres of grazing and timber lands situated in the municipality of Tila, district of Palenque, State of Chiapas, including the coffee plantation known as "Jolnocpa," of 350,000 coffee trees, in full bearing in 1912, with dwelling houses, factory buildings, coffee cleaning, drying, and grading machinery, cattle, mules, etc. This property was deeded to me in 1908 by the Pennsylvania Plantation Co. of Philadelphia, incorporated in the State of Maine, of which I was, for several years, president. From the time it was deeded to me, it was under the management of my son, Lester C. Dolley, C. E. In the fall of 1913 he was driven off the property of Jolnocpa by insurgents, went down to the city of San Juan Bautista, to await the restoration of peace, was taken with tropical dysentery, hastened to Mexico City, and died in the American Hospital, Mexico City, December 17, 1913. Repeated but unsuccessful attempts have been made by myself and my representatives to recover possession of the estate. About 600 head of cattle and 20 mules were confiscated at the time my son was dispossessed, the house and factory looted and partly burned. At that time the property was worth at a low valuation, $250,000.

2. The El Metate Mine, near Rio del Oro, State of Guerrero:

Title to this rich free-gold property was taken by me in 1908, after several years' thorough investigation of the district by experts in my employ. Americans were driven out of this Balsas River country in 1912, many suffering great losses, and they have, as far as I can learn, never been able to resume operations. The El Metate property is conservatively valued at $50,000.

3. The Adelaida Mine, near Jecurato, district of El Fuerte, State of Sinaloa:

This is one of the richest and largest veins of zinc-lead-silver ore ever discovered in Mexico. It was originally located and title taken to it by Francis O'Gorman, a prominent American geologist and mining engineer, who died in Mexico City in 1907. I married his widow in 1908. The title stands in the name of my wife, Adelaide C. Dolley. Up to 1912 we had expended over $30,000 on the development of the property and in that year we had arranged with the firm of Denny Brothers, of London, England, well known mining experts, for the capitalization and operation of the mine, when the disturbed conditions put a stop to all mining in that district. This property is valued at $300,000.

4. Residential property in the Seattle Colony, Guadalajara, Jalisco.

These lots are in the name of Adelaide C. Dolley, and were taken over by her in settlement of a loan to one Maude Miller Sanchez, of Mexico City. Value, $10,000.

5. Investment in the securities of the South Eastern Railroad Syndicate, "Compania Ferrocarril del Sur Este," owning concession from the Federal Government, granted by the Diaz administration, to build a road from Santa Lucretia to Campeche, 700 miles.

All preliminary surveys had been completed and the road financed in London and Paris, and contract let to the firm of Norman Griffiths & Co., of London, for building the road, when the Madero rebellion put a stop to all work. This interest amounts to about $40,000.

6. Investment in the Cia Explotadora de Productos de Maguey, with factory at Apam, State of Hidalgo.

I was president of this company from its organization. Though seriously interfered with on account of its general manager, Claude Dunning, being married to a Mexican lady, this company has managed to do some work. Its product, agmel, is handled in the United States by The Agmel Co. of America (Inc.), A. W. Donly, Rahway, N. J., president. This interest amounts to about $20,000. It was founded on letters patent granted to me by the Mexican Government.

7. Several letters patent granted by the Mexican patent office, 1910, 1911; $10,000.

I feel that I am entitled to demand the full possession of all my properties, free from all claims for back taxes or other imposts, and to at least 6 per cent on the total investment from 1908 to date of settlement. I wish, furthermore, Government aid to recover for me the title papers, deeds, and other legal documents pertaining to the various properties herein mentioned, left by me in the hands of Lic. Jose E. Gomez, of Mexico City, who had received them for record, but who has refused to return them to me.

SUMMARY.

1. Chiapas coffee plantation, grazing and timber lands.....	$250,000
2. The "El Metate" mine, State of Guerrero.....	50,000
3. The "Adelaide" mine, State of Sinaloa.....	300,000
4. Real estate in Seattle Colony, Guadalajara.....	10,000
5. Securities of the Cia Ferrocarril del Sur Este.....	40,000
6. Interest in the Cia Explotadora de Productos de Maguey.....	20,000
7. Various Mexican patents.....	10,000

Aggregate..... 680,000

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 19th day of August, 1919, and hereby swear that the above statements of interest in Mexico are true as I verily believe.

CHARLES S. DOLLEY. [L. s.]

Sealed and delivered in the presence of Geo. H. Schafer and Sarah H. Williams.

STATE OF IOWA,

County of Lee, ss:

Be it known that on this 19th day of August, 1919, before me, a notary in and for said county, personally appeared Dr. Charles S. Dolley, above named, who is to me known to be the person described in and who executed the above statement of interests in Mexico and claims on same, and acknowledged same to be his act and deed. Subscribed and sworn to before me by the said Dr. Charles S. Dolley on this 19th day of August, A. D. 1919.

SARAH H. WILLIAMS,
Notary Public in and for Lee County, Iowa.

SOMERVILLE, TEX., August 20, 1919.

Senator FALL,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I herewith inclose you my account for damages against the Mexican Government. I was advised to send it to you by the consul at Monterey.

Yours, very truly,

W. A. LYON.

The STATE OF TEXAS, County of Burleson:

Before me, J. J. McCain, a notary public in and for Burleson County, Tex., on this day personally appeared before me William A. Lyon, known to me to be a credible person, and after being by me duly sworn on oath says, that he is a native-born citizen of the United States, having been born in Washington County, Tex., on the 26th day of October, 1844, and is now a citizen of the United States, and was on the dates and time that his property was destroyed in the Republic of Mexico, and that he is and was the sole owner of said property herein listed before and at the time of its destruction, and that no other person has any claim to said property. And was at the time of the seizure and destruction of said property residing at Somerville, Burleson County, Tex. And the deponent further says that he has never received payment in whole or in part for said property.

W. A. LYON.

Sworn to and subscribed to before me, this the 16th day of October, 1919.

J. J. MCCAIN,
Notary Public in and for Burleson County, Tex.

I hereby certify that I have no interest in the claim herein filed, and am neither the agent or attorney for the affiant, William A. Lyon.

J. J. MCCAIN.

INVENTORY OF PROPERTIES AND HOUSEHOLD EFFECTS BELONGING TO WILLIAM A. LYON, LOCATED IN THE VICINITY OF TOPO CHICO, NUEVO LEON, MEXICO, POST OFFICE ADDRESS SOMERVILLE, BURLESON COUNTY, TEX.

Fences.....	$300. 00
Tools.....	12. 00
Farming implements.....	6. 00
1 violin.....	16. 00
Liquors.....	40. 00
2 slot machines.....	250. 00
Harness.....	200. 00
Furniture.....	170. 00
Bedding.....	115. 00
Dining room and kitchen utensils.....	180. 00
Clothing.....	250. 00
2 acres of corn, 3 months old.....	100. 00
2 acres of peas, 3 months old.....	100. 00
1 acre of sugar cane, 2 months old.....	75. 00
2 acres of corn, 3 months old.....	75. 00
1 acre of barley, 3 months old.....	75. 00
4 acres of barley, 3 weeks old.....	74. 00
1 acre of sugar cane, 1 month old.....	25. 00
2 acres of barley, 4 weeks old.....	25. 00
1½ acres of barley, 4 weeks old.....	40. 00
Total.....	2, 128. 00

The above property was destroyed by the Federal soldiers of the Republic of Mexico during the years 1912-13.

AMERICAN CONSULAR SERVICE.

UNITED STATES OF MEXICO,
STATE OF NUEVO LEON,
City of Monterey:

This day personally appeared before me, G. D. FitzSimmons, vice consul of the United States of America, Cecilio Villela and his wife, Juana Ornelas, both Mexican citizens, who are known to me, and after being duly sworn, depose and say: "We are acquainted with W. A. Lyon, having been employed by him as caretakers of his property near Topo Chico, about 4 miles north of Monterey. About the fall of the year of 1912 we were left in charge of certain property belonging to the said Lyon, consisting of farm, implements, crops, and other property listed herewith. During this fall and year following the place was visited by soldiers known as "Carrancistas," who without our consent or permission took and destroyed everything that was on or about the place. Further the deponents sayeth not.

CECILIO (his x mark) VILLELA.
JUANA ORNELAS.

Witness to signature of Cecilio Villela: W. Landolt.

Sworn and subscribed before me at Monterey, Mexico, on this 14th day of August, A. D. 1919.

[SEAL.]

G. D. FITZSIMMONS,
Vice Consul of the United States of America.

NEW YORK CITY, September 8, 1919.

HON. ALBERT B. FALL,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We note in this morning's New York Times that the subcommittee, of which you are chairman, of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, will shortly conduct hearings on the Mexican question. We also note that the investigation of your subcommittee, among other things, will cover:

"The amount of damages suffered by Americans as a result of the destruction, confiscation, or theft of personal property.

"Damages suffered by Americans as a result of the confiscation or deprivation of the use of lands owned by them in Mexico."

On May 20, 1918, in behalf of Mr. Charles F. Simon, an American citizen whom we now represent, a claim for damages against the Mexican Government amounting to $49,774.80 was filed with the State Department.

It has occurred to us that possibly your subcommittee will be interested in having the papers in this claim, which covered damages to both personal and real property of Mr. Simon at his ranch in Mexico during the year 1916. We shall be glad to furnish you any such paper as you may wish.

Respectfully, yours,

PALMER & SERIES.

Know all men by these presents, that I, Charles F. Simon, of the Borough of Manhattan, city, county, and State of New York, have made, constituted, and appointed, and by these presents do make, constitute, and appoint Albert R. Palmer, Frank R. Series, and George F. Handel, composing the firm of Palmer & Series, attorneys at law with offices at 46 Cedar Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, city, county, and State of New York, my true and lawful attorneys, to represent me, in my name, place, and stead, before the Department of State of the United States of America, or before any court, board, or committee, or before any person or persons in any and all matters pertaining to a claim for damages against the Republic of Mexico, filed in my behalf on or about the 20th day of May, 1918, with the Department of State of the United States of America, giving my said attorneys full power to do everything whatsoever, requisite and necessary to be done in the premises, as fully as I could do if personally present, with full power of substitution and revocation, hereby ratifying and confirming all that my said attorneys, or their substitutes, shall lawfully do, or cause to be done, by virtue hereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal to this instrument in triplicate the 16th day of September in the year one thousand nine hundred and nineteen.

C. FITZHUGH SIMON. [L. s.]

Signed, sealed, and delivered in presence of Herbert J. Carroll.

STATE OF NEW YORK,
County of New York:

On this 16th of September, 1919, before me personally came Charles F. Simon, to me known and known to me to be the individual who executed the foregoing instrument and he duly acknowledged that he executed the same.

HERBERT J. CARROLL,
Notary Public.

Term expires March 30, 1920.

MEMORIAL OF CHARLES F. SIMON IN SUPPORT OF HIS CLAIM AGAINST THE REPUBLIC OF MEXICO.

I, Charles F. Simon, claimant, am a citizen of the United States of America. I was born October 2, 1861, in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, and resided in that city until about 20 years ago, when I purchased about 1,800 acres of land in the State of Vera Cruz, Mexico, about 40 miles from the city of Jalapa. This land lies in two adjacent valleys, one known as "Clarín," one as "Rincon Negros." I planted on these lands 300,000 coffee trees, cleared pastures, made roads and fences. I built a residence for my family, also houses for workmen, stables, waterworks, drying grounds for coffee, and a machinery house in which I installed a complete outfit of modern machinery for the treatment of coffee. By 1914 I had in successful and profitable operation my coffee plantations with a full complement of workmen, who were well treated, well paid, and contented. They had the privilege without cost, of corn land, bean land, and pasture. I cared for them when they were sick, and in every way treated them with consideration. I was encouraged in this enterprise by the then existing Government.

On or about the 23d of April, 1914, the Mexicans living near the property entered my residence, situated in Clarín, by force, broke open two locked desks and several locked cupboards, took all my papers, title deeds, accounts, and some money, breaking some of the furniture. After the American troops left Vera Cruz I secured the title deeds to the property, but not my accounts, papers, money, etc.

We now come to the year 1916. Senor Caranza was in power and the district in which I lived swarmed with his opponents, something like 800 armed men. They rode around in small bands, living largely off the people like myself who had houses, beds, and food. Fifty of them would ride up to my house and other ranches of Americans at nightfall, and we would be forced to put them up for the night and often longer, feeding the men and horses. They go away, of course, without paying, sometimes taking saddles, blankets, and what money one is forced to let them have. In fact one is completely at their mercy, and they play with him as a cat does a mouse, all this notwithstanding the Mexican Federal Government was fully apprised of the situation by appeals from myself and others.

In April, 1916, Gen. Cejudo, who was the chief of the rebels in my district, took over my property and used my residence as military headquarters. I lived in Jalapa some 40 miles away, which city was within the control of the Federal authorities. I wrote to Gen. Cijudo protesting over his action in taking over my property. He replied that he regrets it, but he is obeying superior orders, and will give finally a full report to our consul in Vera Cruz, which was never done. The result is my foreman and workmen, with their families, were forced to leave the place and the ranch was abandoned to the mercy of the rebels. Before they left my foreman, Felipe Diaz, and my storekeeper, Candido Carretero, made an inventory of the contents of my residence, also an inventory of the houses and machinery, etc., which I file with this paper, together with their affidavits. The rebels took possession of all the coffee that was on the ranch, also all other articles that they could use to advantage, and finally completely wrecked the contents of my residence.

Those articles of furniture which they could not well carry off they destroyed. They stabled horses in the parlor and generally defiled the house. The garden of several acres which surrounds the house they have used for a corral for mules and the valuable plants were completely ruined. In December, 1916, my foreman received word that the rebels would allow him to return. So he wired me to the United States where I was then living. I replied by wire to take full force of men and start work cleaning up the property. I knew that if this was not done that the entire plantation would be ruined. If a coffee plantation is not kept free from weeds, the trees deteriorate rapidly and soon die. The growth of weeds in the Tropics is excessive and the plantings must be cleaned from four to six times each year. As we had been forced to abandon the property the previous spring, and in the meantime the rainy season had come and gone, the coffee plants were smothered in weeds. My foreman gathered all the workmen in the district and started to clean up the plantation, in the meantime following behind with the coffee pickers. The coffee crop comes on about the 1st of November and lasts until March. Before the 1st of November a plantation should be cleaned and ready to be picked. I knew that it would be impossible to pick the crop on account of the fact of our getting possession of the plantation so late in the season. However, I thought that I might be able to get some of it to help to pay for at least part of the expenses of the weeding of the plantation. We cropped in the spring of 1916, 107,456 kilos, whereas in 1917, owing to the fact that the rebels had my plantation in their possession and had run off all of my workmen, we were only able to crop 18,446 kilos, thereby losing 89,100 kilos. I have stated that the 1916 crop was 107,456 kilos.

As a fact, we were unable to crop all of it, being disturbed so much by those roving, armed bands, so that we lost about 23,000 kilos, which dropped from the trees and could not be recovered. I make a claim for the loss of the crop this 1917 season and base the loss on the difference between what was actually picked in 1916 and in 1917. All taxes have been paid by me to the Mexican Government up to January 1, 1917. My ranch is still in the power of the rebels. They have an officer living on my plantation. I make a claim for the deterioration of the value of the plantations through being left abandoned. A plantation so left in the Tropics reverts in a short time to a wilderness of growth, killing off all artificial plantings and ruining the labor of years. I have claimed 15 per cent of the total plantings. In my itemized account I have called the total planting only 255,000 trees, whereas I have stated in this report that I had planted 300,000. This is owing to the fact that 45,000 trees had been abandoned because they had been planted in badly exposed places. I make a claim for the damage done to the houses. These left open to the wind, rain, animals, for any length of time soon go to pieces. This damage is considerable, and I have placed a conservative amount for which I believe they can be replaced or patched up as good as they were. I make claims for articles stolen; also horses, mules, cattle, coffee; for the destruction of contents of my residence and garden. All this is shown by affidavits made by one who was living on the place and filed herewith. I submit some receipts for a portion of the stolen property, as we secured all of these we possibly could. In all cases the amounts representing costs are set down with strict justice, and the amounts claimed are less rather than more than the actual damage sustained. The Mexican Federal Government has collected taxes, but has failed to afford me protection. The damages I now claim are what I have suffered up to May, 1917.

The conditions in the district have continued about the same since that time. The rebels are still in possession of my ranch; they dominate the neighborhood and the Government has failed to suppress them. I have spent large sums of money in attempting to regain and operate my ranch. A German living on adjoining property has never been molested. The policy of our Government has been misunderstood by the Mexican people and the American subjects have suffered in consequence. My house was completely furnished for occupation by myself and family, consisting of my wife and three children. The furniture included my silverware, cut glass, china, general furniture, rugs, a valuable library, pictures, bric-a-brac, etc., all of which was taken away or destroyed. I attach hereto as Exhibit A a rough itemized account of my property destroyed and damaged, together with the fair cash value thereof, also incidental expenses incurred by me. Such account is correct according to my best knowledge and belief.

I also file herewith as Exhibit B inventory, with affidavit, of the contents of my house and other property made by Felipe Diaz and Candido Carretero; one original in Spanish with translation in triplicate; also as Exhibit C affidavit of Felipe Diaz, showing coffee and articles stolen; one original in Spanish with translation in triplicate; also as Exhibit D affidavit of Felix Diaz as to property on Rincon Negros at that time and comparison of coffee crops of 1916 and 1917; one original in Spanish with translation in triplicate. Also as Exhibit E sundry receipts in Spanish given for some of the property taken referred to above, together with translations in triplicate.

On account of conditions existing since May, 1917, I have been unable to visit my ranch or to operate it successfully. I have suffered many losses since May, 1917, but shall ask leave to submit proof of same later. My property is practically ruined and I am debarred from the country.

I make this claim in behalf of myself as owner of the property referred to in this memorial. I am and was when this claim originated a citizen of the United States. At the present time I am domiciled in the city of New York. When this claim originated, I was domiciled in the city of Jalapa, Mexico. I was never a subject of the Republic of Mexico, and never took an oath of allegiance to the Government thereof. The entire amount of this claim belongs to me and did when it had its origin. I have never received any sum of money or other equivalent or indemnification for the whole or any part of the loss and injury upon which this claim is founded. I am 56 years old.

At present I am engaged in business at 225 Fifth Avenue, in New York City, having been compelled to abandon my Mexican property as stated above, with no prospect of being able to rescue and restore it.

The accompanying affidavits of Felipe Diaz and Candido Carretero were prepared in ignorance of the rules of the Department of State. They lack some of the information called for by those rules. They were not executed in triplicate. I, however, file translations in triplicate. It is impossible to get new affidavits at this time. I can not go to Mexico, nor could I find the parties if I did go, nor can I send papers there under present conditions.

I can say of my own knowledge that neither the said Philippe Diaz nor Candido Carretero has any interest, financial or otherwise, in this claim. The said Diaz was for many years my faithful ranch foreman and the said Carretero was my storekeeper at the time of the events which they describe in their affidavits. They resided on my ranch. They are both reputable men of mature age. I do not know their present location.

I file this memorial in triplicate, together with single copies of the original affidavits of Philippe Diaz and Candido Carretero in Spanish with translations in triplicate; also original receipts in Spanish for a portion of property taken by the rebels, with triplicate translation.

I am a loyal American citizen. I invested my all and devoted 20 years of my life in this coffee plantation with the encouragement of the Mexican Government. That Government failed to protect me and my property. I now invoke the aid of the American Government in securing compensation from the Mexican Government.

I have retained as counsel Mr. Franklin Ferris, Third National Bank Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Itemized statement of damages to property of C. F. Simon.

	United States currency.
1. Destruction of contents of residence in "Clarín" (see inventory), including library of some 1,800 books, many of rare editions and value. A large collection of fine tableware and cut glasses and bowls, linen (bed and table), furniture and pictures, oriental rugs, fully equipped kitchen, large range with hot and cold waterworks, clothing, etc...	$9,500.00
2. Complete destruction of garden of several acres, full of rare plants from foreign countries.	1,500.00
3. The taking by various armed bands of men at different dates, 600 hundredweight of coffee, ready for shipment, at 10 cents per pound. . . . See affidavit of Felipe Diaz. This coffee was contracted to William Schotten of St. Louis, Mo., at 14½ cents per pound, less cost of shipping in 1916, 4½ cents.	6,000.00
4. The taking by various armed bands of men on different dates, 68 hundredweight of coffee, at 10 cents per pound. . . . While on the road between the plantation and Jalapa. See affidavit of Felipe Diaz.	680.00
5. The taking by force sacks, value 150 pesos; 11 mules, value 1,870 pesos; two horses, 550 pesos; 17 head of cattle, value 1190 pesos; various articles, value 660½ pesos; total 4,426½ pesos, at exchange rate of 2 for 1.	2,213.25
6. The taking by force by different armed bands on different dates the sum of 3,364 pesos in paper money. This money was of depreciated value and for the purpose of making this account, I assume it to be on basis of exchange of 5 for 1.	672.80
7. The difference between the crop of coffee in 1916 and that of 1917 is 89,010 kilos, or 1,935 hundredweight. These above figures are sworn to in affidavit of Felipe Diaz. The costs of producing the coffee is $4.25 on the plantation and sending to Jalapa and from Jalapa to St. Louis $3.50 per hundredweight more. In claims 3 and 4, you will note that the shipping expenses were put at $4.50 from Jalapa to St. Louis, but that was in 1916, whereas this is in 1917 and the export duties are now lower. I sold coffee this year to James H. Forbes Tea & Coffee Co. at 13 cents, and claim on the 1,935 hundredweight the difference which is $5.25 hundredweight.	10,158.75
8. The loss of 15 per cent of the coffee trees planted, owing to the fact that they were abandoned and left to the mercy of tropical growth, 15 per cent of 255,000 trees equals 38,250 trees, at value of 25 cents United States currency per tree.	9,550.00
9. The actual damage done to artificial pastures, fences, and houses.	3,000.00
10. For feeding of various bands at different times.	1,500.00
11. For personal expenses incident to foregoing, traveling expenses and expense of living in Vera Cruz and Jalapa for many months, extra expense of foremen and other men.	5,000.00
Total.	49,774.80

IN THE MATTER OF THE DEATH OF WILFORD O. ROBERTSON—COPY OF AFFIDAVIT OF MRS. R. L. FISHER.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

County of San Diego, ss:

I, Esther Fisher, of lawful age, being first duly sworn, on my oath say:

On September 3, 1913, a party consisting of James Stempfle, William Brown, Wilford O. Robertson, my husband, R. S. Fisher, my daughter, Eloise Fisher, aged 6 years, and myself, also four Mexicans whose names are unknown to me, were traveling from the city of Durango, in the State of Durango, Republic of Mexico, on a journey to Mazatlan, in the State of Sinaloa, in the Republic of Mexico, having first obtained from the lawfully constituted authorities in the city of Durango proper passports for all the party for said journey. We traveled on horseback, and arrived at El Lobo in the State of Sinaloa about 4 o'clock p. m., on September 10, 1913.

At this place a Mexican by the name of Jesus Madrigal, a captain in charge of a number of soldiers, halted our party and demanded to see our passports; the passports were exhibited to him and he ordered us to pass on. We immediately resumed our journey and came to a certain place about one-half mile distant from El Lobo, where the road on which we were traveling turned sharply around a huge rock; at this point the said Jesus Madrigal and five armed soldiers stopped our entire party and took away by force from each one of the men in the party the rifles which they carried; after the rifles were taken from each man he was ordered to proceed. The captain fired several shots, two of which entered the body of Wilford O. Robertson, one of our party; one of the bullets taking effect in his neck and one in his shoulder, while one bullet passed through the hat of my husband, R. L. Fisher; neither he nor Mr. Robertson had fired. I was about 25 feet from Mr. Robertson at the time he was shot and reached him just as he fell to the ground; he said nothing other than "I am dying" and he died almost immediately. The captain and his soldiers immediately came up and robbed the body of a revolver, a rifle, a silver watch, field glasses, and cartridge belt.

I heard my husband ask the captain why he did not take the rifles from us at El Lobo, and the captain replied that he not did dare attack our party in the open, but had to wait until he could ambush them, as the Americans were dangerous people and he was afraid of them.

We buried Mr. Robertson on the same day, about 100 feet from the roadside. The captain and his armed soldiers left immediately after taking away Mr. Robertson's possessions, but came back again in about one and one-half hours later with a statement written in Spanish and which the captain and his five armed soldiers demanded should be signed by all of our party; I did not know what was in the statement, but with the others I was afraid to refuse to sign it, fearing bodily harm; I have understood later, however, that it contained a statement that Mr. Robertson shot first, which statement is not true.

My husband asked the captain for a written statement about the shooting of Mr. Robertson and some statement was given by the captain; I did not read it and do not know what it contained; I understand that it was forwarded to the American consul at Mazatlan.

Mrs. R. L. FISHER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this September 24, 1914.

[SEAL.]

JEFFERSON K. STICKNEY,
Notary Public, San Diego County, Calif.

My term expires March 18, 1918.

IN THE MATTER OF THE DEATH OF WILFORD O. ROBERTSON; COPY OF AFFIDAVIT OF B.
H. BROWN.

STATE OF TEXAS,

County of Bexar.

I, B. H. Brown, at present temporarily in San Antonio, do solemnly swear that I am a citizen of the United States. I was born 59 years ago in the State of Wisconsin, but I claim Kingston, Ill., as my home. I am a miner, and for a number of years I have followed my occupation in the vicinity of Durango, Mexico. I have always registered with the American consul at Durango as an American citizen. I have known Wilford O. Robertson about 20 years and have worked in the gold mines about 150 miles a little southwest of Durango, known as the Joquixtle Gold Co., since February, 1913. Wilford O. Robertson was president of said company when I begun working for the company and up to the time of his death, which occurred on September 10, 1913, at a place called El Lobo.

On September 2, 1913, Wilford O. Robertson procured from the secretary of the governor of Durango one joint pass for himself and myself and two mozos to go to Mazatalan. We started on the next day. With us on our trip was Joe Stempfle, R. L. Fisher, and Mrs. Esther Fisher, wife of R. L. Fisher, and a child of about 5 years of age, of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher's. Accompanying us were four Mexicans—Joe Alvarado, Francisco Alvarado, Accencion Castro—and another Mexican by the name of Juan Martinez. The two last named Mexicans were our mozos. The other two Mexicans named were companions of Fisher's, that is they accompanied Fisher without being employees of his. The distance from Durango to Mazatalan is about 200 miles. Mr. Fisher and Mr. Stempfle also had passes for themselves and their equipments, but their passes were issued by the Gen. Domingo Arrieta, the person who had control of the Mexican constitutional forces at Durango. We traveled on horse and mule back, and our equipments were carried on horse back. The condition of the roads over which we had to travel was such that our mode of travel was generally single file.

On September 10, I was leading the "train" and Wilford O. Robertson was bringing up the rear. Mrs. Fisher and her little girl was either with Mr. Robertson or very close to him. Fisher was somewhere near in the center of the "train." I say the "train" was about 300 yards long. At a point near El Lobo two Mexicans presented themselves at the side of the road and asked me about our passports. The Mexican who appeared to have authority stated that he was Jesus Madrigal. He inspected our passes and pronounced them all right, and we were permitted to proceed, at the same time he showed his commission from Domingo Arrieta. About three-quarters of a mile from this point at a rocky, hilly place in the trail, I found myself suddenly covered by five rifles in the hands of Mexican revolutionary soldiers who demanded that I give up my gun. They stated that they wanted our guns. They were informed that Madrigal who had just inspected our passes said they were all right. Then one of the party pointed to his breast and said, "I am Madrigal, and we have got to have your guns. Your passes are all right but they do not mention your guns, and if they did I would be compelled to take them as I have a lot of soldiers without guns." I asked then why they did not take our guns when they first halted us, and Madrigal said that the ground was open there and he saw that we would not be inclined to give up our guns, as he was afraid some one would get hurt if he attempted to take the guns then, and that he came to this ambushade where the guns could be taken without danger. He and his men were behind rocks when I first saw them. Madrigal said there were a lot of other soldiers up at the house who did not have guns. They held their guns upon me continually and threatened me until I was compelled to drop my gun, I then hollowed back to the balance of the party to look out that they had taken our guns. They insisted that we immediately proceed which we finally did, and we did not proceed but a short distance when we heard a number of shots fired, I should say four or five. They appeared to come from Mauser rifles. I have heard these guns fired a great many times and I think I recognized the report of all of these guns. I then stopped and in a few minutes one of our mozos came riding up and said that they had killed "Don Guellermo" which in English means "Mr. William."

I then went back and found Mr. Robertson dead. From the time I was halted until the shots were fired I only saw Robertson once. Robertson was on his horse at that time, and seemed to be trying to get out at the side of the road. Robertson was at the time he was killed armed with a gun and a .45-caliber automatic revolver. Madrigal claimed that Robertson fired first with his revolver. I am satisfied that none of the reports that I heard came from his revolver, as I could easily distinguish the difference between the reports of this pistol and the Mauser rifle, which were the guns that Madrigal and his men had. Madrigal took all of our guns, cartridges, and Robertson's revolver. They also took Robertson's field glasses, gun, and silver watch. These field glasses I should judge to be worth about $40 in gold. Robertson's revolver would cost about $40 in the United States; it was worth more in Mexico; his rifle was worth about $20 in gold. Robertson also had about $50 worth of cartridges, which they took. The silver watch that Robertson had was worth about $25 in gold. Mr. Fisher's gun that they took was worth about $20 gold; Stempfle's gun was worth about $20 gold. My gun was worth $20 gold. We buried Robertson near the spot where he was killed and camped a short distance away that night. After Robertson was killed we requested of Madrigal a statement as to the cause of his death. Madrigal went up to a little house near by and brought back a statement. We told him that he would drive all sympathy of the Americans away by this kind of conduct, and he said it made no difference, "there will be intervention anyway." Madrigal demanded that we also make a statement in regard to Robertson's death. He prepared it without consulting us as to what it should contain and demanded that we sign it. My recollection is that in this statement it was stated that Robertson fired first. We considered that we were under duress, and so far as I am concerned, I did not see Robertson fire a shot, and I am satisfied that he did not fire. Robertson was hit twice. One shot entered at the base of the right side of his neck and passed out under the left arm and the other entered the right shoulder lower down in the breast and passed out. The shots seemed to have been fired from rocks above, judging from the course of the bullets. Mrs. Fisher claimed at the time to have seen Robertson when he was shot, and that he did not fire a shot, but that he had his pistol in his hand and was off his horse. She said that she was the first to reach him, and that she asked him if he was hurt, and he told her he was dying; she protested to him, and she almost immediately heard the rattle in his throat, and he never spoke again. All of the conversation that we had with Madrigal on both occasions that I am testifying about were conducted in Spanish, but I am familiar with the language, and thoroughly understood what was said. Our passports and the statement that we signed, as well as the statement that he made, were also in Spanish. Madrigal gave his name as Jesus Madrigal. The general who issued Mr. Fisher's passes, and who was in control of the revolutionists at Durango was Domingo Arrieta. Madrigal told us that Domingo Arrieta told him to take all arms; that was in response to our statement that Domingo Arrieta had told us not to give up anything. We first reported the killing of Robertson to the Federal commander at Panuco, we next reported to the American consul at Mazatlan, and then we reported to the Red Cross authorities out at sea. I have been informed that Mr. and Mrs. Fisher's present address is 3804 Eighth Street, San Diego, Calif. I took possession of Robertson's watch, money, and papers, and delivered them to the American consul at Mazatlan. He turned them over to me, took a receipt for them, and instructed me to take them to the Rev. T. V. Neal at San Antonio, Tex., which I did.

B. H. BROWN.

STATE OF TEXAS,
County of Bexar:

The above affidavit was subscribed and sworn to before me this November 1, 1913.

[SEAL.]

T. J. MURRAY,
Notary Public, Bexar County, Tex.

IN THE MATTER OF THE DEATH OF WILFORD O. ROBERTSON, COPY OF AFFIDAVIT OF JOE STEMPFLE.

STATE OF TEXAS,
County of Bexar.

I, Joe Stempfle, at present temporarily in San Antonio, Tex., do solemnly swear that I am a citizen of the United States. I was born in Germany November 16, 1864, and was naturalized in 1886. I claim San Antonio as my home. I am a ranchman, followed my occupation in the vicinity of Durango, Mexico, about 12 or 13 years. I have known Wilford O. Robertson about 14 years and was with him at the time of his death, which occurred on September 10, 1913, at a place called El Lobo.

On September 2, 1913, I procured from Gen. Domingo Arrieta a pass for myself to go to Mazatlan. We started on the next day. With us on our trip was Wilford O. Robertson, B. H. Brown, R. L. Fisher, and Mrs. Esther Fisher, wife of R. L. Fisher, and a child, about 5 years of age, of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher's. Accompanying us were four Mexicans—Joe Alvarado, Francisco Alvarado, Accension Castro, and another Mexican by the name of Juan Martinez. The two last named Mexicans were mozos. The other two Mexicans named were companions of Fisher's, that is they accompanied Fisher without being employees of his. The distance from Durango to Mazatlan is about 200 miles. Wilford O. Robertson, Mr. Fisher, and B. H. Brown also had passes for themselves and their equipments. We traveled on horses and mule back and our equipments were carried on horseback. The condition of the road over which we had to travel was such that our mode of travel was generally single file. On September 10 Brown was leading "train." I came next and Wilford O. Robertson was bringing up the rear. Mrs. Fisher and her little girl were either with Mr. Robertson or very close to him. Fisher was somewhere in the center of the "train." The "train" was about 300 yards long. At a point near El Lobo two Mexicans presented themselves at the side of the road and asked about our passports. The Mexican who appeared to have the authority stated that he was Jesus Madrigal. He inspected our passes and pronounced them all right, and we were permitted to proceed, at the same time he showed his commission from Domingo Arrieta. About three-quarters of a mile from this point at a rocky, hilly place in the trail, Brown was suddenly covered by five rifles in the hands of Mexican revolutionary soldiers who demanded that we give up our guns. They stated that they wanted our guns. They were informed that Madrigal who had just inspected our passes said they were all right. Then one of the party pointed to his breast and said "I am Madrigal and we have got to have your guns. Your passes are all right, but they do not mention your guns, and if they did, I would be compelled to take them as I have a lot of soldiers without guns." They were asked then why they did not take our guns when they first halted us, and Madrigal said that the ground was open there and he saw that we would not be inclined to give up our guns, and he was afraid some one would get hurt if he attempted to take the guns there and that he came to this ambushade where the guns could be taken without danger. He and his men were behind rocks when we saw them. Madrigal said that there were a lot of soldiers up at the house who did not have guns. They held their guns upon our party continually and threatened us until we were compelled to drop our guns. They insisted that we immediately proceed which we finally did and we did not proceed but a short distance when we heard a number of shots fired, I should say four or five. They appeared to come from mazar rifles. I have heard these guns fired a great many times and think I recognize the report of all of these guns. I then stopped and in a few minutes one of the mozos came riding up and said they have killed "Don Guellermo" which in English means "Mr. William." I then went back and found Robertson dead. Robertson was at the time he was killed armed with a gun and a .45 caliber automatic revolver. Madrigal claimed that Robertson fired first with his revolver. I am satisfied that none of the reports that I heard came from his revolver, as I could easily distinguish the difference between the reports of this pistol and the mazar rifle which were the guns that Madrigal and his men had. Madrigal took all of our guns, cartridges and Robertson's revolver. They also took Robertson's field glasses, gun and silver watch. These field glasses I should judge to be worth about $40 in gold. Robertson's revolver would cost about $40 in the United States; it was worth more in Mexico; his rifle was worth about $20 in gold. Robertson also had about $50 worth of cartridges which they took. The silver watch that Robertson had was worth about $25 in gold. Mr. Fisher's gun that they took was worth about $20 in gold and Stempfle's gun that they took was worth about $20 in gold; Brown's gun was worth about $20 in gold.

We buried Robertson near the spot where he was killed, and camped a short distance away that night. After Robertson was killed we requested of Madrigal a statement as to the cause of his death. Madrigal went up to a little house near by and brought back a statement. We told him that he would drive all of the sympathy of the Americans away by this kind of conduct and he said it made no difference, there would be intervention anyway. Madrigal demanded that we also make a statement in regard to Robertson's death. He prepared it without consulting us as to what it should contain and demanded that we sign it. I refused to sign. My recollection is that in the statement, it was stated that Robertson fired first. So far as I am concerned, I did not see Robertson fire a shot, and I am satisfied that he did not fire. Robertson was hit twice. One shot entered at the base of the right side of his neck and passed out under the left arm, and the other in the right shoulder and passed out lower down in the breast. The shots seem to have been fired from rocks above, judging from course of the bullets. Mrs. Fisher claimed at the time to have seen Mr. Robertson when he was shot; and that he did not fire a shot, but that he had his pistol in his hand and was off of his horse. She said that she was the first to reach him, and she asked him if he was hurt, and he told her that he was dying, she protested to him and she almost immediately heard the rattle in his throat, and he never spoke again. All of the conversation that we had with Madrigal on both occasions that I am testifying about were conducted in Spanish, but I am familiar with the language and thoroughly understood what was said, our passports and the statement that some of the party signed, as well as the statement that he made were also in Spanish. Madrigal gave his name as Jesus Madrigal, the general who issued Mr. Fisher's passport and who was in control of the revolutionists at Durango was Domingo Arrieta. Madrigal told Brown that Domingo Arrieta told him to take all arms, that was in response to our statement that Domingo had told us not to give up anything. I did not hear this. We first reported the killing of Robertson to the Federal commander at Panuco, we next reported to the American consul at Mazatlan, and then we reported to the Red Cross authorities at sea. I have been informed that Mr. and Mrs. Fisher's present address is 3894 Eighth Street, San Diego, Calif.

JOE STEMPFLE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of November, 1913.

[SEAL.]

T. J. MURRAY,
Notary Public, Bexar County, Tex.

OFFICIAL CONFIDENTIAL REPORT.

Radical socialism movement in Mexico: Evidently strong efforts are being made throughout Mexico to incite the labor elements to adopt a more radical policy toward destruction of all property and property rights. It seems that these movements are more or less openly propitiated by officials appointed by Carranza.

Conditions in Yucatan: Socialism of a more radical character has invaded the State of Yucatan and is destroying order, law, and wealth. The authorities now controlling the situation in Yucatan are carrying their radical campaign in the name of the Mexican Government, but it is in reality they themselves who are looking for their own interests. The abuses have assumed such a degree of violence that the Federal Government of Mexico is considering the federalization of the port of Progreso in order to close up that source of infection. Luis Cabrera has been sent by the Government of Carranza to Yucatan to improve the situation there. Robert Habermann is a prominent Socialist worker of Merida, Yucatan.

Conditions in Vera Cruz: The activities of I. W. W. in the State of Vera Cruz are taking remarkable impetus. The leaders, Pedro O. Pantoja, Julio Cadenas, Vicente Cana, and Espigmenio Ocampo, have formed several committees to spread bolshevist theories and to induce workmen to strike.

I. W. W. activities in Mexico: Propaganda is spreading in Mexico to precipitate strikes in that Republic, and also in other Latin-American countries. Mexican workmen in Tampico, following suggestions from I. W. W. organizations in New York, have appointed a committee to plan out strikes in the various oil-producing camps.

Information has been received from Mexican labor headquarters that they have received requests from various American labor groups asking the moral support of Mexican labor unions to aid in securing freedom of Socialists held in prison in the United States for opposing the draft and obstructing military operations of the United States.

Influence of the Rand school of bolshevism: The workers pro-amnesty committee of United States has asked funds from Mexico labor committees with the purpose of continuing their propaganda to obtain the freedom of the socialistic leaders now in prison in the United States. The Mexico labor committees, following suggestions from above-mentioned American labor organization, have named a commission to organize sympathetic strikes in the petroleum camps. The petroleum companies have refused to pay workers according to the new labor law. The labor unions of Vera Cruz, Tamaulipas, Orizaba, etc., are in sympathy with the intended strike movements.

The above mentioned workers pro-amnesty committee is really an I.W.W. defense union, constituted of 170 union committees under the auspices of the Rand School, 5 East Fifteenth Street, New York, in December, 1918. This sympathy of Tampico workers is illustrative of the influence of the Rand School of Bolshevism.

Lynn A. E. Gale: It seems that this American writer, now in Mexico City actively working in radical socialistic propaganda, has lately got in trouble, as it can be inferred from the leaflets that he has distributed refuting accusation made against him. Previously to his coming to Mexico City, he worked for several years for Martin H. Glynn, in the capitol and on Glynn's newspaper in Albany, and also wrote for the American of New York. When called by his draft board, he fled to Mexico. He claims to have the support and personal friendship of President Carranza.

Gale is openly teaching the tenets of bolshevism, and by means of his magazine is particularly dangerous. He expects to spread the doctrines of bolshevism from one end of the Americas to the other. He is a strong internationalist beside making his living by the practice of occultism in various forms, including some form of mental healing, for which his wife, who seems to be ably seconding him, requests that people send their incurable cases that they may be treated.

Gale is looking forward to the lifting of the censorship that he may obtain close communication with friends of his own belief here in the United States.

The connection of the Bolshevik propaganda with the German is perhaps shown more clearly in the case of this man than in any other. For Gale is a confessed pro-German, and is connected with the Servicio Aleman.

Some people in Mexico recognize in Gale a slacker, Bolshevik and blackmailer, who may soon be deported from Mexico. Gale is well known as running a pro-Bolshevist magazine in Mexico City. His future deportation has already been announced.

In an intercepted letter from Gale to his parents Gale says that he has recently won two law-suits against persons who tried to damage his business, getting $75 damages in the first case and $375 in the second case. He states his intention of suing a leading newspaper of Mexico City (El Universal) which recently exposed him, and states that he expects to recover heavy damages. The writer adds that the publicity did him no harm and was a good advertisement. He finishes his letter with the following statement: "My relations are so cordial with the Government that I don't care what soreheads say or do. Besides having the personal audience with President Carranza which I mentioned to you, I have seen the secretary of state several times and have established very close connections with several members of the Government. They all give me the most respectful and friendly consideration."

In an intercepted letter Gale informs his father and mother that "Business is good and things are progressing nicely." The writer adds: "A newspaper has been attacking me and published a malicious letter from George Stafford of the Times (Times Review of Oxford, N. Y.), and I am suing the paper (El Universal) for $100,000 damages."

El Universal, F. F. Palavicini, editor, announced the probable deportation of Gale, according to the famous article 33 of the new Mexican constitution, which gives the executive the authority to expel any pernicious foreigner or any one interfering in the political affairs of the country.

Bolsheviki propaganda: Socialist propaganda of the most radical character is steadily increasing in Mexico. Among the men who are spreading revolutionary propaganda the following are widely known: Ezequiel Salcedo, Ignacio Rodriguez, Juan Rico, Rosendo Salazar, Sr. Decuina, Ricardo Trevino, P. Nacho, and Tomas Valenzuela.

The special report on "Social Unrest in Mexico," states: "It is positively known that at the opening of the last session of the congress in Mexico City, Bolsheviki literature has been distributed in the government building, such distribution being sanctioned by President Carranza."

There is a continuous stream of dangerous literature being sent from Mexico to South American countries. It usually comes into this country through the ports of Eagle Pass and Laredo, some little amount coming through El Paso, and is intended to proceed to New Orleans or New York for transmittal to destination. Apparently there is a close tie binding the agitators in the Latin American countries with these in Mexico, and they are all united in their conclusions that the Government and the people of the United States have decided to exploit the peoples of the Latin American countries for their own use and profit, and that therefore it is the clear duty of all Latin Americans to fight the activities of the United States with all their strength.

El Democra of Mexico City, published a cartoon of a great American octopus seated at the Capital of Washington and stretching its tentacles throughout all the Americas, and an article, by Ramon Sanchez Arreola, of the Mexican consulate, at Los Angeles, Calif., containing a hymn to La Raza, explaining that La Raza (The Race) represents the Spanish and twenty Latin American countries all joined together in opposition to the United States. They intend to oppose a Spanish-American solidarity against Pan Americanism of the Monroe doctrine. It is stated that President Carranza is at the head of the organization.

There is a propaganda that comes from Europe, both from German sources and Spanish, the German propaganda seeming to come through Spanish means and dealing principally with anti-American ideas at the present time. The strictly Spanish propaganda seems to be the Pan-Spanish ideal as opposed to the Pan-American.

Besides this there is the propaganda originating in Mexico itself which is disseminated throughout all the Spanish-American countries. This propaganda is both anti-American and Bolshevik.

The press in Mexico City published a cablegram from Geneva, Switzerland, dated March 28, 1918, stating that the meeting in Moscow of the Communist International Congress is trying to formulate a general project for bolshevik movements simultaneously in Europe and America and that in a secret meeting it was resolved to postpone the realization of their purposes until the signing of peace.

It is stated that the members of the congress believe that the revolutionary efforts will meet with great success as soon as the censorship will be removed in all countries.

The special report on "Pan-Socialism in Spanish-Speaking Countries" states: "In Mexico the situation is of especial interest to the United States, since there is a constant Socialist exchange between them, and there are American agitators in Mexico. It has been stated that bolshevism in Mexico is inevitable. A working socialist system has been established in Yucatan, which the Government seems to be trying to control. Gen. Salvador Alvarado and Luis Cabrera seem to have some control of both labor and capital; the supposed control by other factions seems purely revolutionary. Here also it is often said that Germans are furthering the bolshevik propaganda; it is known that the German periodicals are currying favor with the labor element. The I. W. W. is organized in Mexico, Jose Angel Hernandez being the leading spirit and Pedro Corria, or Coria, an active agent; Habermann, an American, is leading in Yucatan, and Lynn Gale, an American, is making active bolshevik press propaganda. There are movements afoot to unite all factions, both political and socialistic."

In the States of Tamaulipas, Vera Cruz, Tabasco, Chiapas, Campeche, and Yucatan legislative measures of decided radical nature are being imposed or are in way of being imposed.

It is apparent that the drift in Mexico is toward radical legislation, the confiscation of property, and the repudiation of foreign debts.

The repudiation of the Mexican foreign debt was openly discussed by Mexican Government officials, and it seems that such proceeding would undoubtedly please quite a number of Mexicans, among them leading officials of the actual Government.

Lately reports state that Luis Cabrera, speaking in regard to the payment of the Mexican foreign debt, gave the following public statement:

"If we had the cash in our treasury to resume payments on the national debt to-day we should prefer to wait. Our creditors have waited patiently and they will continue patient. We prefer to await the outcome of adjustments of problems of world-wide importance that may affect us directly. We must know what the world in general will do with its obligations, how many nations will repudiate their debts, and how many will trim their obligations to figures compatible with their income."

OFFICIAL REPORT TO ADJUTANT GENERAL OF TEXAS AND THIS COMMITTEE BY CAPT. HANSON.

A society for the furtherance of their political influence called the "Verband Deutscher Reichsangeboriger" (Union of Subjects of the German Empire). It has headquarters in the Boker Building in Mexico City and branches in 31 Mexican cities and towns. Its first chief is R. Von Lubek who lives at 28 Calle Berlin, and offices in the Boker Building. He was formerly a merchant of the firm of Boker & Co. Fritz Sommer, son of a leading jeweler of Mexico City, is the official organizer; travels around the country perfecting the work. This society is closely working with the 50 German officers in the Mexican army; they are also closely associated with Col. del Campo of the Corps of Engineers and with an anti-American Spaniard named Guardiola, the editor of La Regeneration of Satallo. Other German or pro-German Mexican papers are Boletin de Guerra, Informaciones Inalambricos, Cronica Alemania, Deutsch Zeitung von Mexico, and El Demócrata and El Defensa, and in Monterey the El Heraldo Europeo.

Manuel Ugarte, who is a Portuguese mulatto, is exceptionally anti-American. There is only about 50 German officers in the Carranza army, the most prominent is Gen. Maximiliano Klos, of the Artillery. Carranza's nephew, Col. Salinas, chief of aviation and ammunition, is also strong anti-American; this man bought 6,000,000 cartridges from Salvador in May, 1917; he is a graduate of St. John Manilus of New York and Troy Poletec, and only about 26 years old. There are now two members of this society in San Antonio; one is Dr. Boese, who was at one time connected with the State University and who is married to a Mexican woman in Monterey, and who the United States Government will not give a passport to; also he lives at _____; and a German named Buschard, who lives at _____. Buschard is a brother of the Mexican consul at Monterey; is a great friend of a Mexican named Ornelas, who lives at _____. These people are closely hooked up with De La Pena, ex-governor of Coahuila, who lives at 317 Nacodoches Street, and his son-in-law, who is a German, Oscar Francke, lives at 325 Madison Street, and a lawyer named _____, who lives at 418 West Elmira Street, and a Gen. Villareal, who lives at 306 North Flores; and a Gen. Alvarado, who lives at 317 Nacodoches. I am sending you herewith a photo of this bunch. Please return same when it has served your purpose. _____ is an American and Pena's mozo, who is on the extreme right and who lives at 306 Cass Avenue; his name is Torre. Pena has an office at room 71, Menger Hotel. The United States Government has also refused Buschard a passport. Buschard made inquiries about explosives, Hercules Powder Co., and same was referred to Peden I. & S. Co. here in October; there is also a Santos Boreno, of San Luis Potosi, and a Gen. Borellas.

MAY 24, 1920.

The chairman directed that there be printed in the record at this point a letter under date of May 18, 1920, signed Robert H. Murray, inclosing an affidavit of same date made by said Robert H. Murray before the vice-consul of the United States at Mexico City. Said letter and affidavit follows, viz:

MAY 18, 1920.

MY DEAR SENATOR: It looks now as if it would be impossible for me to go north, or rather, get to Washington before you finish up with your committee work. So I am sending the inclosed affidavit, which I ask you to be good enough to incorporate in the proceedings of the committee. You will appreciate my reluctance to have the books closed without something going on record to offset Buckley's attack upon me.

I took off a carbon of a letter which I have just finished, and send it on. There may be something in it to interest you. Kindly treat it and its contents as confidential to yourself.

With kindest regards, believe me,
Always, sincerely, yours,

ROBERT H. MURRAY.

Hon. ALBERT B. FALL,
Washington, D. C.

P. S.—If you communicate with me, please do so in care of the embassy here, via the Department of State's weekly sealed pouch; not in the open mail.

* * * * *

MAY 18, 1920.

Before me this 18th day of May, in the year 1920, appeared the deponent, Robert H. Murray, who being duly sworn deposes and says:

That he is an American citizen by birth, residing at present at la Jalapa, 8, in the city of Mexico, Mexico; that on or about December 6, in the year 1919, one William Frank Buckley, appeared before the subcommittee on investigation of Mexican affairs of the United States Senate, and under oath uttered certain malicious and untruthful statements concerning the deponent, which statements are reported in part 6 of the proceedings of said subcommittee, on pages 773-774 and 829-830, stigmatizing the deponent as an "unscrupulous American—and an interested propagandist of the Carranza government;" and also in connection with a statement relating to the Carranza government of Mexico, as being one of the "provokers of intervention;" that at various times, notably on February 15, February 18, and February 21, in the year 1920, the deponent in writing entered a general and specific denial of all of the false and malicious statements of the said Buckley, demanded that the said Buckley be summoned immediately to appear before the said subcommittee and submit any and all evidence in support of his allegations against the deponent; that the said Buckley be required to furnish the said subcommittee with the name or names of any persons, or person whom he might know to be in possession of any evidence in support of his false and malicious statements; that unless the said Buckley succeeded in proving his allegations that such portions of his testimony containing them be stricken out of and expunged from the record, and that the said Buckley be disciplined by the said subcommittee for supplying it under oath with false, libelous, malicious, and perjurious testimony; that for reasons well understood by the said subcommittee, which reasons are due to no fault or lack of diligence on the part of the deponent, up to the 11th day of April last, when the deponent through urgent necessity was compelled temporarily to leave the United States and return to Mexico, it had not seemed possible for the subcommittee to accede to the deponent's requests; that owing to what now seems to be the impossibility that the deponent will be able to return to the United States before the said subcommittee closes its sessions and appear personally before it, he takes this means of formally and under oath denying wholly and without reservation all of the false, malicious, libelous, and perjurious statements herein quoted which were uttered by the said Buckley concerning him and all other statements of similar character which may have been or may be uttered by the said Buckley, or by any other person; that the deponent takes this method of formally presenting his denial in order that it may be entered on the records of the said subcommittee, and also of respectfully requesting as a measure of fairness and justice, that unless Buckley offers adequate proof of his false, malicious, libelous, and perjurious statements the deponent, said statements be ordered stricken out of and expunged from the record of the said subcommittee.

ROBERT H. MURRAY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on this the 18th day of May, 1920, at Mexico City, Mexico.

[SEAL.]

G. C. SHANES,
Vice Consul of the United States of America at Mexico City, Mexico.
Service No. 3449.

The committee regret that any controversy should have arisen before this committee touching a personal matter and have heretofore excluded such personalities.

On February 27, 1920, the chairman of the committee, answering a communication from Mr. Murray, through a letter addressed to that gentleman at New York City, used the following language:

I regret that Mr. Buckley should have made a statement against you or affecting your character in any way or your conduct in such a way that you think it necessary to have Mr. Buckley brought back before the committee to confront you.

You may rest assured, however, that as soon as it is reasonably possible for me to get around to it, you shall have every opportunity to take exactly such action as you care to take, either by coming before the committee and testifying or having Mr. Buckley questioned by yourself or your attorney as to the foundation for the statements which he made.

It did not suit the convenience of, nor was it possible for, Mr. Murray on one hand to meet the committee at Los Angeles, or other points along the border, nor to be present at any hearing of the full committee in the city of Washington after the date of Mr. Buckley's testimony.

Neither did it suit the convenience of, nor was it possible for, the committee to hold a hearing aside from the hearings arranged in their regular itinerary at which Mr. Murray could be present.

For the above reasons, and as it has been the intention of the committee to give every person an opportunity to testify or make a statement before it, we have decided to print Mr. Murray's letter and affidavit.

The committee are thoroughly impressed with the value of the general testimony of Mr. Buckley, and with the care and painstaking effort which he has displayed in accumulating the vast amount of valuable data upon events, facts, etc., as given by him in his testimony in part 6 of these hearings.

The committee is aware, however, that differences have arisen between Americans with reference to acts of Americans in Mexico, and it has not been concerned with such differences in conducting its hearings.

We can readily understand that Mr. Buckley, testifying truthfully and at the same time judging individuals and their acts from his point of view, may have inadvertently done injury to Mr. Murray in the testimony which he gave. Mr. Murray was, of course, entitled to his day in court, and while the committee do not care to give publicity to the expressions used by either in criticism of the other, it would have given Mr. Murray the opportunity asked to testify concerning the matter in controversy in open hearing, and as this has so far been impossible without expression from the committee, which is entirely unnecessary, further than above set forth, it has taken the action indicated in printing Mr. Murray's letter and affidavit.

INVESTIGATION OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS

HEARING

BEFORE A

SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS UNITED STATES SENATE

SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS

SECOND SESSION

PURSUANT TO

S. Res. 106

DIRECTING THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS TO INVESTIGATE THE MATTER OF OUTRAGES ON CITIZENS
OF THE UNITED STATES IN MEXICO

PARTIAL REPORT OF COMMITTEE, ABSTRACTS OF TESTIMONY, AND INDEX

PART 23

Printed for the use of the Committee on Foreign Relations

WASHINGTON
GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
1920

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, Massachusetts, Chairman.

PORTER J. McCUMBER, North Dakota.

WILLIAM E. BORAH, Idaho.

FRANK B. BRANDEGEE, Connecticut.

ALBERT B. FALL, New Mexico.

PHILANDER C. KNOX, Pennsylvania.

WARREN G. HARDING, Ohio.

HIRAM W. JOHNSON, California.

HARRY S. NEW, Indiana.

GEORGE H. MOSES, New Hampshire.

GILBERT H. HITCHCOCK, Nebraska.

JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Mississippi.

CLAUDE A. SWANSON, Virginia.

ATLEE POMERENE, Ohio.

MARCUS A. SMITH, Arizona.

KEY PITTMAN, Nevada.

JOHN K. SHIELDS, Tennessee.

C. F. REDMOND, Clerk.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

ALBERT B. FALL, Chairman.

FRANK B. BRANDEGEE.

MARCUS A. SMITH.

DAN M. JACKSON, Clerk.

MARY CATHERINE EARLY, Clerk.

INVESTIGATION OF MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

PARTIAL REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The committee was appointed under Senate resolution 106, for the purpose of investigating and reporting upon certain facts, matters, and suggestions with reference to Mexican affairs as affecting American citizens and American property rights; the relations between the two countries, etc.

[Senate resolution 106.]

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to investigate the matter of damages and outrages suffered by citizens of the United States in the Republic of Mexico, including the number of citizens of the United States who have been killed or have suffered personal outrages in Mexico, and the amount of proper indemnities for such murders and outrages; the quantity of damages suffered on account of the destruction, confiscation, and larceny of personal property and the confiscation and deprivation of the use of lands and the destruction of improvements thereon; the number of citizens of the United States residing in Mexico at the time Porfirio Diaz retired from the Presidency of Mexico, and the number of citizens of the United States at present residing in Mexico, and the nature and amount of their present holdings and properties in said country; and in general any and all acts of the Government of Mexico and its citizens in derogation of the rights of the United States or of its citizens; and for this purpose to sit at any time or place during the sessions of Congress or during recess and with authority to subpoena such witnesses and documents as may be necessary, and to make a report of its findings in the premises to the Senate; and the said committee shall further investigate and report to the Senate what if any, measures should be taken to prevent a recurrence of such outrages.

The subcommittee appointed under this resolution consists of Senators Albert B. Fall, of New Mexico, chairman; Frank B. Brandegee, of Connecticut; and Marcus A. Smith, of Arizona.

The committee organized in the city of Washington on the 8th day of August, 1919.

Among its assistants and employees, appointed by the committee, were the following:

Francis J. Kearful, ex-Assistant Attorney General of the United States.

Maj. Dan M. Jackson, clerk, resigned from the office of the Judge Advocate General to serve with the committee.

Mr. Henry O. Flipper, Spanish translator, historian, and thoroughly familiar with Mexican law, residence, El Paso, Tex., as translator and interpreter.

Capt. W. M. Hanson, investigator, captain of senior company Texas Rangers, furloughed by Gov. Hobby, of Texas, in order to serve with the committee.

Gus T. Jones, investigator, special agent Department of Justice, El Paso district, given furlough in order to assist the committee.

Capt. George E. Hyde, investigator, assigned by the Chief of Military Intelligence, War Department, to assist the committee.

Estelle Stewart, stenographer and clerk.

Harry G. Clunn, stenographer and clerk.

Later, Mary C. Early, clerk to committee, in place of Maj. Dan M. Jackson.

In addition to the above regular employees, special confidential investigators were in the employ of the committee.

The clerical force of the chairman also gave a great deal of time to the affairs of the committee.

The committee held its first hearing in Washington on Monday, September 8, 1919.

Hearings have been held in Washington, New York, El Paso, Laredo, Brownsville, and San Antonio, Tex.; Tucson and Nogales, Ariz.; and Los Angeles and San Diego, Calif.

The committee in its investigations have had hearings at the places aforesaid, and at its first meeting authorized its assistant, Judge Francis J. Kearful, to examine witnesses and take evidence in behalf of the committee, and the same authority was conferred upon Investigators Capt. W. M. Hanson and Gus T. Jones.

By resolution it was agreed that either member of the committee might act for the committee wherever he should be from time to time in conducting hearings, etc.

TRAVEL.

One member of the committee in the conduct of the investigations, accompanied by one or more other members and also by one or more of the investigators and assistants, has traveled in taking testimony, etc., more than 12,000 miles.

STATE DEPARTMENT.

Immediately after the appointment of the committee the Secretary of State of the United States was notified by the chairman of such appointment and the general objects of the investigation and was requested to cooperate with the committee in such investigation.

From time to time special requests were made of the Secretary of State for specific papers, data, and information, and it is with great pleasure that the committee reports cheerful cooperation between the Department of State and the committee and expresses its appreciation of the courtesy with which the requests of the committee have been treated, and gratitude for the very great assistance rendered the committee by the department.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Following a request of the committee the Chief of Military Intelligence, United States Army, designated Capt. George E. Hyde to assist the committee in its investigation, and Capt. Hyde accompanied the committee to various border points, attending hearings and rendering assistance in its investigation.

To the local intelligence officers along the border at San Antonio, El Paso, Nogales, and other points the committee is especially indebted for their very efficient cooperation, advice, and assistance.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

In response to requests made by the committee upon the Treasury Department for permission to examine records in the office of different collectors, etc., such permission was immediately granted, and through same valuable data and information was obtained.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

Not alone through the courtesy of the department through the Chief of the Bureau of Investigation and district representative, Charles E. Brenniman, in furnishing Gus T. Jones, but through many other evidences of cooperation, this department rendered most efficient service to the committee.

IMMIGRATION DEPARTMENT.

Officers of the Immigration Department along the border cooperated with the committee and rendered it very material aid in its work.

Francis J. Kearful severed his connection with the committee by presenting his resignation to the chairman on April 14, effective May 6, 1920, to attend to personal business.

Maj. Dan M. Jackson resigned as clerk on April 1, effective May 1, 1920, to resume the practice of law.

While the services of these gentlemen were of very great benefit to the committee, in the taking of testimony, it was deprived of their assistance in the compilation of this report.

TESTIMONY.

The committee has examined and taken the evidence of 257 witnesses, of which number the evidence of 52 was taken in executive session; the record of which, together with the documentary proof, embraces approximately 5,000 pages of the report.

REPORT.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS,
United States Senate:

Your committee heretofore appointed under Senate resolution 106, for the purpose of conducting certain investigations more specifically set forth in the resolution itself, beg leave at this time to make a report of their labors, investigations, and conclusions based thereupon.

You are respectfully referred to the preliminary statement preceding this report, and made a portion of same, as to the organization and method of operation of the committee.

Under the resolution as drawn, the committee proceeded with its investigations, construing the duties imposed upon it to be embraced generally under the following specific heads:

- I. Number of American citizens who have been killed.
- II. Number of American citizens who have suffered personal outrages.
- III. Amount of proper indemnity for such murders.
- IV. Amount of proper indemnity for outrages.
- V. Quantity of damages suffered on account of the destruction, confiscation, and larceny of personal property and the confiscation and deprivation of the use of lands and the destruction of improvements thereon.
- VI. Number of American citizens residing in Mexico at the time Porfirio Diaz retired from the Presidency of Mexico.
- VII. Number of American citizens residing in Mexico at present.
- VIII. Nature and amount of present holdings and properties in Mexico of citizens of the United States.
- IX. Generally, any and all acts of the Government of Mexico and its citizens in derogation of the rights of the United States or of its citizens.
- X. What, if any, measures should be taken to prevent a recurrence of such outrages, etc.

In presenting a detailed report, however, the committee have thought best to transpose the subjects as set out in the foregoing list, and report first upon Nos. VI and VII, to wit:

(A) Number of American citizens residing in Mexico at the time Porfirio Diaz retired from the presidency of Mexico.

(B) Number of American citizens at present residing in Mexico.

At the outset of its investigation as to the number of Americans residing in Mexico at the period of the overthrow of the Diaz government, the committee was confronted with the difficulty of obtaining any reliable data whatsoever from Mexican sources because of the very well recognized fact that no correct census of the Mexican, Indian, or any other population has ever been taken by the Mexican Government. Of course, attempts to take a census have been made from time to time, but the results of such attempts have generally been recognized as of little or no value by those acquainted with Mexico and its population. From no Mexican data obtainable has it been possible even to estimate the number of Americans reported in Mexico.

Consular offices have made more or less full reports from time to time upon various matters connected with American investments in Mexico, and incidentally from some particular locality there have been attempts to estimate the number of Americans in such consular district.

The general opinion of Americans who had been in Mexico prior to 1911 and who are best acquainted with the country, has been to the effect that there were, at the time of the overthrow of Diaz, 60,000 Americans in the entire Republic. Of course this would not include those merely visiting Mexico or some State or city therein from time to time and remaining a few days or a few months, but this general estimate would be that of the actual resident American population in the Republic.

The testimony in this case shows through the estimate of those who should be best informed (for instance, that of Mr. Henry Lane Wilson, United States ambassador to Mexico at the period mentioned, pt. 15, p. 2249), that there were then 75,000 Americans, including transients, in the Republic of Mexico.

Mr. Wilson, referring to such population and to the occupation of Americans in Mexico, estimates that there were then 2,000 Americans on the railways; probably 5,000 engaged in mining, and possibly 8,000 engaged in educational work and residing in the country for reasons of health, diversion, or investment, etc.

The investigation conducted by this committee would indicate that there were very many more farmers in the Republic of Mexico than estimated by Mr. Wilson; in fact, it is shown by such testimony, from those entirely familiar with the particular subject, that in certain agricultural colonies alone, in the States of Chihuahua and Sonora in the north, to wit:

The Colonies of Dublan,
Juarez,
Pacheco,
Garcia,
Chuichupa,
Diaz,
Morelos, etc.

There were more than four thousand (4,000) Americans engaged in agriculture at the time referred to.

In addition to the foregoing are the American colonies of:—

Atascador,
Camacho,
Columbus,
Chemal,
Colonia,
Medina,
Manuel,
Rio Verde,
San Dieguito,
Santa Lucrecia,
San Pedro,
Sinaloa-Sonora,
Valles,
Victoria,

or a total number of families in all colonies at the date mentioned of approximately three thousand (3,000), averaging five (5) persons each.

The evidence would also show that aside from those mentioned as engaged in agriculture in the colonies or groups of families, Americans were settled in practically every State in the Republic, in larger or smaller numbers, engaged in sheep, cattle, and horse raising; and in agriculture, and agriculture in connection with stock raising: in plantations and ranches and small farms throughout the different valleys and agricultural districts, raising sugar, coffee, tropical fruits of all kinds, and, in the higher altitudes, in raising potatoes, wheat, and crops of like character.

The evidence shows that these Americans had taken into the Republic of Mexico, in practically every instance testified to, improved breeds of stock, improved and up-to-date agricultural implements of all kinds, and also that they were engaged not only in farming by their own labor and that of their own families, but that they were employing large numbers of Mexicans in such labor. From the evidence before us, the committee deem themselves justified in venturing the assertion that for every American engaged in agriculture and stock raising in Mexico, there were on an average at least five Mexicans employed by such Americans.

The committee from the evidence which they have obtained, such information being embraced in the testimony herewith reported, estimates that at the time of the overthrow of Diaz there were more than 15,000 Americans residing permanently and cultivating lands on small holdings, as distinguished from plantations and grazing-stock ranches, producing crops and raising stock in Mexico.

INDIVIDUAL AMERICANS IN OTHER OCCUPATIONS.

The Americans in Mexico, in addition to the occupations mentioned—that is to say, those engaged in agriculture, mining, and rail-roading—were engaged in the development of the other resources of Mexico in every State in the Republic.

They were engaged in the construction of irrigation enterprises upon a small scale and of a private character; some upon a much larger, and some upon an enormous scale, endeavoring to put in cultivation hundreds of thousands of acres of land which could not be cultivated except by the construction of dams, canals, locks, or other irrigation works, including reservoirs for the storage of water, etc.

Not only hundreds, but thousands, of Americans were employed in such work, both skilled and common labor, in construction and working for wages; others in overseeing and teaching the ignorant Mexican laborers; others, of course, in keeping accounts, commissaries, etc. Other Americans were engaged in developing water power; developing electric lighting plants furnishing power to the mines, mills, and for other purposes throughout the Republic; and those engaged in this work were not only employing and teaching vast numbers of Mexican laborers but were also employing Americans both as workmen and as foremen in all such enterprises.

Americans from 1906 to 1910 had carried the first sawmills into the northern portion of Mexico, packing same over the mountain trails upon mule back, and later constructing roads over which to transport heavier and better machinery; establishing up-to-date band mills, dry kilns, etc., with a daily capacity running into the hundreds of thousands of feet of lumber.

In these enterprises, likewise, large numbers of Mexicans were employed under the direction of a very large number of skilled American workmen, and working with them were Americans engaged in common labor.

American oil drillers had drilled every well producing oil in Mexico; had set up every rig; had put together every piece of machinery; had set up practically every hoist upon every mine, and erected the boilers for the making of steam.

It is needless to attempt to describe here the various enterprises in which Americans were engaged, except to convey some proper idea of the total number of Americans residing in Mexico at the time of the Diaz overthrow.

Again, to sum up; the committee think it safe to say that the aggregate of American population in Mexico in 1910-11 was fully that fixed by ex-Ambassador Wilson, that is to say, 75,000.

The investigation by the committee and the testimony taken, justify the committee in saying that there are not more than 12,000 at the present time in all these enterprises.

In answer to a request for specific information upon this subject, the State Department recently handed the committee a report from American consuls, of date September 16, 1919, by which it appears that there were at that date 11,864 Americans in the different consular districts in Mexico.

Of this number 4,000 are reported in the Tampico district, while in 1910 it is well known that there were not more than 1,200 Americans in the same district.

AMERICANS DID NOT REGISTER AT CONSULATES.

Prior to 1910, or to the overthrow of Diaz, not one American in three, operating or residing in the Republic of Mexico, ever recorded himself at the American consulate or was known to the American consul unless he became acquainted with him socially or called upon the consul for the verification of a deed or an instrument executed in Mexico concerning interests or property in the United States.

Americans going into Mexico across the border sought no passports and exhibited none, but traveled back and forth as freely as if the boundary line did not exist, except as they came in contact with the customs officers on either side of the line.

The consequence was that, however efficient the consul, in no single consulate in the Republic from the years, at least, 1884 to 1910 was it possible for the consul to have knowledge of the number of Americans in his district unless that number was very few and he was brought in personal contact with them.

When Americans were ordered out from time to time, from the year 1912 down to the present, at intervals of a few months, by their benevolent and protective Government at home, it has been suggested to them that they could go to the consul and leave a list of their property.

INCREASE OF POPULATION, TAMPICO DISTRICT.

It will be remembered that oil development in Mexico dates from about the year 1910, and, as hereinbefore stated, by paying taxes to the Carranza Government, however so often the amount of such taxes might be illegally raised, and by paying for protection to "Pelaez" or some other patriotic collector in the outlying districts, American oil companies at and around Tampico have been enabled to furnish approximately one-third of the oil used by the Allies in winning the war, and by extraordinary efforts in the face of most stupendous difficulties and at enormous additional expense are continuing, to some extent, to meet the increased needs for gasoline and oils in the economic development of this country.

Thus by their efforts they have been able to secure the services of additional Americans and have thus increased the American population of the Tampico consular district from 1,200 to 4,000.

An American who knows Mexico, and has known it for 20 years or more, when asked how many Americans he thinks remain in Mexico, will almost invariably reply, "Not more than 8,000." Such American has not considered the increase in the American population at Tampico, due to the causes just stated, and therefore when such increase in population is added to his figures his guess or estimate is approximately correct.

(A) NUMBER OF AMERICAN CITIZENS WHO HAVE BEEN KILLED IN MEXICO.

(B) NUMBER WHO HAVE BEEN KILLED IN THE UNITED STATES THROUGH ATTACKS OF RAIDING PARTIES FROM MEXICO OR THROUGH SHOTS FIRED ACROSS THE BORDER INTO THE UNITED STATES.

Again the committee were compelled to attempt to overcome difficulties, which can not readily be imagined by those not familiar with occurrences in Mexico during the last 10 years, in attempting to obtain entirely definite and reliable information upon which to report the number of Americans who have been killed in Mexico during the period mentioned; that is to say, from 1910 to the date of this report.

On September 9, 1919, after the appointment of your committee, and in answer to its request, the State Department furnished us with the number of "Claims filed for the alleged killing of American citizens, 73."

The committee, after devoting several months to the taking of individual testimony and to the comparison of same, together with the data furnished by the State Department and such other reliable data, documentary and otherwise, as it has been able to procure, can finally report definitely that not fewer than 461 Americans (see pp. A, B-I, this report) have been killed in Mexico owing to revolutionary disturbances in that country or during the period of such revolutionary disturbances, which, it is unnecessary to say here, have been continuous since 1910-11 to the present time.

You are respectfully referred to pages B-I of this report for an itemized list containing names and other data concerning said deaths and in confirmation of this report.

(B) NUMBER OF AMERICAN CITIZENS KILLED ON AMERICAN SOIL THROUGH ATTACKS BY RAIDING MEXICANS

Or by shots fired across the international boundary by Mexicans from Mexico, number, 126; as will be seen by the summary accompanying this report on page A. ✓

A large number of Americans who lost their lives within the State of Texas, as herein reported and more specifically set forth on pages A, J, K, were killed in the carrying out of what is known as the "plan of San Diego," which will be hereafter referred to, and during the period which was declared by the Supreme Court of the State of Texas, in the Arce case, on April 17, 1918, to be a period of war between the Carranza recognized de facto government of Mexico, and the United States of America.

Through the decision rendered in this case it became necessary for officers in charge of prisoners convicted of murder in the lower courts, to turn such prisoners loose and allow them to find their way back, or to escort them in safety, to the international boundary and to seek sanctuary for their crimes in the Republic of Mexico.

The large number of those killed in New Mexico, were killed during the Columbus raid in March, 1916, when followers of Pancho Villa led, as the evidence in the trial of some of his associates shows, by that redoubtable chieftain in person, in the dead hours of night, attacked American citizens in their homes in a town situated 3 miles from the international boundary and supposed to be guarded from danger by American troops encamped at the town.

The greater number of those citizens reported as killed in the State of Arizona, were killed during supposed battles between the contending forces upon Mexican soil, by shots fired from the Mexican side, while pursuing their peaceful avocations in the streets of their own cities, in a State of the American Union.

Of those so killed in the State of Arizona, the larger number were killed and wounded in the streets of Naco, where a street of ordinary width marks the dividing line between Sonora and Arizona.

American troops were stationed in and around the American town, for what purpose is not shown in the evidence except by the sworn testimony of Capt. Wheeler, sheriff of Cochise County, Ariz., and others. (See pt. 12, p. 1873.) This evidence discloses the fact that Wheeler was informed by the officer in command of American troops that should there be an attempt by himself or his posse or by the use of State troops to interfere with either or both Mexican factions for the purpose of saving lives of American citizens on American soil that, much to the regret of such officer, who delivered this ultimatum with tears running down his cheeks, he, the sheriff and his posse, or State troops to be sent at his request when attempting such purpose, would be arrested by the United States troops under command of the American officer in pursuance of his orders to that effect.

NUMBER OF AMERICAN CITIZENS WHO HAVE SUFFERED PERSONAL OUTRAGES IN MEXICO DURING THE PERIOD 1910 TO DATE.

Again, the difficulties which confronted the committee in the attempt to secure data of a reliable character which it might be justified in presenting in answer to the last above direction were almost insurmountable. As some of these difficulties will be hereafter more fully referred to only a few may now be necessarily mentioned, to wit:

First. Americans who have been humiliated and insulted and assaulted in a very large number of cases have continued to reside in Mexico, or having removed therefrom, have been so overwhelmed by loss of their life's savings that a more or less slight personal injury has never been referred to, and after a short period of time has come to be considered an entirely unimportant matter.

Second. As will hereafter be shown, the Mexican Government, through all its consuls and the embassy and by proclamation both in Mexico and the United States, warned all persons who might expect or desire to volunteer testimony before the committee, or whom the committee might desire to summon, that no such witness testifying before this committee would be allowed to return to the Republic of Mexico.

These instructions were of an official character (see pt. 12, p. 1837, of testimony) issued by the foreign office of Mexico and were observed by Mexican consuls located in all the cities of the United States, and particularly those along the border line between Mexico and this country.

All Mexican citizens or former Mexicans, fugitives or otherwise, in this country were by proclamations (see p. 1185 of testimony) coming from Mexico warned that should they give evidence before this committee they would be regarded as traitors to their own country.

In the statement furnished us on September 9, 1919, by the Department of State, and heretofore referred to and printed as a part of this report (p. 90), it will be seen that "Claims filed for all injuries to the person number 97."

From the evidence taken by the committee, documentary and by way of sworn testimony of witnesses, the committee are enabled to report, as will be seen by the summary (p. A in this report), 198 cases of personal injury.

AMOUNT OF PROPER INDEMNITY FOR MURDERS.

Of course it has been impossible for the committee to arrive at an amount which might be considered by a court, or by a claims commission, as the proper or just amount of compensation for the death of any individual.

The report of the State Department (p. 90 herein) shows that as before stated, 73 claims for damages for killing American citizens, have been filed with that department in 48 of which the amount of damages is set forth and the total amount of damage in said 48 cases is $2,317,375.

A simple calculation will show that the average amount of damage claimed in each case would approximate $50,000.

Under a joint resolution of Congress, approved August 9, 1912, a committee of United States Army officers was appointed to ascertain and report among other things the amount of damages for the killing of Americans on American soil by firing across the international line at Douglas, Ariz., and El Paso, Tex., in April and May, 1911.

Among those claiming damages were many who were not American citizens and many of the claims were for personal injuries not resulting in death.

Of the three American citizens killed, claims of whose heirs were proved up, were those of Celia Griffiths, for death of husband; A. R. Chandler, for death of son; and Joseph W. Harrington, for death of brother.

In the Griffiths case the commission assessed the damages at $15,000. One of the commissioners, however, recommended the amount of $32,000.

In the Chandler case the commission recommended $12,000, one of the members recommending $22,000.

In the Harrington case the commission recommended $15,000, one of the members recommending $25,000.

It may be interesting to note here that concerning the cases just referred to the Government of the United States declined to make diplomatic representations or other demands for the payment of damages, but did notify the claimants that their claims might be filed with the State Department or ambassador in Mexico City, who would transmit them to the foreign office in Mexico City to be dealt with as the Mexicans saw fit, at least for the time being.

Claimants were later notified that Mexico had appointed a consul, a Mr. Llorente, and a counsel, Mr. Richardson, to consider these claims at El Paso, Tex., and Douglas, Ariz., and that such claimants might present their claims, if they so desired, at such points.

That claimants did submit their claims to the parties mentioned, although doing so under strong protest filed with our State Department.

The result was, in the Griffiths case, for example, that the consul, Llorente, announced that Mexico would recommend damage in the amount of $2,000 and no more; that his reason for figuring this sum was the precedent established by the United States in the case of a Mexican killed while fleeing from an officer who had him under arrest on American soil, with proper warrant charging him with a felony and who, in the endeavor to recapture his escaped prisoner, was compelled to kill him. Claimants were politely informed that no more would be paid for an innocent American going about his business in the streets of his own city on American soil than had been received by Mexico for the death of a Mexican criminal fleeing from an officer who had arrested him.

It may also be interesting to note that neither Mr. Llorente nor the Mexican Government ever offered to pay the sum of $2,000 for the death of Griffiths.

Very recently the Congress of the United States has appropriated the sum of $71,000 for the payment of injury and death claims as assessed by this commission and the amounts so appropriated have been distributed to the proper parties.

Thus by the action of this commission in two cases $15,000 was assessed in each for death, and $12,000 in the third, or an average of $14,000. However, sums of $22,000, $25,000, and $32,000 were recommended by some members of the commission, or an average of $26,500 in each case.

To your committee it would appear that the maximum amount payable under any circumstances should be accorded the heirs and representatives of those Americans residing or being in Mexico conducting themselves as peaceful, law-abiding citizens, who without provocation or cause were murdered.

Thus the committee feel justified in stating that the aggregate amount of damage for the death of Americans, both those in Mexico and those who lost their lives on American soil under the circumstances described, should be in each case not less than $25,000, or a total of $14,675,000.

DAMAGES FOR PERSONAL INJURIES.

It will be discovered by reference to page 90, containing the data furnished by the State Department, that 97 claims in which damages have been fixed are on file with that department and that the total of such damages claimed is $1,476,629, or an average of approximately $17,000 in each case.

None of these personal injury cases have been paid except by the United States Government through the appropriation of $71,000 above referred to and with the further exception of one claim which was sued upon and paid in the amount of $4,000 by the Mexican consul, the attorney for the claimant in this case being at that time an assistant United States district attorney.

In so far as the committee is informed no death claim has been paid nor presented by this Government with demand for payment except the

CLAIM OF THE HEIRS OF JOHN B. MACMANUS, PRESENTED BY WILLIAM J. BRYAN AND PAID BY PANCHO VILLA AND ZAPATA
X WHILE IN POWER IN MEXICO CITY.

NOT PURPOSE OF COMMITTEE TO DETAIL INDIVIDUAL HORRORS.

It is not the purpose of this committee to recite individual cases of outrage nor through any other method to attempt to arouse the passion of the American people, but we suggest that in the quiet and peace of their own domicile members of the committee and others should take part 7, page 956, and read the story of Mrs. Susan Moore and her experience at Columbus, N. Mex.

Here this fine American woman, her house raided at night by the Villa bandits was held by two of them and surrounded by a mob of jeering, yelling villains while she saw her husband shot to death in her presence and within 3 feet of her person, her rings torn from her fingers and herself wounded.

Read the testimony of Miss Anita Whatley (part 8, p. 1083), a delicate little American girl helping to support her invalid father and family, dragged from her bed in the city of Parral in the dead hours of night and threatened with death unless she disclosed the hiding place of money; carried to the street and surrounded by brutes, one of whom sawed at her toes in the endeavor to compel her to disclose where the money was. Identifying the leader of the band, she says he was turned loose without any punishment. She remained in Mexico only to witness the loss of everything which represented the savings of her family, some of whom she is now attempting to support through a position which she holds with the department of education of the State of Texas. X

Read the testimony of Mrs. Sturgis, to be found in part 7, page 919 of the record, and imagine how you would feel were this one of the women of your family who endured the dreadful experiences related in this simple tale.

Read the experience of Mrs. James Carney, part 10, page 1506, and picture to yourself a little woman accustomed to all the luxury which wealth might give her and later to the comforts of the salary earned by her husband as superintendent of large constructions at Durango; she now earning a living for herself delivering messages for the Western Union Telegraph Co. on the streets of El Paso, Tex., while her husband is among those who have disappeared from off the face of the earth and nothing known of the circumstances except that he left Durango, with other Americans, in attempting to make his escape from the bandits by endeavoring to reach the coast, 150 kilometers distant. L

Now, remember that for years American Army and American officers have been placed along the border under strict orders to prevent any American going across the line into Mexico with arms of any character, and picture to yourself the following occurrences:

A brilliantly lighted banquet hall in a great hotel in the city of El Paso, Tex.; an assembly of gentlemen met to do honor to a great Mexican hero, Gen. Alvaro Obregon; compliments exchanged and assurances of renewed esteem and affection given; among the guests several mining men, including Charles R. Watson, superintendent of the Cusi Mining Co., who is desirous of returning to Chihuahua to reopen his mines.

Gen. Obregon urged Americans to go back and "gave the Americans very warm invitations to return to Mexico and open their industries there, stating that it was necessary for the peace of the country that workmen be given work" and he "reiterated a number of times the invitation that Americans go and open up mines, smelters, and other interests."

Then follow Watson and his 16 companions as they seek assurances of protection from their own Government and secure "salvo con-ductos," or safe conducts, from the Mexican authorities. They proceed to Chihuahua where, upon the insistence of some of the members of the expedition, an armed guard is requested of the commanding general, who informs them that 1,000 soldiers have been sent out ahead and that there is no possibility of danger.

Of course, they are not armed, because their country would not allow them, even if the Mexicans permitted it, to carry arms into Mexico.

Their train is stopped within a few miles of Chihuahua and these men are slaughtered like cattle and their naked bodies placed upon or strewn along the railroad right of way for American friends to seek out and identify a few days later.

Then to see what one American citizen not compelled to trust to the protection of his country nor to that of Mexicans, but relying upon himself can do, read the story of the fight at Brite's ranch on Christmas Eve, 1917.

See an old Texas ranger and a grandfather with his wife and daughters preparing a Christmas tree for his grandchildren; see the old frontiersman next morning attacked by Mexican bandits, first outside the house, with his Winchester killing two officers, and then with the assistance of his son, armed only with a shotgun loaded with bird shot, account for five more Mexicans and compel them to sue for terms of peace that they might escape his deadly fire and return without further fatalities to the Mexican side of the river.

X QUANTITY OF DAMAGES SUFFERED ON ACCOUNT OF THE DESTRUCTION, CONFISCATION, AND LARCENY OF PERSONAL PROPERTY AND THE CONFISCATION AND DEPRIVATION OF THE USE OF LANDS AND THE DESTRUCTION OF IMPROVEMENTS THEREON.

Before endeavoring to answer the above question it will be well enough to review as briefly as possible, the activities of Americans in the Republic of Mexico prior to the year 1910, from such official and other data as the committee have been able to secure upon the subject.

The great period of development in Mexico began with the years 1880-1882, and the period of American investment might be said to date subsequent to the year 1885.

In 1902 Consul General Andrew D. Barlow made a report to the State Department, in which among other things he said:

Five hundred million dollars gold is, in round figures, the amount of American capital invested in Mexico by 1,117 American companies, firms and individuals.

This amount has practically all been invested in the past quarter of a century, and about one-half of it has been invested within the past five years.

The impetus given to Mexico's industries by this enormous augmentation of the Nation's working capital accounts in no small degree for the great industrial progress which it has made during the past 25 years. With Mexico buying 56 per cent of all her imports from the United States and selling 80 per cent of all her exports to the United States, and with this enormous investment of American capital in Mexico, the commercial bond between the sister Republics is one that can hardly be broken. It is one, too, that is constantly growing in strength. The flow of American capital into this Republic has apparently only begun. Each year, Mexico buys more from, and sells more to, the United States. The community of interest is growing daily, and certainly makes for harmony between the two nations.

Gen. Barlow states that he was assisted in making his report by 38 consular officers of the United States in Mexico outside of the city; by 5 consular officers of Great Britain, and 5 consular officers of Germany in places where the United States had no consular representatives, and by a score of well informed individuals throughout the Republic.

Among other things it appears from this report that about 70 per cent of the total American investment of Mexico is in railroads.

He states that all of the important railroads in Mexico with the exception of the Interoceanic, running between Mexico City and Vera Cruz; the Mexican Railway, also running between the City of Mexico and Vera Cruz which is controlled by English capital; and the National Tehuantepec Railway, then under reconstruction by S. Pearson & Son, were owned by American capital.

He calls attention to the fact that $158,999,979.45 represents the amount which had actually been paid out up to date of his report, for the construction and equipment of the Mexican Central Railroad alone, and this by American capital.

He reports that in haciendas, ranches, and farms American capital was then invested to the extent of $28,000,000.

That $80,000,000 of American money was invested in mines.

That the fourth heaviest investment of American capital was then in manufactories and foundries.

Next in importance was the investment in banks, trust companies, investment companies, and money exchanges.

Next in order came assay offices, chemical laboratories, ore buyers, ore testers, smelters, and refiners.

He calls attention to the fact that all of Mexico's large smelters are operated by American capital.

He states that Americans have "of late" been building many electric light and power plants, gas plants, waterworks plants, telephone systems, and similar plants.

Gen. Barlow goes fully into the investments in the different States of the Republic, and his report is a very interesting one. It may be found commencing on page 433, Commercial Relations of the United States, volume 1, 1902.

At about the date of the outbreak of the Madero revolution a statement of the wealth of Mexico and the ownership of property therein was prepared by Marion Letcher, American consul at Chihuahua, and filed with our State Department. This statement was known to Mr. Letcher and is well known to others not to be correct, but will give some idea of the situation, and it is mainly correct as to percentages:

Valuations.

Class.	American.	English.	French.	Mexican.	All other.
Railway stocks.....	$235,464,000	$81,237,800	$125,440,000	$75,000
Railway bonds.....	408,926,000	87,680,000	$17,000,000	12,275,000	28,535,280
Bank stocks.....	7,850,000	5,000,000	31,000,000	31,950,000	3,250,000
Bank deposits.....	22,700,000	161,963,042	18,560,000
Mines.....	223,000,000	43,600,000	5,000,000	7,500,000	7,630,000
Smelters.....	26,500,000	7,200,000	3,000,000
National bonds.....	52,000,000	67,000,000	60,000,000	21,000,000
Timberlands.....	8,100,000	10,300,000	5,600,000	750,000
Ranches.....	3,150,000	2,700,000	14,000,000
Farms.....	980,000	760,000	47,000,000	1,250,000
Live stock.....	9,000,000	47,450,000	3,800,000
Houses and personal.....	4,500,000	680,000	127,020,000	2,760,000
Cotton mills.....	450,000	19,000,000	6,000,000	4,750,000
Soap factories.....	1,200,000	2,780,000	3,600,000
Tobacco factories.....	3,238,000	4,712,000	895,000
Breweries.....	600,000	178,000	2,822,000	1,250,000
Factories.....	9,600,000	2,780,000	3,270,200	3,000,000
Public utilities.....	760,000	8,000,000	5,155,000	275,000
Stores:
Wholesale.....	2,700,000	110,000	7,000,000	2,800,000	14,270,000
Retail.....	1,780,000	30,000	680,000	71,235,000	2,175,000
Oil business.....	15,000,000	10,000,000	6,500,000
Rubber industry.....	15,000,000	4,500,000	2,500,000
Professional.....	3,600,000	850,000	1,560,000	1,100,000
Insurance.....	4,000,000	2,000,000	3,500,000
Theaters.....	20,000	1,575,000	500,000
Hotels.....	260,000	1,730,000	716,000
Institutions.....	1,200,000	125,000	350,000	74,000,000	200,000
Total.....	1,057,770,000	321,302,800	143,446,000	792,187,242	118,535,380

NOTE.—From the testimony taken and other evidence in the possession of the committee, the committee reports that the total amount of American investments in Mexico in 1911 were more nearly $1,500,000,000 than the total set forth in the column above, $1,057,770,000.

TOTAL WEALTH AND APPROXIMATE PROPORTIONS, AMERICAN, BRITISH, MEXICAN.

The total wealth of Mexico as it appears in this table was $2,434,241,422, of which Americans owned $1,057,770,000; English, $321,302,800; and the Mexicans, $793,187,242. The figures given in the table as to British ownership should, from the best information in my possession, be increased from $321,000,000 to at least $800,000,000. The figures for American investment in mines should be increased very largely.

Mexican, largely in lands, town lots, etc.—Of the Mexican ownership over one-half was in lands, town lots, bank deposits, and bank stocks.

American investments are in tax-paying, labor-employing operations.—American investments in individual agriculture holdings are hereinafter set forth. The balance of the American investments was in railroads, mines, factories, oil, rubber, and property of this class, i. e., producing and labor-employing, tax-paying business—with the exception of about $50,000,000 in national bonds.

The Americans owned 78 per cent of the mines, 72 per cent of the smelters, 58 per cent of the oil, 68 per cent of the rubber business.

Railroads—American and English capital—Eighty-eight per cent are railroads.—The total railroad mileage was about 16,000 miles, in which American and English capital was invested (to extent about 88 per cent) and which their capitalists had constructed to that extent.

The Letcher table shows only an investment of about $3,150,000 in ranches and about $13,000,000 in timberlands, farms, houses and lots, and personal property.

This statement is entirely incorrect as specific testimony before this committee shows that more than 3,000 American families of an average of five persons each owned their own homes either in colonies or in separate locations, all of whom were engaged in agriculture and that the actual average loss to such families has been approximately $10,000 each, or a total in this one item of $30,000,000, not taking into consideration the value of the land nor of the houses and other improvements which could not or have not been destroyed.

In this connection we are not considering the very large amounts invested in cattle ranches devoted purely to stock raising, nor in estimating this loss have we included the loss upon rubber, coffee, sugar, and other like large plantations.

ADDITIONAL LOSSES IN RAILROADS, ETC.

The testimony will show that in addition to the $30,000,000 lost by these smaller agriculturists who have been driven out of Mexico and a comparatively few of whom have been able to return, the loss to the national railroads of Mexico have been, at a conservative estimate, $80,000,000 through destruction not only of rolling stock but through the destruction of the actual corpus of the property itself by the burning of the bridges, destruction of railroad stations, sidings, etc., the tearing up of steel and burning it, so that when straightened for temporary use it is unsafe for traffic.

The total mileage of the railroads in Mexico in 1910-11 was approximately 24,600 kilometers, of which a little less than 14,000 kilometers, is included in the national roads, as to the loss upon which direct testimony was given, showing as just stated, damage to the amount of $80,000,000. Other testimony shows that the remaining 10,000 kilometers not known as the national roads have suffered at least an equal amount of damage per kilometer; that is to say, approximately $60,000,000 to such roads, or a total of railroad loss alone in the amount of $140,000,000; that is to say, that it would require at least $140,000,000 now to place the twenty-four thousand plus kilometers of railways in Mexico in the condition in which they were found in 1910-11.

DAMAGES TO OIL AND MINING COMPANIES ONLY ESTIMATED.

In so far as the testimony adduced before the committee is concerned, we have little or none and have sought none concerning the actual loss to oil companies through confiscation of their properties; through damage to their business; through destruction of their wells and consequent loss of oil, nor upon any other account whatsoever; except that the testimony shows the cash loss to pay rolls and by virtue of robberies of actual cash to these companies within the last few years, has amounted to more than $233,833.

The mining companies, in so far as the committee knows, have made no claims for damages through the State Department and few of their representatives have come before the committee except as upon page 1429, part 9, testified to.

Through other evidence the committee has knowledge not only of the closing down of producing mines due to revolutionary acts and nability to get supplies, etc., but of the further fact that smelter reduction works, improvements upon and around mines, mining machinery of all classes, etc., have been destroyed all over the Republic.

The closing down of an operating mine means not only loss of time and interest upon the investment, but aside from any actual destruction by vandalism means the filling of shafts with water, the caving in of underground works, decay of mine timbers, etc.

The committee are privately informed by one of the officials of a great American company engaged in mining and other development of like character in Mexico, that its losses have amounted to approximately $25,000,000 during the last 10 years.

Another mining company in which more than 8,000 Americans are interested, has, we are informed, paid out approximately $1,500,000 in blackmail or bribes to prevent destruction of millions of dollars worth of property invested in improvements, etc., in connection with its work.

DAMAGES OTHER PROPERTY.

Power lines have been cut; power plants destroyed; irrigation works dynamited; canals cut; factories burned; railroad and mining contractors and subcontractors' supplies, tools, stock, and equipment, etc., destroyed; banks, trust companies, investment companies, money exchanges, etc., looted of cash and put out of business; brokers, commission men, general agents, dentists, wholesale and retail merchants have lost their investments and as well their books of trade, implements of their profession, their stocks of merchandise, etc.

Those who have attempted to continue business by going back to their locations when temporary peace appeared to justify their return, have been held up and compelled to pay blackmail to every new bandit and tribute to every old one in their community.

The committee, however, have been particularly interested in and have largely confined their investigation to the losses of the individual American, which losses, in proportion to those of the large corporations or large capitalists, have been as 100 to 1.

The larger corporations, as shown by the evidence in the case, have been able, through the employment of Mexican officials, to secure even the use of an army for the protection of their properties, while the individuals or colonists located in an outlying district have been compelled to lose a life's savings and to witness the murder or outrage of their friends or their families.

Oil companies have been obliged to pay to Candido Aguilar, son-in-law of Carranza, first, ransom or blackmail or exactions for the protection of their properties, and when he was driven off have, through payments to Pelaez amounting to $30,000 per month, been able to secure his protection against other hands as well as against Carranza.

American railroad conductors; firemen; locomotive engineers; brakemen and other railroad employees, in one instance alone to the number of 500, have been run out of Mexico never to return, with the total loss of all they might have invested in their homes in Guadalajara or elsewhere.

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

CORPORATIONS PAYING FOR PROTECTION TO PROPERTY NOT ALWAYS ABLE TO SECURE SAME FOR THEIR EMPLOYEES.

Individuals in the employ of corporations have been robbed, mistreated, and murdered because protection extended to the corporation property proper was by the bandits not always extended to the individual in the employ of the corporation; and this notwithstanding the established fact that our corporations have done everything in their power to protect their employees, and to ransom them when seized by bandits.

MEXICAN PROPAGANDA.

Carranza propagandists in this country have filled the papers with attacks upon "predatory interests" who were seeking intervention in Mexico for selfish purposes.

Churches have resounded with denunciation from the pulpits of the same "predatory interests" who—

Desired to have not only the treasure of the United States poured out, but the blood of its sons spilled for the protection and accretion of their ill-gotten "dirty dollars" in the Republic of Mexico.

THIS COMMITTEE PRESENTS CASE OF INDIVIDUAL AMERICAN.

Where has the voice been lifted in behalf of the common, every day, homemaking, honest, industrious American with his family, teaching the Mexican modern methods of agriculture and handicraft, who has, while tied to a tree, seen his daughter raped and his wife disemboweled in his presence?

The country and the Congress of the United States having heard from those American interests who have been able to secure a hearing through the press and having heard from those good friends of Carranza who have been conscientiously or unconscientiously, sincerely or hypocritically, directing his propaganda and assisting in the expenditure of his funds set aside for propaganda purposes, this committee determined to present, as it is endeavoring to present, the case of the individual American who has received no protection from his Government and only through this medium can make his loss and his sufferings known to the public.

The summary of losses under this heading may be found by reference to page 89 of this report. The total thereof, as found in the evidence, is $50,481,133. (See p. 89, summary total losses.)

NATURE AND AMOUNT OF PRESENT HOLDINGS AND PROPERTIES IN MEXICO OF CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES.

The nature and amount of the present holdings of American citizens in Mexico can only be ascertained by reference to the facts hereinbefore submitted and by deducting the losses herein set forth, except in that, under the Mexican mining law, taxes upon mining property are payable every three months and same must be paid by the owner or his attorney in fact, in person, either in the City of Mexico or in the headquarters of the district in which his mine is situated.

Failing payment of such taxes within three months after same are due, title to the property is forfeited and anyone else who-so-ever can relocate same and take it over, together with any improvements of whatever kind or character attached to any portion of the property, including, of course, all development work, etc.

The law as to real estate in the different States provides also for the forfeiture of property for nonpayment of taxes.

The person who, or corporation which, has been able to secure an attorney, could change him whenever the Government changed, or secure a new attorney with every change of Government and thus have re-presentation before the tax office, and being financially able to make the payments have been able to prevent legal forfeiture.

The individual prospector and small mine owner, living himself probably upon his mine in an inaccessible district in Mexico, if he lived to reach the coast or border, has been compelled to leave Mexico and lose his life's savings and work invested in his property, not having the money with which to employ an attorney on the ground; and not able to pay over and over, again and again, the amount of taxes claimed to be due as the tax collector came in or faded out of office every few days, has lost forever the title to his property.

Of course, it may be possible that if the American lives long enough to see some responsible government established in Mexico and to see an administration here in power which will endeavor to assist in enforcing his legal claims, some of these forfeitures may be set aside.

Of course, if the real estate owner enjoys the same good fortune, he may, before the weight of years has bowed his head too low—or possibly some heir to his misfortunes may—regain right to the possession of what was once an orange grove or a beautiful wheat field—not recognizable now because the orange trees have been chopped and burned, and its location, as well as that of the wheat field, grown up in cactus, cat claw, and mesquite.

GENERALLY ANY AND ALL ACTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO AND ITS CITIZENS IN DEROGATION OF THE RIGHTS OF THE UNITED STATES OR OF ITS CITIZENS.

In considering the above question it is necessary to separate the propositions and discuss the same under different heads:

First. The acts of the citizens of Mexico in "derogation" of the rights of citizens of the United States.

Second. The acts of the Mexican Government in "derogation" of the rights of American citizens.

Third. The acts of the Mexican Government in "derogation" of the rights of the Government of the United States.

Fourth. Where the fault lies, i. e., whether with the Mexican people or the Mexican Government, or with the American people or their Government, or with both the Mexican people and their Government and the American people and their Government, or either.

THE PEOPLE OF MEXICO AND THEIR GOVERNMENT.

We must first have a background before the detail of the picture can be made to stand out clearly.

Mexico is an Indian empire and not properly a Latin American country—although the Spanish, in one form or another, is the common language.

We are attaching hereto a copy of the "Orozco y Berra Tribal (Indian) map of Mexico."

At first view this map would appear as though it were simply a map of the present political subdivisions of the so-called Mexican Republic. Closer inspection will show that it is intended to represent the territory of separate and distinct Indian families, with the name of each in Spanish, given in the proper geographical location.

Now, imagine a greater or lesser percentage of foreign blood, principally Spanish, mixed with this original 57 varieties of Indian blood, the Spanish blood not being renewed or restrengthened, but growing weaker from generation to generation, and one may dimly perceive the outlines of the racial problems of Mexico.

We urge you to read the following from "Mexico in 1827" by H. G. Ward, chargé d'affaires Great Britain in Mexico, 1825-1827; two volumes, London, 1828 (pp. 28 et seq.).

Before the revolution this population was divided into seven distinct castes.

1. The old Spaniards, designated as Gachupines, in the history of the civil wars.
2. The Creoles, or whites of pure European race, born in America, and regarded by the old Spaniards as natives.
3. The Indians, or indigenous copper-colored race.
4. The Mestizos, or mixed breed of whites and Indians, gradually merging into Creoles, as the cross with the Indian race became more remote.

5. The mulattoes, or descendants of whites and Negroes.
6. The Zambos, or Chinos, descendants of Negroes and Indians.
7. The African Negroes, either manumitted or slaves.

Of these castes, the three first and the last were pure, and gave rise, in their various combinations, to the others; which again were subdivided, ad infinitum, by names expressing the relation borne by each generation of its descendants to the white (quateroons, quinteroons, etc.), to which, as the ruling color, any approximation was desirable.

The principal seat of the white population of Mexico is the table land, toward the center of which the Indian race is likewise concentrated (in the intendancies of La Puebla, Mexico, Guanajuato, Oaxaca, and Valladolid) while the northern frontier is inhabited almost entirely by whites, and descendants of whites, before whom it is supposed that the Indian population must have retired, at the time of the conquest. In Durango, N. Mex., and the provincias internas, the pure Indian breed is almost unknown; in Sonora it is again found, because the conquerors there overtook the last tribes of the original inhabitants, who had not yet placed the River Gila (lat. 33 N.) between themselves and the Spanish arms. The coasts are inhabited, both to the east and west, by mulattoes and Zambos, or at least, by a race in which a mixture of African blood prevails. It was in these unhealthy regions that the slaves formerly imported into Mexico were principally employed, the natives of the table land being unable to resist the extreme heat of the climate.

They have multiplied there in an extraordinary manner, by intermarriage with the Indian race, and now form a mixed breed, admirably adapted to the tierra caliente, but not possessing, in appearance, the characteristics either of the New World, or of the Old.

The Mestizos (descendants of natives and Indians) are found in every part of the country; indeed, from the very small number of Spanish women who at first visited the New World, the great mass of the population has some mixture of Indian blood. Few of the middle classes (the lawyers, the Curas, or parochial clergy, the artisans, the smaller landed proprietors, and the soldiers) could prove themselves exempt from it; and now that a connection with the aborigines has ceased to be disadvantageous few attempt to deny it. In my sketch of the revolution, I always include this class under the denomination of Creoles; as sharing with the whites of pure Spanish descent the disadvantages of that privation of political rights, to which all natives were condemned, and feeling, in common with them, that enmity to the Gachupines (or old Spaniards) which the preference constantly accorded to them could not fail to excite.

Next to the pure Indians, whose number in 1803, was supposed to exceed two millions and a half, the Mestizos are the most numerous caste; it is, however, impossible to ascertain the exact proportion which they bear to the whole population, many of them being, as I have already stated, included amongst the pure whites, who were estimated, before the revolution, at 1,200,000, including from seventy to eighty thousand Europeans established in different parts of the country.

Of the mulattos, Zambos, and other mixed breeds, nothing certain is known.

It will be seen by this sketch that the population of New Spain is composed of very heterogeneous elements; indeed, the numberless shades of difference which exist amongst its inhabitants are not yet by any means correctly ascertained.

The Indians, for instance, who appear at first sight to form one great mass, comprising nearly two-fifths of the whole population, are divided and subdivided amongst themselves, in the most extraordinary manner.

They consist of various tribes, resembling each other in color and in some general characteristics, which seem to announce a common origin, but differing entirely in language, custom, and dress. No less than 20 different languages are known to be spoken in the Mexican territory, and many of these are not dialects, which may be traced to the same root, but differ as entirely as languages of Slavonic and Teutonic origin in Europe. Some possess letters which do not exist in others, and in most there is a difference of sound, which strikes even the most unpracticed ear. The low, guttural pronunciation of the Mexican or Aztec contrasts singularly with the sonorous Otomi,¹ which prevails in the neighboring State of Valladolid, and this again is said to be totally unlike the dialect of some of the northern tribes. There is not, perhaps, a question better worthy of the consideration of philosophers than the elucidation of this extraordinary anomaly in the history of the Indian race; nothing is known of the mode in which America was peopled, except the fact that the tide of population has set constantly from north to south.

¹ Wherever the Aztec tongue is in use the letter "r" is unknown, while in the Otomi dialect it occurs almost in every word. Thus we have Popocatepetl, Istacchuatli, Tenochtitlan, and that unpronounceable word given by Humboldt and signifying "venerable priest, whom I cherish as a father," Notlaxomahuistopixcatstin, all Aztec, and all without an "r," while in Valladolid the prevailing names are Ocambaro, Puruandiro, Zitacuaro, and Cinsapeuaro, in all of which "r" bears a prominent part.

In Bulletin 44, United States Bureau of American Ethnology, "Indian Languages of Mexico and Central America," the map hereto attached is used as a basis, with the remark:

For Mexico, Orozco y Berra's map and conclusions are used as a basis, and it will be found, though the original authorities so far as accessible have been examined, that there has been occasion for but few and comparatively slight changes.

An examination of the map accompanying this bulletin will show 30 different distinct linguistic families of Indians, as established to the satisfaction of Thomas and Swanton, while perusal of the contents will disclose that approximately 20 to 30 more are in doubt as to whether they are distinct languages spoken by distinct and different races or tribes or whether they are mixtures of some of the other languages or offshoots or derivatives from same.

The index of linguistic families, tribes and settlements number approximately 850, as set forth on pages 101-108.

It is not necessary to cite other authorities here, but one of the most interesting works upon the subject is "The History of Mexico" by Francisco B. Clavigero, in two volumes, published in London, 1777. (English translation by Charles Cullen.)

Speaking generally, it is sufficient, as an illustration to call attention in passing to the great distinctive difference between the original Indian tribes of Chihuahua and Sonora to the Concho River, with those of the west coast through the State of Sinaloa, and to the Indians of the east coast and those of central and southern Mexico.

The Indians of the north and northwest were those of the Opata, Pima, "Tarahumar" families; of the Yaqui, Mayo families, and were as different and distinct from the Mayas of the south, the Mexicans of the valley, and others of central and eastern Mexico in everything except color, as are Negroes from whites, or, at the very least, as are the Japanese from the Chinese.

Very interesting testimony along this line has been offered by William Gates (part 19) and others.

A comparison of the political map of Mexico showing the different subdivisions as recognized to-day, and of the racial-tribal map of Orozco y Berra, will at once prove interesting as establishing the fact that the political subdivisions, although differing greatly in some respects, yet, in general, have followed very nearly the racial-tribal geographical divisions as agreed upon by ethnologists, linguists, and historians.

That this discussion is of more than general interest will be appreciated when present conditions in Mexico are considered and it is learned that the Army Intelligence Department of the United States War Department are constantly making such reports as of November 8, 15, 22, 29, December 13, 1919, etc., setting out in detail information as to the movements of the Yaqui Indians of Sonora and Sinaloa.

By reference to these reports it may be seen that a large percentage of the women and children of Yaquis are in the United States, and that on November 18 it was estimated that almost the entire force of 4,000 Yaqui Indians, reported at that date, might be converted into a fighting body if they possessed the necessary arms and ammunition.

That they were a constant menace to the Mexican Federal forces, who were concentrating around Nacozari, Moctezuma, and other places.

That at least 400 Yaquis were scattered in small bands in the neighborhood of these last-mentioned places.

That approximately 800 were under arms near Esperanza.

That it is necessary to carry heavier train guards on the Southern Pacific from Esperanza to Guaymas.

That altogether there were over 2,000 armed Yaquis in the State.

That in the latter part of November the Federal Government moved between 1,000 and 1,500 Federal Yaqui soldiers out of the State fearing they would join their tribesmen in attacks upon Federal forces.

That Mayo Indian soldiers were sent in to take the place of their cousins, the Yaquis, but that little confidence could be placed upon them in a campaign against the Yaquis.

That the Yaquis were constantly passing from the United States into Mexico with ammunition purchased at the various mining camps where they had been at work.

That Federal forces in the State on November 22 were inadequate to cope with the situation.

That on December 13 a large body of several hundred were said to be a short distance south of the international line and east of Nogales, while another large body was reported near Ajo, Ariz., both believed to be anxious to get into the United States for the purpose of securing ammunition, etc.

That for the first time in the history of Sonora Yaquis, as reported on November 29, had invaded the territory east of the Bavispe River in northeast Sonora.

That southwest of La Colorada region 500 Yaquis, under Chief Mori, were on the same date killing and robbing everywhere.

That Buenavista, formerly Sonoran capital; Cumaripa, Realito; and most of La Dura were on November 29 deserted and in ashes.

And most significant is the statement of November 22, and the statement of December 13, the former—

That the Yaquis seldom bother Americans when they can be distinguished from Mexicans, and the latter—

That since the increase of intervention talk, many Yaquis, well acquainted with Americans, have reiterated previous statements to the effect that, in the event of intervention, they may be counted on as friends of the United States; that, upon due official notice of intervention, they would lend the invading troops any assistance of which they were capable. They intimate that all they would ask in return for this assistance would be reasonable recognition of their claims to the Yaqui Valley territory and freedom from persecution by the Mexicans.

YAQUI PRONUNCIAMIENTO.

In the Army Intelligence daily report of May * * * 1920, is included as an appendix an appeal signed by Genls. Julian Cosari, Manuel Periac; First Capt. Victoriano Azul, Second Capt. Pipachola (chiefs of "bronco" Yaquis) to the townspeople of "Rio Chico" and "Movas."

This appeal recites among other things that "The Yaqui tribe informs you that"—

"Poor descendants of our kindred tribes, the Pimas, the Papagoes, and the Opatas are miserable and afflicted, oppressed by the tyrannical Government which is compelling us to kill one another. * * * These are men without an atom of conscience or the laws of humanity * * * This tribe must remain in revolt. If you wish peace with us, we also wish peace with you. * * * You must not hurt the Yaquis; then the Yaquis will not injure anyone, and so peace and tranquility will reign.

As long as the Government continues selling our race * * * and insists upon withholding our lands, the struggle will continue relentless and bitter. The Government is to blame for the men who take us by force to war, and it must be punished. * * * We seek an agreement only with all the poor who live by their daily toil here and outside the Government (as outlaws), formerly, in the time of Refugio Tanori, the leaders of the Pimas and Opatas in those times came, those people respected us and helped us to fight the invaders of our river as far as the Mayo River, and we did the same for them. Remembering these days, we invite you, if you so desire, to join with us, * * * and if you accept our humble proposition you will not need to flee when you see our people. * * * No confidence can be put in the Government, because the Government in the year 1916 past offered us peace and the restoration of our lands. We in all good faith believed that promise * * * and traveled to Lencho * * * and there we were awaiting the realization of this promise. While we slept the Government fell upon our camp, killing children, women, and old men. Such cruelty had never even been experienced in the time of Porfirio Diaz."

The date of this occurrence was May 25, 1917, at 4 o'clock in the morning.

"Now we are convinced that the Government has no word. * * * With such proofs, we care for no further arrangement with the Government, but with you, the poor of these towns, who always keep your word."

And this is the period, November and December, 1919, when the press of Mexico and its able assistants in this country were proclaiming that peace and order and law and prosperity prevailed over Mexico, and that Carranza had "made good."

SHORT SKETCH OF HISTORY OF MEXICO.

With this preliminary sketch of the population of Mexico, let us glance now at the history of that so-called Republic, or rather, at the chronological history of Mexico from the year 1810 down to the present year.

NORMAL MEXICO.

1810: September 15. Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla, together with Allende, Aldama, Abasolo, and other officers raised the "Grito," and proclaimed independence at Dolores, State of Guanajuato.

1811: May 21. Hidalgo captured at Acatita de Berjan. July 31. Shot at Chihuahua. Jose Maria Morelos y Pavon, a priest, took up the work of Hidalgo; defeated the Spaniards in numerous engagements and made much headway against them, capturing various cities and overran a large portion of the country.

1812: September 14. First Mexican Congress organized at Chilpancingo, State of Guerrero, with Morelos y Pavon as guiding spirit.

November 6. Declaration of independence issued and a constitution later adopted.

1813: Revolution continued, but Morelos finally captured.

1814: Fighting continues.

1815: December 22. Morelos shot by Spaniards in the City of Mexico.

1816 to 1821: Fighting continues with varying fortunes. Gens. Mina, Guerrero, and Bravo being the leading spirits among the revolutionists.

1821: January 10. Guerrero, chief of the revolutionary forces, and Gen. Agustin Iturbide, commanding the royalist forces, had conference and joined forces.

February 24. "Plan of Iguala" promulgated; Iturbide taking command of the joint forces and capturing Morelia, Puebla, Queretaro, and other towns.

September 27. Iturbide entered Mexico in triumph after treaty with viceroy Don Juan O'Donju at Cordoba. A government was established consisting of a regency of three members with Iturbide as President.

1822: February 24. Congress met in the City of Mexico and elected Iturbide Emperor of Mexico. He was crowned on July 21 in the cathedral, with the title "Agustin I."

December 22. Santa Anna raised revolt at Veracruz and declared a republic. Desperate internecine war ensued, followed by anarchy and desolation, which, as historians say, continued for 50 years (until the period of Porfirio Diaz).

1823: May. Emperor Iturbide abdicated after his armies were defeated. A provisional government was established.

1824: Iturbide returned to Mexico, arrested, and on July 19 shot by order of the Tamaulipas Legislature, at the town of Padilla.

October 10. Gen. Guadalupe Victoria (real name Fernandez) became President of Mexico with a constitution. Victoria was really Mexico's first President.

1825: January 1. Congress met under the new constitution and England and the United States recognized the independence of Mexico.

1828 to 1830: Continued conflicts and contests, Pedraza, Guerrero, and Bustamente each claiming to be President. Santa Anna most prominent figure in all schemes and uprisings.

1833 to 1835: Civil war raged and anarchy reigning.

1835: Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna became dictator and abolished the constitution.

1836: Texas secedes and captures Santa Anna.

1837: Santa Anna returned to Mexico and resumed dictatorship.

1839: Bravo became President. Civil war, accompanied by anarchy.

1841 to 1844: Santa Anna again dictator.

1844: Santa Anna banished and Canalizo took his place.

1845: Herrera became President. Revolutions continued.

1846: January 2. Paredes became President by election of a Junta in Mexico City and left the government in the hands of Gen. Bravo in July, while he proceeded to lead the army against the United States.

1846: July. Paredes and Bravo overthrown and Mariano Salas becomes President and the constitution of 1824 reestablished.

1846: September 15. Santa Anna becomes President.

1847: War with the United States. Gomez Farias in charge of Government, Santa Anna leading the army. Santa Anna resigned office. Gomez Farias appointed Pedro Anaya acting President and again headed the army against United States forces. After defeat at Cerro Gordo. Santa Anna resumed control, later resigning the Presidency, and was succeeded—

1847: By Gen. Anaya, under election by Congress, holding office from November until 1848: January. Manuel de la Pena y Pena, president of the supreme court, became President.

1848: June 3. Gen. Jose Joaquin Herrera became President the second time.

1848: Treaty of peace, etc., signed. California and New Mexico ceded to the United States, in payment Mexico receiving $15,000,000.

1850 to 1851: Gen. Mariano Arista elected President and installed—

1851: January 1.

1852: Juan Bautista Ceballos becomes President by congressional election following the exit of Arista. Ceballos dissolves Congress and elected Juan Mugica y Osorio, who declined to qualify, and Ceballos resigned the Presidency; Manuel Maria Lombardini was seated as acting President. Lombardini called an election for the purposes and 1853: April 15. Santa Anna again become President.

1853: Santa Anna, by proclamation, becomes perpetual dictator, December 16. Gen. Juan Alvarez immediately raised a revolution. Alvarez was a full-blood Indian and a patriot. The revolution continued, and Santa Anna escaped, leaving—

1855: August 9. A triumvirate government composed of the president of the supreme court and two generals. A few days later Gen. Romulo Diaz de la Vega became acting President by coup d'état and consent of the governing triumvirate.

1855: Gen. Martin Carrera became President, resigning within a month.

1855: Gen. Diaz de la Vega again became President.

1855: November 1. Representatives convened in Cuernavaca and elected Gen. Juan Alvarez, who became President. Alvarez reached the capital with a bodyguard of pure-blood Indians and retained them around him for protection.

1855: December. Alvarez resigned and Comonfort became President.

1856: Rupture with Spain.

1857: February 5. Gen. Comonfort again elected and declared President.

1857: December 11. Comonfort proclaimed himself dictator.

1858: Benito Juarez revolted. Revolution reigned supreme.

1858 to 1859: Zuloaga overthrew Comonfort and became President.

1858 to 1859: Miramon took Zuloaga's place and became President. Miramon overthrown and Zuloaga again became President.

1858: Juarez Government recognized by the United States.

1860: Benito Juarez captures capital and declares himself President.

1861: May. Benito Juarez elected and took office as constitutional President.

1861: October. Treaty between England, France, and Spain, known as the "Treaty of London," signed, under the provisions of which the three nations were to send naval and military forces to Mexico to seize ports and military positions on the coast, etc. The Government at Washington, being invited to take part, positively declined on the ground that it would pursue its usual policy of refraining from alliances with foreign powers.

1862: England and Spain withdrew their forces, but France continued the war.

1863: The French captured the City of Mexico and Maximilian accepted the offer of the Crown of Mexico.

1864: June. Maximilian crowned Emperor at Mexico City.

1865-1867: Juarez in revolution, but defeated on all sides. United States demanded the withdrawal of the French Army.

1867: Maximilian captured and shot at Queretaro by Juarez.

1868: Juarez proclaimed himself President.

1868-69: Revolutions followed pronunciamiento by Santa Anna and others.

1872: July 18. Sebastian Lerdo de Tejada succeeded Juarez, who died.

1873: New constitution adopted practically following the constitution of 1857.

1873-1875: Revolutions in various parts of the country.

1876: Sebastian Lerdo de Tejada overthrown.

ABNORMAL MEXICO.

1877: Gen. Porfirio Diaz became President.

In 1905, or just shortly prior thereto, William Jennings Bryan, recently Secretary of State of the United States, in a book published by him bearing the title Under Other Flags, page 202, referring to the administration of Porfirio Diaz, and to that great man, says:

The third great man produced by the Mexican Republic is the president. With the exception of one term he has been president since 1876, during which time he has shown wonderful ability, and it is doubtful if there is in the world to-day a chief executive of greater relative progress than the Mexican people have made under the administration of Porfirio Diaz.

Education has been promoted, law and order established, agriculture developed, commerce stimulated, and nearly every section of the country connected by railroad with the capital. While there are many able and strong men upon whom the mantle of President might worthily fall, he has been so remarkably successful and has such a hold upon all classes of people that he will doubtless remain at the head of the Government as long as he lives—the people would hardly consent to his withdrawal even if he desired to lay down the responsibilities of the position.

On pages 181-183 Mr. Bryan says:

I found * * * Fifth. That President Diaz is entirely deserving of the encomium... bestowed upon him by his own people, by resident Americans, and by visitors. He has a genius for public affairs, understands the conditions and needs of his people, and has their confidence to a degree seldom enjoyed by an executive, either hereditary or elective.

On page 184, referring to education, he says:

"Mexico is making substantial progress in education. The public schools are free and attendance is compulsory. * * * In the State of Mexico the number of schools has increased more than 100 per cent within the last 10 years, and the number of pupils in attendance shows an equal increase. * * * It was our good fortune to be invited to witness the distribution of prizes for the schools of the Federal district. Nothing impressed me more than the scene here presented. President Diaz delivered the awards to several hundred boys and girls. The Indian and the Spaniard, the rich and the poor, all mingle together in the public schools and vie with each other for the prizes. The State not only furnishes instruction in the elementary branches, but provides industrial training for both boys and girls, normal schools for teachers, and professional schools for students of law and medicine. President Diaz recently quoted a remark by Von Moltke in praise of the German school-teacher and also pointed out the necessity for educated mothers. He recognizes, as did Jefferson, that popular education is vital in a republic, and largely through his efforts Mexico sees a yearly increase in the number of those who are capable of intelligent participation in government."

We are constantly being informed by recognized prorevolutionists, or pro-Carranza propagandists, that Diaz did nothing for education and left his people in the ignorance which he apparently wished them to remain in, the inference being that so long as they were without education they would be subservient to his will.

However mistaken Mr. Bryan may have been while Secretary of State, when endeavoring to deal, or to refrain from dealing with Mexico, statistics will prove the correctness of his statement made in 1905 as to education under Diaz. If the American people would think or read for themselves and refuse to permit ignorant or biased propagandists to misinform them, they would readily understand that the public-school system of Mexico was upon practically the same basis as that of the United States and of the different States of this Union, to wit, the National Government in Mexico had nothing more to do with the primary public schools in the States of Mexico than has the National Government of the United States at Washington to do with the primary public schools of the States of this Union. The Central Government of Mexico under Diaz dealt directly with the national schools, universities, etc., and dealt directly, more or less, with the schools in the territories and in the District of Mexico, which district corresponds exactly to our District of Columbia. The States each dealt with its own school problems and each established and maintained and assisted in maintaining not only the public schools in the public-school districts throughout such State, but also the State normal, agricultural, and other institutions. As early as 1865 colleges of law, medicine, and engineering were created in Mexico City and were successful from the beginning. Professional schools were also established in the more important provincial capitals. In 1874 there were 8,226 primary schools in Mexico, with an attendance of 360,000 pupils; 603 of these schools were supported by the National Government, 5,240 by municipalities, 2,260 by private enterprises, etc. The committee is here referring to an article in the Encyclopedia Britannica for the purpose of condensing these statements. Reference to the testimony offered in this case will substantiate the statements contained in said articles, which, for the sake of brevity, we will further refer to. In 1889 recommendations were made by the National Congress for public education and were followed by congressional action requiring free and compulsory education in the Federal district and national territory. On the 19th day of May, 1896, a general public educational law was promulgated which provided further regulations and outlined a comprehensive system. Compulsory attendance was a feature of this law of 1896. The law provides for uniform free and nonsectarian primary institutions with compulsory attendance of children 6 to 12 years of age; preparatory course for professional training in the Government schools were also made free.

The State school system was gradually made to conform to this national system. In 1904 the number of public schools was returned at 9,194 with an enrollment of 620,476. Of these 6,488 were supported by the National and State governments, and 2,706 by the municipalities. The number of provincial, religious, etc., schools was 2,281, with 135,838 pupils. The secondary national and State schools number 36, with 4,642 pupils, and schools for professional instruction numbered 65, with 9,018 students, of whom 3,790 were women. Normal schools were also maintained at public expense. The Government maintained schools of law, medicine, agriculture and veterinary practice, engineering, mining, commercial and administrative, music and fine arts, also a mechanic's training school for men and one for women and schools for the blind and deaf mutes, reform schools, and garrison schools for soldiers. The National Library of Mexico contained 250,000 volumes, and in 1904 there were 138 public libraries, 34 museums for scientific and similar purposes, and 11 meteorological observatories. Statistics with reference to matters of public interest in Mexico are very meager. Bringing the matter down to date: Just prior to the revolution, it may be noted that in the State of Chihuahua alone there was a public school in session during the year 1909-10 in every school district in the entire State, including purely Indian districts. Out of a total population, including Indians, of approximately 327,000, more than 22,000 were in daily attendance upon these public schools which were supported by the State and local municipal governments; there were supported by the State of Chihuahua at this time two normal schools, and 60 graduates of these schools were then in Europe at the State's expense taking postgraduate courses; that there were also two agricultural schools supported by the State; one or more schools of art and science; that in addition there were private schools conducted by protestants of different denominations, private schools of nonsectarian character, and one or two private schools conducted by Catholic sisters. As will be shown by the testimony of such witnesses as Mr. E. L. Doheny (pt. 1, p. 207), and many other witnesses, Porfirio Diaz was sincerely interested not only in the uplift and welfare of his people, but also in seeing education, and particularly technical education, spread among the inhabitants of the Republic of Mexico.

Railroads.—Prior to 1878 there was a road constructed from the City of Mexico to Vera Cruz, and about that date 58 miles of branches from this road, a total of 321 miles of railroad in Mexico in operation prior to 1878. When Diaz went out in 1910-11 the railroad mileage of Mexico was more than 16,000 miles, and of this three-fifths or more belonged to, or was controlled by, the Mexican Government itself.

In the last official report prior to the incumbency of De la Barra, the total mileage as shown was 14,857 miles with the Southern Pacific of Mexico and what is now the Mexico Northwestern system yet constructing, bringing the mileage up to a little more than 16,000 miles at about the date when Diaz was overthrown. In 1878, when Diaz was recognized by the United States, the only bank in Mexico was a branch of the Bank of London, Mexico and the South, known as the "Banco de Londres, Mexico y Sud America," and a small private bank in the city of Chihuahua, later merged into a State institution, but conducted in the year mentioned by the Mac-Manus family. In the year 1909-10, prior to the overthrow of Diaz, the banks of issue of Mexico had assets of 736,191,398 pesos: They had a capital of 118,800,000 pesos and deposits of 71,910,424 pesos. Auxiliary banks had a capital of 47,800,000 pesos; assets, 128,375,032 pesos; mortgage banks had a capital of 10,000,000 pesos; resources, 51,934,102 pesos.

In 1914, after Madero went out and before Carranza's recognition, the total capitalization and surplus of all banks was 205,194,287 pesos. In 1918, under the Carranza government, the then only recognized banks in Mexico had a nominal capital and surplus of 148,197,409 pesos, while the metal reserve and actual convertible assets, as shown by the evidence, possibly amounted to 30 cents on the dollar. In other words, in 1909 banks, counting capital, had approximately 1,150,000,000 pesos assets and in 1918-19, 148,197,000 pesos nominal assets. (See testimony McCaleb, pt. 5, pp. 728, et seq.; also same part, pp. 686 et seq.) The State banks, such as the great Bank of Sonora, Miner's Bank of Chihuahua, and all other banks in the States, are practically wiped out. (See testimony Bracey Curtis, pt. 12, pp. 1833, et seq., and other testimony.)

We will not endeavor to give statistics on the general increase of Mexican trade with other nations of the world as shown by imports and exports, but content ourselves with the statement of fact that in the year 1878, when we recognized Diaz, imports into the United States through border custom districts was $1,585,368; for the year 1910 these imports through the same districts were $22,911,198, while for the same years the exports to Mexico through such border districts were respectively $3,391,737 and $29,106,100. Through all the Mexican ports there were imported into Mexico in 1911 approximately $100,000,000 of goods of which the United States sold $60,000,000; in the same year there were exported by Mexico goods to the value of approximately $150,000,000, about 77 per cent of which the United States purchased. During the entire period of the Diaz régime there were no revolutions except two incipient disturbances occurring on the border and engineered from the United States. Neither of these were of the slightest importance and each was immediately suppressed. After Diaz succeeded Gonzalez in 1884, a traveler was safe in the innermost recesses of the Sierra Madres or in the tropical regions of the south; in the State of Sonora in the north or in the State of Chiapas in the south; Sinaloa of the west, or Tamaulipas on the east coast. No guards were necessary on trains which were run without interference and on schedule time.

In the Mexican army, on paper, were 25,000 men. As a matter of fact, the total number of men in the Mexican army in 1909-10, as was later discovered, was less than 13,000. A force of "rurales," comparable with the Texas Ranger force or mounted police of Pennsylvania, maintained law and order throughout the Republic, while their number did not exceed 1,200 at any one time. Americans were welcome wherever they went in Mexico and their financial assistance was sought in opening up all the resources of the country; and during their visits they were welcomed with equal hospitality at the palace of the rich "hacendado" or hut of the humblest peon. In short there was no such thing dreamed of as an anti-American feeling of Mexicans toward Americans. Over the world, in every civilized country, Porfirio Diaz was regarded as an honorable, honest, patriotic, upright ruler, practically an autocrat or dictator, but devoted to his country and his people; in fact his character was that of the man of whom Mr. Bryan writes in the quotation given from his book.

NORMAL MEXICO; RESUMED.

1910-11: Mexican I. W. W. Junta. Orozco Madero revolution.

1911: May 10. Juarez captured by the forces of the "Red Flaggers" and followers of Madero. Diaz resigns and Francisco de la Barra becomes President.

1911: Under the Mexican constitution the secretary of state succeeds to the Presidency in event of a vacancy, and De la Barra was also agreed to by Madero.

1911-12: Elections held and Madero declared President.

1911-12: Revolutionists, particularly Zapatistas, continue operations.

1912: March 1. Orozco revolution against Madero. Chihuahua secedes. Orozco military commander. Zapata revolution continues and revolutionary activities all over the Republic.

1913: February. "Cuartelazo" City of Mexico. Felix Diaz delivered from imprisonment. Madero and Pino Suarez arrested. Both resign.

1913: March. Lascurain, foreign minister, becomes President for 28 minutes; resigns and—

1913: Victoriano Huerta declared President and confirmed by the Mexican Congress. Madero and Suarez assassinated. Revolutionary activities continue all over the Republic. United States refuses to recognize Huerta.

1914: Veracruz seized by United States forces. Carranza, Villa, Obregon, Zapata, and others continue revolution in all States.

1914: July. Huerta resigns and leaves Mexico. Carbajal takes oath of office as President. United States does not recognize and insists upon Carranza or some one agreeable to him at Niagara conference. Carbajal insists upon amnesty before surrendering Mexico City, and Carranza refuses August 5. August 9, Secretary Bryan announces that Carranza has given this Government assurances that Carrancistas will commit no excesses. Carbajal yields to Carranza's demand as Obregon's army threatens the city. August 12, Carbajal leaves the capital. Obregon's troops enter city about August 17. Villa and Carranza have therefore split. Provisional President to be chosen by convention. Carranza agrees to resign as first chief and submit to convention. Villa and Carranza each bluffing at resigning and getting out of the country.

1914: October 22-23. Convention names cabinet. Carranza claims right to pass upon all matters and convention agrees to accept Carranza's resignation and that both he and Villa get out of the country.

1914: November 3. Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez chosen provisional President for 20-day term. Carranza refuses to abide by action of convention and he and Gutierrez set up rival governments; Carranza in Puebla, and Gutierrez in Aguascalientes. Obregon loyal to Carranza. Revolutions continue.

1915: January 16. Gutierrez named provisional President to serve until April, 1916.

1915: January 18. Gutierrez deposed by convention and Roque Gonzalez Garza elected provisional President. Convention adjourns to meet in Mexico City. February 4. Villa announces he is in charge of Presidency and appoints three ministers, January 28. Villa forces leave Mexico City. January 29. Carranza forces enter city, Obregon in command. United States protests Obregon's incendiary statements March 4. March 10. Carranza forces under Obregon evacuate city. Zapata in charge of city; and 1915: March 18. Garza reported back in Mexico City. Revolutions continue. Gutierrez leading one faction; Garza pretending to lead another; Carranza heading a third, and generals, colonels, etc., each man for himself.

1915: About April 1 Carranza forces under Obregon enter city, but again evacuate it and other forces occupy it.

1915: June 20. Carranza retires to San Juan de Ulua Castle.

1915: United States calls meeting Central American and other States and military leaders to consider government for Mexico. All leaders opposed to Carranza agree to attend meeting and abide by results. Carranza, with Obregon, Pablo Gonzales, and others refuse and demand recognition of Carranza alone.

1915: October 6. Carranza recognized de facto head of Mexican Government by United States.

1915: October-November. American Red Cross, serving 23,000 soups per day in Mexico City and feeding starving there and other locations, ordered out of Mexico by our Government upon insistence of Carranza.

1916: Revolutions continue. Pretended elections called, but elective franchise restricted to those on date of election actively supporting Carranza. No elections held except where Carranza garrisons are in control. Same qualifications for election at constitutional convention.

1916: Five States with no representation whatsoever; others represented by delegates elected from Carranza garrison locations without opposition. Constitution convention meets at Queretaro.

1917: January 31. New constitution signed over opposition United States Government. February 5. Constitution promulgated. February 11. Ambassador Fletcher, United States, leaves United States, arriving Mexico City February 19. Wires

United States Government assured by Mexican State Department confiscation clauses Mexican constitution will not be put in effect against Americans; Fletcher presents credentials to Carranza at Queretaro.

1917: On March 3, and thus Carranza is recognized as "de jure" President. Revolutions continue all over Republic. Zapata assembled his forces, dividing into smaller bands under various leaders, continue struggle. No peace in any State in Mexico. Carranza government recognized where it has armed control.

1918-19: Same.

1919: August. United States Senate appoints committee to investigate Mexican matters. Committee opens hearings Washington, New York, and Mexican-American border.

1920: Opposition to Carranza quietly drawing; Gen. Felipe Angeles organizes Liberal Alliance, and Angeles enters Mexico. Arrested, court-martialed, and shot.

1920: March. Dieguez undertakes remove De la Huerta, governor Sonora. Obregon-Gonzales rival military candidates. Carranza attempts take advantage Liberal Alliance and other civil movements and presents Bonillas as candidate for Presidency.

1920: April. Sonora Legislature passes secession ordinance; Obregon recalled to Mexico City and, under arrest, escapes. De la Huerta, Calles, Salvador Alvarado take charge Sonora movement and issue "Plan of Agua Prieta," April 9, declaring for 1917 constitution. Revolution in City of Mexico and all over Republic. Carranza compelled to abdicate and supposed to leave Mexico May 9. De la Huerta supposed to call Mexican Congress together to name President pro tempore. Congress reported to meet on Friday to have adjourned until May 24.

1920: May 22. Carranza reported to be killed, together with members of his cabinet, while in fight by "bandits."

PRESIDENTS.

1911 to 1920: Diaz, De la Barra, Madero, Huerta, Carbajal, Gutierrez, Garza, Villa (by his own declaration), Vasquez Gomez (1912 by State of Chihuahua through Orozco), Carranza, De la Huerta.

In discussing more fully what we have called the "normal" condition of Mexico after the years 1910 and 1911 (the chronological sequence of which we have hurriedly referred to) let us return for a moment to the "abnormal" Mexico of 1876 to 1910.

In 1876 Gen. Porfirio Diaz issued a proclamation announcing himself as provisional President of the Republic under the plan of Tuxtepec.

Upon being informed of the circumstances in January, 1877, this Government took the matter of recognition under consideration and stated that although it was "accustomed to accept and recognize the results of a popular choice in Mexico and not to scrutinize closely the regularity or irregularity of the methods," nevertheless we would wait in this particular instance "before recognizing Gen. Diaz as President of Mexico until it shall be assured that his election is approved by the Mexican people, and that his administration is possessed of stability to endure and of disposition to comply with the rules of international comity and the obligations of treaties."

Disturbed conditions continuing along the border finally Evarts wrote to Minister Foster as follows:

"The first duty of a Government is to protect life and property. This is a paramount obligation. For this governments are instituted, and governments neglecting or failing to perform it become worse than useless. This duty the Government of the United States has determined to perform to the extent of its power toward its citizens on the border. It is not solicitous, it never has been, about the methods or ways in which that protection shall be accomplished, whether by formal treaty stipulation or by informal convention; whether by the action of judicial tribunals or that of military forces. Protection in fact to American lives and property is the sole point upon which the United States are tenacious."

This note of itself inaugurated a new era in Mexico and was of itself, as used by President Diaz, largely responsible for the long period of peace and consequent prosperity reigning in Mexico.

As the story is told by his son, Diaz was upon first impression intensely angered when the contents of this note were communicated to him.

Wise old Indian that he was, however, upon second thought he determined that he would use this note to compel observance of his orders and loyalty to his plans and purposes by the constant threat that unless his plans were carried out and his government respected and armed resistance or opposition ceased, that the "Colossus of the North," simply awaiting a favorable occasion, would avail itself of the first opportunity to take over Mexico.

Thus was raised through the deliberate purpose of Diaz "El Fantasma," that is, "The Specter," which is yet so often alluded to by Latin-Americans and particularly by Mexicans in speaking of the United States.

From time to time as opposition threatened the Diaz government or his plans, he would call attention of those offering such opposition to the Evarts note and was thus largely able to overcome such opposition in its incipency.

Finally he was recognized by this Government in 1878, when a formal reception was accorded the minister from Mexico.

Then ensued the great era of prosperity which we have rapidly sketched, and we shall now refer shortly to the political conditions under Diaz's administration.

The Diaz administration was an autocracy with the "Strong man of Chapultepec" as a practical dictator, supported by, and in turn supporting, certain families or persons in each of the different States of the Republic. His army was at the command of such governors, and in turn their support was extended the central government through Diaz whenever same was necessary or called for.

Necessarily the younger generation of those who were "out" and did not belong to the "reigning families" in the different States were opposed to this autocracy, but generally entirely loyal to Diaz personally, and all recognized, or thought they recognized, not only the futility of using force against him, but also the possible consequence to their country and its sovereignty as they viewed "El Fantasma" constantly projected before their eyes.

Diaz grew old and weak and sought to assure continued prosperity through peace and order, for his loved country by preparing beforehand for the perpetuation of his plan of government.

He finally forced the adoption of an amendment providing for the election of a vice president, and as his plan grew was instrumental in forcing the election of Ramon Corral, of Sonora, as vice president.

Each of the prominent supporters in each of the States, or at least the majority of these autocrats, imagined that he should fall heir to the mantle of the old soldier and, of course, objected to the selection of a Sonoranian rather than himself as the successor to power.

Meantime, largely because of the autocratic and arbitrary rule and acts of the family, or person, of authority in the State, the opposition to this form of government had grown stronger and stronger with the years.

THE "RED FLAGGERS."

In 1905 there was organized in the United States by a few radical Mexicans what was known as the "Organizing Committee" of the Liberal Party of Mexico. These men carried on propaganda throughout the Republic through which they appealed to the ignorant masses of the Mexican people; to the Indian tribes by name and collectively; and to all the dissatisfied elements, to rise against the power of Diaz and overthrow the Government.

They issued their plans at first of a milder radical type but rapidly more and more anarchistical in character.

Not content with their appeal through propaganda, through proclamation, through letters and organizing committees; they established a periodical published in various States of the United States from time to time and known as La Regeneracion Publica.

Their proposed plan was that of the extreme French syndicalist and of the radical I. W. W. which latter was just making itself known in the United States through the writings of Vincent St. John and others; the "junta" or committee, proposed not only to overthrow the Government of Diaz but to confiscate all property including real estate and divide the same among the population of Mexico "without discrimination as to sex"; they admitted it to be true that many large estates had been bought, but claimed that the purchasers themselves had stolen their money or achieved their wealth by bribery, corruption, etc., and that therefore they were not entitled to payment for the properties which were to be taken from them; they appealed to the Indian particularly upon the ground that his territory had formerly extended from one mountain top in sight of his little settlement to another to be seen at a different point of the compass, and told him that all that was necessary was for him to rise and take his property back; they appealed by name to the Yaquis and the other tribes with these and similar statements; not content with this propaganda they endeavored to secure recruits for armed intervention in Mexico in different sections, and finally, coming in contact with the neutrality laws of the United States, were arrested.

The organizers of this "junta" or committee of the so-called revolutionary "Liberal Party" were:

Ricardo Flores Magon, Juan Sarabia, Librado Rivera, Enrique Flores Magon, Antonio I. Villarreal, and Anselmo L. Figueroa.

In 1908 the American Federation of Labor then in session at Denver telegraphed these gentlemen the sympathy of "our" organization in their troubles.

Some of the parties were convicted; but their activities did not cease.

Later the committee was reorganized and found in active business again at Los Angeles, Calif.

Their propaganda at this time consisted not only of similar appeals to the population of Mexico and particularly to the Indians, but of appeals for assistance to the radical labor element of the United States.

The Orozco revolution having broken out in Chihuahua and that leader having been persuaded to declare for Francisco I. Madero as President of Mexico, the Magon-Villarreal junta called upon all of their followers to assist in the overthrow of Diaz; but as will be seen by reference to the testimony in part 17, page 2506, their stated purpose was not the overthrow of Diaz to assist in "forming a bourgeois republic" such as that of the United States, by the seating of Madero in power, but to use the Madero-Orozco assistance to overthrow the then existing government, which done—as they insisted—the overthrow of the Madero government could be completed without difficulty.

The representatives of this "Flores Magon-Villarreal" I. W. W. anarchistical party or junta, who took active part in the fighting prior to the resignation of Diaz, were Jose Inez Salazar, Emilio Campa, and like gentry, who were known as the "Red Flaggers." (See testimony Inez Salazar, pt. 17, p. 2591, and also testimony Mrs. Carlin and others, pt. 17, p. 2593, Judge Bartch, pt. 18.)

After the overthrow of Diaz these gentlemen continued their activities not only by propaganda but by the organization of armed forces led by "generals" Pryce, Stanley, and others, with recruits from the active membership of I. W. W. local organizations in southern California, those around Los Angeles, San Diego, and other California towns, joined by radicals of different races and soldiers of fortune who flocked like vultures around the corpse of bleeding Mexico.

R. Flores Magon testified in the extradition cases of Pryce and others, and admitted the activities of the Liberal Party along these lines as well as their propaganda endeavors in the Republic of Mexico, showing their organization throughout 18 States of that Republic, etc. (See part 17, p. 2514.)

They were again arrested for violation of the neutrality laws, and President Madero sent Jesus Flores Magon to attend the trial and assist in the conviction of these men, four of whom were convicted and sentenced to San Quentin.

Of course, the sympathy of the American Federation of Labor with these men, who proclaimed themselves patriots, and revolutionists against the horrible rule of a tyrant, can well be understood; but the consequences possibly were not foreseen, and could not be foreseen by those who understood as little of the Mexican population as did Mr. Gompers and his associates.

These conservative labor men of the United States could not realize that to the great majority of the population of Mexico, "liberty" merely meant "license" to work individual sweet will not only with the property but with the body and person of any other, whether man or woman.

The fact is as disclosed by the evidence in this case that through the assistance of many sincere and good people in this country and through the financial and other assistance of the extreme radical elements the only invasion of Mexico, by arms, which has occurred from this side of the border (except the landing at Veracruz under orders of our President, the Pershing Expedition under similar orders, and the military expeditions in following the "hot trail" of marauders), was inaugurated, brought about, and supported by the elements in the United States which have been among those most loud in protesting against "armed intervention" in Mexican affairs and insisting most strenuously that the Mexican people should not be interfered with in the spilling of their blood and the establishment of even such condition of affairs as was advocated by the Magon-Villareal propagandists.

MADERO-VASQUEZ GOMEZ PARTY.

The "Anti-Reelection Party," organized largely through the efforts of Francisco and Emilio Vasquez Gomez, with the cooperation of Francisco J. Madero (as will be seen by reference to their "plan" as set forth in the evidence), advocated a reform of the constitution of 1857, to prohibit the reelection of a president or other officers; and also to provide for a commission who should investigate and ascertain the ownership, value, and amount, of the unoccupied lands withheld by the owners from development by individuals, with the object of purchasing such land, by payment to the owner, and the sale thereafter to those needing homes.

The success of Madero was an accident not due to his own following nor to the strength of his army movement and not due to the strength of the Flores Magon-Villarreal movement, but to an uprising of the Mexican and Indian population of the mountain districts of Chihuahua against State taxation and against the Creel-Terrazas families and their domination.

Orozco, the leader of this movement, having been brought in conflict with national forces, was approached by Madero emissaries with the proffer of money and assistance should he declare for Madero for President, which he promptly did. Madero, leading a few followers of his own and some "Red Flaggers," declined to await Orozco's assistance, and brought on the battle of Casas Grandes, in which he was most thoroughly whipped and his followers driven away. A few days later they joined Orozco with his command and were led to the border, where, despite the orders of Madero to the contrary, Orozco and Villa captured the city of Juarez and compelled the resignation of Diaz.

By agreement, or rather by acquiescence of Madero, as the leader of the revolutionary forces, Francisco de la Barra, under the form of the constitution of the Republic, became president ad interim pending an election. At this election Madero, having "changed partners" just prior to the final result, had Pino Suarez declared elected Vice President (with himself as President), in lieu of Vasquez Gomez, who was his running mate on the antireelection ticket. This result was easily brought about, because, following the usual custom which he had so strenuously denounced, Madero insisted upon his right to appoint governors over the people in the different States in Mexico, and through such appointees declared the results of the election.

Prior to this time the old treaty of amnesty and commerce with the United States had lapsed and had never been renewed, which is the condition existing to-day.

The Government of the United States, not being informed, of course, as to the true conditions among the rank and file of the Mexican people, followed the ordinary procedure, and without hesitation recognized first De la Barra and later Madero through the ambassador of the United States already in Mexico City, requiring no security for the protection of Americans.

The so-called Madero revolution had the sympathy of the majority of the Americans along the border in a general way; that is to say; supposed, as it really was, to represent a revolt against autocracy, it had the good will of American Democrats. Through this good will, and by virtue of the then lax laws with reference to the exportation of arms and ammunition, the Madero-Orozco-Flores-Magon armed forces were enabled to secure supplies, arms, and ammunition with which to carry on the revolution (of course, it must be understood that had Diaz been a few years younger, this revolutionary movement at that time, only numbering in men under arms at most 1,000 or 2,000 all combined, would have been crushed in its incipency and with little or no effort).

But again, "The Spectre," "El Fantasma," which had been presented to him in 1878, could be seen across the border, where 20,000 American troops had been hurried by our Government.

Zapata continued the revolution, as did various bands under different leaders, and finally in March, 1912, the State of Chihuahua seceded and Pascual Orozco, the former successful leader of the Madero forces, was placed in military command of the anti-Madero movement. Successful in the preliminary skirmishes and in the first battle of Rellano, Orozco, far from his base of supplies, awaiting shipments of arms and ammunition over the Mexican Central Road, which was under his control to the American border, failing to receive such shipments was compelled to fall back, and finally after a futile struggle of months, to abandon the military field to the armed forces of the Mexican Madero Government.

The so-called amendment to the neutrality laws of the United States (in fact, an amendment to the Spanish-American War legislation, prohibiting shipments of war supplies which might fall into the hands of Cervera's fleet) had been adopted and under it the President of the United States had prohibited the shipment of arms and ammunitions to anyone in Mexico except to the regularly recognized Madero government.

During the few months of the Madero revolution against Diaz many Americans lost their lives, almost invariably at the hands of the "Red Flaggers." In the Orozco revolt or the Chihuahua secession again these "Red Flaggers," following the original "grito" (cry) as outlined in 1906 and constantly pursued, "that the people of Mexico needed no government" flocked around Orozco. Upon the defeat of these forces and Orozco's men (or upon their being driven back for want of arms and ammunition) under the leadership of the same Jose Inez Salazar and others, bands of from 35 to 400 each, devastated the northern portion of Mexico and principally the State of Chihuahua. Revolutionary activity of the same character broke out with renewed fury all over the Republic, and during this period and up to the overthrow of the Madero government and the incoming of Huerta approximately 200 Americans lost their lives in Mexico.

ANTI-AMERICAN AGITATION AND OUTRAGE PRIOR TO 1913.

Examination of the evidence will disclose that the reason offered by these Mexican revolutionary leaders for holding Americans to ransom, robbing them of their property, driving them out in herds from their homes and farms, and assaulting them even to the point of death, was that the United States Government had taken part in purely domestic troubles in Mexico and was actively assisting the Madero government with arms and ammunition, while refusing to allow the purchase of elements and instruments of warfare by the very man who had placed Madero in power. Complaints were made that Madero forces were allowed to use American soil for refuge, and that Madero troops were allowed to travel over American railroads to escape from or to attack at some other place, those in revolution against the Madero government.

Wordy protests were made by our Government in one or two instances against outrages upon Americans and destruction of American property, only to be answered, of course, by Madero to the effect that he could not control the bandits. The American Government interposed no force for the protection of its citizens in Mexico even near its own borders. The consequence of this later policy was, of course, to confirm the bandits, legitimate or anti-Madero, in the belief that Americans were left alone and would not under any circumstances be protected by their own Government.

Agitators among the Mexican demagogues proclaimed against the United States and the citizens of the United States, and were successful, of course, in arousing feeling against us and our citizens and securing recruits for themselves and justifying to their followers and thousands of good people in Mexico outrages which were perpetrated upon individual Americans who had theretofore lived for years in amity, peace, and good fellowship with the people of Mexico.

Shortly prior to July 29, 1912, approximately 4,000 American citizens had been driven out of the States of Chihuahua and Sonora by armed bands under Salazar and other "Red Flaggers"; their lives threatened; their property destroyed; large numbers of them killed (see testimony of Ella Stevens, pt. 17, p. 2602; testimony of Mrs. Carlin and others, pt. 17, p. 2593; testimony of Judge Barch, pt. 18, p. 2727.) and these people, including more than 1,200 children, the majority born in Mexico, had taken refuge on the American side of the line, and being destitute, were fed by the people of El Paso, Douglas, and other American towns.

A joint resolution introduced in the Senate on July 29, 1912, "authorized the Secretary of War to supply tents and rations to American citizens compelled to leave Mexico."

This resolution (S. J. Res. 127) was immediately adopted and its provisions were carried out by the Army of the United States.

On August 2, 1912, there was introduced in the Senate a joint resolution "to provide transportation for American citizens fleeing from threatened danger in the Republic of Mexico."

By the terms of this resolution the Secretary of War was authorized and directed "to furnish transportation from El Paso, Tex., to such place in the United States as each shall elect, to those American citizens fleeing from the Republic of Mexico who are now or may be hereafter temporarily supplied with shelter and sustenance in whole or in part by the Government of the United States in or near El Paso, Tex."

One hundred thousand dollars was appropriated for this purpose and same was applied as directed.

On August 10, 1912, there was introduced in the Senate a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 133) appropriating $20,000 out of the $100,000 appropriated under the resolution of August 2, for the subsistence of American citizens now in Arizona fleeing from threatened danger in the Republic of Mexico, and same was adopted and its provisions carried out.

It will thus be seen that the acts of citizens of Mexico in derogation of the rights of the citizens of the United States were, in the eyes of the Mexicans, justified, and have to this day been justified by the attitude of the American Government toward its own citizens and toward the Mexican Government.

The American Government had not intervened for the protection of its citizens in the Republic of Mexico, but had left them at the mercy of the bandits, and Congress was compelled to take care of such of them as managed to reach the border.

Meantime, on March 2, 1912, cable instructions had been issued by the State Department to the Ambassador in Mexico City, as follows:

"Paraphrase. Embassy is instructed in its discretion to inform Americans that the embassy deemed it its duty to advise them to withdraw from any particular localities where conditions of lawlessness so threatened their personal safety as to make withdrawal the part of common prudence. The embassy is further instructed to specify the localities, if any, from which withdrawal might at any time seem advisable, and state that in any such cases consuls could take charge of abandoned effects as might be possible under the circumstances.

"The department stated that it was sending a copy of this telegram to all consular officers in Mexico, merely for their information and for the information of Americans in their districts."

Under the wording of this cablegram, and particularly that portion of it which instructed the embassy "to specify the localities, if any, from which withdrawal might at any time seem advisable," Americans in Mexico to whom the order was directed or indirectly communicated through the embassy or consular agencies, or through other persons, construed it to mean that the Government at Washington and the embassy at Mexico City knew something concerning Mexico, or intended to take some action with reference to Mexico, which individuals located or residing in Mexico should be warned of; and the majority of Americans in Mexico (at least throughout the rural districts and apart from those in the City of Mexico who had or might have the advantage of personal consultation with the ambassador) imagined that finally the Government of the United States intended to protect Americans wherever they were or where it might be able to reach them; and so a great exodus of American citizens immediately commenced.

The effect upon the minds of Mexicans in different localities who had continued to work at their employment under Americans—who had been loyal and faithful, and had announced themselves willing to protect the property and lives of their American employers—was to open their ears to the appeals of demagogues that they should join bands of bandits, or revolutionists or some one else, and prepare to defend their country against the United States.

In many localities those ignorant people were told that slavery existed in the United States; that the slave States of the South had always wanted to take over more Mexican territory than had been acquired in 1848; and that the purpose of the Government of the United States now was to withdraw Americans so that Mexicans could not hold them as hostages or mete out retribution to them for assaults upon Mexicans; that the real purpose of the United States was to take over Mexico and enslave the Mexican people.

This was the effect of the ill-advised, but of course well-meant cablegram to the embassy, sent out under conditions existing as they were, and at a time when Americans had not yet been convinced that their Government at home would no longer protect Americans abroad.

At least however, the Government of the United States up to this time, while failing to protect its citizens, had not intervened in the internal affairs of Mexico in the effort to change their officials or their form of government.

HUERTA-CARRANZA PERIOD.

The resignation of Madero and Pino Suarez was forced, following the "cuartelazo" in the early part of 1913, and Lascurain, taking over the Presidency under the form of the constitution, resigned the office, and under this same constitution Huerta was immediately declared elected President.

The Government of the United States through the President refused to acknowledge the Huerta government and sent John Lind to Veracruz and Mexico City, followed by other personal representatives of the President, among whom were the Hon. William Bayard Hale, Mr. George Carothers, then recent consular agent at Torreon, etc.

The Congress of the United States was not consulted with reference to these quasi ambassadors or personal representatives, nor was the Congress of the United States even notified of their missions or the purport thereof, except as in the message of the President of the United States to the Congress of August 27, 1913.

The correspondence between the polished, suave, and learned diplomat, Gamboa, and the Hon. John Lind is interesting and instructive.

Under date of August 16, 1913, Gamboa says among other things:

"Fortunately * * * your character as confidential agent of your Government was fully established."

Mr. Gamboa, in the same letter, states that "the Government of Mexico has paid due attention to the advice and considerations expressed by the Government of the United States" as contained in the note of the President of the United States presented to Gamboa by Lind at their second interview.

Gamboa says the Government of Mexico "has paid due attention to the advice and considerations" for several reasons:

"First. Because Mexico entertains the highest respect for the personality of His Excellency Woodrow Wilson.

"Second. Because certain European and American Governments with which Mexico cultivates the closest relations of international amity, having in a most delicate, respectful way, highly gratifying to us, made use of their good offices to the end that Mexico should accord you a hearing, inasmuch as you were the bearer of a private mission from the President of the United States."

We will not attempt to quote all this communication, which so carefully reviews and comments upon the Lind mission and note of the President, but one or two additional quotations here require repetition:

"The request that Gen. Victoriano Huerta should agree not to appear as a candidate for the presidency of the Republic in the coming elections can not be taken into consideration, because, aside from its strange and unwarranted character, there is a risk that the same might be interpreted as a matter of personal dislike. This point can only be decided by Mexican public opinion when it may be expressed at the polls.

The confidential agent may believe that solely because of the sincere esteem in which the people and the Government of the United States of America are held by the people and Government of Mexico, and because of the consideration which it has for all friendly nations (and especially in this case for those which have offered their good offices), my Government consented to take into consideration and to answer as briefly as the matter permits the representations of which you are the bearer. Otherwise it would have rejected them immediately because of their humiliating and unusual character, hardly admissible even in a treaty of peace after a victory, inasmuch as in a like case any nation which in the least respects itself would do likewise."

In another communication the Mexican minister rather indignantly repudiates the suggestion that compliance with the requirements of the President of the United States communicated through Lind might be followed by financial favors extended through the influence of our Government.

The committee will not endeavor to follow seriatim the acts of this Government with reference to Huerta nor those leading up to the recognition of the Carranza as the de facto Government in October, 1915. A reference to the testimony of W. F. Buckley, part 6, pages 767 et seq., is hereby made, as well as to other evidence in the case and to the public records.

Meantime revolution continues, accompanied, as usual, by outrages of every character upon American citizens.

At the very time that the message of August 27 was in preparation for communication to the Congress of the United States, and telegrams following same were being prepared for forwarding to the consuls and other officials in Mexico, Matthew Gourd's nieces were being outraged in his presence while he was tied to a limb with a rope around his neck.

We were informed in this message, among other things, that:

We should earnestly urge all Americans to leave Mexico at once and should assist them to get away in every way possible—not because we would mean to slacken in the least our efforts to safeguard their lives and their interests, but because it is imperative that they should take no unnecessary risks when it is physically possible for them to leave the country.

On the same date, that is, August 27, the consul general at Mexico City was notified "to warn Americans to leave Mexico," and

The consul general was instructed to notify all officials, military or civil, exercising authority that they would be held strictly responsible for any harm done to Americans or for injury to their property.

The consul general was instructed to furnish a copy to the embassy at Mexico City, and the State Department here had the same telegram repeated to all American consuls in Mexico.

This first telegram was followed by another of the same date, embracing extracts from the President's message to Congress, and (paraphrase):

It is further stated that the advice to leave Mexico did not indicate that the Government of the United States would slacken in the least its efforts to safeguard the lives and interests of Americans, but that they should take no unnecessary risks when it was physically possible for them to leave the country.

On April 20, 1914, the following telegram was sent (paraphrase):

It was stated in this telegram that Gen. Huerta had refused to salute the flag; that the President would lay the matter before Congress that day; that Americans and other foreigners should be notified of the critical situation; and that Americans should be reminded of the President's advice to leave Mexico until order was restored.

On April 22, 1914 (paraphrase):

The consuls were advised of the results following the landing of American forces at Vera Cruz, and were instructed to urge all Americans to leave Mexico as soon as possible.

On September 11, 1915 (paraphrase):

It was stated that, as a precautionary measure, it was of the utmost importance in view of the particularly dangerous conditions arising from the revolutionary crisis, that all Americans, and incidentally other foreigners, be induced to leave Mexico immediately. The consular officers were authorized to abandon Mexico, bringing their records with them, if conditions were such as to justify their departure.

TAMPICO—VERACRUZ INCIDENT APRIL 20, 1914.

The Tampico incident of April 20, 1914, constituting what has generally been called the "Insult to our flag" brought a message from the President of the United States, giving his reason for landing armed forces at Veracruz and requesting ratification of the Congress of the United States for his acts. This incident and the message concerning same will be more fully referred to a little later.

A reference to the chronological events hereinbefore set forth will disclose that Huerta left Mexico City in July, 1914, and that after several so-called presidents had been named by one self-constituted authority or another, the President of the United States called upon the warring forces in Mexico to get together or this country would be compelled to take steps to pacify Mexico.

CARRANZA PERIOD.

Senate Document No. 324, Sixty-fourth Congress, first session, contains the answer of the President to the request for information as to why this Government had finally decided to recognize Carranza in October, 1915. In short, the reasons given were: That while the convention itself, which was yet in session, and while Villa, Zapata, and other independent leaders agreed to meet with the United States and representatives of other countries and abide by the decision of such representatives in the settlement of Mexican affairs; that Carranza declined, and that Obregon, Gonzales, and Carranza's appointed cabinet officers and appointed governors and other appointed officials agreed to leave the decision as to taking part in this meeting to Carranza himself; that it appeared that Carranza was the only one man whose domination was acceptable to any number of others and that therefore this Government should recognize him as head of the de facto government of Mexico.

BRYAN'S OPINION OF OBREGON.

Prior to this time the Brazilian minister was representing the interests of the United States in the Republic of Mexico, and through this minister the Department of State of the United States communicated directly to Obregon and to Carranza separately, among other things using the following language:

The Government of the United States has noted with increasing concern the reports of Gen. Obregon's utterances to the residents of Mexico City. The Government believes they tend to incite the populace to commit outrages in which innocent foreigners within Mexican territory, particularly in the City of Mexico, may be involved. This Government is particularly impressed with Gen. Obregon's suggestions that he would refuse to protect not only Mexicans but foreigners in case of violence, and that his present manifesto is a forerunner of others more disastrous in effect. In this condition of affairs the Government of the United States is informed that the City of Mexico may soon be evacuated by the Constitutionalist forces, leaving the populace without protection against whatever faction may choose to occupy it, thus shirking the responsibility which may happen as a result of the instigation to lawlessness before and after the evacuation of the city.

The Government of the United States is led to believe that a deplorable situation has been willfully brought about by Constitutionalist leaders and forces upon a populace submissive to their incredible demands, and to punish the city on account of refusal to comply with them. When a factional leader preys upon a starving city to compel obedience to his decrees by inciting outlawry, and at the same time uses means to prevent the city from being supplied with food, a situation is created which it is impossible for the United States to contemplate longer with patience. Conditions have become intolerable and can no longer be endured.

On May 7, 1915, the Brazilian minister, under No. 174, cabled the Secretary of State at Washington, his opening sentence being:

I have been requested by the American Society of Mexico and International Committee to transmit to you the following document * * *:

The capital (Mexico City) is suffering a lingering death * * *.

The Washington Government two months ago renewed its advice that its residents leave Mexico, with the suggestion from Gen. Carranza that other foreigners also leave Mexico City; unfortunately there has been no way open to act upon the advice since it was given * * *. Three travelers were shot last week while trying to get from this city to Pachuca, 50 miles away * * *. Censorship of commercial and private telegrams by the conventionalist authorities here and also the Carrancistas at Vera Cruz is so strong that residents can not explain to relatives or correspondents abroad either their situation or their actions * * * and this interference with cablegrams renders difficult or impossible the arrangement of maturing obligations such as life insurance premiums. * * *

Hope is expressed among foreigners here that special representatives from the United States who are attached to particular chiefs, may not be deterred by excessive desires to maintain agreeable relations with these leaders from furnishing the Washington Government with complete occurrences and impartial reports of what actually transpires in their locality.

CARRANZA AND THE RED CROSS.

Practically the first act of Carranza after his recognition in October, 1915, was the demand by him, acceded to by the United States, that the American Red Cross should get out of Mexico. (See The American Red Cross Magazine, November, 1915, issue, pp. 349 et seq.)

SECOND AND THIRD ATTACK ON FLAG. COMPARE WITH HUERTA INCIDENT.

In the early part of 1916, Americans were ordered to leave Tampico, the instructions being transmitted through Claude I. Dawson, American consul:

AMERICAN CONSULAR SERVICE,
Tampico, Mexico, June 24, 1916.

To whom it may concern:

American citizens are hereby urged to leave for the United States without any further delay, and to this end they should heed the suggestions to be made by the bearer hereof.

CLAUDE I. DAWSON,
American Consul.

[Instruction.]

Advise people American consul has ordered all Americans to leave immediately, and state that you think no protection will be accorded those who remain. This includes men, women, and children.

In carrying out these instructions the U. S. S. Marietta, under command of Capt. Scott, had its boat and also a boat secured from a civilian vessel, but manned by sailors of the Marietta, assisting in the removal of imperiled American citizens.

This boat was fired upon by Carranza soldiers under Gen. Nafarrete and the sailors returned the fire. This was about June 24.

On June 15, at Mazatlan, on the west coast; the U. S. S. Annapolis sent her boat to the wharf at Mazatlan for the purpose of reaching the American consul with a message; there were no arms in sight but the boat was flying the American flag, the men were in uniform, and accompanied by two officers. When the boat ran alongside the pier the officers were met by Mexicans, one of them in uniform, and were invited to land. Upon stepping ashore they were immediately seized, conducted to a jail and imprisoned; the Mexican officer ordered the boat to land, but one of the American officers directed the sailors to "push off," which was done, but it was fired upon and one of the sailors was killed.

The sailors "broke out" their arms, which were concealed in the boat, and returned the fire. The officers were later released through the intercession of, and were guided on their way to the wharf by, a native Mexican woman who was married to an American.

The commanding officer of the Annapolis "in view of the policy of noninterference on shore," withheld the fire of his battery from protecting his boat.

A report of the matter was made by Admiral Winslow to the department.

The admiral made no protest nor requested any apology or explanation, but the entire matter was referred to the department.

In view of Admiral Mayo's experience acquired when his boat was insulted at Tampico * * * it was considered proper to leave that to the department.

See testimony of Admiral William B. Caperton and testimony of Commander A. T. Beauregard, part 22, pages 3203 and 3216.

In his message to the Congress of the United States concerning the Admiral Mayo-Tampico incident of April 20, which incident is referred to in the testimony cited, the President refers to Gen. Huerta's apology and to his explanation that "Martial law obtained at the time at Tampico; that orders had been issued that no one should be allowed to land at Iturbide bridge." The President says:

Our naval commanders at the port had not been notified of any such prohibition; and, even if they had been, the only justifiable course open to the local authorities would have been to request the paymaster and his crew to withdraw and to lodge a protest with the commanding officer of the fleet.

Again, in the same message, "If we are to accept the tests of its own constitution it [Mexico] has no government." (Exactly the same constitution (if any) existed in April, 1914, as existed in June, 1916, and except by totally unconstitutional decree of Carranza no effort was made to change this constitution until January, 1917.)

It is true that we had not recognized and declined to recognize the government of Huerta when the first Tampico incident occurred; it is also true that we had granted de facto recognition to Carranza prior to June, 1916.

The facts are that we demanded a salute to our flag by Huerta, whom we had not recognized, and failed to demand a salute or apology from Carranza whom we had recognized.

MEXICAN ELECTIONS.

So-called elections were held in municipalities and in some portions of some of the States of Mexico after Carranza was recognized, and among others an election for constitutional delegates or "a congress to adopt a constitution," was held.

Among those who were excluded from voting at any elections were (and are):

I. Those who by any means undertook the overthrow of the lawful Government of the Republic, emanated from the elections of 1911. (Madero election.)

II. Those who carried out the barrack uprising (cuartelazo) in 1913, or in any manner contributed to its realization.

III. The functionaries, authorities, and public employees emanated from the usurping government; and those who, having emanated from the lawful Government sanctioned and collaborated, in an effective manner, in sustaining the usurper.

IV. Those who have figured actively in any of the factions opposing the constitutional government, or who continue to be hostile to the present Government of the Republic.

V. Those who economically, through the press or in any other manner duly verified aided or have stated their adhesion or sympathy with the usurping government or factions hostile to the present Government.

It may be interesting to recite here that the so-called Carranza revolution received its support from Villa, Zapata, Obregon, Pablo Gonzalez, Eulalio Gutierrez, Antonio I. Villarreal, etc.

That later a convention was held for the selection of a President under an agreement solemnly entered into by Carranza himself.

That the convention elected Gutierrez, and that in the fighting which inevitably followed Carranza's refusal to abide by the results, Obregon and Gonzalez sided with Carranza, while others claiming themselves to be original Constitutionalists, fought under the banner of the convention.

That therefore in all elections there were excluded from voting those who had supported the Diaz government.

Those who had supported the Madero government; those who had supported Huerta; those who had supported Carranza himself.

Those who had upheld the convention decision; and all those who had had nothing to do with politics in any form or manner, unless.

at the particular time of each election the particular voter or candidate could prove to the satisfaction of a Carranza election official that said voter or candidate was at that moment an unqualified supporter of Carranza and ready to bear or bearing arms in defense of his so-called government.

In view of the fact that of a population of 15,000,000 never more than 200,000 have taken active interest in the affairs of Mexico since the overthrow of Diaz, it can readily be seen that those who are entitled to and allowed to vote constitute rather a small number.

In this connection it might be of interest to recall that in the split between Carranza personally with his immediate followers and the convention and its followers, the Madero family opposed Carranza and upheld the convention, and that Raul Madero, brother of the deceased President, was a general in Villa's army fighting Carranza, while another brother, Emilio, was an officer in the same army.

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT OF SATISFACTORY ASSURANCES OF PROTECTION OF AMERICANS.

In the message of the President of the United States of February 17, 1916, the President states to the Congress that satisfactory assurances have been received from Carranza that he would protect American citizens, pay American claims for damages, and recognize American rights and protect American property.

In addition to protesting against the actions of Obregon, Carranza followers, and others in the City of Mexico, Veracruz, and at other places, it immediately became necessary for this Government to continue the protests after the recognition of Carranza, as it had made protests prior to his recognition, against arbitrary decisions and acts affecting the property rights of American citizens.

For example, on June 29, 1914, Secretary Bryan cabled a protest against the refusal of Carranza, whose forces were then in charge at Tampico, to accept constitutional currency, that is, his own currency, and in any event against his refusal to accept New York exchange at prevailing rates, for bar dues, etc. (See Department of State records, pt. 21, pp. 3119.)

On July 10, 1914, Secretary Bryan called attention to Carranza's own decree "making it obligatory upon officials as well as the public to accept constitutional currency," and insisting that Carranza should accept currency tendered him in payment of dues, etc. The Carranza authorities continued to refuse, and apparently had their way.

On January 19, 1916, Lansing protested against the proposed confiscation decree—providing for the nationalization of petroleum, which * * * would affect most seriously the interests of numerous American citizens and other foreigners who have heretofore engaged in the business of producing and selling petroleum in Mexico.

Point out to Gen. Carranza in unequivocal terms the dangerous situation which might result from the issuance of any decree of a confiscatory nature.

This is the first of the series of protests against confiscatory decrees, which protests, as will be disclosed by reference to copies of the official documents published in connection with this report, it has been necessary to reiterate in one form or another to the very day of the recent overthrow of the Carranza Government.

PROTESTS AGAINST MEXICAN CONSTITUTION, 1917.

In January, 1917, the so-called constitutional convention, or congress for the drawing of a constitution, was in session in Queretaro, Mexico.

The delegates to this convention had been selected under the system of free and universal suffrage just hereinbefore described.

The constitution which they adopted, or formulated, was pretended to be submitted to and has been pretended to have been adopted by the different States of the Union.

Except as this constitution was submitted to Carranza appointees and officials, and adopted by certain Carranza adherents under threat of Carranza guns in some particular districts in some particular States of the Union, such pretension of ratification was a fraud upon its face, as established by uncontrovertible evidence in these hearings and is a notorious fact to all Mexicans.

This constitution so illegally formulated was signed on January 31, 1917, and promulgated on February 5 of that year.

On January 22, 1917, Charles Parker, Esq., "representing American interests," Queretaro, Mexico, was addressed an official communication, signed "L," and bearing No. 621. (See pt. 21, pp. 3121.)

Among other things, the Secretary of State of the United States calls attention to the provisions of article 27 of the proposed constitution and criticizes same by paragraphs; he also refers to article 28, article 33, and to the proposed constitution generally.

At the time of this particular protest, strenuous and imperative as it was, article 27 of the constitution, in all its naked and anarchistic provisions, had not been agreed to and was not before the Secretary of State. The protest of that official representing the United States Government did not even receive the courtesy of an answer from Carranza, in so far as our records show, and in the face of the protest article 27 was amended by making it very much more objectionable than was the form before the Secretary when he cabled.

Among other things the Secretary in this protest says:

The Government of the United States has in the past made clear, as doubtless have other nations, that it can not concede the right of Mexico to limit, by its municipal law, this Government's rights of intervention to protect the rights of its citizens residing or sojourning in that country, nor concede that waivers such as those referred to in this provision can annul the relations of citizens to their own government and extinguish the obligations of this Government to protect its citizens in Mexico. In so far as the proposed provision would hamper the transfer to another foreigner of foreign-owned lands, it would apparently in a sense be confiscatory of rights enjoyed by the foreign owner from the time of his acquisition of the property.

Paraphrase:

You are instructed to bring the foregoing immediately to the attention of Gen. Carranza and state that the provisions above mentioned seem to indicate a proposed policy toward foreigners which is fraught with possible grave consequences affecting the commercial and political relations of Mexico with other nations. Further, that the American Government can not acquiesce in any direct confiscation of foreign-owned properties in Mexico or indirect confiscation. You will bring to the attention of Gen. Carranza the department's earnest desire that he give these matters his careful consideration with a view to avoiding the possibility of the disturbance of hitherto pleasant relations existing between the two Governments, and with a view to avoiding future serious difficulties under the proposed constitution with any government organized under it.

Following this protest Ambassador Fletcher left the United States and arrived in Mexico City on February 19. He at once proceeded to the Mexican foreign office before presenting his credentials to Carranza at Queretaro, and following his visit cabled, answering the department's telegram of February 19:

Minister for foreign affairs stated that he has no knowledge of any decree affecting the rights of foreigners to real estate or mines to which such foreigners already have clear title * * *. He further stated that the legislation emanating from the new constitution with respect to property rights would, in his opinion, in no wise prejudice present property rights and at the same time called attention to article of new constitution which provides that no laws may be made retroactive.

Fletcher then proceeded to Queretaro and presented his credentials to Carranza on March 3.

The Mexican Congress has never yet, up to the present date, passed legislation carrying out the provisions of the constitution of Mexico with reference to oil properties or other properties of foreigners—that is, article 27 or what we know as the confiscatory clauses of the constitution.

Carranza from time to time issued decrees of infinite variety, threatening and attempting to confiscate American properties; but yet, on August 2, 1917, Fletcher wires that American companies need have no uneasiness, "that it is not the intention of the Mexican Government to take over properties now in exploitation," and distinctly stated that there would be no confiscation of these properties. Again followed protests from the United States concerning different decrees, as, for instance, January 23, 1918, and January 27, 1918.

On April 4, 1918, our department was compelled to say:

This Government, acting on behalf of American citizens who have expended large sums of money in securing petroleum lands in Mexico, and who placed their reliance, as they were justified in doing, on the Mexican laws granting ownership of deposits under the surface to the owners of the surface, protests emphatically and solemnly against the petroleum decree, declaring it to be an act of despoliation and confiscation, and in the premises reserves all rights.

On April 2, 1918, Fletcher, in obedience to instructions, had already entered "this formal and solemn protest of the Government of the United States against the violation or infringement of legitimately acquired American private property rights involved in the enforcement of said decree."

A year and ten days after Fletcher's cablegram to the department of Carranza's assurance that no confiscation would be attempted, Lansing, among other things, cabled:

And to further direct Your Excellency's attention to the necessity which may arise in order to protect the property of its citizens in Mexico, divested or injuriously affected by the said decrees, to impel the United States to protect the property of its citizens.

Fletcher under date of August 3, 1918, conveyed to the Secretary of State Mr. Carranza's claim that his decrees were only fiscal and temporary, later to be followed by legislation which was in the province of Congress.

Carranza stated that if the difficulty could not be settled except by war or intervention, he was sorry but was prepared to confront this alternative.

We, of course, "backed off" and continued to talk.

On August 14 Carranza refused to postpone his decrees.

On August 17, 1918, Mr. E. Garza Perez, subsecretary "by reason of the illness of the secretary of state for foreign affairs," to Henry P. Fletcher, American ambassador, stated:

The Mexican Government believes it necessary to state that it will not accept the interference of any foreign power * * * and that it will not admit any proceeding which under the pretext of protection to foreign interests wounds the national decorum or impairs the exercise of its sovereignty.

On March 18, 1919, the secretary again protested "against Mexican petroleum decrees."

April 16, 1919, another protest, and on the same date another, and in answer to these latter protests the Mexican Government among other things curtly announced that the "protests of foreign nations can not suspend the effects of laws issued by the Government of another nation."

On June 18, 1919, another protest was forwarded entering "a vigorous protest as threatening to confiscate rights which its citizens have legally acquired," and—

You will simultaneously make reservation of rights for damages in behalf of American citizens whose interests are jeopardized by said decrees.

On October 1, 1919, again protesting, our State Department cabled Mexico:

In this view of the matter the Government of the United States, owing as it does, to its citizens the duty of protecting them in foreign lands, both in their persons and their property rights, must strongly protest against the action of the Mexican Government as outlined above and characterize it as threatening confiscation and a denial of justice.

The State Department expresses the hope that, pending the general settlement of this question and specific legislation by the Mexican Congress, the administrative authorities of Mexico will respect the rights of American citizens and will withdraw its insistence that they comply with the provisions of the decrees.

It must be again emphasized that no legislation has as yet been enacted by the Mexican Congress, but that all these protests are brought forth by insistence upon Carranza's decrees.

On January 9, 1917, we protested against a "further decree" requiring renouncement of citizenship by foreigners acquiring property in Mexico.

On January 31 we again announced the same position.

On December 5, 1918, the acting American consul at Nogales, Ariz., forwarded the department a copy of the proposed agrarian law for the State of Sonora, and on the 24th we protested that there was no provision for compensation for the taking over of American property under this law.

The American consul at Nogales was notified of this protest to Mexico.

We again protested on March 21, 1919.

On July 16, 1919, we learned that the legislature of Sonora had adopted the law, and earnestly protested and urged that prompt action be taken to prevent the coming into force of this measure threatening American interests.

The law was adopted and promulgated on July 3, 1919, to be effective July 27, 1919.

On August 14, we protested on the ground that the law was ambiguous; that the provisions fixing value violates article 117 of the Mexican constitution; that the measure provides for the taking of property "by purely arbitrary administrative action"; * * * "which violates article 14 of the Mexican constitution"; etc., and we said in closing:

That the Mexican Government is hereby advised that the American Government will be forced to take up this question with the Mexican Government, * * * in the event that absolute and even-handed justice is denied American citizens.

We also protested directly through the consul to the governor of the State of Sonora, and this gentleman delivered us an answer covering 11 typewritten pages.

The evidence of Bracey Curtis and others, part 12, page 1833, is to the effect that in a personal interview with the governor of Sonora, the latter stated in effect that: "I have not put the law in effect. How are you hurt?"

This governor of the State of Sonora, to whom we have addressed these protests, is Adolfo de la Huerta, now, on the 25th day of May, by virtue of a declaration of some of the members of the Mexican Congress, announced to the world as the President of the Republic of Mexico.

The official notes of the United States Government to Mexico, with reference to all these matters, as well as to the Jenkins case, are printed in part 21 of the evidence, etc., taken by this committee.

JENKINS CASE.

With reference to the Jenkins case it can not be too strongly emphasized to your committee and through you to the American people, that the statement of Carranza that the Jenkins case is in the hands of the State authorities and that his government could not interfere, is a statement not only calculated but deliberately intended to mislead the American people.

Of course, taking the statement as true and at its face value, Americans respecting our form of government thought that possibly Mexico might be correct in the position which she assumed.

Carranza knew all the facts, as did every one of his sympathizers and supporters, including those who have recently overthrown him.

The governor of the State of Puebla is the brother of Luis Cabrera, recently secretary of the treasury of Mexico. He was appointed as governor and later came to be "elected" through the farcical returns made by his own officials and under the "free suffrage" proclamation heretofore referred to.

The State of Puebla had and yet has a constitution, safely laid away, and by Mr. Cabrera never lugged into sight.

By the provisions of this constitution judges must be elected: Cabrera had so little regard for even the forms of the constitution that he did not attempt to have the judge declared elected, but simply appointed one himself.

The constitution provides that no judge shall hold office who is not a citizen or resident of the State of Puebla. "Gov." Cabrera appointed a citizen and resident of the State of Jalisco.

In answer to a question as to this procedure, he justified his actions by stating that the legislature had suspended the constitution and laws and vested him with all power. And this is the man behind whom Carranza has hidden and chuckled, while defying the United States and sending us communications calculated and intended to deceive the American people; meanwhile he worked his sweet will with an American citizen whom the testimony in the case shows to be of the highest character, and whose property the wolves of Carranza and Cabrera's selection and appointment are seeking to, and devouring.

CARRANZA PRO-GERMAN AND CENTRAL AMERICAN PLOTS.

As disclosed by the evidence in these hearings, Carranza and all his followers were pro-German during the war, and he directly, with certain of his followers, including Obregon, were interested in stirring up strife, trouble, and revolution in the countries to the south of Mexico; seeking to overthrow the established Governments of Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala, and through the assistance of one or two other States form a Latin-American Union with Mexico against the United States of America. (See testimony of C. E. Jones, Admiral Caperton, Commander Beauregard, and other evidence, pts. 20 and 22, pp. 2889, 3203 and 3216.)

The Carranza government was prosecuting a war against the United States during the period immediately prior and subsequent to Carranza's recognition by this country.

In pursuing the "plan of San Diego," American men, women, and children were killed in Texas inside the international boundary. American citizens driven from home, and American soldiers attacked and murdered at night. (See the testimony taken at San Antonio, Tex., pt. 8 of these hearings; also see note of Secretary Lansing, June 20, 1916, printed in pt. 8, pp. 1215 et seq., with note, "The report of the Secretary of State has my approval," signed "Woodrow Wilson.")

INTERFERENCE BY DEPARTMENTS THIS GOVERNMENT TRIAL VILLA— COLUMBUS MURDERERS.

The Pershing expedition went into Mexico with the announced and sole purpose of the capture of Pancho Villa and his fiends who were engaged with him in the massacre of Americans on American soil in the State of New Mexico, on March 9, 1916. Some of those engaged with Villa in this massacre were wounded and captured at Columbus; they were indicted in Luna County, N. Mex., for murder, and when ready to be tried a representative of the Department of Justice presented to the presiding judge a telegraphic request or suggestion from the War Department and Department of Justice of the United States that such trial should be postponed upon the ground that it might cause complications with Mexico.

The Supreme Court of Texas decided that Carranza was at war with the United States at this time, while this judge ruled against the contention of these murderers at Columbus, and that there was no state of war existing. (See testimony of Judge E. L. Medler, pt. 10, pp. 1647 et seq.)

CARRIZAL MASSACRE AND WITHDRAWAL AMERICAN FORCES THERE.

About the middle of June, 1916, while Pershing was yet in Mexico, a message was received by that general from Gen. Jacinto Trevino, of the Mexican Army, notifying Pershing to the effect that he should not move his troops south, east, or west.

Gen. Pershing immediately replied to the effect that he would move his troops in whatsoever direction pleased him and would only take orders from his own Government and that if he were attacked by Gen. Trevino's forces he would immediately attack Trevino with his entire military strength.

Within a day or two Pershing's expedition at Carrizal, under command of Capts. Boyd and Morey, and Lieut. Adair, were attacked by Trevino's forces at that place; Boyd and Adair were killed; about 15 colored troopers were killed, and several made prisoners.

Maj. Gen. Robert L. Howze, United States Army, in command of about 300 mounted troops, made his way to Santo Domingo Ranch within 9 miles of the battlefield at Carrizal, and rescued Capt. Morey and several of the troopers who had been wounded in the fight.

Testifying before this committee, Gen. Howze states that he then had 300 mounted troops within 9 miles of the battlefield, and, in answer to the question "Did you feel competent to deal with the situation as it existed at and around Carrizal with the troops you then had?" he answered "Yes."

Without being allowed to go to Carrizal he returned to Casas Grandes under orders. The bodies of the dead at Carrizal were recovered by civilians sent down from El Paso by Gen. Bell. (See testimony George Turner, colored trooper, pt. 12, p. 1561; testimony of Maj. Gen. Howze, pt. 12, p. 1568.)

Following this Carrizal massacre Secretary Lansing addressed his note to Carranza criticizing him in the severest terms. (See pt. 8, p. 1215.)

We attempted to adjust matters with Mexico through a conference between Gen. Hugh Scott and Gen. Obregon at El Paso. The result was "nil."

We agreed then to the appointment of a committee with three Mexicans and three Americans to discuss matters of difference. This committee met and conferred for some time. The Mexican members refused positively to discuss any differences until American troops were removed from Mexican soil.

Pershing was ordered out and—the committee adjourned without settling any differences.

Von Eckhardt was on such terms with Carranza that he could convey the Zimmerman note to Mexico, suggesting that Mexico should secure the assistance of the Japanese in a coalition against the United States, and should take over by conquest Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona.

This was exactly the old "plan of San Diego."

MEXICAN I. W. W. AGITATION IN THE UNITED STATES.

Under this plan Mexican laborers and others at Bisbee, Ariz., and at different points along the border of the United States and in different mining camps were stating to other Mexicans upon this side that sooner or later they would take over the border States and return them to Mexico. (See testimony of Capt. Harry Wheeler, pt. 12, p. 1873, et seq.)

Thus agitations developing along radical lines in Bisbee continued and are yet continuing.

On December 13, 1919, the Army Intelligence reported that:

The radical movement reported last week as being fostered in northern Sonora by Juan Farrel, Jesus Palma, and Arnulfo Cardenas, is said to be extending north of the international line into the United States. Delegates from this organization have been preaching communism and Bolshevism among the miners on properties in Arizona. At one mine, the Tres de Mayo, situated 13 miles northeast of Nogales, Ariz., and 5 or 6 miles north of the international line, the appearance of these agitators resulted in such intolerable insolence on the part of the miners, and such threats of invasion from the Mexican side of the border, that the subdistrict commander at Nogales posted a Cavalry patrol in the neighborhood. This action quieted the agitation materially.

Another hot-bed of radicalism is said to be in northern Coahuila. Bolshevik agitators operating in that region have made the Sabinas mines their headquarters; laborers there do not deny their Bolsheviki affiliations. This organization is said to have sent delegates to a number of Texas towns, notably El Paso, Marfa, Alpine, Del Rio, Eagle Pass, San Antonio, Laredo, Brownsville, and Galveston.

The committee, from evidence in its possession, some of which has been given publicly, are convinced that Mr. Carranza and some of his advisers sought to take advantage of the recent strike of coal miners in the United States following the labor troubles in the steel industry; and the correspondence and papers, while they may be found in other portions of the printed testimony, are again set forth here as follows, to wit:

[Translation.]

V. C.
SEÑOR LIC. MANUEL AGUIRRE BERLANGA.

MEXICO, June 14, 1919.

ESTEEMED FRIEND: Señor Lino Caballo, bearer of this letter, is the person who, in company with two friends, will bring to you the manifestos and the plan which they desire to put into practice in the State of Texas.

This plan being very favorable for Mexico, please aid them in every way and give the necessary instructions in the frontier States.

I remain, your affectionate friend,

V. CARRANZA.

[Translation.]

V. C.
Licentiate MANUEL AGUIRRE BERLANGA.

MEXICO, August 19, 1919.

ESTEEMED FRIEND: The present (letter) will be handed you by Mr. Juan N. Garcia and the two friends from Texas who accompany him and, in accordance with our conversation, please give them the guaranties they request as well as the pecuniary elements they desire.

I remain, affectionately, your friend,

V. CARRANZA.

Num. 975, Words 20, Charges official. H. D. 9.30 a. m.

From Mexico, F. D., National Palace, July 5, 1919.

To Nuevo Laredo, Tamaulipas, via Federal (lines).

Mr. Melquiades Garcia, consul of Mexico; residence, Mexican Consulate, Laredo, Tex.

Chapultepec 3. Please deliver to Mr. Lino Caballo the sum of HG VRO. PNFTS dollars, according to credentials he will present to you. I greet you.

V. CARRANZA.

No. 975. 10.40 a. m. F. R. C.

No. 1269. Words 25. Charges official H. D. 10.15 a. m.
 From Mexico, F. D., National Palace, July 5, 1919.
 To Nuevo Laredo Tamaulipas, via Federal (lines). Urgent.
 Mr. Lino Caballo, residence, Hotel Vega.

Your telegram No. 25 dated in Lampasas to the President. Mexican consul in Laredo, Tex., already has orders to furnish you amount you indicate. I salute you affectionately.

BARAGAN.

No. 1269, 11.45 a. m. F. R. C.

MEXICO CITY, Dispatch No. 5.

Inclosure No. 1.

MY DEAR * * *: Notwithstanding the extravagant and unrestrained character of my information I have pleasure in sending you, in accordance with your desire expressed during our recent conversation, the notes taken by a secret agent at a meeting held here on the 15th instant by Lodge 23 of the agitators and extremists who, including several I. W. W. agents, form in this city their plans of bolshevik character.

It seems that three delegates, two Americans and one Mexican, having arrived from the United States and presented themselves at the meeting, claimed that "the society" would be able at the beginning of next November to call a general strike of all miners and metal workers in the United States, that they have 3,000,000 adherents in that country where they will be able to seize one western and two Atlantic ports. They declare that a large number of American soldiers are preparing to take sides with them, that in a town of Colorado they will establish the capital of the reformed Government of the United States. It was stated further that handbills printed in Spanish would be sent from New York to Laredo by special carrier, announcing to Mexicans that the territory taken by the United States would be returned if the Mexican people agreed to join them. It was also stated that the strike, with many inducements, will be extended later to Mexico by those who join in the revolution in the United States.

As I have mentioned to you, the preposterous character of these statements does not appear to recommend credence.

I am, my dear * * *

Yours, very sincerely,

[Translated copy of telegrams.]

Number 958. Words, 28. Value, official. Time, 9.45 a. m.
 From Mexico, D. F., National Palace, Dec. 14, 1919.
 To Nuevo Laredo, Tamps., via Federal.
 Mr. Augustin Garza Peres; residence, Hotel Vega.

Contents your telegram No. 215 dated Monterrey noted. President states await there arrival of Luis N. Morrones, who will give you instructions appropriate actual circumstances. Greet you affectionately.

P. G. FARIAS,
Private Secretary of the President.

No. 958, 11.45 a. m. J. F.

Number 75. Words, 54. Value, official. Pass No. 1367. Time, 1.20 p. m.
 From Nuevo Laredo, Tamps., December 14, 1919.
 To Mexico, D. F., National Palace, via Federal.
 Mr. Pedro Gil Farias, private secretary to the President.

Your superior telegram No. 958. I have talked with Morrones here. He states does not deem trip convenient (or proper). Am leaving Tampico, where await instructions. Caballo will stop at Monterrey for few days with his family (or friends). Greet you respectfully.

AGUSTIN GARZA PEREZ.

No. 76. 1.20 p. m. F. J.

[From private report to committee.]

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., December 22, 1919.

Senator ALBERT B. FALL.

MY DEAR SENATOR: On December 14, 1919, Lino Caballo, Augustin Garza Peres, and D. H. Holguin arrived in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, and registered at Hotel Vega from Monterrey, and were assigned to room No. 1. Their business was supposed to have been to confer with Luis N. Morrones, who arrived at Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, on December 12, 1919, and registered at the Vega Hotel and was assigned to room No. 7. Morrones departed for Mexico City on December 17, 1919.

On November 8, 1919, Agustin Garza Perez and Antonio Villarreal arrived in Laredo, Texas, from El Paso and registered at the Pena Hotel, and left there on November 19 for Mexico City.

Sincerely,

One of these men, Garcia and various other Mexican agents, have been under observation for two years by United States officers and reports show the intimate connection of some of them with Mexican officials. (See Appendix in Gates testimony, pt. 19, p. 2846.)

Fantastic and ridiculous as the "Plan of San Diego," the Zimmerman proposition, the notes of the meeting of Lodge 23 in the city of Mexico, Carranza letters referring to the proposed revolution, may appear to the sober people of the United States; to the Mexican agents and I. W. W., they are yet schemes and plans which have been seriously contemplated and which we are justified in saying have not been abandoned.

The Mexican Government, as shown by the testimony of Admiral Caperton, has received material for munitions factory from Japan and, as is well known, has for years been seeking a more or less close alliance with that country.

The committee, of course, do not credit the suggestion that Japan itself contemplates any further alliance with Mexico at this time, than close trade relations, to secure which she may be willing to listen to wild suggestions from some enthusiastic hot-blooded Mexican. Nevertheless official reports of one of the departments of this Government contain some interesting suggestions which may justify consideration in connection with other matters contained in the present report.

JAPANESE.

Information has been received that there are more than 300 Japanese families established on the Limon Ranch, the million-acre property in the Xicotencatl district of Tamaulipas, reported some months ago as having been bought with a view to Japanese colonization. Much corn and sugar cane is raised on this land, and traces of oil are apparent.

It is reliably reported that Japanese liners arrive at the port of Salina Cruz, Oaxaca, every 10 days; that the Japs enter Mexico through that port in increasing numbers every year; that they practically control commerce on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. It is further intimated that much of the anti-Chinese propaganda so widely disseminated along the west coast may be traced to Japanese sources; that they are largely responsible for government deportation of Chinese from Oaxaca to Chiapas and into Guatemala.

The Mexican Government has granted a concession to a Japanese concern known as the Matsumoto Trading Co. of Japan for the exploitation of all oil land on either side of the Tamesi River. Two representatives of this company, D. K. Komitte and T. A. Iskawa, have been in the region for some time inspecting the territory between Tampico and Tuxpam. They were also provided with safe conducts to go under cover into the Pelaez district with a view to purchasing some oil wells controlled by a Spanish company there. It is further reported that this Japanese concern is to finance the construction of a railroad between Tampico and Tuxpam.

Japanese interests are said to be planning to lay a cable from Salina Cruz, Oaxaca, to South American ports. In this connection attention is called to the information in the weekly report of November 8, 1919, regarding the virtual Japanese absorption of the Isthmus of Tehauntepec country; also reported concessions by the Mexican Government to Japanese concerns for the construction of three railroad lines across the isthmus.

There are also to be found, if necessary, a series of letters and correspondence between the Mexican foreign office and one of its ministers, one of which is as follows:

[Translation—Excerpts from letters.]

Eliseo Arredondo, from minister of foreign affairs.

MEXICO CITY, July 20, 1919.

There is much commercial activity in prospect and great manufacturing movement due to the initiative of rich Germans, to whom the government has the intention of lending its decided support.

Aguilar will advise you how the treaty with Japan is coming along and I remain convinced of the great advantage it will bring us for our national integrity.

MEXICAN ATTACKS ON PRESIDENT WILSON.

The committee has given publicity heretofore, through a report made to the President of the United States and otherwise, to certain documents the authenticity of which can not be disputed, showing the attitude of Carranza toward the President of the United States of America, as, for instance:

[Translation.

MINISTRY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Mexico City, July 6, 1919.

To His Excellency ELISEO ARREDONDO.

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Mexico in Madrid:

Your note dated the 4th of the past month received. In view of the internal crisis which the United States are experiencing, Wilson's policy is provoking indignation among the parties and the press is attacking the President severely. He goes from one blunder to another and shows each day more clearly that he is a perfectly incompetent person.

If the failure in Europe were not sufficient, it would be corroborated by the inexpedient notes that we have received from Washington and which President Carranza has answered with the impertinence those Yankees merit. I see in all this a criminal intention to intervene in our country. Time will show me to be right.

AGUILAR.

[Private correspondence of the President of the United Mexican States.]

MEXICO, D. F., June 29, 1919.

Miss HERMILA GALINDO,
Ignacio Ramirez Street, No. 6, City.

ESTEEMED YOUNG LADY: It is necessary that your book the Carranza Doctrine, be finished in a short time, since I desire that you immediately proceed to write a second part of it, for which purpose I shall shortly send you a "bluebook," which we are about to publish and which will serve to justify the attitude of my Government in its systematic hostility toward foreign speculators, especially Americans and English.

Do not forget my injunction to describe in lively colors the tortuousity of the American policy with relation to our country, causing the figure of Wilson to stand well out as the director of that policy. I also enjoin you to be very careful about the corrections which I have made in the original (manuscript) which you brought me.

I salute you affectionately,

V. CARRANZA.

These documents are only set forth herein as evidence of the treatment of this Government and its officials by the Mexican Government and its officials.

During all the years which we have just been discussing—that is, from prior to the recognition of Carranza in 1915 to and including the present period—American property owners and American citizens have been suffering indignities at the hands of Mexicans, while the loss of life has reached such proportions finally that the list of innocent American dead in Mexico, as shown on page A of this report, is appalling.

Your committee have endeavored under the ninth head in this general discussion, as shortly as possible, to convey some information as directed as to—

ANY AND ALL ACTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO AND ITS CITIZENS IN DEROGATION OF THE RIGHTS OF THE UNITED STATES OR OF ITS CITIZENS.

SUFFERING, STARVATION, DISEASE, AND ANARCHY THROUGHOUT MEXICO.

We will only direct your attention for a few moments in closing to conditions as existing among the people of Mexico themselves. We have referred to the loss of property and hope that we have shed some light upon physical conditions of the so-called Republic.

A reference to the report of Mr. ——— (Exhibit 1), whose name must necessarily be suppressed, attached to and made a part of this report, will be found not only enlightening but instructive. The witness making this report has been known to the chairman of the committee for approximately 30 years. He is thoroughly familiar with Mexico, having operated and mined in that country for a great many years and speaks Spanish with great fluency.

This report was made at the request of the committee that we might have the latest information based upon actual investigation extending from the Texas line over the National lines of Mexico to the City of Mexico, and back over the Central line and again to the American border, with side trips into the different States along the route.

Some of the statements may be considered of such an extravagant character as to need corroboration. For instance, Mr. ——— makes certain statements with reference to the prevalence of venereal diseases among the population of Mexico at this time.

The testimony of Miss Agnes C. Laut, part 2, page 370, will, while more specific in its character, merely serve to corroborate the statements made in the report referred to. Miss Laut is a writer of experience and a cultivated lady, who visited hospitals in the poorer districts, slums, and byways of Mexico, for the purpose of ascertaining and reporting to the Christian people of this country true conditions in Mexico as she found them.

At best, the population of Mexico is of slow growth as compared with that of other nations, largely because of the character of the different populations of the country and the fact that in the outlying districts there is little sanitation and are to be found but few physicians. The consequence is that while the estimated population in 1827 was approximately 7,500,000, the largest estimate which has ever been placed upon it since has been only 15,000,000. Of course it is impossible to say definitely now, as it always has been, what the population of Mexico really is.

From the testimony of various witnesses, as well as that of Mr. Henry Lane Wilson and Mr. ———, it is undoubtedly the fact that since 1910 the total population of Mexico, as of that date, has very materially decreased. Mr. ———'s estimate of that decrease at 5,000,000 out of the total may be exaggerated, but to those who know Mexico as he does, few would dare to contradict his statement.

For 10 years a new generation of boys has been reaching the age of 18 each year; each of those boys of the first period, that is to say, 1911, would now be 27 years of age and for 9 years will have known nothing but force and license and outlawry and robbery and violence and rape and rapine.

It was said 8 years ago that in the rural districts of practically every State in the Union, there remained not a girl over the age of 10 years, who had not been ravished by some marauder or bandit or soldier.

Thousands of Mexicans among the poorer classes have sought refuge in the United States for the past 10 years, for the purpose of gaining a livelihood and escaping starvation in their own country.

Within 60 days prior to the middle of March of this year, 1920, there crossed the river at the international boundary line between Eagle Pass and Brownsville, Tex., such large numbers of Mexicans that it was impossible for the immigration and custom officials, aided by the State officials, to keep accurate account of their number. From the best evidence obtainable by the committee (see pt. 14, pp. 2142 to 2164, testimony of various witnesses) the estimate upon this number, placed by those who were accustomed to, and whose business it was to handle Mexican labor, was that during this period 75,000 Mexicans from the central Mexican States of Michoacan, Guanajuato, and Jalisco, with some from Guerrero, came into the United States between the points mentioned.

The committee had the assistance of Government border officials, inspectors, etc.; of the Texas Rangers and of employment agents in interviewing these Mexicans, in the endeavor to ascertain the cause of their immigration from Mexico.

The universal story was that of famine, starvation, robbery, and outrage at the hands of their own people, both of Carrancistas and of those in revolution, who are always denominated by the Mexican poorer class as the "Villistas." The only difference, in so far as the testimony shows, in the treatment received by the poor of Mexico is that the "Villistas" left them a little something to eat while the Carrancistas took it all.

Rumblings of the present revolution also had evidently been heard by these people and many of them state they were tired of fighting and gave this as one reason for their immigration. All, however, had one story in common: Crops attempted to be raised were seized by bandits, and in many instances, wantonly destroyed by turning horses or other animals into the field, or even by burning the crops upon the ground.

This is hard for civilized people to realize, but yet if you turn to the testimony of one of your committees, taken in 1912, reincorporated part 17, page 2616, these hearings (testimony of Charles Smith), you will find evidence that even at that date different bands going through the country did not attempt to discriminate between fighting men and noncombatants, and that every little village was considered a fair object of loot, the women the playthings to be taken to camp and dropped by the roadside as another little village is reached, where another supply of women and loot might be obtained.

Again this condition throws light upon the interesting subject of Mexico's population; that it is a fact that it is not a homogeneous people and Mexico not a nation but a population of different tribes with nothing, or little, in common between the different localities.

Again as to this and other like conditions, refer to the testimony of Harry C. Donoho, part 14, page 2130.

This is the story of June, 1919; a two days' trip horseback from San Fernando to Tuxpam, the richest agricultural district in southern Mexico:

We rode for two days through absolutely the richest agricultural district in Mexico, with the prettiest little farms one could imagine, and passed village after village and corn fields where everything had been burned, and every time we would come to a little farm house or little village I would go up and try to arouse some one, and during that entire two days ride we didn't see a single solitary soul. * * *

In the Balcazar district, over near Tanhuijo, I found the Government had posted notices, adopting the plan of Weyler in Cuba, a concentration camp. Balcazar is also a rich agricultural district, * * * orders were that if the men were found outside the camp of Balcazar they would be hunted down and shot as rebels and they were not even permitted to plant their corn and their people were on the verge of starvation. * * *

I saw three women killed at El Hijo when the Carrancistas came in there. At the town of Anona the Carrancistas gathered all the old women and little children and told them to leave the city, to go into the mountains, that they were going to burn the city; they gathered the young women and girls up in a group, between 120 and 130, and took these girls and young women and delivered them over to the Carranza garrison at Los Naranjos, and the town was burned.

This witness is testifying as an eyewitness.

Again to the testimony of Mr. ———, part 16, page 2459:

We rode up * * * and called for some water. A woman answered that they had water but had no clothes and could not bring it out to us.

During the same trip we saw a dozen people waiting around a sick cow until she died, and the owner skinned her; then they cut up and ate the meat. I asked them if they were not afraid to do it and they answered that they had as well die from bad meat as to starve to death. The people away from mining camps eat lizards, toads, burro meat, and anything they can get.

Reports in the State Department will verify the evidence of eyewitnesses as reported by your committee.

Mexico is without a government except as the form changes and one person or another, by force of arms, claims to represent a government.

The people of Mexico, that is, that great voiceless, submerged, inarticulate mass, the "80 per cent" whom President Wilson saw from the platform at Indianapolis several years since, are inarticulate except when they reach civilization on this side of the line and seek work from supposedly despised Americans, that they may live and hope to send back a few dollars with which to rescue their families from starvation.

Their condition has grown worse from day to day, month to month, and year to year, and for 10 years the United States of America, that great Christian civilized Nation of the world, has stood by "fiddling" while Mexico burned.

WHAT, IF ANY, MEASURES SHOULD BE TAKEN TO PREVENT A RECURRENCE OF SUCH OUTRAGES, ETC.

When this committee was appointed—and until it was completing its investigations along the international border, March 29—Carranza was the President of Mexico.

Since that time Carranza has been overthrown, by an armed revolution during which he is reported to have met his death.

Carranza had been recognized by our Government as de jure President of Mexico, March 3, 1917, or a little later.

This was a "conditional" recognition, as will be seen by reference to the note of this Government through "Representative" Parker at Queretaro, January 22, 1917.

Recognition is, as a general rule, absolute and irrevocable.

Nevertheless, it may happen, by way of exception, that the recognition is conditional or is given sub modo. Such is the case when certain charges or restrictions are imposed on a new state at the time when its independent existence is recognized, such as an obligatory neutrality, commercial liberty, or religious liberty. If the restriction constitutes a condition, the powers which have subjected their recognition to it have the right to insist upon the new State's conforming itself to the condition imposed, and if it fails, to consider their recognition as not given.

Examples of the restrictions imposed on the independence of a new State are the permanent neutrality of Belgium; the restrictions safeguarding religious liberty, imposed not only on Bulgaria, a semisovereign State, by Article V of the Treaty of Berlin, but also on Montenegro by Article XXVII of the same treaty; on Serbia by Article XXXV, and on Roumania by Article XLIV; the restrictions imposed on the independent State of the Congo, in favor of commercial freedom, by the general act of the Congress of Berlin of February 26, 1885.

So says John Bassett Moore.

That an opportunity might be made peaceably to secure redress for the wrongs which American citizens and the American Government had suffered for so many years at the hands of Mexico and Carranza, one of the members of this committee upon his personal initiative, offered a resolution on December 3, 1919, requesting the President to withdraw recognition of the Carranza government.

Had the President pursued the course suggested, we (the United States) would have been in a position to follow a course which might have resulted in an understanding with that Government as a prerequisite to again recognizing it, or left us free to pursue any other course.

Through the revolution and the death of Carranza we again have the opportunity heretofore presented upon several different occasions: To demand and secure assurances for the protection of our citizens in Mexico and upon her borders; for the performance by Mexico of her national and international obligations; for offering our effective assistance to the starving, downtrodden, bandit-ridden, and harassed people of Mexico, and for restoring the status of peace to our own continent.

We are informed that a new "government" is being formed in Mexico. In the ordinary course we would be called upon to deal with this new condition.

OUR COURSE SHOULD BE CLEAR.

We should first follow one policy, viz:

(a) Wait before recognizing Gov. de la Huerta as President of Mexico until it shall be assured that his election is approved by the Mexican people and that his administration is possessed of stability to endure and of the disposition to comply with the rules of international comity and the obligations of treaties. (See Seward to Foster, May 16, 1877.)

(b) We should let everyone who assumes to exercise authority in any part of Mexico know in the most unequivocal way that we shall vigilantly watch the fortunes of those Americans who can not get away, and shall hold those responsible for their sufferings and losses to a definite reckoning. That can be and will be made plain beyond the possibility of a misunderstanding. (President Wilson's address to Congress on Mexican conditions, Aug. 27, 1913.)

(c) Repeat to the Mexicans now what Evarts said in 1878:

"The first duty of a government is to protect life and property. This is a paramount obligation. For this governments are instituted, and governments neglecting or failing to perform it become worse than useless. This duty the Government of the United States has determined to perform to the extent of its power toward its citizens on the border. It is not solicitous; it never has been, about the methods or ways in which that protection shall be accomplished, whether by formal treaty stipulation or by informal convention; whether by the action of judicial tribunals or that of military forces. Protection in fact to American lives and property is the sole point upon which the United States are tenacious."

Then, if satisfied as to (a) recognize De la Huerta (or successor) upon conditions plainly expressed and affirmatively accepted, that—

Article 130 of the constitution of 1917 shall not apply to American missionaries, preachers, ministers, teachers, or American schools, nor to American periodicals, but that American missionaries, ministers, and teachers shall be allowed freely to enter, pass through, and reside in Mexico, there to freely reside, preach, teach, and write, and hold property and conduct schools without interference by the authorities so long as such ministers, teachers, or missionaries do not participate in Mexican politics or revolutions.

This clause of the constitution provides that no one except a Mexican by birth, may be a minister of any religious creed in Mexico: that neither in public or private shall such minister criticize the fundamental laws of the country, the authorities in particular or the Government in general.

That no periodical of a religious character shall comment upon any political affairs of the Nation, nor publish any information regarding the acts of the authorities or of private individuals in so far as the latter have to do with public affairs.

That ministers are incapable legally of inheriting by will from ministers of the same creed, or from any private individuals to whom they are not related by blood within the fourth degree, etc.

That article 3 shall not apply to any American teaching or conducting primary schools.

This article prohibits any minister or any religious corporation establishing or directing schools of primary instruction.

That none of the provisions of article 27 of said constitution with reference to limitations upon rights of property heretofore acquired by Americans, or which may hereafter be acquired, shall apply to Americans except where the limitation is written in the deed, lease, or other instrument of title, and particularly:

The provision of said article to the effect that the subsoil products other than of metalliferous minerals shall be the property of the National Government of Mexico, to be disposed of by decree or by law, shall not apply to the property of American citizens purchasing from other individuals or from State, national, or municipal authorities of Mexico, unless the limitation or reservation with reference to such subsoil products shall be written in the original deed or other instrument of conveyance transferring the surface of the property to such American purchaser.

That the prohibition against the ownership of property in lands, waters, or their appurtenances, or against the concessions for the development of mines, waters, or mineral fuels in the Republic to foreigners, shall not apply to American citizens.

That subsection 2 of said article 27 shall not apply to church properties or Episcopal residences, rectories, seminaries, orphan asylums, or collegiate establishments of religious institutions or schools held or owned by Americans.

(This clause operates without condemnation or other process to confiscate the property above mentioned.)

That the subdivisions of subsection 7 of article 27 described as a, b, c, d, and e shall not apply to the property of any Americans now owned under whatsoever title or which may hereafter be acquired, except where distinct reservations and limitations covering such provisions are affirmatively set out in the documents or evidences of title or transfer of such property.

(This is the provision under which the State governments are directed to and under which Sonora, through De la Huerta as governor, attempted to subdivide purely grazing pastures, positively unfitted for cultivation, owned by American citizens and others, without judicial process, but by mere administrative action, both as to survey and as to fixing the value, and in payment for which the owners are forced to accept what is known as an agrarian bond of the State of Sonora over our protests and as a matter of fact known to be entirely worthless.)

That article 33 of said constitution, providing that "The Executive shall have the exclusive right to expel from the Republic forthwith and without judicial process any foreigner whose presence he may deem inexpedient," shall not apply to American citizens who shall, when they so demand, have access to their consulate or consular agent or diplomatic representative and have the right to avail themselves of the assistance of such officials, and until after due judicial proceedings upon application of such American.

That such agreement should provide for the immediate appointment of a claims commission to pass on all claims for damage to Americans in Mexico, or upon its boundaries, the committee to be composed of American citizens appointed by the President of the United States, and a like number of Mexican citizens to be appointed as that Government may in said agreement provide, and that the decision of this commission shall be binding upon the respective governments and shall be immediately carried out by the payment of the damages adjudged.

That a like commission should be in such agreement provided for the settlement of disputes concerning the international boundary and waters of the Rio Grande River and of the Colorado River, and particularly the Chamizal dispute and the Colorado River irrigation complication, with power to such commission to render a decision for the payment of money and transfer of property, if any, necessary in the final settlement of such dispute.

It is not necessary to attempt here to point out all the provisions of this constitution of a similar character to those above referred to.

Having recognized any Mexican government upon the conditions as above set forth, then not only the moral support but financial aid without stint in so far as same is necessary for the refunding of all Mexican bonds, including external as well as the internal debt, with additional funds in sufficient amounts to rehabilitate all Mexican railroads and to maintain same, and also sufficient amounts to enable the recognized government to reestablish, organize, and thoroughly equip a purely national army not belonging to any particular chief, chieftain, or general, but operating solely under the national government, which shall immediately proceed where necessary to disarm all other armed forces or individuals in the Republic; together with sufficient funds to enable the Mexican Government to buy and pay for all arms and equipment which may be brought in and surrendered by individuals or armed bands or so-called armies.

Preferably this aid should be extended by the people of the United States as a national loan from them to the people of Mexico, upon long time and with moderate rates of interest, so that Mexico may not be compelled to refund her debt and finance her necessities through appeal to individuals and by granting special privileges or concessions to such individuals.

We have the legal right and it is our duty to refuse to recognize any government in Mexico which will not agree by way of a treaty to the foregoing conditions of recognition.

Should any government proposing to be recognized refuse to accede to the foregoing conditions of recognition, immediate renewed notice should be given as suggested under b and c, with the statement to the de facto officials wherever found:

That action would follow the warning in each and every case where action was necessary to preserve life or the property of an American citizen.

Following such warnings and statements, should such government not theretofore have restored order and peace in the Republic of Mexico and effectively extended protection to our citizens after due notice to the Mexican people that we would not war with them but in the words of McKinley that—

"First. In the cause of humanity and to put an end to the barbarities, bloodshed, starvation, and horrible miseries now existing there, and which the parties to the conflict are either unable or unwilling to stop or mitigate"

That we will send a police force consisting of the naval and military forces of our Government into the Republic of Mexico to open and maintain open every line of communication between the City of Mexico and every seaport and every border port of Mexico.

And that we owe to our citizens in Mexico and those who have been driven out of that country, the duty, as McKinley said:

"To afford them that protection and indemnity for life and property which no government there can or will afford and to that end to terminate the conditions that deprive them of legal protection."

In the giving notice that we are not warring upon the Mexican people, we should request their assistance; or at least that they refrain from joining any armed bands in any attacks upon our troops or forces, whose purpose would simply be the restoration of peace and order; protection of our own citizens; protection of Mexican citizens; restoration of American citizens to their properties; the affording of opportunity for the opening of mines, fields, and factories; and last, to afford the opportunity for the Mexican people themselves, in whatsoever manner they desire, to constitute a Mexican government of serious, competent, honest, and honorable men who will meet the civilized world upon a friendly ground and bind themselves to deal with other people as they themselves would be dealt with.

Respectfully submitted.

ALBERT B. FALL,
Chairman.

FRANK B. BRANDEGEE,
M. A. SMITH,

Subcommittee.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28, 1920.

Exhibit 1.

[Confidential.]

SAN ANTONIO, TEX., April 17, 1920.

Senator ALBERT FALL,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: After a four weeks' trip into Mexico, I have returned home unharmed and without meeting with any accident. Thinking that perhaps you would be interested to learn my impression of things Mexican as they appeared to me, with an outline of present conditions and tendencies from my point of view, I am writing this letter.

It is needless to inform you that although the entire committees elected to investigate Mexican affairs are censured, as busybodies, upon your head as chairman of the committee is concentrated the hatred and curses of the Carranza tribe. I found, however, amongst a certain class approval of the committee's work. The opinion of this class is that conditions continue to grow worse and there is no way to improve them without the aid and assistance of the American Government.

On March 15 I crossed the Rio Grande into Laredo, Mexico, and immediately the destruction and ruin wrought by the revolution became evident on every side in the shape of burned and dynamited houses and other properties, only a few of which have been repaired. Along the railroad line between Laredo and Monterey, capital of the State of Nuevo Leon, all section houses, stations, water tanks, and much private property presented a scene of ruin and desolation that can only be appreciated by seeing it. Upon our arrival at Monterrey, we found the fine depot there in ruins, and although this happened several years ago, there is no sign of restoration, which hardly agrees with the claim that Mexico is again enjoying peace and prosperity. At 8.30 p. m. we arrived at Saltillo where we were sidetracked till 3.30 a. m. of the 16th, in order to avoid passing through a certain stretch of country regarded as a danger zone between Saltillo and San Luis Potosi, in the night. And the same ruin of railroad and private property was noticeable here as on the previous day.

I spent the 17th, 18th, and 19th at San Luis Potosi, and although I saw some wreckage in the city, upon the whole it had suffered the least of all cities I visited. I found the magnificent depot, which was finished in 1910, in ruins, but it perhaps was an accident and not mere vandalism which produced most of the wreckage wrought by the revolution. I was informed by creditable witnesses that there are points less than 50 miles from the city which it would be very unsafe for anyone who wore even respectable clothes, to venture. Most of the large haciendas are deserted with all their improvements in a state of absolute ruin and unfortunately this applies to the whole State as well as adjoining States.

On the 19th, continuing south, I found the 326 miles of railroad which connects San Luis Potosi and Mexico City with its stations, section houses, water tanks and many of the private properties adjacent to the road, in the same state of ruin and abandonment as marked the 477 miles between Laredo and San Luis Potosi. It is well known that the physical condition of this road was exceptionally fine prior to the present revolution, and few roads anywhere were better administered.

I tarried eight days in Mexico City, and while there I visited many of the suburbs and although I found the city congested by a large increase of population, the result of the country people seeking safety, I found everywhere signs of decadence without being able to observe any return to that appearance of prosperity and progress so noticeable in the years just preceding the revolution begun by Madero.

In talking with people in the city I found a universal cord of distrust and anxiety, fearful that another period of revolution was approaching. And this feeling was little less noticeable among the supporters of Carranza than the other factions. Among the "gente decente" I found no rainbow of promise, no star of hope, through the election of any of the candidates now aspiring for the presidency: they regard them all as men who have already been tried and found wanting, and believe nothing good can spring from a source so vile.

I saw Mr. Bonillas's entrance into the City of Mexico on March 21. Mr. ——— and myself went to the Alameda to see the promised parade, and while waiting there we saw several hundred soldiers and many thousands of civilians—among whom were the different guilds of laborers—pass by on their way to the depot, and we felt just—fed in expecting to see a large and, to us, interesting parade, in which perhaps would be Mr. Carranza, or at least most of his cabinet. But to our utter astonishment, Mr. Bonillas, like a flash of lightning from a clear sky, suddenly darted past us in an auto surrounded by an escort of horsemen, at the highest rate of speed possible, as if afraid of an ambush. And it is probable that such a precaution on his part was prudent, as about 300 yards before he reached us in the vicinity of the Iron Horse, a demonstration was made against him by the followers of Obregon, so it was said. And this was the signal for an onslaught by the police, which resulted in the arrest of about 147 persons, among them 5 deputies, partisans of Obregon. It was claimed that the laborers that went to the depot to welcome Bonillas were each paid 1 peso for such a spontaneous display of patriotism. Although I do not know, yet from inquiry I believe this charge was true, in part at least.

I was unable to learn anything of interest about the status of Mr. Jenkins. Most of the Americans with whom I talked think he has been very shabbily treated by our Government. While I was there the papers of the city had very conspicuous headlines saying that Mr. Jenkins had renounced his American citizenship. However, in reading the news article, it was clear that he had done nothing of the kind. He had, however, agreed to comply with that article in the new constitution which permitted an American citizen to hold property if he promises not to appeal to his country for protection for said property. Mr. Jenkins, according to this article, in order to save a certain water right he claimed, submitted to this demand of the Government, which seemed to regard it as a great victory. In spite of the fact that our Government has stated that such renunciation on the part of an American citizen under duress could not operate.

On the 28th I left Mexico City over the old Mexican Central line, and the same signs of decadence and ruin were observable there that was seen on the line between Laredo and Mexico City in the shape of skeletons of trains burned, depots wrecked, section houses destroyed, and water tanks in ruin, with gnarled rails so twisted by heating them with burning ties as to render them useless, visible all along the line. I will give you as a concrete example of travel over this line the time required to reach Juarez, when reached at all, and the prior-war time. Prior to the revolution it took two days and nights, whereas now it takes five days and four nights, with a very inferior train service.

The 29th and 30th I spent in Zacatecas, a mere wreck of its prerevolutionary status. The census of 1910 showed a population of 28,000, whereas now the consensus of opinion of those living there is that there are not more than 9,000 inhabitants there. While only a few of the large buildings in the center of the city have been destroyed, thousands of houses on the outskirts are tumbling down from mere neglect and abandonment. The large building that housed most of the state offices, with the post office and several of the federal offices, was blown down and no effort to rebuild it has ever been made.

There is an incipient mining revival at Zacatecas, but it has not yet gone far enough to tell how it will end. Several large English concerns, already heavily interested in mining in the country, but with increased capital from home, have taken options on several of the old historic mines of the camp, besides making many denouncements of abandoned ground. This activity of the English extends to a large part of the Republic, and only the future can tell what the results will be. One of these same English concerns have leased a large mine at Fresnillo from the Robert Towne interests and are busily engaged in enlarging a 700-ton mill to a capacity to treat 2,000 tons a day.

On the 31st I continued my trail north and found the same wreckage and ruin everywhere. At Calera, 20 miles north of Zacatecas, long an important place with offices and large station buildings, etc., we found nothing but standing walls, with, if possible, a more desolate and ruined appearance greeting us farther north. At Canitas, where you have doubtless been many times, when you were at Nieves (1883-84)—as it was the station for that camp—I took the short cut route to Durango City, built since the revolution began. And although this seems to be about the most dilapidated and abandoned region I saw, presenting the appearance of the mouth of a volcano when compared with the more distant regions affected by it, but the depots, section houses, and water tanks all being of stone and new, presented a nice appearance when compared to some other stretches over which I had passed. But upon visiting the pueblos and the country districts the reverse is true, as it is the worst I saw on my entire trip.

I made a side trip to Sombrerete, which prior to the revolution was a very important mining camp, as well as the headquarters for large stock growing, especially sheep. This place itself—although I was informed there are other places yet worse in the same region—but here I saw the worst vandalism I met with anywhere. Hundreds of houses have been wrecked on the main streets of the pueblo during the battle that was fought there on the 8th, 9th, and 10th of May, 1911, when the Madero forces captured it, and they remain now just as they were left then, outside of removing some of the debris from the streets. Due to the bad conditions prevailing there and the impossibility of living there, other hundreds of houses were abandoned and the pueblo is now only a shade of its prerevolutionary size and importance. It then had a population of over 10,000 souls, now it has less than 3,000. The Zaragoza Hacienda, owned by Elorduy brothers, large stockmen, consisting of 433,000 acres, stocked with 200,000 head of sheep, 10,000 cattle, and 8,000 horses and mules, situated about 20 miles north of Sombrerete, is now entirely denuded of all its stock and the fences and all other improvements are completely ruined except some of the walls to their houses. This was a model ranch, and besides the stock, 21,000 acres was cultivated in corn, wheat, beans, and barley. This is but a sample of what has happened to all the ranches in that part of the country, and will with equal fidelity apply to the majority of the ranches in all parts of the Republic.

These men tell me that as full-handed as they were when the revolution came, it will be absolutely impossible for them to restock their place, and they propose to ask the aid of American capital to join them and furnish the capital to restock it, taking one-half interest in the business with them. These same men insist that a large part of the large ranches of Mexico will inevitably fall into the hands of Americans because the owners in many cases not only lack funds to rehabilitate their properties, but many of them have large mortgages hanging over them, preventing them absolutely from any hope of reestablishing their business.

April 1 I continued my trip to Durango City and found the decay and ruin no less pronounced here than between Canitas and Sombrerete. I was engaged in conversation by an apparently educated and fairly decent looking fellow from San Luis Potosi and the burden of his conversation was politics. He was a very strong Obregonist and openly avowed that if Mr. Obregon failed of election that his partisans were determined to put him in the chair even though it required war to do it. I found another party in Durango City expressing himself in the same manner, and in fact I found considerable numbers of that opinion and unafraid to express their opinions.

Many of the very best buildings of Durango City were dynamited and burned after they had been looted, and the reconstruction there is insignificant to date. They even carried their destruction so far that some overzealous general cut down the great shade trees in the main plaza of the city and made a desert of what had formerly been a pleasant oasis in which the weary traveler rested in Durango.

I remained three days and during that time I learned that business was at a very low ebb. I soon discovered—what I had been told and observed in several other cities—that the stocks of goods were very short and that stores that in prewar days had carried a stock of 500,000 pesos were now carrying nearer 50,000 stock, and the same applies to lesser stocks, and is very general throughout the country. I was there Holy Week, and the streets were lighted up, but I was told by residents that was only a gala day event and not an everyday occurrence. I found many of the ranchers living in the city and afraid to even visit their places for more than a few hours, if at all. The State and city treasuries are fundless and the governor has attempted to impose a half per cent on all sales, and there is a fight on about it now, the merchants claiming that they are paying every cent of taxes that they possibly can.

A railroad is being slowly extended into the timber region of the State west from the city. I am told there has been no trouble in the Sierra Madres for a long time, the poverty of the region in eatables, etc., prevents them from remaining there. The bandits or patriots, just as one chooses to dub them, stay in the mountains close to the plains or large centers of population, since it is in such places they can secure something to live on. In the mountain ranges between Durango City and Torreon these bandits live and prey upon the people living there. A common idea among Americans is that if we had war with Mexico guerrilla bands would go to the mountains, and there play havoc with our soldiers. Nothing is more unlikely than this, since it would be absolutely impossible for them to live in that region a large part of the year.

On the 5th I continued my trip to Torreon, and found the wreckage and ruin little less accentuated than in other parts of the trip. I found that considerable vandalism had been committed at Villa Lerdo, Gomez Palacios, and Torreon, the last named the least damaged. Although Torreon was very dirty and far from prepossessing as a place to live, yet I easily observed a vigor and energy that I had not encountered elsewhere. Torreon has been blessed with a very fine cotton crop, for which a very high price was obtained. This brought to that city a large amount of new capital far beyond the usual lot of such things. The cotton crop I was informed must have averaged at least 1½ bales to the acre, and this was sold at about 40 cents a pound, an unusual yield which was sold at an unusual price.

There is some activity among the mines, with many, owing to the high price of the metals, anxious to start operations, but they are laboring under many difficulties and beset with many obstacles in the shape of lack of supplies of all kinds, shortness of labor and the dilapidated condition of the transportation business of the country. The smelter at Velardena is going ahead slowly, the Mapimi is running fairly well, and the Torreon smelter is preparing to start up soon. With the present political unrest and a universal fear of a new revolution it is difficult to make a guess that is worthy of consideration of what will be the result of the present attempt to open the mines in so many regions at once.

I visited Mr. ———, who as you know was a forced guest of Gen. Villa for 15 days during the month of February. He says of his capture that: "I was awakened about 2 a. m. by my mozo ushering two or three men into my bedroom. My first thought was that it was an attempt to rob me, and I grabbed my pistol, but, seeing the house full of men, I gave it up. I was commanded to get up and dress, which I did. I was permitted to carry a great coat with me, which I found to be convenient as well as great comfort, as the nights were cold.

I was put on a horse that was not overly prepossessing, dressed with a saddle a little worse than the horse, and without stirrups. We rode all that day toward the mountains. I soon understood that Villa had about 80 men in this bodyguard of his, as he called it. This band was well armed and well mounted and carried about 250 cartridges each. The living was rather hard, consisting mostly of tortillas and beans, since, due to the lack of stock in the region through which we traveled, it was impossible to have meat. From time to time we ran onto some small ranchito where a chicken or two was found, and I was always invited on those gala occasions.

Villa told ——— that there would be a united effort made against Carranza some time during the summer, and he thought it would not be until after the presidential election had taken place, as he thought that would furnish a new issue for patriots to rally around.

He says that Villa was shot twice, once above and once below the right knee, but that now he is just as well as he ever was and presents the appearance of a man of steel. He says that while riding along one day Villa came up behind him and told him that he could run two leagues, and he replied that he did not doubt it. A few hours later he came up by his side, jumped off his horse and struck a run, and he kept it up for about 5 miles and forced him to prod his horse into a gallop most of the time.

On the 8th I traveled from Torreon to Saltillo, over the Coahuila Pacific, 191 miles, and found the wreckage and destruction no less pronounced than on the rest of my trip to that point. I wired Mr. ——— to meet me, if convenient, at the station of Parras. He, without any questioning on my part, at once told me that any one who believed that conditions in Mexico were improving were simply mistaken. His opinion is that there is no improvement at all, but there is a gradual decay and disintegration in everything and in all directions. He is working a ranch about four miles from the pueblo, but will not live there, fearful that some freebooters who have long made their home in a mountain range about 10 miles north of the place, might seize him and hold him for ransom. This band that has made those mountains their home for a long time are immune from harm at the hands of Carranza's forces, and this, according to his way of thinking, is conclusive proof that Carranza's crowd do not want them lest their calling as generals might end and leave them without a job.

Upon arriving at Saltillo we found the streets that approached the railroad stations brilliantly lighted, but upon more careful examination we saw that all others were conspicuous for lack of lights. Saltillo suffered some in the way of vandalism but less than most other cities of the Republic. With the exception of a very small area lying adjacent to the city all the surrounding country is laying fallow and the owners of most of the ranches are afraid to even visit them, let alone try to live on them and work them. All the region to the east of the city, which is by far the best part of that State, is nonproductive, hence as a natural consequence the city is cut off from most of its support and business is very dull. As in Durango I noticed that the stocks of goods were very reduced compared to those carried before the revolution began. Here, as elsewhere, I found much discussion of politics with considerable bitterness displayed in many instances. There is much fear of a revolution as soon as the election is over, as most of the people believe it is a foregone thing that Bonillas will either be made the President or that Mr. Carranza will use Bonillas to create a wrangle, and he will thereupon ask Congress to declare the election illegal and be asked to remain till a new election can be held.

On the 10th I returned to Laredo, and crossed over the bridge the next morning, without other incident than being asked if I had any gold on my person. I replied by opening my purse, I showed 35 pesos Mexican gold and $10 American gold piece, and offered them the Mexican while I retained the American gold, but they said that I could not take any gold out with me. I received American bills for it. I thought it rather exacting that I was asked to give up our own national coin, but made no objection as it was of no importance to me. American gold goes there everywhere and in most places paper money goes also, but gold is preferred by a large part of the people, and some refuse to accept our paper money at all.

I will say that prior to the revolution I was a frequent traveler over the same route I was traveling on my recent trip, and in those days everything looked new, well preserved, and the people all prosperous, with plenty of food even for the poorest to eat. The railroads were all in good shape, with fine trains always on hand to accommodate any demand that might be made upon them, and at a very cheap rate. As with the passenger, so with the freight, which was both cheap and well served. I sometimes fear that the so-called progressives and the would-be reformers may in time bring our country to just such a state as now exists there. I have concluded that the words "progressive" and "reformer" are merely used by most people to give to airy nothingness a local habitation and a name, and are nothing more than an incipient socialism that gradually grades into anarchy.

The finances of the country are in a deplorable condition. Many imagine that cash is very bountiful in Mexico now, deceived by a mere appearance as seen in the hands of individuals. They do not stop to consider that there are no banks, hence no checks or other evidences of liquidation that usually enter so largely into circulation. With 100 pesos of Mexican gold one seems to be loaded down with cash, whereas in case of a check even for 10,000 pesos we see little evidence of the transaction. So, with bills, one carries 500 or 1,000 pesos in bills, in his vest pocket and it attracts no attention, but with the same amount of gold he has all his pockets full.

The States, cities, and Federal treasuries are all bankrupt, and they are trying to raise a higher tax on unused properties and unproductive business, which sooner or later will put them all in the mundial pawnshop. There are no funds to pay teachers, to meet the governmental obligations, or to keep the public utilities in working order. The report from the City of Mexico shows that the impoverished people are called upon to raise for the Federal Government nearly double what it did during the prosperous years under Diaz. If such a policy is followed instead of using the surplus or the productive energy of the people it is like a bear hibernating, which is consuming its surplus of fat—a course that if continued long enough will ultimately bring on death by starvation. The 109,000,000 or 110,000,000 pesos raised by Diaz in 1909 and 1910 left a surplus of 29,000,000 pesos, and it came from business transacted and not as a direct tax upon all property.

There is a dearth of change in Mexico now that renders all business troublesome and expensive. One seldom sees any silver change, and while this applies to the whole country it is absolutely so with reference to the City of Mexico, being a little less pronounced in the States. The change in the city consists of the 50 centavos and 1 peso bills; the 1, 2, 5, 10, and 20 centavos copper coins, with an occasional nickel; and besides, and the most convenient elements as they are more plentiful, are the 5 and 10 centavos street car tickets, which are redeemable in gold coin. It is impossible to understand why the Government does not coin plenty of small silver change, as there is an abundance of silver being produced there to quickly supply any deficiency that could exist for small change in business transactions. There has been a bitter fight made against the new paper money, and the laborers when they accept it do so with the proviso that it must be redeemed by those who issue it upon demand, and those companies that use it have regular days for redemption.

It is very harmful and renders small business, which represents a large part of the business, as the poor people of Mexico buy in extremely small quantities, and to try to make these deals without plenty of small change is costly and troublesome. Recently the Government has bought a large lot of copper which it intends to coin for change, and although this would be very burdensome for large transactions, it will facilitate the smaller ones. To give you an idea how lack of change affects business, it is sufficient to inform you that often to secure change costs from 4 to 10 per cent. In buying a paper which costs 6 cents in the city it is very seldom that the exact change can be made, and hence the paper usually costs from 1 to 4 cents more than its price, and the same is true when paying for a shave or a shoe shine. On the street cars one is easily accommodated, as the price is either 5 or 10 centavos, and one hands over a 50-centavo bill, and he gets back the exact change in street-car tickets, which furnish him ready change for some other transaction. American change is being used largely in the northern States and this relieves the situation there.

Transportation difficulties and handicaps would, were there no other obstacles to combat, render business very difficult and place upon it such a burden that it would not thrive as we now find it in Mexico. I will cite two or three instances that merely show the rates paid without mention of the delay and other burdens that oppress it. Mr. Carlos Bently, of Zacatecas, had an auto shipped from Piedras Negras to Zacatecas, and as nothing less than a carload would be received as freight he was compelled to pay 425 pesos, the minimum charge for express between those two points. Had he shipped a full carload he would have had to pay the 425 minimum charge with the express at the usual rate on the other three cars. It seems that the Government will not accept any freight, but has turned everything to express. This hardly agrees with the saying that there is nothing in a name. It is a case in which by a play upon words a maximum of cost is made for a minimum of performance. I saw a waybill on a carload of oranges from Guadalajara to Saltillo, about 600 miles, showing a charge of 898 pesos for that service. This, too, was express.

This does not apply to many private companies and individuals who are operating trains over the Government lines. They ship heavy stuff as freight and in order to facilitate their own business they are forced to grant the best rates they can. These concerns are badly handicapped, too, as they are compelled to keep up and run their own trains and pay the Government the regular freight rates as though it had been done by the Government.

The labor situation is in a bad way just now, and to the man who uses his common sense, it is distressingly difficult to figure out either an antidote or a remedy. The laborers are restless, dissatisfied, and unreliable, accompanied with an apparent scarcity even though business and industry of all kinds are at almost a standstill. This condition certainly forecasts a tremendous scarcity should the country again enter upon an era of reconstruction relieved of the incubus of revolution.

I saw where Mr. ——— in his testimony before your committee seems to imagine that Mexico has not lost more than 2,000,000 people since the revolution began, but I have talked and figured on that question and feel that I am within the truth when I say that Mexico has lost not less than one-third of all her population. I figure that from 200,000 to 300,000 have perished directly from fighting in the war, nearer the former than the latter number, 300,000 have left the country permanently, and 400,000 temporarily.

But the great losses have been from death, from starvation and sickness. Doctors whom I know well and who have kept in touch with the situation through the entire duration of the revolution, all agree that the deaths have been alarming at some periods. For a long time at Zacatecas there was a death rate of from 40 to 50 a day from starvation and sickness, largely due to malnutrition, and the same was true of almost every town and all over the country at different periods since the devastation began. I was talking with * * * a few days ago in Torreon, and he told me he had seen them die there by the thousands from starvation. Then we have had two or three periods in which the whole country was ravaged by typhoid and other scourges. Then the flu during the last two years has killed off not less than 300,000. Reports coming from all parts of the country in 1918 showed a frightful death rate, and it extended all over the country.

I have asked the opinion of some of the most intelligent Mexicans that I know of, having 15,000,000 inhabitants at the beginning of the revolution, what is the number there now, and most of them have replied less than 10,000,000, and I believe that if one would investigate the matter carefully from every angle that he will conclude that fully 5,000,000 have disappeared from the country. At Cuernavaca I was told by an American friend who had lived there about 25 years, working mines, about three years ago that he counted over 900 new made graves in the graveyard, none of whom were killed in battle. The same comes from all directions.

While I was in Mexico in March I saw it published, as coming from one of the bureaus of public health, that 77 per cent of the people were infected with venereal diseases. This notice advised them to send some of their blood to the department that they might be instructed how to treat it. I have since talked with several doctors, and they have placed the percentage much higher, ranging from 85 per cent to 99 per cent. If these statements are approximately correct, it means that the physical fiber of those people must be far from sound, and therefore incapable of reproducing offspring other than physically weak and morally base. It is easy for a close observer to see in the very looks of a large number of Mexican women the photograph of the hell through which they have passed engraved upon their countenances. And what ideals the man who was instrumental in bringing about such a social state possesses is beyond the ken of mortal mind to understand.

The political situation in Mexico is neither promising nor hopeful, although it is easily understood so far as the aspirants for the Presidency is concerned. Carranza evidently has two strings to his bow, one is to make Bonillas his heir and successor with him perhaps the lawgiver and his chief director, the other is to, if trouble comes, have his Congress declare the election null and void and appoint him as President till a new election can be held, but with the country in a state of revolution that must be deferred.

Obregon seems to be willing to spend a fortune he accumulated by grafting while a general to become President, and we find him preaching and advocating any policy that may advance his cause. He is telling the miners that the mines by right belong to them, and that if he is elected they will have them. He tells the would-be land-owners that if he is elected they shall be given the land without price or effort—a very similar tune sung by Madero when he was seeking the Presidency, and it was this tune that so infatuated Madero with the populace, and, perhaps, Obregon remembers the lesson and hopes to gain by repeating it.

What is called "the gente decente" in Mexico—the element that possess a large part of the wealth and a larger part of the intelligence of the nation, although greatly inferior in numbers—are all opposed to either of the three candidates now aspiring to be president. They are convinced and insist that the Mexicans themselves can not restore order and peace to the distracted country. They declare that it lies in the hands of either Mr. Wilson or his successor, and that whenever it is undertaken with the right spirit and with that resolution that produces results it can be easily settled without any war. They laugh at the idea of war, and ask with whom and with what can the Mexican forces fight, and how can they fight without guns, ammunition, clothes, food, transport, and even without men of ordinary discipline and training. They say that a large part of the Mexican people will stand at the gates and welcome our soldiers if they will only come, and that if necessary they will assist them in every way they can and make their self-imposed and unpleasant task as light as possible.

What a self-complacency or what visions those good souls must possess who find a happy, contented people in Mexico, or who see plenty and abundance everywhere. While on my trip I endeavored to learn as much as I could about the stock interests of the country, and it is certainly no exaggeration to place the loss at 85 per cent, taking the country as a whole. It will require several years under the most favorable conditions to get that country stocked up again. Cattle are very scarce outside of a few sections in the hot country. Where we formerly saw great herds we now see only a small town herd as we approach some village or city. I was informed that in Mexico the present supply of meat is coming from the hot country, largely from Colima and Guerrero. I was informed at Torreon that the supply of meat for that place was coming from wild cattle hunted out of the mountains of Chihuahua.

At no time since the revolution began in 1910 has the fear that a new revolution is incubating been more persistent than right now. It seems to be epizootic and has gripped all classes and all factions, and many consider the tremendous exodus of laborers now leaving the country as one of the strongest symptoms of the manifestation of this common fear. The consensus of opinion is that it is fear of being drafted into the army that is actuating these emigrants. This feeling of anxiety is no less pronounced in one faction than the others, as it hangs like a pall over them all.

So far as the fight between Carranza's man Friday (Bonillas) is concerned, Bonillas has already won, as Carranza is rapidly removing Obregonistas from the army or civil employment with the Government. He is taking precaution to insure the selection of a Congress that he can control, in order that Congress, which has the power to declare the results of an election can, if desired, declare him as his own successor. Now, there may be a slip in this arrangement, but it will hardly happen till after the result of the election has been declared. This will, as Villa told ———, furnish Carranza's opponents with a new issue. This will bring on the tug of war with the ultimate result dependent upon the unanimity with which his opponents act and their disposition to play fair with the "gente decente."

There is one thing certain, that is if a fight does come, as now seems almost assured, whichever side wins, the war as an organized body must inevitably be short-lived, since the lack of resources will impose this natural restriction on its duration. If it does not terminate soon it will again become stalemate, and the present reign of chaos and anarchy will continue indefinitely unless stopped by outside pressure. It seems that it is very important to our own country that the present anarchical state be ended in Mexico, as it is producing a gangrene which is infecting this country by contact and example.

While there is much poverty in Mexico, no one is starving for the mere necessities of life. Last year's crops were exceptionally good, and although the wheat is about all used up, the present harvest is about ready to gather, and from my observations along the railroads, there is a large acreage planted in those districts where the people are permitted to live, but the crop was badly damaged by a freeze that occurred the last days of March, and it is probable that little, if any, more than a 50 per cent crop will be raised. Last year's corn and bean crops were exceptionally good, and I am informed there is a large surplus, which assures plenty of those primary food products for next year. Of course, it is too early to make any estimate of this year's corn and bean crops, as they have not yet been planted. It is very dry in a large section of the country, but that is not unusual there at this season of the year.

In any discussion of the Mexican situation it is very important that we impress upon our hearers the truth about the personnel of the present Mexican Government. Those who know their past antecedents readily understand that a large part of them are unqualified for the positions they occupy, lacking as they do the necessary training or experience, and another large part of them is disqualified by a moral taint that renders them unfit for any position of trust. It is well known that many of these were criminals liberated by the exigencies of war, and this of itself creates a distrust of any government that is influenced by them.

Mr. ———, whom you met here, informs me over the phone that many deserting officials from Carranza's army have reached here at Obregon's expense and are anxious to get on to Sonora. These men are patriotic because their pay has stopped and they have been shorn of the power to prey upon the country and are willing to unite with any faction that will furnish them their daily bread.

Instead of a proof of the formidableness of the Sonora revolt, I am inclined to believe it shows a weakness. It will result in an army of men "too proud to fight" instead of a fighting machine.

About 25 years ago there was at El Paso a mirth-making club called McGinty, and I remember amongst its different features was the McGinty Guards. At the roll call of officers 8 or 10 huskies appeared upon the stage, but at the roll call of privates one lone, one-legged man stood forth and went through all the evolutions.

I have met many persons conversant with the Mexican situation and familiar with Mr. Wilson's genius for muddling everything he touches who think that it might be unwise to urge any interference in Mexico by him. They imagine it would be better to await the coming of a practical, common-sense man who accepts things as he finds them and acts accordingly than to invoke action by one who sees visions and hears voices—products of his own selfish arrogance.

I hope that you may receive some ideas from this long letter that may be of benefit to you. I have tried to set forth things as I found them at this time without bias in favor of any faction. In writing this letter I have endeavored to set forth the Mexican situation in a way that even those unfamiliar with it may be induced to look at it from a practical standpoint, which seeks to do justice toward all, with malice toward none.

With kindest wishes for your continued health and prosperity, I remain,

Very truly, yours,

.A.

SUMMARY.

List of Americans killed and wounded in Mexico and on border in United States, 1910 to May 20, 1920, as testified to before the Subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee, investigating Mexican Affairs.

1. Civilians killed in Mexico.....	397
2. United States soldiers killed in Mexico.....	64
	<hr/>
	461
	<hr/>
3. American civilians killed along border in United States.....	58
4. United States soldiers killed along border in United States.....	68
	<hr/>
	126
	<hr/>
5. American civilians outraged or wounded in Mexico.....	32
6. United States soldiers outraged or wounded in Mexico.....	29
	<hr/>
	61
	<hr/>
7. American civilians wounded on border in United States.....	90
8. United States soldiers wounded on border in United States.....	47
	<hr/>
	137
	<hr/>
Total killed, wounded, and outraged.....	785
3382

B.

American civilians killed in Mexico.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Anderson, Mrs.	7	848-862
2	Anderson, baby	7	848-862
3	Adams, William	7	848-862
4	Ayers, Bowan	7	848-862
5	Alamia, Juan B.	7	848-862
6	Allen, Oscar	7	848-862
7	Akard, Hugh	7	848-862
8	Atwater, Hubert	7	848-862
9	Akers, James Bert	7	848-862
10	Anton, George	7	848-862
11	Anderson, Maurice	7	848-862
12	Austin, Earl O.	7	848-862
13	Austin, S.	7	848-862
14	Bartholdt, _____	7	848-862
15	Bishop, _____	7	848-862
16	Brooks, John F.	7	848-862
17	Buckerdike, _____	7	848-862
18	Bishop, Mrs. W. I.	7	848-862
19	Bowles, Earl	12	24-862
20	Breckenridge, _____	7	848-862
21	Baird, _____	7	848-862
22	Byrd, William, Jr.	7	848-862
23	Bushnell, L.	7	848-862
24	Burton, Henry Knox	7	848-862
25	Barrett, Thomas	7	848-862
26	Bausche, Gustave	7	848-862
27	Brown, William	7	848-862
28	Baker, E. P.	7	848-862
29	Bishop, William	7	848-862
30	Baughman, Lee	7	848-862
31	Batania, Juan	7	848-862
32	Billings, Roscoe	7	848-862
33	Brown, Cassie N.	7	848-862
34	Burwell, Weston	7	848-862
35	Beard, James S.	7	848-862
36	Bennett, J. N.	7	848-862
37	Boone, Charles	7	848-862
38	Bean, Edgar B.	7	848-862
39	Burk, Frank	7	848-862
40	Bruce, Donald	7	848-862
41	Bayles, Curtis	7	848-862
42	Bartling, Henry	7	848-862
43	Brooks, Samuel	7	848-862
44	Blood, William W.	7	848-862
45	Compton, Harry	7	848-862
46	Cov, John P.	7	848-862
47	Chapel, F. C.	7	848-862
48	Camara, Eugene	7	848-862
49	Cervantes, J.	7	848-862
50	Crawford, James	7	848-862
51	Camp, Robert	7	848-862
52	Cramer, John	7	848-862
53	Couch, Avery H.	7	848-862
54	Corbet, William	7	848-862
55	Compton (Chihuahua)	7	848-862
56	Collins, Hiram	7	848-862

C.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
57	Cooper, H. M.	7	848-862
58	Correll, John W.	7	848-862
59	Catron, Peter	7	848-862
60	Chritchfield, George	7	848-862
61	Cummings	7	848-862
62	Clarks, Dr. R. G.	7	848-862
63	Carroll, John G.	7	848-862
64	Cromley, Henry	7	848-862
65	Cooper, Clarence	7	848-862
66	Carruth, Mrs. Lee	7	848-862
67	Carruth, child	7	848-862
68	Do	7	848-862
69	Do	7	848-862
70	Do	7	848-862
71	Do	7	848-862
72	Crawford	7	848-862
73	Caln	10	1480
74	Carney, James	10	1507
75	Delham, Oscar M.	7	848-862
76	Dexter, Edward G.	7	848-862
77	Dingwell, Wm. B. A.	7	848-862
78	Dalrymple, Charles	7	848-862
79	Doster, Edward D.	7	848-862
80	Donovan, J. J.	7	848-862
81	Diepert, George A.	7	848-862
82	Dubose, Constantine	7	848-862
83	Davidson, Roderick	7	848-862
84	Dixon, A. R.	7	848-862
85	D'Austin, Louis	7	848-862
86	Davies, Albert J.	7	848-862
87	Davidson, W. A.	7	848-862
88	Davis, Harry G.	7	848-862
89	Dean, J. S.	7	848-862
90	Dollar, M. P.	7	848-862
91	Dunn, L. A.	7	848-862
92	Defourcz, Edward L.	7	848-862
93	DeVate, William	7	848-862
94	DeFabio, G. A.	7	848-862
95	Darrow, Beris	7	848-862
96	DeFabir, C. G.	7	848-862
97	Edward, J. C.	7	848-862
98	East, Victor W.	7	848-862
99	Edson, John	7	848-862
100	Edson, Mrs. John	7	848-862
101	Eck, Carl	7	848-862
102	Ely, Isaac R.	7	848-862
103	Evans, Thomas H.	7	848-862
104	Elton, Howard L.	7	848-862
105	Esparola, Alfred E.	7	848-862
106	Eckles	7	848-862
107	Fowler, William E.	7	848-862
108	France, Wenceslau	7	848-862
109	Fountain, Thomas A. O.	7	848-862
110	Freunden-stein, James	7	848-862
111	Farrell, Thomas	7	848-862
112	Fay, W. A.	7	848-862
113	Fisher, Clarence	7	848-862

D.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
114	Free, Maurice.....	7	848-862
115	Fisher, Dr. Chas. P.....	7	848-862
116	Foster, Dr. Allen L.....	7	848-862
117	Franklin, John M.....	7	848-862
118	Green, ————	7	848-862
119	Godman, R. Roy M.....	7	848-862
120	Garcia, Antonio.....	7	848-862
121	Glennon, Patrick.....	7	848-862
122	Gillette, Chas. W.....	7	848-862
123	Griffith, Mrs. Joseph P.....	7	848-862
124	Gorow, Boris.....	7	848-862
125	Griffin, Benjamin.....	7	848-862
126	Gilmartin, Martin J.....	7	848-862
127	Grijalva, Reyes.....	7	848-862
128	Goldsborough, Chas.....	7	848-862
129	Galcana, Francisco.....	7	848-862
130	Gorman, Frank P.....	7	848-862
131	Goodman (child).....	7	848-862
132	Do.....	7	848-862
133	Do.....	7	848-862
134	Gillett, Frank.....	7	848-862
135	Gonzales, ————	8	1320
136	Gourd, Frank.....	8	848-862
137	Hughes, ————	7	848-862
138	Huntington, Robert.....	7	848-862
139	Heidy, Samuel.....	7	848-862
140	Harvey, James.....	7	848-862
141	Hertling, John.....	7	848-862
142	Haigler, ————	7	848-862
143	Holmes, Mrs. Minnie L.....	7	848-862
144	Howard, Frank.....	7	848-862
145	Havey, Edward, Jr.....	7	848-862
146	Harwood, Robert W.....	7	848-862
147	Hatfield, K. L.....	7	848-862
148	Harmon, E. L.....	7	848-862
149	Hadley, C. B.....	7	848-862
150	Hernandez, Gustavo.....	7	848-862
151	Higgenberger, Peter.....	7	848-862
152	Howard, Jack.....	7	848-862
153	Harrer, A. N.....	7	848-862
154	Hartman, G. L.....	7	848-862
155	Hall, Alexander.....	7	848-862
156	Hase, Herman C.....	7	848-862
157	Hamilton, Victor.....	7	848-862
158	Havden, Frank.....	7	848-862
159	Harris, Edward H.....	7	848-862
160	Howell, Ernest.....	7	848-862
161	Hally, P. H.....	5	848-862
162	Hart, Dr. H. M.....	7	848-862
163	House, Edward.....	7	848-862
164	Heimsath, Christian.....	7	848-862
165	Hughes, Hiram.....	7	848-862
166	Hennessey, A. P.....	7	848-862
167	Haves, ————	10	1489
168	Iure, Francisco.....	7	848-862

E.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
169	Jones, ———	7	848 42
170	Jenson, Martin	7	848 42
171	Johnson, F. V.	7	848 42
172	Jackoby, James	7	848 42
173	Johnson, Thomas	7	848 42
174	James, Mrs. Milton	7	848 42
175	James, Byron E.	7	848 42
176	Johnson, Guy	7	848 42
177	Krause, Emil	7	848 42
178	Kane, Thomas C.	7	848 42
179	Kelly, Patrick J.	7	848 42
180	Kendall, William	7	848 42
181	Kelly, Thomas	7	848 42
182	Kelly, Dr. E. E.	7	848 42
183	King	7	848 42
184	Kitchen, H. S.	7	848 42
185	Kingsbury, Tom	7	848 42
186	Keenright, Mrs. W. H.	7	848 42
187	Kirby, H. E.	7	848 42
188	Keane, Peter	7	848 42
189	Keene, ———	12	567
190	Lockhart, John R.	7	848 42
191	Lawton, ———	7	848 42
192	Lescher, ———	7	848 42
193	Lawrence, James O.	7	848 42
194	Lawrence, Albert H.	7	848 42
195	Laurell, Porfirio	7	848 42
196	Landon, James E.	7	848 42
197	Loris, Leonard	7	848 42
198	Leiva, Alfonso	7	848 42
199	Lindley, Lee	7	848 42
200	McLaughlin, ———	7	848 42
201	Maxwell, ———	7	848 42
202	McDonald, W. H.	7	848 42
203	McClelland, Jas. B.	7	848 42
204	McKinsee, ———	7	848 42
205	Mathewson, A.	7	848 42
206	Martinson, Mrs.	7	848 42
207	Meyers, Jake	7	848 42
208	McCoy, J. P.	7	848 42
209	Meredith, Norwell R.	7	848 42
210	Miller, Morton	7	848 42
211	McCutcheon, Edward	7	848 42
212	Marders, C. H.	7	848 42
213	Moreys, J. I.	7	848 42
214	Milton, Chas.	7	848 42
215	McDonald, Morris	7	848 42
216	McKinney, Patrick	7	848 42
217	McIntosh, Walter	7	848 42
218	McManus, John B.	7	848 42
219	McHatton, Richard P.	7	848 42
220	McKinney, Arthur	7	848 42
221	Martin, G. W.	7	848 42
222	McGretor, Don	7	848 42
223	Martinez, Miguel	7	848 42
224	Millard, L. R.	7	848 42
225	McLeod, Harlow C.	7	848 42
226	Morgan, Edward E.	7	848 42
227	McClaren, Edward F.	7	848 42
228	Moye, Leroy	7	848 42
229	McGill, H. S.	7	848 42
230	Meek, Ulysses	7	848 42

F.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
231	Martinez, Luciano.....	7	848-862
232	Martinetto, A.....	7	848-862
233	Morris, J. L.....	7	848-862
234	Meese,.....	12	27
235	McCushtian,.....	8	993
236	Morgan,.....	8	1057
237	Nixon, Edward L.....	7	848-862
238	Newman, George W.....	7	848-862
239	Olsen, Dr. Seffer.....	7	848-862
240	O'Neill, James.....	7	848-862
241	Otto, Megull.....	7	848-862
242	Passon,.....	7	848-862
243	Pape, Elbert.....	7	848-862
244	Poindexter, William.....	7	848-862
245	Peterson, Peter.....	7	848-862
246	Peterson, A. P.....	7	848-862
247	Pottinger, C. C.....	7	848-862
248	Parmenter, John Glenn.....	7	848-862
249	Poe, Henderson G.....	7	848-862
250	Pearce, W. D.....	7	848-862
251	Pringle, Chas. A.....	7	848-862
252	Parsons, George F.....	7	848-862
253	Parks, James.....	7	848-862
254	Pilgrim, J. D.....	7	848-862
255	Pearson, George F.....	7	848-862
256	Pellham, Oscar.....	7	848-862
257	Price, Scott.....	7	848-862
258	Porter, Tom.....	8	1011
259	Penix, Bon.....	8	991
260	Reid, James M.....	7	848-862
261	Royer,.....	7	848-862
262	Russell, Hubert.....	7	848-862
263	Reterman,.....	7	848-862
264	Reynolds, W. L.....	7	848-862
265	Ross, Mrs. Charlie E.....	7	848-862
266	Root, Morris P.....	7	848-862
267	Robertson, William C.....	7	848-862
268	Roth,.....	7	848-862
269	Reed, William M., Jr.....	7	848-862
270	Robinson, Ernest L.....	7	848-862
271	Romero, M. B.....	7	848-862
272	Robertson, William C.....	7	848-862
273	Robertson, Robert W.....	7	848-862
274	Rasmunssen, Lee.....	7	848-862
275	Rose, W. H.....	7	848-862
276	Rushworth, Richard.....	7	848-862
277	Reddock, Gaston.....	7	848-862
278	Rodriguez, Toribio.....	7	848-862
279	Rooney, F. P.....	12	24
280	Redd, George.....	10	1489
281	Shope, William H.....	7	848-862
282	Swazay,.....	7	848-862
283	Stepp, H. W.....	7	848-862
284	Schubert, Gindo.....	7	848-862
285	Shephard, John W.....	7	848-862
286	Strauss, H. L.....	7	848-862
287	Stevens, Joshua.....	7	848-862
288	Slate, Henry.....	7	848-862

G.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
289	Saule, C. M.	7	848-862
290	Scott, Peter	7	848-862
291	Simmons, R. H.	7	848-862
292	Simmons, Albert F.	7	848-862
293	Stovall, A. J.	7	848-862
294	Snyder, Tom	7	848-862
295	Sharp, Lee	7	848-862
296	Sellers, Clarence	7	848-862
297	Snovall, Ralph H.	7	848-862
298	Stevenson, Albert A.	7	848-862
299	Skinner, George	7	848-862
300	Schaefer, Adam	7	848-862
301	Spillsbury, Ernest	7	848-862
302	Soto, Pablo	7	848-862
303	Segerson, Charles	7	848-862
304	Sanchez, Encarnacion	7	848-862
305	Stowe, E.	7	848-862
306	Smith, Frank	7	848-862
307	Schofield, Henry	7	848-862
308	Sawyer, Guy S.	7	848-862
309	Smith, Joseph	7	848-862
310	Smith, _____	7	848-862
311	Squires, C. A. L.	7	848-862
312	Spencer, William	7	848-862
313	San Blas, Joseph T.	7	848-862
314	Smith, J. P.	7	848-862
315	Saunders, George	7	848-862
316	Smith, V. M.	7	848-862
317	Smith, J.	7	848-862
318	Smith, John	7	848-862
319	Stacker, William	7	848-862
320	Snell, Benjamin	7	848-862
321	Stell, Dr. A. T.	7	848-862
322	Stevens, William J.	7	848-862
323	Smith, Baron	7	848-862
324	Smith, _____	8	1095
325	Thomas, A. E.	7	848-862
326	Thompson, _____	7	848-862
327	Thomas, John Henry	7	848-862
328	Teanhl, Gilbert	7	848-862
329	Taylor, James E.	7	848-862
330	Taves, Joseph	7	848-862
331	Taylor, S. E.	7	848-862
332	Thomas, Robert	7	848-862
333	Urban, Richard	7	848-862
334	Unknown woman	7	848-862
335	Unknown	7	848-862
336	Do	7	848-862
337	Do	7	848-862
338	Do	7	848-862
339	Do	7	848-862
340	Do	7	848-862
341	Do	7	848-862
342	Do	7	848-862
343	Do	7	848-862
344	Do	7	848-862
345	Do	7	848-862
346	Do	7	848-862
347	Do	7	848-862
348	Do	7	848-862
349	Do	7	848-862
350	Do	7	848-862

H.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
351	Unknown.....	7	848-862
352	Do.....	7	848-862
353	Do.....	7	848-862
354	Unknown woman.....	13	1998
355	Unknown teamster.....	9	1469
356	Unknown civilian.....	15	22
357	Do.....	15	22
358	Do.....	2	380
359	Unknown cowboy.....	L	34
360	Do.....	L	34
361	Vergara, Clemente.....	7	848-862
362	Volner, _____.....	7	848-862
363	Varn, _____.....	7	848-862
364	Valencia, Jose.....	7	848-862
365	Willis, Milton K.....	7	848-862
366	Waite, W. H.....	7	848-862
367	Ward, Frank.....	7	848-862
368	Weiniger, R.....	7	848-862
369	Webster, John E.....	7	848-862
370	Williams, Lee.....	7	848-862
371	Williams, John.....	7	848-862
372	Warner, Mel.....	7	848-862
373	Wood, _____.....	7	848-862
374	White, _____.....	7	848-862
375	Willis, Antonio James.....	7	848-862
376	Wilson, John P.....	7	848-862
377	Wells, Edward F.....	7	848-862
378	Windham, Charles S.....	7	848-862
379	Warren, James L.....	7	848-862
380	Wadleigh, Charles.....	7	848-862
381	Wallace, W. J.....	7	848-862
382	Watson, Charles R.....	7	848-862
383	Woon, J. W.....	7	848-862
384	Wallace, Walter.....	7	848-862
385	Weeks, James Juan.....	7	848-862
386	Williams, Mrs. Arthur.....	7	848-862
387	Williams, _____.....	7	848-862
388	Williams, baby.....	7	848-862
389	Wright, E. J.....	7	848-862
390	Winn, C. A.....	7	848-862
391	Walker, Walter J.....	7	848-862
392	Welder, Linden L.....	7	848-862
393	Whiteford, Gustave A.....	7	848-862
394	Weller, Benjamin B.....	7	848-862
395	Wallace, Oscar.....	7	848-862
396	White, H. S.....	7	848-862
397	Woolf, U. G.....	7	848-862

I.

American soldiers killed in Mexico.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Adair, Lieut. H. A.	7	848-852
2	Albert, T. R.	7	848-852
3	Bosswell, I. F.	7	848-852
4	Boyd, Capt. C. T.	7	848-852
5	Butler, Tom.	7	848-852
6	Bouche, O.	7	848-852
7	Blount, J. D.	7	848-852
8	Corrie, William W.	7	848-852
9	Chaille, Lieut. J. B.	7	848-852
10	Connelly, Lieut. C. H.	7	848-852
11	D'Lowry, Francis.	7	848-852
12	Devorick, Frank.	7	848-852
13	Day, James E.	7	848-852
14	Fabbio, G. A.	7	848-852
15	Fisher, Elzie C.	7	848-852
16	Fried, Louis Oscar.	7	848-852
17	Frohlichstein, E. H.	7	848-852
18	Furman, H.	7	848-852
19	Gleaton, W. C.	7	848-852
20	Gingan, —	7	848-852
21	Herschberger, C. R.	7	848-852
22	Haggerty, D. A. (marine).	7	848-852
23	Hines, Will.	7	848-852
24	Kleson, John C. (marine).	7	848-852
25	Lane, Denis.	7	848-852
26	Ledford, R.	7	848-852
27	Laughter, I. M.	7	848-852
28	Martin, Samuel (marine).	7	848-852
29	Melsenberg, S.	7	848-852
30	McGhee, Ben.	7	848-852
31	Marksbery, D.	7	848-852
32	Moses, T. C.	7	848-852
33	Mathews, C.	7	848-852
34	McGregor, —	7	848-852
35	Poinsetts, George.	7	848-852
36	Pullman, Henry.	7	848-852
37	Parks, Samuel.	7	848-852
38	Percy, R. E.	7	848-852
39	Robinson, W. A.	7	848-852
40	Richly, Jay.	7	848-852
41	Roberts, W. F.	7	848-852
42	Rucker, DeWitt.	7	848-852
43	Ray, R. A.	7	848-852
44	Riggs, A. A.	7	848-852
45	Schumacher, John F.	7	848-852
46	Smith, Charles Allen.	7	848-852
47	Stream, Allen E.	7	848-852
48	Summerlin, R.	7	848-852
49	Unknown.	7	848-852
50	Do.	7	848-852
51	Do.	7	848-852
52	Do.	7	848-852
53	Do.	7	848-852
54	Do.	7	848-852
55	Do.	7	848-852
56	Talbot, Lee.	7	848-852
57	Troib, David.	7	848-852
58	Watson, Walter L.	7	848-852
59	Ware, William.	7	848-852
60	Winrow, William.	7	848-852
61	Watson, A. J.	7	848-852
62	Wisewall, —	7	848-852
63	Waterhouse, Lieut. F. B.	7	848-852
64	Ziegler, Lon.	7	848-852

J.

American civilians killed along United States border in United States.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Austin, A. L.	7	848-862
2	Austin, Charles.	7	848-862
3	Byrd, Williams, sr.	8	(1)
4	Boley, Bernard.	7	848-862
5	Benavides, Jose Maria.	7	848-862
6	Chandler, ———.	7	848-862
7	Camp, John.	7	848-862
8	Creighton, Oscar.	7	848-862
9	Charlott, Robert.	7	848-862
10	Castillo, Claro.	7	848-862
11	Cunningham, R. A.	7	848-862
12	Chelders, Clarence.	7	848-862
13	Doyle, Byron.	7	848-862
14	Donaldson, E. R.	7	848-862
15	Griffith, ———.	7	848-862
16	Garcia, Maximiano.	8	1320
17	Hulen, Eugene.	7	848-862
18	Howard, John S.	7	848-862
19	Hill, Ira W.	7	848-862
20	Hopkins, Chas. L.	7	848-862
21	Hinton, Floyd.	7	848-862
22	Kendall, H. H.	7	848-862
23	McCain, Dr. E. S.	7	848-862
24	Madrid, John.	7	848-862
25	Miller, C. C.	7	848-862
26	Moore, A. J.	7	848-862
27	Miller, Charles DeWitt.	7	848-862
28	Nevill, Glen.	7	848-862
29	Neivergalt, J. G.	7	848-862
30	Parker, William.	7	848-862
31	Parker, Mrs. Wm.	7	848-862
32	Perkins, Jim.	7	848-862
33	Parmalee, F. M.	7	848-862
34	Riche, A. C.	7	848-862
35	Randall, W. L.	7	848-862
36	Sitters, Joseph.	7	848-862
37	Smith, J. S.	7	848-862
38	Scott, Price.	7	848-862
39	Soto, Pablo.	7	848-862
40	Sandoval, Jesus.	7	848-862
41	Schriener, ———.	12	1,096
42	Shaw, Jos. R., War Department.
43	Tate, Fred.	7	848-862
44	Timberlake, ———.	7	848-862
45	Tusco, Sam.	7	848-862
46	Unknown civilian.	7	848-862
47	Do	7	848-862
48	Unknown civilian (Naco).	L	18
49	Do	L	18
50	Do	L	18
51	Do	L	18
52	Do	L	18
53	Do	L	18
54	Do	L	18
55	Do	L	18
56	Do	L	18
57	Wood, Robert.	7	848-862
58	Welsh, Michael.	7	848-862

1991 Book E; 695 to 708.

K.

United States soldiers killed along border in United States.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Atchison, T. F.	7	848-82
2	Cohen, William	7	848-82
3	Caloe, J. S.	7	848-82
4	Cunningham, Anthony, War Department
5	Dobbs, M. A.	7	848-82
6	Forney, H. T.	7	848-82
7	Ferguson, R. H.	7	848-82
8	Flowers, C.	7	848-82
9	Griffin, F. A.	7	848-82
10	Hobbs, M. A.	7	848-82
11	Hungerford, J. D.	7	848-82
12	Johnson, R. J.	7	848-82
13	Joyce, Martin	7	848-82
14	Jones, H. J.	7	848-82
15	Kraft, Anthony	7	848-82
16	Kalonah, E. C.	7	848-82
17	Kindwall, F. A.	7	848-82
18	Little, S.	7	848-82
19	Lottis, Luke W.	7	848-82
20	Lotts, Bernard	7	848-82
21	McBee, A. T.	7	848-82
22	McConnell, H.	7	848-82
23	Moore, H. C.	7	848-82
24	McGuire, —	7	848-82
25	Minaden, James	7	848-82
26	Oberlies, Wm.	7	848-82
27	Rogers, H.	7	848-82
28	Stubblefield, H. W.	7	848-82
29	Schaefer, E.	7	848-82
30	Simon, Paul	7	848-82
31	Taylor, J. P.	7	848-82
32	Twomey, J. J.	7	848-82
33	Tusco, Sam	7	848-82
34	Ulrich, Sergeant, War Department
62	Unknown, total 28	7	848-82
63	Wilson, H.	7	848-82
64	Watson, R. B.	7	848-82
65	White, Worth	7	848-82
66	Warwick, William	7	848-82
67	Windhaus, L. C.	7	848-82
68	Williams, John	7	848-82

L.

Outrages—American civilians wounded in Mexico.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Brown, Mrs. O. P.....	9	632
2	Bishop, R. A.....	2	450
3	Bell, William.....	2	450
4	Carroll, Mrs. J. W.....	2	649
5	Clayson, Ed.....	7	1701
6	Cobler, J. W.....	7	1711
7	Dixon, Charles B. (Immigration inspector in Juarez).....
8	Dunn, H. H.....	7	1716
9	Eads, John.....	F	732
10	Gourd, Miss.....	8	1041
11	Harris, Allen G.....		149
12	Harris, H. O.....		1663
13	Jones, Albert.....	10	670
14	Jones, Mrs. Albert.....	10	670
15	Kirkland, Frank.....		1140
16	Kennedy, J. D.....		1713
17	Kerr, J. (War Department).....
18	Metzenthin, Miss.....	8	1109
19	Mortensen, ———.....	10	648
20	Negro woman.....	8	1041
21	Whitehead, Bert (War Department).....
HELD FOR RANSOM.
22	Fink, W. N.....	10	689
23	Jenkins (consular agent), Puebla.....
24	Knotts, Frank, Chihuahua.....
25	Ledwidge, A.....	10	690
26	McCormick, John (twice).....	10	689
27	Malone, Pat.....	8	1,138
28	Solis, A.....	10	690
29	Spencer, Bunk.....	10	689
30	Stevenson, H. S.....	10	690
31	Sutton, R. B.....	3	15
32	Smith, D. B.....

Old book.

3393

M.

Outrages—United States soldiers wounded in Mexico.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Armstrong, Louis E.....	10	1570
2	Baird, Nell.....	8	1150
3	Bollinger, D. B.....	8	1071
4	Caron, Henry C.....	L	2
5	Clint, William H.....	L	28
6	Clayton, U. S.....	L	2
7	Ceasecke, Stanly.....	L	29
8	Cooley, E. E.....	L	37
9	Coyne, Pat.....	2	520
10	Chegas, Peter.....	10	1570
11	Deppy, Paul.....	L	29
12	Durley, Lyle.....	L	34
13	Fronterak, Stanley.....	L	29
14	Frahm, Elmoth.....	L	30
15	Flora, Alfonso.....	10	1570
16	Green, Arthur O.....	L	31
17	Gibson, Vann.....	L	31
18	Hendricks, Emil F.....	L	30
19	Johnson, Charles F.....	L	32
20	Keist, C. L. (War Department).....
21	Kelley, J. F. (War Department).....
22	Linberg, Arthur A.....	10	1570
23	Morozney, Lawrence.....	L	29
24	Morgan, Charles.....	L	35
25	Minton, J. G.....	D	560
26	Minette (wounded twice).....	2	530
27	Marks, Capt.....	10	1570
28	McDonald, W. M.....	N	5
29	Noriel, William (War Department).....

N.

American civilians wounded on border in United States.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Dunnaway, Jim (War Department).....
2	Frost, Archibald.....	10	1604
3	Forbes, Henry.....	8	1243
4	Garrett, William C.....	13	1962
5	Gleaves, Jefferson (War Department).....
6	Huff, Sonv.....	8	1243
7	Jenson, Chas.....	8	1243
8	Longorio, Joe.....	8	1243
9	Longorio, Damasio (War Department).....
10	Monahan, Mike.....	8	1243
11	Martin, Frank.....	8	1243
12	Metherill, Mrs. Lucille.....	11	1687
13	Moore, Mrs. J. J.....	7	1957
14	Parker, Mrs. Emma.....	10	1570
15	Reynolds, R. H.....	L	6
16	Riche, Mrs. Laura.....	10	1604
17	Unknown woman.....	13	1988
18	Unknown woman (Naco).....	7	18
19	Wallace, Harry.....	8	1243
20	Woodal, R.....	8	1243
90	Unknown (Naco), total 70.....	L	18

Old book.

3395

O.

United States soldiers wounded on border in United States.

No.	Name.	Book.	Page.
1	Arana, Victor D.	L	32
2	Anderson, Capt.	8	1243
3	Butler, Fred J.	L	28
4	Bilek, Joe	L	29
5	Buckles, Roscoe	10	1570
6	Brasher, C. J.	8	1243
7	Behr, Fred	8	1243
8	Coleman, Wm. P.	10	1570
9	Casey, Burchard	10	1570
10	Coomer, Wm. M.	10	1570
11	Candela, Louis	8	1243
12	Donville, Raymond J.	L	30
13	Friedman, Alfred	10	1570
14	Herman, Fred J.	L	27
15	Harris, James E.	L	31
16	Henry, Lieut.	8	1243
17	Hallenbeck, Ben.	8	1243
18	Havels, Tony	8	1243
19	Harris, Allen G.		1 49
20	Harris, H. O.		1 63
21	Jackson,	8	1243
22	Kennedy, Pvt.	8	1243
23	Laymond, C. H.	8	1243
24	Langland, Paul	8	1243
25	Love, Calvin	10	1570
26	Lytie, Archibald	L	30
27	Lynn, Fred	10	1570
28	Minette, P. W.	8	1243
29	Malasoff, Henry	8	1243
30	Moore, Ernest W.	L	28
31	McDonald, Alf. J. (War Department)
32	McNabb, David, Capt. (War Department)
33	McGoigan, Pvt. (War Department)
34	Oberlies, William	8	1243
35	Price, Victor	L	30
36	Reynolds, Wallace	L	31
37	Rouch, J. E.	8	1243
38	Riley, Ed. C.	10	1570
39	Smith, Earl C.	10	1570
40	Scheve, Edward	L	28
41	Sweroznski, James	L	29
42	Sanchez, Viviano	L	31
43	Smith, H. R.	8	1243
44	Stewart, L. T.	8	1243
45	Swing, T. H.	8	1243
46	Walls, David	L	32
47	Wilson, Capt.	L	32

¹ Old book.

MEMORANDUM.

FOREIGNERS OTHER THAN AMERICANS KILLED IN MEXICO.

With the exception of the Torreon massacre of 303 Chinese citizens, the evidence before this committee shows 46 Americans were killed to 1 of other nationalities.

PARTIAL PROPERTY LOSS IN MEXICO, AS TESTIFIED TO BEFORE COMMITTEE.

+	Name.	Reference.		Amount.	Number, esti- mated, families.
		Book.	Page.
	Associated Tropical Land Co.....	9	1374	$1,000,000
	Almoloya Mining Co.....	9	1429	450,000
	Americans—robbed cash, Monterrey.....	8	1003	84,000
	Alvin, A. D.....	8	1090	25,000
	Bailey, Lola C.....	8	1028	15,000
	Bedwell, J. W.....	8	1076	20,000
	Blocker, Jno. R.....	8	1177	100,000
	Blankinship, A. R.....	D	484	259,000
	Byrd, W. S.....	E	794	100,000
	Brewer, Arthur.....	5	527	256,000
	Birchfield, S.....	9	525	12,500
	Bowman & Larson.....	17	2596	70,000
	Howman, H. E.....	17	2599	25,000
	Booker & Co.....	17	2603	207,000
	Cañon, Hirman.....	II	16	100,000
	Carrol, Mrs. J. W.....	2	449	10,000
	Cameron, Dr.....	13	1970	50,000
	Church, E. G.....	8	1071
	Colonies:
	Atascador.....	8	1036	3,000,000	300
	Camacho.....	10	1496	900,000	90
	Columbus.....	11	1709	1,000,000	100
	Chamal.....	8	979	320,000	92
	Colonia.....	8	1,186	150,000	150
	Chuchupa.....	10	1,481	1,500,000	150
	Dublan.....	10	1,481	3,000,000	300
	Diaz.....	10	1,481	3,000,000	300
	Garcia.....	10	1,481	1,500,000	150
	Juarez.....	10	1,481	3,000,000	300
	Medina.....	15	2,170	150,000	15
	Morelos.....			3,000,000	300
	Manuel.....			100,000	10
	Pacheco.....	10	1,481	1,500,000	150
	San Dieguito.....	N	2	1,500,000	150
	Santa Lucrecia.....	8	1,052	1,000,000	100
	San Pedro.....	13	1,977	3,000,000	300
	Sinaloa-Sonora.....	8	1,160	2,900,000	290
	Rio Verde.....			200,000	20
	Valles.....			500,000	50
	Victoria.....			200,000	20
	Dunn, E. S.....	N	2	20,000
	Duff, D. E.....	N	2	12,000
	Dolley, Dr. Chas. S.....			680,000
	Enders, C. W.....	E	687	224,500
	Ellis, James E.....	8	1,093	7,000
	Erwin, Thos.....			342,518
	Garrett, W. C.....	13	1,962	60,000
	Gurley, W. W.....	8	1,086	50,000
	Gunter, L.....			8,640
	Glaze, Jno. W.....			3,531
	Hornbeack, T. R.....		84	41,000
	Heckle, Ernest.....	8	1,162	1,600
	Hess, Louis.....	I	134	50,000
	Jackson, Cora H.....	N	9	10,000
	Kolklozh, L. J.....			89,800
	Luckett, R. H.....	I	138	30,000
	Loughborough, S. F.....	I	179	15,000
	Lyon, W. A.....			2,128
	Moorehead, Don D.....	N	2	10,000
	Mexico Land Co.....	10	1,602	400,000
	Manley, Paul.....	15	2,200	20,000
	Metzenhain, Paul.....	8	1,109	20,000
	McRae, F. M.....	8	1,014	20,000
	Miller, W. W.....	8	1,074	70,000
	National Mine Smelting Co.....	8	1,014	500,000
	Oil companies.....	N	(3)	233,833
	Padillo, Jesus B.....	I	709	66,767
	Rathbone, C. H.....	2	550	40,000
	Rio Verde Agricultural Co.....	11	1,667	50,000
	Renard, Paul.....	8	1,082	500

1 Testimony of 1912.

2 Partial.

3 Insert 1.

4 Cash.

Partial property loss in Mexico, as testified to before committee—Continued.

Name.	Reference.		Amount.	Number, estimated, families.
	Book.	Page.
Sutton, R. B.....	3	15-E	$2,400
Sutton, D. C.....	I	705	21,500
Sugar Co., Michoacan.....	5	5-E	25,000
Simon, Chas. F.....			49,774
Tabasco Plantation Co.....	9	1,378	2,000,000
Union Mercantile Co.....	I	335	250,000
Vestor, S. H.....	10	1,481	40,000
Vista Hermosa Co.....	15	2,203	500,000
Warner, E. R.....	H	96	50,000
Wieder, L. L.....	N	(*)	20,000
Wetherell, Lucille.....	11	1,687	7,000
Whatley, Anita.....	8	1,084	60,000
Wright, Mrs. Mary.....	8	1,027	13,000
Willis, Felicitas.....	8	1,030	15,000
Welsh, Fred.....	8	1,140	700
Yaqui Delta Land Co.....	2	429	2,000,000
Executive session.....	12	13	75,000
Do.....	9	567	2,000,000
Do.....	9	504	17,000
Do.....	8	819	1,161,000
Do.....		184	500,000
Do.....	I	310	600,000
Do.....	L	18	20,000
Do.....	N	7	1,630,000
Do.....	L	18	75,000
Do.....	10	593	998,442
Do.....	M	26	500,000
Total.....			50,481,133

¹ Testimony of 1912.² Insert 2.

RECAPITULATION.

	Families.	Losses.
Colonists and families outside of colonies, engaged in agricultural pursuits, including some plantation companies.....	3,400 ¹	$38,119,774
Miscellaneous individuals engaged in business on small scale.....		4,273,084
Miscellaneous companies engaged in business on small scale.....		8,098,275
Total.....		50,481,133

Damage to oil companies, other than loss of pay rolls, not included in this list.

Damage to mining companies, other than dynamiting of one plant, not included in this list.

Damage to railroads not included in this list. Is specifically referred to in chairman's remarks.

In addition to the property losses enumerated herein, the committee is in receipt of letters from the following persons who suffered property loss in Mexico:

Brackett, F. S.
 Bumgarner, Edward.
 Beaty, W. L.
 Colver, Walter.
 Collins, E. W.
 Coon, Jas. T.
 Carney, Peter.
 Corscadden, Jno. E.
 Cunningham Inv. Co.
 Garrett, James E.
 Houghton, E. L.
 Hale, W. P.
 Hadsell, S. G.
 Hartley, Geo. S.
 Mountjoy, Jno. H.

Metzner, F. C.
 Papet, R. N.
 Page, Mrs. W. R.
 Preston, J. W.
 Sullivan, Jackson W.
 Scheuer, Miss Lucitta.
 Synder, O. J.
 Sanger, Chas. W.
 Thoreson, I. C.
 Tull, A. O.
 United States Development Co.
 Van de Bogert, D. E.
 Wilson, J. H.
 Windham, Mrs. Mabell.
 Windham, Jno. J.

In view of the fact that their losses were not enumerated and certified to, it is impossible to set out the amounts in this record.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 9, 1919.

DEAR SENATOR FALL:

* * * * *

So far as concerns the quantity of damages sustained by American citizens in Mexico during the period mentioned, I may say that the department's information on this point is derived from the claims against the Mexican Government which have been filed with it, the facts regarding which are set forth in the following tabulation:

Claims filed alleging damages to property.. 772	Number of such claims in which amount of damages is not stated. 118	Total amount of damages set forth in remainder of property claims..... $22,835,592.83
Claims filed for alleged killing of American citizens..... 73	Number of such claims in which amount of damages is not stated. 25	Total amount of damages set forth in remainder of the death cases..... 2,317,375.00
Claims filed for alleged injuries to the person. 97	Number of such claims in which the amount of damages is not stated..... 10	Total amount of damages set forth in remainder of personal injuries claims..... 1,476,629.78
Whole number of claims filed during the period specified..... 942	Whole number of cases in which no specified amount is stated..... 153	Total amount claimed in cases where amounts are specified 26,629,597.61

It will be observed that the amounts of the claims given above are those alleged by the claimants in their statements of claim, and are not the estimates of the Department of State.

* * * * *

Sincerely, yours,

WILLIAM PHILLIPS,
Acting Secretary of State.

Summary of losses—American.

Deaths.....	$14,675,000
Personal injuries.....	2,846,301
Property, individual.....	50,481,133
Railroad, American (estimated).....	112,000,000
Mining (estimated).....	125,000,000
Oil; stock ranches; coffee, sugar, and other plantations; factories; banks; city residences; power plants; irrigation systems. etc.....	200,000,000
Total.....	505,002,434

ABSTRACTS OF TESTIMONY TAKEN BY THE SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS INVESTIGATING MEXICAN AFFAIRS, 1919-20.

	Part.	Page.
Altendorf, Dr. Paul Bernardo, Pole and American citizen.....	8	122
Practiced medicine at Merida, Yucatan.....	8	122
Afterwards in United States Intelligence Department.....	8	1231
Caused arrest and conviction of Witzke.....	8	1231
Alvin, A. D., American.....	8	1088
Invested $25,000 in land, 1,000 acres near Acapulco, in 1909.....	8	1090
Houses, implements, etc., destroyed or stolen by Zapatistas.....	8	1089
Anderson, J. E., American.....	12	1827
Killing of Hazelton Stanley White in June.....	12	1827
And Hennessey in September, 1919, near La Colorada, Sonora..	12	1830
Anglin, Capt. Everette, American.....	8	1302
Plan of San Diego.....	8	1303
Raid at Ojo de Agua, Tex., in 1915.....	8	1303
One Japanese, two Carranza, and three American soldiers killed and residence burned.....	8	1304
Flight at Cavazos' crossing on Rio Grande shortly after raid.....	8	1305
Citizens move from McAllen.....	8	1307
Gen. Lucio Blanco seized bunch of American horses, refused to return them, showed officer body of American hanging from a tree. Gen. Blanco refused to allow stock to be crossed.....	8	1308
Annin, Joseph P., American.....	5	715
Disorders in Mexico, April, May, June, and July, 1919.....	5	715
Atwood, L. P.....	17	2599
Affidavit of good conditions under Diaz; account of robbery; outrages in his section and itemized list of losses.....	17	2599
Ault, Leroy H., American.....	15	2229
La Esmeralda rubber plantation in State of Vera Cruz.....	15	2229
Conditions turbulent under Madero.....	15	2231
Conditions under Huerta.....	15	2231
Notified to get out.....	15	2231
Experiences in getting out.....	15	2232
Deportation of Americans from Mexico.....	15	2240
Destruction and loss of property.....	15	2241
Claim filed.....	15	2242
Cause of troubles in Mexico.....	15	2243
Huerta favored.....	15	2244
Carranza can not pacify country.....	15	2245
Opinion as to what should be done to put Mexico right.....	15	2245
People not opposed to intervention.....	15	2246
Austin, Mrs. Mary, American.....	8	1312
Killing of her husband and son at Sebastian, Tex., August 6, 1915, by Mexican raiders.....	8	1313
Bagge, Nils Olaf, American.....	9	1426
Conditions in Mexico after 1913.....	9	1426
Engaged in mining, Sonora.....	9	1426
History of mining in Mexico.....	9	1427
Mining investments by Americans.....	9	1427
Troubles began in 1910.....	9	1429
Had no concessions.....	9	1430
Paid ransom for his superintendent.....	9	1431
Feelings of Mexicans toward Americans.....	9	1431
Did not appeal to his Government for protection because useless.....	9	1431
Americans in Mexico called renegades by State Department.....	9	1433

	Part.	Page.
Bagge, Nils Olaf, American—Continued.
Americans paid for what they got in Mexico	9	1433
Mexicans do not put money in big enterprises	9	1433
Secret of Villa's power	9	1433 ✓
Banditry kept alive by Carranza generals	9	1433
Source of Villa's ammunition supply	9	1434 ✓
Carranza troops more ruthless than Villa's	9	1434
Seizure of wives and daughters of prominent men	9	1434
How Columbus raid was made	9	1435 ✓
Pershing expedition	9	1435 ✓
Trevino's warning; Pershing's troops at Parral	9	1435 ✓
Possibility of catching Villa	9	1435 ✓
Sentiment of Mexicans as what ought to be done	9	1435 ✓
High-class Mexicans only reliance; need outside help; Latin Americans all want to lead	9	1436
Politics personal	9	1436
Revolutions start with manifesto and promise of land	9	1436
Difficulties mine managers contend with under Carranza	9	1437
Division of land not practicable	9	1437
Promises not honest	9	1437
Solution of Mexican situation, two offered	9	1438
Bailey, Mrs. Lola C., American	8	1027
Farming in Valles district, San Luis Potosi	8	1027
Driven off land, property destroyed; brother disappeared at Aguascalientes	8	1029
Barnes, A. C., American	12	1869
Chairman Young Men's Business Association, Nogales, Ariz.	12	1870
As to testimony of Mr. B. Curtis that chairman of subcommittee was in error in saying citizens along border loath to appear and testify before same	12	1870
Barnes, Maj. R. L., American	8	1231
Intelligence officer, Southern Department	8	1232
Plan of San Diego	8	1232
Raids at Brownsville, Webb County, Big Bend, by Carranza soldiers and officers	8	1232
Names of generals directing raids	8	1232
Carranza pro-German	8	1234
German minister; espionage system unchanged; Kurt Jahnke with Lathar Witzke	8	1225
Official press at Mexico pro-German	8	1235
Pilaviciini expelled for supporting United States in World War	8	1235
Duty on paper paid in kind and paper given to pro-German publications	8	1235
Carranza protected American slackers	8	1236
Gale's Magazine in Mexico City and Lynn Gale investigated	8	1236
Martens, soviet ambassador	8	1237
Gale close to Carranza	8	1237
American Government sustains Carranza in power	8	1238
Efforts to be friendly with Mexico; efforts to have Carranza support United States	8	1239
Mexicans gathered information along border for Germans	8	1239
Draft explained to Mexicans to overcome German propaganda	8	1240
Mexican consuls in false propaganda	8	1240
Bartch, G. W.	18	2719
Went to Mexico, 1907, to study mining industry, State of Oaxaca; represented Americans who desired to build railroad from Salina Cruz to Acapulco and to Oaxaca	18	2719
Organized holding company and became general counsel	18	2719
Was sent to purchase Oaxaca & Ejutla R. R.	18	2720
Met President Diaz, Senator Tomacho, Senator Jose Castelasos, and Gen. Aguilar, chief of staff to Diaz	18	2720
Describes railroad concession obtained	18	2720
Company put up $96,000 Mexican internal bonds for	18	2720
Road never built account of revolution	18	2720
Bonds forfeited	18	2720
Describes American policy toward construction railroads	18	2721

	Part	Page
Bartch, G. W.—Continued.
Success of his company meant transcontinental line.	18	2721
Diaz liked Americans.	18	2722
Castelanos now exile.	18	2722
De la Barra exile.	18	2722
Gamboa great statesman.	18	2722
Investigated claims of Mormon colonies.	18	2723
Describes settlement of.	18	2723
Mormons had no trouble up to time of Madero.	18	2723
Schools in Mexico during Diaz régime.	18	2723
Influence of Catholic Church.	18	2725
Plan to drive Americans out.	18	2726
Salazar speech at Pearson.	18	2727
Speech Gen. Antonio Rojas at Chuichupa.	18	2728
Salazar at Colonia Juarez.	18	2729
Confiscation of American homes at Chuichupa.	18	2729
Raiding of Colonia Dublan by Salazar.	18	2729
Exodus Mormons from Colonia Dublan.	18	2730
United States compelled to care for them at El Paso, Tex.	18	2730
Colonists driven from Colonia Diaz.	18	2731
Letter from Federal Gen. Blanco to Mr. Farnsworth explaining why did not attack bandits.	18	2732
Invasion of Colonia Garcia.	18	2733
Invasion Colonia Chuichupa.	18	2733
United States made no effort to protect.	18	2734
Invasion Colonia Morelos by Salazar.	18	2735
Invasion Colonia San Jose by Salazar.	18	2735
Salazar speech at San Jose.	18	2736
Mistreatment Americans by Salazar at Morelos.	18	2736
All statements taken under oath.	18	2737
Murder four Americans at Alamo, Baja Calif.	18	2738
Has filed with State Department all affidavits taken.	18	2739
Four thousand persons driven out from Mormon colonies.	18	2739
Nothing done by United States.	18	2739
Describes concession Ingwald C. Thoresen.	18	2740
After six years' imprisonment same was declared forfeited by Carrancistas.	18	2741
Useless to protest.	18	2742
Suggests international commission.	18	2743
Investigation convinces that factions will never get together.	18	2743
Does not agree with John Lind concerning Indians.	18	2744
Better class Mexicans would welcome intervention.	18	2744
Outrage against Robert O. Grewell by Gen. Blanco.	18	2745
Murder of James N. Walker.	18	2746
Acts Col. Rivera at Morelos.	18	2746
Mexican Soldiers permitted to bathe nude in streets.	18	2746
Lillywhite and others protested.	18	2746
Murder of William Adams.	18	2747
Murder of J. D. Harvey.	18	2747
Treatment Mrs. James Mortenson.	18	2747
Confiscation of home and mistreatment of Joseph Clawson.	18	2747
Murder of Joshua Stephens.	18	2748
Treatment of Daniel Schnall by Salazar.	18	2748
Williams and others held for ransom by Rojas.	18	2749
Mexicans taunted Americans re no protection by Government.	18	2749
Salazar boasted of outrages against Americans.	18	2752
Hostility of Mexicans against those of own race who are friendly to Americans.	18	2753
Gen. Rojas posted notices warning Americans to get out and stay out.	18	2754
Some Americans returned to Colonia Morelos were arrested and mistreated.	18	2755
Salazar murdered Mexican because friendly to Americans.	18	2756
Describes Santa Isabel massacre.	18	2757
Ambush of American troops at Carrizal.	18	2760
Beatty, Amos L., American.	2	528
Experiences at Tampico of the Texas Co. of Mexico.	2	528
Attempt to rob paymasters in February, 1918.	2	529

Beatty, Amos L., American—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Paymaster House killed.....	2	530
Mr. Stevenson killed July 30, 1918; no investigation of murders.....	2	530
Robberies at various camps.....	2	531
Carrancista soldiers responsible; form of waiver required at American ports by Mexican Consuls before vizing passports.....	2	532
Tribute to Pélaez; depredations and injuries to persons.....	2	533
Forced contributions for dredging harbor at Tampico.....	2	534
Capitalization, stockholders, and organization of the Texas Co.....	2	536
Adverse locations on the company's leases and refusal to allow company to drill.....	2	536
Circular providing for permits to drill.....	2	539
Reasons for refusal to comply with oil decrees.....	2	540
Failure to stop adverse locator from drilling.....	2	540
Protests to Washington.....	2	540
Action of State Department.....	2	541
Association of oil companies.....	2	542
Not engaged in propaganda for intervention.....	2	542
Publicity.....	2	543
Oil association has never advocated armed intervention in Mexico....	2	543
Anti-intervention propaganda.....	2	544
Letter from State Department as affidavit required by Mexican authorities of those going to Tampico district.....	2	544
Beauregard, Commander A. T.
On staff of Admiral Winslow, 1916, on west coast of Mexico.....	22	3216
—Statement as to assault on United States boat at Mazatlan by Mexicans, 1916; one United States marine killed; several injured.....	22	3216
—Two United States officers jailed; released.....	22	3217
After Mayo incident Tampico, admirals not allowed to demand apologies.....	22	3217
Force can not be employed to redress insults or attacks only under certain conditions.....	22	3218
Obregon version of Mazatlan incident, Americans to blame wholly untrue.....	22	3218
One man killed Mazatlan incident, others injured.....	22	3218
Acted as interpreter for admirals in South and Central America and Mexico.....	22	3219
Opinion as to settlement of Mexican question.....	22	3220
Agitators must be suppressed in Mexico.....	22	3220
Basic stock of Mexico Indian and Spanish.....	22	3220
Indians of Southern Mexico different from other tribes.....	22	3221
Becker, Henry.....	17	2625
Affidavits of; in Mexico 20 years; robbed Americans worst sufferers....	17	2625
Blackford, Francis W., American.....	9	1401
Conditions under Diaz.....	9	1401
Effect on Mexicans of construction work.....	9	1402
Construction work, unable to do.....	9	1402
Mines required to be worked under penalty of forfeiture.....	9	1403
Remedy for bad conditions.....	9	1403
Railway project lost because of revolution.....	9	1404
Blalock, George E., American.....	8	979
/ Bought chemical ranch northwest of Tampico, in 1892 and established colony.....	8	980
General exodus of families.....	8	983
Advice of American consul to colonists.....	8	984
Neighbors angry because Americans raised wages.....	8	984
Raids by Carrancistas.....	8	984
Colonists return and are threatened with death by a Carrancista major.....	8	985
Depredations on colonists.....	8	986
Women and children sent to mountains.....	8	987
Colony an organization of people composing it.....	8	987
Atascador colony.....	8	988
—Five members of colony killed, names of, and action taken.....	8	989
—Property all destroyed.....	8	992
—German family still there.....	8	992
—Depredations.....	8	993

	Part.	Page.
Blocker, John R., American.....	8	1177
Organized company and bought large tract of land in Coahuila.....	8	1177
Raided by Gen. Caraveo, of Orozco forces, who took away stock.....	8	1178
Raids by Carrancistas.....	8	1178
Ransomed ranch foreman, Mr. Delamain.....	8	1179
Mauser rifle the law.....	8	1179
Cattle driven off.....	8	1179
Bollinger, D. B., American.....	8	1073
Farming and ranching near Tonata, State of Chiapas.....	8	1073
Depredations and injury to person, in time of Madero.....	8	1073
Americans fled to Guatemala.....	8	1075
To make homes.....	8	1077
Booker, Lewis E.....	17	2613
No protection to lives or property.....	17	2613
Robbed of property; made claim; not returned; Federals had some of his horses.....	17	2614
Salazar activities; under Diaz Americans treated well; under Madero with contempt; took American's hat; effect of President Wilson's proclamation bad.....	17	2615
Boynton, Charles H., American.....	2	403
National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, publicity matter of.....	2	403
Organization approved by State Department.....	2	405
By-laws.....	2	405
Charged to be interventionists.....	2	408
Policy of.....	2	408
No intimation of any policy in Mexico from State Department.....	2	409
Publicity through press and bulletins, copies filed.....	2	410
Publicity of the S. Altendorf statements.....	2	411
Intervention and Maj. McDonnell.....	2	412
Officers of.....	2	413
McDonnell interview, clipping.....	2	414
Repudiation of Inman report; letter of Dr. Robert E. Spier and reply..	2	417
Intervention charge caught up with.....	2	420
A phantom and letter to Christian Science Monitor.....	2	421
Restrictions on American press about truth as to Mexico.....	2	422
Mexican papers on propaganda against intervention.....	2	423
Bowman, H. E.....	17	2597
Affidavits of; details losses and robbery and outrages in his section...	17	2597
Brandon, Gerald, American.....	14	2037
Expelled from Mexico as pernicious foreigner.....	14	2038
Investigated case of Consular Agent W. O. Jenkins at Puebla.....	14	2039
Witnesses forced to testify.....	14	2041
Record of court removed.....	14	2041
Interview with prosecuting attorney.....	14	2042
Conditions in State of Puebla.....	14	2044
Jenkins fined for contempt of court.....	14	2046
Britt, James J., American.....	8	993
Conditions in Tampico; German propaganda there.....	8	994
Transfer of money for pay rolls.....	8	995
American Legion in Tampico.....	8	995
Oil interest, who own.....	8	995
Oil fields and Pelaez.....	8	996
Pipe line and Carranza.....	8	996
Pelaez, tribute to, originally to Candido Aguilar.....	8	996
Killing of Rooney and Bowles in Carranza line.....	8	996
Wallace killed.....	8	998
Oil for war uses.....	8	998
Not required to submit to decrees of Carranza.....	8	1001
American Legion.....	8	1002
Villa forces a loan; border papers unfavorable conditions in Mexico...	8	1004
Robberies in Tampico.....	8	1005
American investors in Mexico obey laws.....	8	1006
Titles in Mexico.....	8	1007
Mexicans and big business.....	8	1007
Special privileges, concessions.....	8	1008

	Part.	Page.
Britt, James J., American—Continued.
Bribing and corruption.....	8	1008
Permits to drill.....	8	1009
Americans killed in oil district.....	8	1011
Brown, Edward N., American.....	11	1787
National Railways of Mexico, inception, construction, present condition, and interest of Mexican Government in.....	11	1787
Brown, Rev. Edwin R., American.....	14	2071
Protestant Churches and missions in Mexico.....	14	2071
Americans pessimistic as to outlook in Mexico.....	14	2075
Protectorate by United States.....	14	2075
None but natives can preach.....	14	2077
✓ German propaganda meeting at Puebla.....	14	2078
Graft and anti-Americanism.....	14	2079
Carranza.....	14	2080
Case of Consular Agent Jenkins.....	14	2081
Bryant, V. V., American.....	14	2159
Mexican laborers migrating to United States from intolerable conditions in Mexico.....	14	2159
Buckley, William F., American.....	6	767
Revolution normal condition of Mexico.....	6	768
Madero and Carranza revolution, difference between.....	6	769
Mexican attitude toward Huerta.....	6	770
"Cientificos," who they are.....	6	771
Huerta and American Government.....	6	773
Huerta and John Lind.....	6	775
American Government and Americans in Mexico.....	6	777
President's attitude.....	6	777
Tampico flag incident.....	6	778
Elimination of Huerta.....	6	778
Capt. Scott, the Marietta refugees from Tampico.....	6	779
Officers and marines from gunboat Annapolis fired on at Mazatlan.....	6	780
Raids in Texas under de la Rosa.....	6	780
Occupation of Veracruz.....	6	781
Why Veracruz was taken.....	6	782
Siege of Americans in hotel at Tampico and Admiral Mayo.....	6	784
Gunboats at Tampico.....	6	783
Statement of Admiral Mayo.....	6	784
Niagara conference, purpose, proceedings, and result.....	6	787
Embargo on arms and ammunition.....	6	792
Shipments of arms, etc.....	6	793
Letter to Mexican delegates to Niagara conference and Mexico.....	6	794
Mr. Bryan, Niagara conference and Mexico.....	6	795
Carranza revolution, inception to, entry into Mexico City.....	6	795
Carranza interview on aims of revolution.....	6	796
Mexican junta in Washington directed policy of American Government.....	6	797
Luis Cabrera and what Mexican Government was going to do.....	6	797
Carranza's entry into Mexico, what occurred.....	6	798
Revolt of Villa against Carranza.....	6	799 ✓
Anarchy in Mexico.....	6	799
American newspapers did not print facts about Mexico.....	6	800
Gen. Obregon worst of Mexican leaders.....	6	800
Obregon looted Mexico City.....	6	801
International committee wired Mr. Bryan.....	6	802
Note to Carranza and reply.....	6	803
Red Cross report.....	6	804
People starving and the officials exporting foodstuffs.....	6	804
Note to Carranza and recognition.....	6	805
Refusal of Carranza to arbitrate differences with Villa.....	6	805
Pan American conference.....	6	807
Columbus raid.....	6	810
Pershing expedition.....	6	810
Personal representations of President Wilson.....	6	811
John Lind.....	6	812
Silliman's ineptitude report.....	6	813
William Bayard Hale.....	6	814 ✓

	Part	Page
Buckley, William F., American—Continued.
Paul Fuller.....	6	814
Henry Allen Tupper.....	6	814
Carothers.....	6	814
H. L. Hall.....	6	814
Tupper, Duval West.....	6	814
Charles A. Douglas.....	6	814
Brazilian minister.....	6	815
Carranza's revolutionary program and fulfillment.....	6	815
Imposition of military governors.....	2	816
Carranza executes opponents.....	6	817
Speech to supreme court at Mexico.....	6	817
Effect of, on Mexican policy in Latin America.....	6	817
Order to Huerta to eliminate himself.....	6	821
Feeling of Mexican people toward United States.....	6	822
Carranza insulted United States.....	6	822
Speeches of Congressman Rogers.....	6	823
Speech of.....	6	824
Interview on what Mexicans think of American policy.....	6	824
Carranza constitution of 1917; Cabrera's views on bolshevism.....	6	829
Vicissitudes of oil companies.....	6	829
Petition of oil operators to President Wilson.....	6	833
Oil legislation.....	6	835
Dredging of Panuco River.....	6	836
Policy of oil operators.....	6	836
Pelaez, who is he.....	6	840
Solution of Mexican problem.....	6	841
Armed intervention.....	6	842
Burbank, Roscoe C., American.....	14	2148
Mexican laborers emigrating to United States from intolerable conditions in Mexico.....	14	2148
Burkhead, L. L., American.....	10	1605
Raid of March 9, 1916, on Columbus, N. Mex.....	10	1605
Burnett, Charles M., American.....	15	2169
Farming at Medina, Oaxaca, colony of American small farmers; encouraged to go to Mexico by literature of Mexican Government.....	15	2173
Watchful waiting policy.....	15	2174
Zapatistas robbed people and train.....	15	2175
Messages to get out.....	15	2176
Huerta.....	15	2178
Troops land at Veracruz.....	15	2178
Americans arrested.....	15	2179
Taken by Mexican troops.....	15	2180
Brought out by British officers.....	15	2181
Return of some of colonists.....	15	2183
Mexicans took possession of property.....	15	2184
Compelled to leave Veracruz.....	15	2185
Oaxaca never recognized Carranza.....	15	2185
Claim filed.....	15	2186
Trouble caused by landing troops at Veracruz.....	15	2189
What ought to be done in Mexico.....	15	2189
More than 200 owned land.....	15	2193
Agrarian problem.....	15	2193
Small farmer new to Mexico.....	15	2194
Byam, Eber Cole.....	18	2684
Mexican laborers good.....	18	2684
Americans benefited natives; Mexican customs; safe with them under Diaz régime; honest.....	18	2685
Taught by Socialist to shout "death to clergy"; outrages committed by Socialist leaders and vagabond followers; no peonage; convict labor used in Mexico same as Burleson uses in Texas; disagrees with Lind on conditions in Mexico; disagrees with John K. Turner and "Barbarous Mexico," which was written in part by a Mexican and translated.....	18	2687
Gutierrez de Lara, a Socialist wrote it; he was an extreme radical; Turner a Socialist; record Turner as a radical; Turner compared with revolutionists time of plan of San Diego; discusses agrarian question.....	18	2688

Byam, Eber Cole—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Compares Mexican States to the United States of north acreage in farms.....	18	2689
George Creel discussed on "Wilson on the issues" and agrarian system, Mexico.....	18	2690
How Mexican could secure land in Mexico; Mexicans don't want division of land; system of working land.....	18	2691
Catholic Church education in Mexico good; describes early methods of education of Indians.....	18	2692
One priest to 5,000 of population in sixteenth and seventeenth centuries; Lind not justified in statement about church.....	18	2693
Diaz permitted church to violate constitution of 1857 for good of country; protestants secured attendance by distribution of coins..	18	2694
History of the conquest of Mexico by Antonio de Solis, 1666, on which Lind's book based; not accepted as true by all historians.....	18	2694
Quotes reliable historians to prove statement.....	18	2695
Lind copied from Encyclopedia Britannica in book; errors of Lind book, quotes authorities.....	18	2696
Disagrees with Lind on plantation story; rubber enterprise.....	18	2698
Coffee and tobacco; why antireligious.....	18	2699
Socialists instead of Liberals; socialism the theory, bolshevism the fact; not a Catholic; believes trouble in Mexico "antireligious"; Hidalgo misunderstood people; career extreme excesses, assassinations and destruction short lived; gave orders to murder 700 unarmed citizens; church for law and order therefore; revolutionists against them.....	18	2700
Revolutionary governments destructive of law and order; Diaz controlled Mexico by threat of intervention; Diaz encouraged violation of antireligious laws to remind Catholic people he was against them, etc.; would not repeal antireligious laws in order to hold church down; if majority given a chance can establish government, but must have protection.....	18	2701
Carranza able to proceed; reason; pillage; Carranza government based on graft; this element must be curbed; majority could be made good citizens; explains methods of Catholic schools; religious conditions Mexico and United States different.....	18	2702
Catholic party nominated Madero for President and de la Barra for Vice President; de la Barra received 60 per cent of vote, but Pino Suarez, who had 15 per cent of the vote, was declared elected; notes on election, 1912.....	18	2703
Campa, C., Mexican.....	14	2157
Migration of Mexican labor to escape intolerable conditions in Mexico..	14	2157
Canada, William Wesley.....	16	2421
United States consular service 20 years: November 10, Veracruz; relations good with Mexican officials up to Carranza time; Huerta friendly; ideas contrary to those of Lind.....	16	2422
Disagrees with statement of Inman that Huerta issued orders for imprisonment of Americans; Dr. Ryan released by Huerta on telegraphic request, sent out by Huerta; Department pleased, as Ryan personal friend of Bryan; Huerta showed no hostility toward Americans even after taking of Veracruz.....	16	2423
First break with Carranza when Americans began complaining of being robbed; promised but did nothing; had newspaper men and civilians locked up, etc.; relates speech of Cabrera for Carranza Government at banquet at Veracruz in which he stated their policy would be "To drive out Americans, take their property, not going to allow them to buy more"; said something similar about English and Cubans; requested I notify my Government; Carranza present, no refusal or denial from him.....	16	2424
Future actions proved policy outlined carried into execution, "and then some"; relates theft of bars of gold from American by Cabrera who shipped it; attached on arrival in New York.....	16	2425
Letter Cabrera to witness; official complaint of his action in giving information to owners of stolen bars, shows bars claimed by Carranza Government; reply under date February 5, 1915.....	16	2426

Canada, William Wesley—Continued.

Part. Page.

Silliman knew Carranza: used to sell him milk: arrested, jailed by Huertistas; released by Carranza: came to Veracruz; witness gave him money and sent him to United States; returned: first-grade appointment; salary $2,000; wrote letter to United States Government that he had great influence with Carranza; warned them against witness; he was also a special representative of Carranza; Carranza told Silliman he was starting the "Bloodiest revolution his country had ever seen"; at the start his revolution was against Madero.....	16	2427
Silliman said if Carranza lost he would lose his fine home in Saltillo; if he won he could keep it; indications were Silliman received more pay from Carranza than from the United States; often requested telegraphic reports be held up; Silliman conveyed confidential matter to Carranza; considered Weeks and Dr. Tupper also in pay of Carranza, and were Silliman's advisers.....	16	2428
Received letters threatening his life; thinks Silliman knew of them from conversation related; letter, Bryan to witness, introducing Charles A. Douglas, February 16, 1915; Carranza attorney.....	16	2429
Impressions of Lind in Mexico.....	16	2430
Disagrees with Lind about influence on Americans or natives.....	16	2433
Further refutes Lind; recruits with ropes, etc.; men who Lind saw were thieves and convicts who were given choice to go to jail or to the army.....	16	2433
Impossible to do business under Carranza régime without paying "graft"; natives starving; had 40 tons of beans and 40 tons of corn for distribution to them; prevented by Gen. or Gov. Candido Aguilar; food rotted; Lind in close consultation with Carrancistas at Veracruz daily.....	16	2435
Telegram quoted, Shanklin to witness, to receive Hall and Col. Martinez; Hall told witness Lind had promised to take them to the United States to get $50,000 for Zapata brothers.....	16	2436
Understood Hall was on pay roll of United States representing Zapata; Hall told him so.....	16	2437
Secret messengers and letters between Shanklin and Lind referred to.....	16	2438
Quotation from the President to Congress August 27, 1913; reference to Americans leaving Mexico; caused Mexicans to hold on until they lost all.....	16	2438
Lind and Silliman justified outrages, etc., by company happening in civil war; United States advised to give up graft money to rebels, Carrancistas; sent out 3,000 or 4,000 people to States.....	16	2439
Huerta offered to pay first-class passage for Americans when United States Government ordered them sent second class; traps laid for witness.....	16	2441
Two American secret service men told to get witness to take vacation so they could rob him of his files.....	16	2442
Catholic Church good influence on natives; Carranza officers took churches in Veracruz; made barracks out of them.....	16	2442
Turned over nuns to Father Joyce.....	16	2443
Nuns in hiding; one nun with child.....	16	2443
Mexicans in favor of intervention by United States; wanted United States to stay in Veracruz.....	16	2444
Buzzards and mosquitoes only scavengers in Veracruz; bad conditions under natives.....	16	2444
Cannon, Bishop James J., American.....	1	141
Supervises work of Methodist Episcopal Church South in Mexico.....	1	142
Mission and missionary property not damaged.....	1	142
Confirms Inman statements.....	1	142
Intervention a mistake.....	1	144
Attitude toward United States in South America.....	1	145
Waiver of all claims for damages.....	1	150
Schools.....	1	151
The Constitution and the Church.....	1	153
Caperton, Admiral William Banks.....	22	3203
Charge Mexican Coast July 28, 1916.....	22	3203
Carranza headquarters in Veracruz after evacuation of American forces.....	22	3204
German interned vessels at Tampico used refuge Americans.....	22	3204

	Part.	Page.
Caperton, Admiral William Banks—Continued.
Villistas fired on United States boat.....	22	3204
Location of American ships, 1916.....	22	3205
Official orders Navy.....	22	3205
Orders to keep out of trouble.....	22	3205
Admiral's letter of instruction to commanders.....	22	3205
Confidential letter to commanders.....	22	3206
Mexican officials misunderstood cause of Mazatlan.....	22	3206
Mazatlan incident.....	22	3206
Tabulated report Americans near Mexican ports.....	22	3207
Mexican troops.....	22	3208
Financial value paper money Carranza.....	22	3208
Food question.....	22	3208
Military activities Carranza.....	22	3209
Mexican railroads.....	22	3209
Telegraph and radio stations.....	22	3209
Shipping.....	22	3209
Telegram from department asking report on conditions, September 9, 1916.....	22	3210
Reply.....	22	3210
Admiral's impressions on Mexican conditions.....	22	3211
Foreign activities in Mexico.....	22	3212
Japanese ship delivers ammunition, machinery for arms, etc., to Mexico.....	22	3212
Activities Mexico to Salvador, arms and ammunition.....	22	3212
Activity German and Mexican plots.....	22	3213
American ships shadowing Mexican ship.....	22	3213
Present of radio outfit to Salvador by Carranza.....	22	3213
Conclusion.....	22	3213
Guatemala breaks relations with Germany to strengthen Cabrera Government.....	22	3213
Firing on United States ship at Tampico, 1915, by Villistas.....	22	3213
Report made to department.....	22	3214
Dictatorship, Mexico, necessary.....	22	3214
Discusses visit and conferences, Central America.....	22	3215
Gen. Frias, of Nicaragua, Mexicans and Germans working together...	22	3216
Carlin, Margaret.....	17	2593
Her affidavit in corroboration of United States Attorneys McCormick and Robinson as to I. W. W.; socialistic doctrines promulgated among the Mexicans in Mexico; tells of assault on her and her husband.....	17	2593
Carlin, P. H.....	17	2623
Affidavits of; not a Mormon; robbed, house looted, and other atrocities.	17	2623
Passports.....	17	154
Person who signed waivers.....	17	156
Carney, Mrs. James, American.....	10	1507
Disappearance of her husband.....	10	1507
Carothers, George C., American.....	11	1755
Law and order under Diaz.....	11	1755
Bryan's attitude formerly and now.....	11	1757
Bryan orders Americans out of Mexico.....	11	1758
Concession, meaning of.....	11	1759
Madero a joke.....	11	1761
Number of Chinese massacred at Torreon by Maderistas.....	11	1761
Carranza's attitude to Americans over Veracruz.....	11	1767
Villa's estimate of Carranza.....	11	1770
Conference with Bryan.....	11	1771
Villa and Aguascalientes convention.....	11	1774
Villa and Zapata.....	11	1775
Scott and Villa.....	11	1776
Japanese officer and Villa.....	11	1777
Japs cached munitions.....	11	1778
Rabb, collector Brownsville, and Villa.....	11	1779
Murder of Americans at Santa Isabel.....	11	1780
Raid on Columbus, N. Mex.....	11	1781
Cantu in Lower California.....	11	1782
Opinion as to outside assistance.....	11	1783
Killing of William Benton.....	11	1784

	Part.	Page
Carrillo, Rafael Martinez, Mexican.....	7	909
Protested against testifying.....	7	910
Land in State of Puebla seized.....	7	910
As to bail bond of Consular Agent Jenkins.....	7	912
Intervention over Jenkins.....	7	916
Carpentier, E. L.....	17	2626
Frenchman; prisoner, violated neutrality laws; experiences with rebels; shot at; refused to join rebels; accused of being Madero spy; Orozco shot Thomas Fountain at Parral.....	17	2627
Joined Villa.....	17	2628
Fountain and witness whipped 250 of the enemy. Made two cannons. Gives account of battles.....	17	2628
Salazar whipped them at Sierra de la Cruz.....	17	2628
Orozco's men shot child 8 years old for crying "Viva Madero".....	17	2629
American consul at Casa Fuentes refused to officially assist him.....	17	2629
Arrested and robbed by Salazar's men.....	17	2629
Chamberlain, George Agnew.....	19	2861
United States Consular Service 17 years.....	19	2861
Consul general of Mexico City, May, 1917, to August, 1919.....	19	2861
Was in Mexico at time final recognition of Carranza.....	19	2862
Commercial feature his special province.....	19	2863
Enemy trading act during war.....	19	2863
At end of war United States had more complete and definite knowledge regarding commerce in Mexico than ever before, with knowledge of wants of Mexico and means to supply same.....	19	2863
Consular organization was very anxious to take advantage of this knowledge but unable to do so on account United States had no policy with Mexico.....	19	2863
Efforts were made by embassy and consul general to get a policy established.....	19	2863
Efforts were unsuccessful.....	19	2863
Notified Americans through State Department that in view of no protection to them could not advise investments in Mexico.....	19	2863
Conditions were such entire activities consul general ceased.....	19	2863
Began to think of resigning.....	19	2863
One reason United States should have developed definite policy was improper practice Mexican Government.....	19	2863
Direct alliance between Carranza and Spaniards.....	19	2863
Carranza generals evaded wiping out banditry.....	19	2863
If no banditry, no need for large military organizations.....	19	2863
Cabinet officers received graft.....	19	2864
Carranza changed tariff on imports day to day.....	19	2864
Legislature gave blanket authority to Carranza to change duties when he saw fit.....	19	2864
Result was that business men were compelled to go out of business or become briber.....	19	2864
This condition made United States trade with Mexico impossible unless demands were made and carried out.....	19	2864
Graft and maladministration cause of all trouble between United States and Mexico.....	19	2864
Cause of every revolution in Mexico.....	19	2864
Diaz was honest man.....	19	2864
Diaz's official family grafters and caused his trouble.....	19	2864
All information relative to graft was furnished Washington.....	19	2865
Does not classify Carranza personally in matter of graft.....	19	2865
Carranza knew graft was being accepted by his officials.....	19	2865
Carranza accepted plan to pay 60 per cent of revenue to military.....	19	2865
Carranza thought necessary to keep military loyal.....	19	2865
Recommended to department course of action.....	19	2866
No industries left in Mexico except those able to pay tribute.....	19	2866
Period of two years as consul general was unbroken record of insulting acts toward United States by Mexicans.....	19	2866
Confident Ambassador Fletcher had same opinion.....	19	2867
Fletcher obtained release of 2,000,000 cartridges for export to Carranza.....	19	2867
Carranza issued statement that Ambassador Bonillas had this done.....	19	2867
Carranza sent Mr. Nieto to Washington ostensibly to negotiate, but gave him no credentials.....	19	2867

Chamberlain, George Agnew—Continued.		Part.	Page
Ambassador Fletcher called to Washington to negotiate with Nieto...	19	2867
Nieto had no power.....	19	2867
Fletcher and Nieto returned to Mexico to complete negotiations.....	19	2867
Carranza repudiated Nieto.....	19	2867
When speech President Wilson made to delegation of Mexican newspaper men was published in Mexico City, Carranza published note of United States of April 2, 1913, without answering same.....	19	2868
American policy caused Mexican Government to flout the United States with impunity.....	19	2868
United States made Carranza.....	19	2868
Every slap Carranza administered to United States made him stronger in Mexico.....	19	2869	✓
Mexicans distrust each other.....	19	2869
Policy of United States swept foundations from personal standing of every representative in Mexico; was reason for resigning.....	19	2870
Speech of President labeling all American interests in Mexico as being connected with "big interests".....	19	2871	✓
This did more harm to Americans in Mexico than any one thing.....	19	2871
In latter part of 1917 conditions of famine existed in Mexico.....	19	2872
This statement based upon investigation for department.....	19	2872
Policy for past 7 years has wiped out all precedents in dealing with foreign countries.....	19	2872
Should take "economic control" of Mexico.....	19	2873
Lend Mexico money with understanding that United States sees that it is properly expended.....	19	2873
Majority of Mexicans would accept if they knew United States meant business.....	19	2874
Eighty per cent Mexicans naturally pacific.....	19	2874
No trouble with Indians if let alone.....	19	2874
Excellent parallel in experience in Philippines.....	19	2874
Banditry never intended to be wiped out by present Mexican Government.....	19	2875
Banditry was wiped out by Diaz.....	19	2875
United States has had practical mandate over Mexico; agreed to by Great Britain and France.....	19	2876
Mandate has been accumulating shame for 7 years.....	19	2876
Mexico intrinsically most wealthy country ever visited.....	19	2876
Division of land section of Constitution of 1917 as administered by Carrancistas only club to extort blackmail.....	19	2877
Disease in Mexico averages higher than in this country.....	19	2878
During period of three months 45 trains were dynamited between Vera Cruz and Mexico City.....	19	2878
Mexico City crowded with people from agricultural districts for safety..	19	2878
State of Morelos wiped out as an agricultural district.....	19	2878
Conditions have wiped out 90 per cent of industries of country.....	19	2880
Chairman quotes statement of President to Congress Aug. 27, 1918....	19	2880
Statement of Secretary Bryan on Oct. 28, 1918.....	19	2880
Statement chairman of Foreign Relations Committee Bacon on Oct. 25, 1918.....	19	2880
Benito Juarez was known as "Liberator" of Mexico.....	19	2880
Chairman quotes article 8 of treaty between Benito Juarez and United States.....	19	2881
Chairman quotes articles 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of same treaty; Benito Juarez treaty dated 1859.....	19	2883
Treaty of Guadalupe, dated 1848; treaty of Gadsden, dated 1854.....	19	2883
Benito Juarez never lost prestige by entering into this treaty.....	19	2883
Describes Mexican Indian.....	19	2884
Large concerns able to operate by payment for protection; small man who is unable loses.....	19	2885
Chairman introduces telegram from American Smelter & Refining Co. to Mexican officials proving this.....	19	2885
Chairman quotes note of Secretary of State to Mexican Government, dated August 12, 1918.....	19	2886
Carrancistas answered note August 12.....	19	2887
Quote note of State Department, dated October 1, 1919.....	19	2887

	Part.	Page.
Church, D. W., American.....	14	2125
Four Americans shot at Alamo mining camp by Mexican regular troops.....	14	2126
Mining property at Alamo destroyed.....	14	2126
Statement of Carl L. Carlson.....	14	2129
Compton, O. G., American.....	8	1059
Glenn Springs raid.....	8	1060
Five-year-old boy and three American soldiers killed.....	8	1060
Boquillas raid.....	8	1063
Conger, Rev. Sidney S., American.....	11	1729
Disagrees with Inman.....	11	1730
Raise of wages by Americans.....	11	1731
Praise for Henry Lane Wilson.....	11	1732
Carrancista troops in Mexico City.....	11	1736
Zapata and Villa forces in Mexico City.....	11	1738
Obregon and people of Mexico City.....	11	1739
Red Cross in Mexico City.....	11	1740
Obregon and Red Cross.....	11	1741
Inman's opinions.....	11	1741
Inman and Red Cross.....	11	1742
Carranza assurances to missionaries.....	11	1742
John Lind.....	11	1743
International Committee.....	11	1744
State Department recommendations.....	11	1745
No one held accountable for confiscation.....	11	1748
Americans and Mexicans killed.....	11	1750
Poverty among Mexicans.....	11	1750
Metallic reserve of banks seized.....	11	1752
Corbin, Dr. Bruce Baker, American.....	9	1450
Disagreement Dr. Winton as to peace and prosperity in Mexico.....	9	1450
Conditions in Mexico.....	9	1451
People have no confidence in Carranza.....	9	1452
People worn out and weary.....	9	1452
Attitude of Americans in Mexico toward this Government.....	9	1453
American opinion as to what ought to be done in Mexico. Destruction of property.....	9	1454
Treatment accorded women.....	9	1455
Economic conditions.....	9	1456
Attitude toward Jenkins.....	9	1456
Attitude of missionaries.....	9	1457
Difficulties in educating Mexican people.....	9	1457
What Americans have done in Mexico for people.....	9	1458
Curtis, Bracey, American.....	12	1834
Banks in Sonora.....	12	1834
Statement as to not appearing before subcommittee.....	12	1835
As to refusal of Mexico to visé passports of persons testifying.....	12	1837
Forres passport refused visé.....	12	1838
Fighting in west coast States.....	12	1840
Business in Sonora.....	12	1841
Garbanzo shipments.....	12	1842
Forfeiture of land concessions.....	12	1842
Protest of United States.....	12	1843
Agrarian law.....	12	1843
De la Huerta's letter.....	12	1844
Article 27 keeps capital out of Mexico.....	12	1846
War, Carranza alternative.....	12	1848
Conflict at Nogales in August, 1918.....	12	1849
Appeal for troops.....	12	1849
Presidential candidates.....	12	1851
Garbanzo crop handling.....	12	1854
Export of gold.....	12	1855
Paper money "infalsificables".....	12	1856
Order on viséing passports.....	12	1858
Complaints directed to Mexican State authorities.....	12	1859
Extradition of criminals.....	12	1860
Subcommittee of United States Senate.....	12	1861
Statement of Senator Fall in purpose of subcommittee.....	12	1862

	Part.	Page
Curtis, Bracey, American—Continued.
Society for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, loan charges against.	12	1865
Criticism. Letters, Curtis to Fall on viséing of his passports.	12	1869
Dabney, Dr. T. H., American.	10	1609
Raid on Columbus, N. Mex.	10	1609
Dum-dum bullets.	10	1610
Land and entry and title to daughter.	10	1611
Dean, Edwin G., American.	10	1612
Raid on Columbus, N. Mex.	10	1612
Father killed.	10	1614
De Bekker, L. J., American.	2	331
Of oil, mining, and ranch interests. Memorandum on efforts to bring about intervention in Mexico.	2	333
Activities of Miss Agnes C. Laut.	2	335
William Gates.	2	335
Personal attitude.	2	336
Literature sent out by League of Free Nations Association.	2	337
Plot against Mexico for intervention.	2	338
Reasons for summoning McDonald, Gates, Dr. Inman, Boynton, and De Bekker.	2	341
"Slender of whole Mexican Nation".	2	343
The plot against Mexico, quotations from the Nation.	2	343
Telegram quoted by witness.	2	345
Note of Secretary of State of June 20, 1916, to Secretary of Foreign Relations de facto Government of Mexico, on outrages against Americans.	2	347
Investigation as to truth of articles.	2	362
Delamain, G. O.	8	1135
British subject. In Mexico since 1891: sheep and cattle business, Coahuila and Chihuahua; robbed several times by Sebastian Carranza, nephew of President of Mexico; also Caraveo; captured, held for ransom by Maj. Felipe Muzquiz Castillo, officer in Carranza army; ransom paid by Piedra Blanca Cattle Co., $2,000 gold; relates assassination of Fred Hillcourt, his wife, son, and daughter—threw them in well—by Castillo because he refused to vacate ranch and give Castillo the cattle; they were British subjects; heard of Pat Malone being held for ransom in that section; Castillo later killed by Carrancistas; note by Hanson: Pat Malone was held for ransom $5,000; when it was paid to Castillo other Carrancistas killed Maj. Castillo to get the $5,000, and his former unlawful acts had nothing to do with his death; this was common report among all Americans and Mexicans who knew of affair.	8	1135
Desvernine, Raoul E., American.	7	906
Did not advise E. L. Figueroa he need not answer questions of sub-committee.	7	906
Not personal advisor of Carranza.	7	907
No part in telegram on bail for Jenkins.	7	908
Advice to Figueroa.	7	909
Dickman, J. H., American.	9	1372
Of Associated Tropical Plantation Co., State of Veracruz.	9	1372
Investment of $3,000,000.	9	1373
Buildings destroyed and plantation gone back to jungle.	9	1373
Cattle and horses stolen.	9	1375
Dodds, S. S., American.	8	1250
Relates raid by Carrancistas, Fresno Pump Plant, near Brownsville, Tex., 1915.	8	1251
Furtherance plan of San Diego: details murder of Smith and Donaldson on Texas soil, by Aniceto Pizafia, officer Carranza; came from Matamoros, new Mausers and dynamite bombs.	8	1251
Doheny, Edward L., American.	1	207
Prospected for minerals in New Mexico since about 1873 on own resources.	1	208
Discarded Los Angeles oil field in 1892.	1	209
Found oil in Mexico in 1900; titles to first tract of oil land purchased.	1	209
Second tract purchased and titles.	1	211
Assurances of President Diaz.	1	212

Doheny, Edward L., American—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Concessions to import material and supplies for oil production.....	1	213
Contract with railroad for oil fuel abrogated.....	1	215
Attempt to nationalize petroleum.....	1	217
No connection with Standard Oil.....	1	219
Wages to native labor.....	1	220
Relations to laboring classes.....	1	224
Interview with Diaz.....	1	224
Organized under California laws.....	1	226
Capitalization.....	1	226
Acquirement of additional properties.....	1	229
Extract from report of 1915, shareholders.....	1	230
Protocolling of a company, renaming of.....	1	231
Annual report of Mexican Petroleum Co. (Ltd.) of Delaware.....	1	232
Wages to native laborers.....	1	235
Cecil Rhodes and London Oil Trust.....	1	242
Report of 1916.....	1	244
Taxes on oil.....	1	244
Value of oil.....	1	244
Report of 1917.....	1	245
Dividend of 1917.....	1	247
Annual report of 1918.....	1	247
Oil taxes paid.....	1	248
100 per cent efficiency of oil industry.....	1	249
Letter to United States Oil Fuel Commission as to value to United States of American-owned oil field in Mexico.....	1	250
Wage to laborers.....	1	252
British Government oil acquisitions in Persia and elsewhere.....	1	254
Future need of oil and products.....	1	255
Confiscatory legislation against oil interests.....	1	258
Fuel oil.....	1	258
Other forms of confiscation.....	1	259
Carranza oil decree of August 8, 1918.....	1	259
Letter of April 2, 1918, from Ambassador Fletcher on above decree..	1	265
Refusal to permit drilling in oil regions.....	1	267
Attempt to substitute mining claim rights for titles to oil lands.....	1	268
Kinds of oil produced in Mexico.....	1	269
Committee organized to study Mexico, The Doheny Research Foundation.....	1	271
Mexican Government determined to make enemies of Doheny associates.....	1	272
Letter from President Benjamin Ide Wheeler on Doheny Research Foundation.....	1	273
Attitude of oil people to Mexican people.....	1	274
Tribute to Candido Aguilar and others on advice of John Lind.....	1	276
Forces in control of oil fields.....	1	279
Sympathy of oil companies for Carranza.....	1	279
Pelaez's demands on oil companies.....	1	279
Radiogram from Mr. Wylie to Mr. Doheny on Pelaez activities.....	1	280
Arredondo agrees to payment of tribute to Pelaez.....	1	282
State Department approves.....	1	283
Memorandum of facts as to tribute paid by oil companies.....	1	283
As to safety and conditions in Mexico.....	1	288
Paying tribute to Pelaez.....	1	289
Inability of Carranza to drive out Pelaez, etc.....	1	289
Waiver of right to file claims against Mexico in order to enter Mexico..	1	289
Organization for protection of American rights in Mexico and purpose of.....	1	290
Distorted statements about Mexico.....	1	291
Check of Huasteca Petroleum Co. indorsed by Henry Allen Tupper..	1	292
Efforts to secure recognition of Carranza.....	1	293
Moving pictures of oil fields.....	1	293
Donoho, Harry C., American.....	14	2130
Robbery of oil company's safe near Tuxpan and shooting of two soldiers.....	14	2131
Trade excursion preparations to Mexico City.....	14	2135
Exodus of Mexican laborers and conditions in agricultural and other districts.....	14	2136

	Part.	Page.
Donoho, Harry C., American—Continued.
Description of a trip, devastation, etc.	14	2136
Entry of Carrancistas into Anona and El Higo and hanging of two brothers.	14	2137
Mexican people kindly and lovable.	14	2140
Mexicans want United States to straighten matters out in Mexico.	14	2140
Discloses name.	14	2140
Safety arriving rebels and insecurity among Carrancistas.	14	2141
Elias, Mother, De Sta Sacto.	18	2649
Mexican "Discalced Carmelite," no trouble under Diaz or Madero.	18	2649
First trouble under Carranza, 1913; hiding from Carranza soldiers; desecration of churches; gave ciboria to horses; put vestments on horses' backs, shot tabernacles; no town or place where this did not occur.	18	2150
Mexican women sold chalices for 10 cents; soldiers took them and threw them in street; poor people sold them; "Blessed sacrament exposed" and hundreds of soldiers shot "ostensoria," sacrilege; six sisters spent two years in hills with soldiers by force; appealed for money; about to become mothers; lewd women and bad men dressed and posed as nuns, sisters, and priests; sport of church.	18	2651
Letter of November 4, 1914, to archbishop quoted; identified.	18	2652
Attempted to rob sisters.	18	2653
Four nuns with consumption now hiding in Mexico.	18	2654
"Kill the priests;" taught to persecute the rich; disguised to cross into Mexico; afraid priests will be held for ransom as heretofore.	18	2655
Priests now held in Mexico for $100,000.	18	2655
Ellis, James E., American.	8	1091
Cafe at Matamoros seized by Carranza officials, 1092; damages $14,000, for which claim is filed, 1093.	8	1091
Emery, Sloan W., American.	15	2203
Manager Vista Hermosa Sugar & Mercantile Co., 15,000 acres in State of Oaxaca.	15	2203
Investment of $250,000.	15	2204
Contract labor.	15	2204
Property idle, dismantled machinery going to wreck, etc.	15	2206
Livestock all gone.	15	2206
Business profitable.	15	2207
Confiscated property.	15	2208
Polariscope test of sugar.	15	2208
Attempt of Gustavo Madero to control sugar in Mexico.	15	2209
Troubles on occupation of Veracruz.	15	2210
Departure from ranch.	15	2211
Experiences on road to Veracruz.	15	2212
Capture of Veracruz.	15	2215
John Lind.	15	2216
No concessions or special privileges.	15	2217
People favored Huerta.	15	2217
Labor, Oaxaca Indians.	15	2218
Possibility of an army going from Veracruz to Mexico City.	15	2219
Assassination and robbery of a family of Mexicans.	15	2220
Shooting of five men for killing.	15	2220
Church in Mexico.	15	2220
Priests, character of.	15	2221
Cause of trouble in Mexico.	15	2222
Check from Waters-Pierce Oil Co. for $685,000 to Madero to carry on revolution.	15	2222
What this country should do in Mexico.	15	2224
People capable of ruling themselves.	15	2225
Mexicans suffered more from revolution than foreigners.	15	2226
Condition of sugar property.	15	2226
Profits and investors.	15	2227
Company investigated by shareholders.	15	2228
Dowe, O. C., American.	10	1556
Shipping of Nuñez cattle.	10	1556
Celso Telles, lieutenant colonel, Carranza Army.	10	1557
Two customs inspectors, Joe Sitters and Jack Howard, killed in Big Bend district.	10	1557

	Part	Page
Dyches, P. F., American.....	10	1558
Robbery of Baldwin in Big Bend district.....	10	1559
Eck, R. H., American.....	10	1503
Cumbre Tunnel disaster.....	10	1503
Execution of Eck, bishop, and negro.....	10	1505
Edmunds, Geo. L., American.....	2	423
La Revista Mexicana, purpose of.....	2	424
George F. Weeks, editor, paid by Carranza Government.....	2	424
Money paid by Mr. Arredondo.....	2	425
Weeks connected with Mexican foreign office.....	2	425
Enders, C. W., American.....	8	1077
Ranch owner, 80,253 acres near Santa Rosalia, Chihuahua, and 253,000 acres 60 miles from San Pedro, Coahuila.....	8	1077
First fight at Torreon, May 13, 1911.....	8	1078
Chinamen (303) killed at Torreon.....	8	1078
Claim by China for.....	8	1079
Claim of witness for horses.....	8	1080
Esteva, Manuel A., Mexican.....	9	1361
Consul, San Antonio, New York, etc.....	9	1361
"Barbarous Mexico".....	9	1362
John Lind against Huerta.....	9	1363
Moving pictures of Villa's life.....	9	1363
Niagara conference.....	9	1364
Agreement violated in the shipment of arms and ammunition on the Antilles.....	9	1364
Concessions, meaning of.....	9	1364
Concessions for building materials.....	9	1365
Selling concessions.....	9	1366
Concessions to import cigarettes free.....	9	1366
Shipment of silver and coinage in United States.....	9	1366
Changes in consular charges.....	9	1367
Possible to start revolution in Mexico without aid from United States.....	9	1367
Policy of Washington.....	9	1368
Armed intervention bad.....	9	1368
How United States can help Mexico.....	9	1368
Better class of Mexicans out of Mexico.....	9	1369
Pan American conference.....	9	1369
United States responsible for what is going on in Mexico.....	9	1370
Promises of revolutionists.....	9	1371
Armed intervention last resort.....	9	1372
Fall, Senator A. B.....	8	1130
Statement as to his interests in Mexico.....	8	1130
Fall, Senator A. B.....	17	2495
Chairman, submitted statement on resolution 335, Sixty-second Con- gress.....	17	2495
No report this committee to Congress, but Senator A. B. Fall presented typewritten report to William Alden Smith March 1, 1913; later June 1, 1913, Senator Fall presented to Chairman Augustus O. Bacon of Foreign Relations Committee; no action taken.....	17	2496
Dudley W. Robinson, Assistant United States Attorney, and A. I. McCormick, United States Attorney, southern district of California, referred to prosecution of Flores Magon et al.; violation neutrality law; Plant la Regeneracion seized; Mexican Liberal Party.....	17	2497
Two letters to Anselmo L. Figueroa signed by Ida Cross.....	17	2498
Two letters to Flores Magon signed by J. Menke.....	17	2498
Two letters to Flores Magon signed by Otto Kapplin.....	17	2499
Petition, old soldiers, California.....	17	2499
Letter to Anselmo Figueroa signed by H. A. Crecelius.....	17	2499
Letter to John Kenneth or Edith L. Turner signed by S. Parks.....	17	2500
Letter to Flores Magon signed by Sadie L. Bernstein.....	17	2500
Italian donations to Magon, correct list.....	17	2500
Letter to Turner signed by M. A. Redding.....	17	2501
Receipt to A. P. Cherback, P. H. Leifferts, and signed by John Kolody for money used for guns and ammunition, etc.....	17	2501
Circular of Mexican Liberal Party to fellow workers.....	17	2501
Subscription list.....	17	2502

Fall, Senator A. B.—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Letter to Magon signed by Alex T. Wilson.....	17	2502
Letter to J. K. Turner and editors of Regeneracion signed by Joseph Moore.....	17	2502
Letter to W. C. Owens signed by J. K. Turner.....	17	2503
Letter to James Dunn signed by Melbourne.....	17	2503
Letter to Magon signed by Jos. Moore, secretary Liberal League.....	17	2504
Letter to editor Regeneracion signed by Thomas M. Dodson.....	17	2504
Letter to A. L. Figueroa, signed by G. C. Kraal, money-order check $8; order copies for Regeneracion signed by Jerome miners' union by Wolf Holm, secretary.....	17	2505
Express order and letter to Mexican Liberal Party signed by Marcus C. Greuling.....	17	2505
Money order and letter to Figueroa, signed by P. Chierego (Italian), shows superior intelligence of I. W. W.....	17	2505
Manifesto to I. W. W. signed by Magon et al.....	17	2506
Objects of Socialists and I. W. W. as shown by literature.....	17	2507
Advocates force.....	17	2507
Quotes second paragraph of manifesto direct action and necessary revolutions; during revolution (Madero) Magon had party of armed men in Chihuahua who refused to recognize Madero; driven out by Orozco.	17	2507
Magonistas not allowed to affiliate with insurrectos; revolution denounced by Magon; tried to carry it into Lower California; Magon advised by best attorneys; relates methods of enlistment.....	17	2508
Different nationalities enlisted; Gen. Pryce, of South African police, took Tia Juana, tried to extradite him; British Government interfered; extradition failed; promised each man 160 acres of land in Mexico if Liberal Party succeeded; special inducements to other nationalities; ex-United States soldier, negro.....	17	2509
Agitation (extracts from literature) for money and publicity; letter to Magon, signed by William Fawcett Smith, wanting payment for services to wounded Magonistas.....	17	2510
Collected three to five hundred per month; John K. Turner gave A. G. Rogers, printer, money with which to purchase guns for Magonistas or I. W. W.; declare against Madero for President.....	17	2511
Magon literature circulated in Mexico many years.....	17	2512
Western Federation of Miners sent men and assisted; working all over Mexico; effect far-reaching; had nothing to do with Madero revolution so far as Madero and Orozco were concerned; took for their part Lower California; statement of Magon in extradition case; explained him they were mounting army in Mexico, later used in his trial against him; statement referred to signed by Magon, Antonio Villarreal, and others.....	17	2512
Magon-Villarreal propaganda in Mexico for so many years; demoralized the ignorant and may cause to revolt; manifesto of Magon-Villarreal junta quoted; not fighting Diaz, but for expropriating the land, etc., in Mexico; declares against Madero.....	17	2513
Against United States Government; do away, first, with Diaz, then Roosevelt; Salazar through leader expecting assistance from Socialists in United States; predicted Socialist revolution in United States; Antonio Villarreal, secretary of organization, St. Louis, Sept. 28, 1905, gives officers' names; has organization in Chihuahua, Sonora, Coahuila, Tamaulipas, Sinaloa, Durango, San Luis Potosi, La Honda, Tlaxcala, Veracruz, Yucatan, Tabasco, Jalisco.....	17	2514
I. W. W. of United States assisted them; many whites and negroes joined Gen. Pryce at Tia Juana; battle May 8 or 9, 1910; second battle Tia Juana, I. W. W. first, Gen. Jack Mosby and I. W. W. in command; he was deserter from United States; Gen. Pryce withdrew; came to United States; they were under Magon; Madero forces drove them from Lower California; I. W. W.'s want Lower California.....	17	2515
Magon Brothers et al. convicted United States court June, 1912; given 23 months for violating neutrality laws of United States; Antonio P. Araujo, an ex-convict, Leavenworth, was indicted but not apprehended; he is now in Chihuahua, head of communist organization, May, 1920; Tirzo de la Toba appointed general to lead their people in Mexico; letter to him; instructions to him signed by Magon.....	17	2516

	Part.	Page.
Fall, Senator A. B.—Continued.
Seven of Toba men were captured with arms and ammunition, maps, bombs, en route Mexico.....	17	2517
Demonstrations in courtroom by I. W. W., trial of Magon.....	17	2518
Report of Senator Fall to Committee on Foreign Relations.....	17	2634
Resolution July 29, 1912, to supply tents and rations to American refugees in El Paso, Tex.....	17	2616
Bailey resolution, August 2, 1912, to provide $100,000 for transportation of refugees from El Paso, Tex., to their homes.....	17	2640
Figueras, Emiliano Lopez, Mexican.....	7	895
Protest against testifying before subcommittee.....	7	895
Re Jenkins case at Puebla.....	7	896
Bail for Jenkins, did not assist in getting.....	7	897
Mexican law as to bail.....	7	898
Magazine de la Raza.....	7	898
Mexico.....	7	899
Rafael Nieto and German colony in Mexico.....	7	899
Yellow booklet of Thomson and what it says about Mexico.....	7	900
Carranza's letter to Berlanga on raids on Texas border.....	7	902
Book of Miss Hermila Galindo, "The Carranza Doctrine".....	7	903
Letter of Carranza to Miss Galindo about her book.....	7	904
Not in Mexican secret service.....	7	905
Ford, Dr. C. Oscar, American.....	11	1677
Traveled under military escort.....	11	1678
Beggars in Mexico.....	11	1679
Conditions not safe in Mexico.....	11	1680
Consul's clerk says United States does not protect its citizens.....	11	1680
Train wreck.....	11	1681
Mexico and help from outside.....	11	1682
No German propaganda.....	11	1683
Spiritual and intellectual welfare of Mexicans.....	11	1683
Mexican does not know how to work, how to live.....	11	1683
Mexico would suffer if foreign enterprises were excluded.....	11	1684
Carranza helpless in many respects.....	11	1684
Forres, Henry, American.....	8	1186
Conditions good under Diaz, bad under Madero and to present time..	8	1187
Article 27, Mexican Constitution, virtually means confiscation; had a large lease for oil in Tamaulipas, certain people took advantage of the provisions of article 27, and denounced 1,000 acres in center of lease, thereby robbing them out of it; Carranza officials upheld denouncement.....	8	1188
Refused to allow witness to denounce his own land.....	8	1189
By paying a bribe to Carranza officials could have overcome denouncement; article 27 means confiscation.....	8	1190
Press report to effect that upon Carranza's visit to Coahuila he had guard of 400 men, while in fact he had 7,000; traveled in sumptuous style while country traversed destitute; conditions now in Mexico unsafe for any one to travel; trains run only in daytime to avoid bandits and rebels; animosity against Americans only by Carrancistas; mentions murder of Bowles and Rooney near Tampico; only Americans killed, no English, French, or Germans.....	8	1191
Carranza has only control of certain cities, but not the country; discusses presidential candidates; has passport to return to Mexico; requested to try consul for visé.....	8	1193
Discusses formation oil company by Pablo Gonzales, Juan Sotil, and Mr. Ryan, the latter being made oil inspector of Mexico by Carranza, with passes over all railroads; only been there five weeks; shows danger of publications of such propaganda as published by George F. Weeks in Mexico City; says when American newspaper is friendly toward Carranza it is paid for same; disagrees with preachers as to there being peace in Mexico; recalled.....	8	1241
Forres refused visé to his passport because he had appeared as witness before committee. Report made request of committee.....	8	1241
Forrest, Wilbur, American.....	14	2046
Investigation of facts concerning arrest and trial of Consular Agent Jenkins at Puebla.....	14	2047
Publication of letter, Cordoba to Jenkins.....	14	2047

	Part.	Page.
Forrest, Wilbur, American—Continued.
Interview with Cordoba in Mexico City about Jenkins spurious letter.	14	2048
Purpose of kidnaping Jenkins.	14	2049
Cordoba not afraid of capture.	14	2050
Yucatecans no respect for Carranza Government.	14	2050
Left Mexico to escape deportation.	14	2051
Frasier, W. E., American.	8	1141
Went to Mexico 1903; moved family there 1905; went into general business and mercantile.	8	1141
In Blalock colony.	8	1142
Refers to rape of the Misses Gourd on Atascador colony.	8	1142
Punched around by Carrancistas because he would not dance.	8	1142
Threatened to kill him, robbed and mistreated him and his colonists.	8	1142
Gen. Castro.	8	1142
After Veracruz incident very much worse.	8	1143
Medlins and McElroy held in captivity.	8	1143
Relates to murder of Brooks on Chermal colony (Bill Brooks).	8	1144
Relates murder of Randle on Chermal colony.	8	1144
Put in jail by Mexicans.	8	1145
Lost all property.	8	1147
Frost, Archibald B., American.	10	1614
Raid at Columbus, N. Mex.	10	1614
Wounded twice.	10	1615
Gardner, C. L.	8	1111
Came out of Mexico August 25, 1919; in Mexico since 1897; railroad conductor out of Mexico City to Cuernavaca Division; compelled to leave Mexico with all railroad men under order of Government of April 17, 1912; watchword of "La Gran Liga," Mexico for Mexicans.	8	1112
Relates Jack Johnson incident in Sanborn's, Mexico City, in restaurant; Mrs. Thinguin, an American lady, refused to serve him; later five Carrancista generals made Walter Sanborn apologise to Johnson, shake hands with him, etc.	8	1113
Relates abduction of Mexican girl by Zapatistas, also common thing for girls to be ravished and abducted.	8	1115
Treatment of railroad men reported to United States organization, etc.	8	1115
Garrett, William C., American.	13	1961
Went to Mexico on Bryan's recommendation.	13	1961
Bought 440 acres 12 miles north of Victoria, Tamaulipas, Mexico.	13	1962
Henequen culture described.	13	1962
Plantation utterly destroyed.	13	1963
Carranza revolution against Huerta and destruction of railroads, roving bands of robbers.	13	1963
Came out at time of landing at Veracruz.	13	1963
Outrages, demands for horses, frequent by Carranza soldiers.	13	1964
Beaten by bandits who demanded money.	13	1965
Burnt saddles and account books.	13	1966
In Victoria when Pablo Gonzalez took it and looted it.	13	1966
Appeal to authorities often.	13	1967
Met John Lind.	13	1967
Advice of American authorities to leave Mexico.	13	1968
Prospect for success good with protection.	13	1968
Relations with laborers good.	13	1968
Mexico greatly benefited by foreign investments.	13	1969
Carranza doctrine, Mexico for Mexicans, property of foreigners for Mexicans.	13	1969
American colonies between Tampico and Monterrey.	13	1969
Colonists not exploiting Mexicans.	13	1970
Homes and farms destroyed.	13	1970
Foreigners not permitted to have arms and ammunition.	13	1971
Feeling against Americans different from that for other foreigners.	13	1972
Secretary Root's trip to Latin-America.	13	1972
Mr. Bryan's attitude.	13	1973
Mexican elections.	13	1973
Treatment accorded foreigners generally.	13	1974
Cubanize Mexico.	13	1974
Opinions of foreigners or Mexicans on what should be done to Mexico.	13	1974
Peons opposed to intervention.	13	1975
Plantation absolutely ruined.	13	1975
Expected protection by United States.	13	1975

	Part.	Page.
Gates, Dr., William, American.....	1	305
David Lawrence article in Evening Post, quotations from.....	1	306
Correspondence with Secretary of War Baker.....	1	307
Letters to H. L. Hall stolen.....	1	308
Omissions in published letters.....	1	308
Correspondence to Baker.....	1	310
Baker to Gates.....	1	312
Gates to Baker.....	1	315
Gates to Baker.....	1	319
Gates to Baker.....	1	319
Baker to Gates.....	1	320
Gates to Baker.....	1	320
Baker to Gates.....	1	321
Gates to Baker.....	1	321
Gates to Churchill.....	1	324
Gates to Baker.....	1	325
Do.....	1	326
No connection with Association for Protection of American Rights in Mexico.....	1	328
Article in paper and magazines not written by request of Americans interested in Mexico.....	1	328
In no conspiracy to bring about intervention.....	1	329
Not influenced by anybody for or against intervention.....	1	329
How he came to write article.....	1	329
No agreement with Harold Walker for propaganda in favor of intervention in Mexico.....	1	330
Gates, William.....	19	2806
Letter. Secretary of War Baker to Gates, August 10, 1919, re David Lawrence.....	19	2807
Three exhibits, 4, 5, and 6, with Baker letter of August 6, 1919; five organizations against Carranza.....	19	2808
Studied Mexico for 20 years; witness degree from Mexican Government as honorary professor of the museum in Mexico City, appointment.....	19	2809
Goes on with early history of Indian races in Mexico; map.....	19	2810
Gives associates of his, interested in archeology, wrote articles, prepared map Maya race, giving boundaries of all settlements of Indian tribes; Lumholtz's "Unknown Mexico" correct.....	19	2811
Twenty-five or thirty different languages in Maya race only; 50 Indian tribes; 250 dialects, unintelligible to each other; 10,000,000 Indians; 800 miles horseback, June, 1917, to May, 1918; saw Felix Diaz and Zapata; visited ruins.....	19	2812
Saw Meixueiro; 1,500 miles horseback again through Oaxaca Mountains out through Salina Cruz; paid own expenses; never employed to write on Mexico; man of means; not propagandist; met Diaz.....	19	2813
Met Zapata in Morelos; speaks Spanish; Zapata opposing Carranza; wants land for people; later betrayed and killed by Gonzales.....	19	2814
Mexicans cultured; son of ex-governor of Oaxaca; Zapotec Indian; inhabitants Oaxaca; Zapotec and Miztec races; Benito Juarez. Zapotec Indian; Porfirio Diaz Miztec brand of Zapotec race.....	19	2815
Communication. Pelaez to Secretary Baker, refers to document.....	19	2816
Zapata and Villa occupied Mexico City twice; Aguascalientes convention when Eulalio Gutierrez was named President of Mexico; describes election in Yucatan; Castro was the "Alvarado Bolshevik candidate".....	19	2817
Circular. Candido Aguilar, reference elections in Veracruz; five classes Mexican can not vote.....	19	2818
Circular No. 14; Oaxaca, private individuals prohibited from consulting State government; electoral law, Oaxaca, December 23, 1916; three classes citizens prohibited, referring to Candido Aguilar proclamation; out of 70,000 only 20,000 voted; quotes Carranza official report.....	19	2819
I. W. W.'s have branches in Mexico.....	19	2820
Casa del Obrero Mundial means "Industrial Workers of the World".....	19	2820
Comments; Salvador Alvarado, who is the center of the entire Bolshevik question.....	19	2820
Wanted to make Mexico Bolshevik after Yucatan.....	19	2820

Gates. William—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Whole Republic; refers to section 4, "Revolutionary Confederation of" Veracruz.....	19	2820
To run capitalists out.....	19	2820
Gives names of signers.....	19	2820
Obregon one of signers.....	19	2820
Alvarado appointed governor of Yucatan under plan.....	19	2820
Quotes Bolshevik proclamation of Alvarado.....	19	2820
Quotes agreement between Carrancistas and I. W. W.....	19	2822
Alvarado joined by Germans.....	19	2824
Felipe Carrillo acting governor Yucatan.....	19	2824
Carillo threatened death to whites if plans interfered with.....	19	2824
Carillo visits United States.....	19	2824
Visited Socialists here.....	19	2824
Took letter to "Comrad" Alvaro Obregon from Socialists.....	19	2824
Delivered letter from Socialists, Yucatan, to "Ambassador" Martens..	19	2825
Received answer from Martens.....	19	2825
Witness saw letters.....	19	2825
Carillo officially vouched for by Carranza Consul de Negri.....	19	2825
Carillo against Pablo Gonzales.....	19	2825
Alvarado visits Washington.....	19	2825
Claimed represented Obregon.....	19	2825
Witness connects Obregon with Bolsheviks.....	19	2825
Pan-American Labor Conference, Laredo, Tex., in 1918.....	19	2826
Introduces radical address of Mexican delegate Barron.....	19	2826
Secretary of Labor Wilson attends conference.....	19	2829
Gov. Hunt, of Arizona, attends conference.....	19	2829
Knows Antonio I. Villarreal.....	19	2829
Villarreal one of organizers Mexican labor revolutionary junta in 1905.	19	2829
Gompers wired sympathy.....	19	2829
Knows John Kenneth Turner and De Lara.....	19	2829
Turner and De Lara collecting agents for invasion Lower California...	19	2830
History of organized labor in Mexico, years 1910 to 1916.....	19	2831
Statement of Eloy Armenta relating to organized labor in Mexico.....	19	2833
Written appeal Samuel Gompers to Mexican labor.....	19	2834
Clerk Chamber of Deputies, Mexico, sold copies "Russian Bolshevik" constitution.....	19	2834
Mexicans at labor conference introduced proposition to free workers from jails in United States; witness quotes extracts from speeches pro and con relating to porposition.....	19	2836
Gompers and American Federation of Labor does not understand Mexicans.....	19	2838
Introduces Carranza death decree regarding strikes.....	19	2839
American railroad men run out of Mexico.....	19	2840
Introduces copy report of W. K. Suit, chief conductor, relating to...	19	2842
Introduces copy of minutes of meeting Guadalupe Local Order Railroad Conductors protesting against.....	19	2842
American Federation of Labor did not interest themselves in behalf of railroad men driven out.....	19	2843
Common people of Mexico friendly to Americans.....	19	2844
Pan-Latin Bolsheviks and military dictators only enemies of Americans.....	19	2843
Witness against armed intervention.....	19	2845
Thinks next year in Mexico will be worst of all; introduces copy of letter to President of United States signed by Magana, Meixueiro, Pelaez, and Felix Diaz.....	19	2850
Introduces copy of proclamation "To The Nation" by Gen. Isabel Robles and Meixueiro.....	19	2850
Introduces petition to governor of Puebla from people of State of Puebla.....	19	2856
Report on special investigation of Senate committee re I. W. W. and Mexican combination introduced by chairman.....	19	2858
Gavito, Vicente Sanchez, Mexican.....	9	1439
Member of Mexican Senate, 1912; all dissolved in October 15.....	9	1439
Attitude of Funston at Veracruz.....	9	1440
Why Mexicans fled from Mexico.....	9	1440

	Part.	Page.
Gavito, Vicente Sanchez, Mexican—Continued.
Manuel Calero in Huerta's cabinet.....	9	1440
Approves statements in Calero's book.....	9	1441
His family's house in Mexico City looted and occupied by Ignacio Bonillas.....	9	1442
Bulnes book correct in "The Whole Truth about Mexico".....	9	1442
Americans did not exploit country.....	9	1443
Operation of Americans beneficial to Mexicans.....	9	1444
Educated Mexicans in exile for various reasons discouraged.....	9	1445
Hope of Mexico in expatriated Mexicans.....	9	1447
Wilson's mistake and failure.....	9	1447
Mexico's indebtedness and failure to meet it.....	9	1448
Against intervention.....	9	1448
Opposed to outside interference.....	9	1449
Peon class can not establish stable government.....	9	1449
Gilkey, Herbert S., American.....	11	1667
Rio Verde Agricultural Co., 50,000 acres, State of Oaxaca, Mexico, live stock and agricultural equipment.....	11	1667
No labor troubles.....	11	1668
Safe in time of Diaz.....	11	1669
State authorities of Oaxaca tried to give protection and never recognized Carranza.....	11	1669
Depredations in 1911 by bandits.....	11	1669
Raided plantation and drove off overseer, a Canadian.....	11	1670
British Embassy rescued Taylor after State Department neglected to do so.....	11	1671
Discussed troubles with John Lind without much satisfaction.....	11	1671
Good Mexicans at the north and bad ones in the south.....	11	1672
Spaniard raided and murdered.....	11	1672
Delegation invited to go to Mexico and see conditions.....	11	1672
Advised not to go to Veracruz or Tampico.....	11	1673
Conditions bad.....	11	1673
Beggars abundant.....	11	1673
Policemen begging.....	11	1673
Officials, especially army officers, prosperous.....	11	1674
Conditions of travel fair.....	11	1674
Guard and lights out at night.....	11	1674
No improvement by Mexicans expected.....	11	1675
Help from outside necessary to better conditions.....	11	1675
Pictures taken by party confiscated by Mexicans at the border.....	11	1676
Chicago Tribune has some of pictures not seized.....	11	1676
Banking conditions in Mexico.....	11	1676
Glover, Col. Francis W., American.....	10	1573
Chief of staff to Brig. Gen. James B. Erwin.....	10	1573
Note from Gen. Felipe Angeles to commanding officer El Paso district, June 17, asking for certain information stating Villa ordered his officers not to fire to American side.....	10	1574
Angeles distinguished officer.....	10	1574
Shots coming over came from Villistas and Carrancistas.....	10	1575
Plans for crossing river.....	10	1576
How Villistas and Carrancistas were distinguished.....	10	1576
Gompers, Samuel.....	17	2641
Mexican labor; their relations, etc.; defending the Liberal Party; Magon Brothers, who were radicals and affiliated with the I. W. W.; position of American Federation of Labor.....	17	2641
Resolution and letter recommending Carranza to Wilson signed Samuel Gompers.....	17	2642
October 15, 1915, United States notified Carranza of recognition; Mexico United Labor Alliance.....	17	2643
Letter to Secretary Casa del Obrero Mundial, City of Mexico, signed by Gompers May 23, 1916, greeting them in name of American Federation of Labor.....	17	2643
Explanation in detail of distribution of copies of above letter, and chronological happenings and events of labor organizations in United States and Mexico to get together.....	17	2644
Declaration of Gompers and executive committee of American Federation of Labor and organized workers of Mexico; copies furnished Wilson and Carranza and given wide publicity.....	17	2645

	Part.	Page.
Gompers, Samuel—Continued.
"Labor efforts to avoid war"; telegram Gompers to Carranza to release American soldiers; telegram to Gompers from Carranza subject American soldiers release; answer Gompers to Carranza, same subject, thanks for release of soldiers June 30, 1916.....	17	2647
Graham, Arthur, American.....	8	1194
Identifies telegram signed Hilario Medina, subsecretary of relations, Mexico, January 17, 1920, criticizing subcommittee and forbidding Mexicans to testify before it.....	8	1194
Telegram.....	8	1195
Guerra, Jacobo, American.....	8	1318
Sheriff, Starr County, Tex., 1915 and 1916; relates the crossing of 16 Carranza soldiers at Escaballo ranch, 10 miles from Rio Grande City, Tex.....	8	1319
+ Captured a lieutenant in Carranza army, and three soldiers and a woman; also a lot of Winchesters; confessed they came over to rob the Saenz store and ranch; they had cut the wires; all but woman sentenced to 5 years in the penitentiary.....	8	1320
+ The other band of 12 Carranza soldiers returned to Mexico. Relates store at Salineno, Starr County, being robbed by Mexicans from Mexico who returned to Mexico.....	8	1320
Maximiano Garcia robbed and murdered in Starr County, Tex.; appeals to military in Camargo, but to no effect.....	8	1320
Relates the killing of Gonzales in Camargo by Cortina, officer in Carranza army.....	8	1321
Both above American citizens.....	8	1321
Conditions on border good under Diaz. Since then the reverse. Tried but no assistance from officers on Mexican side to enforce law and order on border.
Hall, Guillermo Franklin, American.....	8	1117
Director Mexican Trade Bureau, San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.	8	1117
Denies personal knowledge refers to newspaper reports.....	8	1118
Denies giving Miss Smith that information.....	8	1118
Denies that he told Miss Smith that Mexican secret service men were making an investigation of Senator Fall or the committee.....	8	1120
Handshy, H. M., American.....	8	1094
Mexico 10 years. Relates battle El Oro in 1918 between Carranza and Villa forces.....	8	1094
+ Villistas hung Mr. Smith, an American.....	8	1095
+ Villistas dynamited power plant, value, $500,000, National Mines & Smelting Co.....	8	1096
People prefer Villa to Carranza; conditions in districts controlled by Carranza bad, in Villa district better.....	8	1097
Hanson, Capt. W. M., American.....	8	1225
Identifies voluntary statement of L. Witzke now under sentence of death, Fort Sam Houston, as German spy during the war; connecting Mauro Mendez as being in pay of German Government during war.....	8	1226
Senior captain Texas Ranger force; special investigator Fall committee; past official positions.....	22	3223
Ranchman in Mexico.....	22	3223
Titles Mexican property.....	22	3224
Citrus fruit acreage; stock and improvements on ranch; hacienda El Conejo.....	22	3224
Conditions good under Diaz.....	22	3225
Mexican laborers honest and good people.....	22	3225
Citrus fruit experts employed from California and Cornell.....	22	3225
Gulf Coast Citrus Fruit Association.....	22	3225
Prof. Gandara and Millen of Mexico City.....	22	3225
Prof. Stiles of Texas, citrus fruit expert, teaching laborers to bud trees.	22	3226
Other citrus fruit groves that section.....	22	3226
McDonald and Hopps production, Tampico.....	22	3226
Employed Mexican labor—prices.....	22	3227
Commissary—free medical service and drugs.....	22	3227
Unsuccessful division of land for laborers.....	22	3227
Schools.....	22	3228
Good feeling between Americans and Mexicans.....	22	3227

	Part	Page
Hanson, Capt. W. M., American—Continued.
Six hundred acres of citrus fruit and ranch destroyed, burned, live stock taken.....	22	3228
Called to Tampico for protection, 1913, by United States Government.	22	3229
Returned to ranch 1914; arrested and court martialed to be executed; saved by Consul Miller and two friends.....	22	3229
Expelled from Mexico 28th of January, 1914, at Matamoros by Gen. Gonzales.....	22	3229
Charge, interventionist and spy.....	22	3229
Reported to United States Government officials ravishment of Miss Gourd.....	22	3230
Returned to Tampico by water April 10, 1914; shanghaied out by United States Government with 2,800 Americans April 22, 1914, to United States.....	22	3230
Tampico incident.....	22	3230
Assistance Capt. Koehler of German steamboat Dresden.....	22	3231
Riot and Southern Hotel incident.....	22	3231
United States ships taken out of Tampico on April 21, leaving Americans at mercy of mob.....	22	3231
English commander refused to send message or land marines—neutral.	22	3231
Rescued by English. German, Dutch, and oil boats.....	22	3232
Delivered to United States ships outside of harbor and brought to United States.....	22	3232
Consul Miller protests removal United States ships to no avail.....	22	3233
Committee sent to Washington with protest.....	22	3234
Conferences with United States department heads.....	22	3234
Committee and Americans insulted by Secretary Daniels.....	22	3234
Secretary Bryan rendered assistance.....	22	3234
Flag incident, Tampico, 1914.....	22	3235
Confiscated property returned to Mr. K. H. Merrem for company.....	22	3236
Fifteen or twenty American colonies in that section; good people engaged in agriculture and stock farming.....	22	3236
Americans in Mexico pioneers, imported American manufactured products.....	22	3237
No reimbursements for losses of $400,000.....	22	3238
Would return to Mexico if United States Government straightens conditions.....	22	3238
Colonists; refugees horrible condition.....	22	3239
Mexicans have no confidence in United States Government.....	22	3239
Laboring class Mexicans want Americans in Mexico.....	22	3239
Robber class and radicals only against Americans.....	22	3240
Americans not allowed to go armed for self-protection to Mexico.....	22	3240
Americans safe, any remote district in Mexico, under Diaz.....	22	3240
Few soldiers under Diaz.....	22	3240
Never knew of bank robbery; only one train robbery in Mexico under Diaz régime.....	22	3240
Occupation after leaving Mexico, 1914, to present date.....	22	3240
Plan of San Diego.....	22	3241
German-Mexican activity against United States during war.....	22	3241
Identifies photostat letters in evidence before committee.....	22	3241
I. W. W. and Communists both sides of border.....	22	3242
Texas Rangers do not cross border after marauders only with United States soldiers.....	22	3242
Americans crossing border without protection—not allowed to carry arms.....	22	3242
Mexicans killed along border; raiders or sympathizers.....	22	3243
Texas border Mexicans generally law abiding.....	22	3243
Bervides family loyal Americans.....	22	3243
Zavala family among founders of Texas liberty.....	22	3244
Conditions of Mexicans in Mexico.....	22	3244
Treatment of Mexicans by oil companies in Mexico.....	22	3244
Thomson propaganda favors Carranza.....	22	3245
Photographs of vandalism in Mexico.....	22	3246
Losses of several colonies in Tampico section.....	22	3246
Introduction of individual losses of Americans not in record previously.	22	3247
Further reference to documents in appendix.....	22	3248
Appendix to Capt. Hanson's testimony.....	22	3250

Hanson, Capt. W. M., American—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Losses, Thomas Ewing.....	22	3250
Losses, L. Gunter.....	22	3250
Losses, C. I. Glaze.....	22	3250
Losses, L. J. Kalkloech.....	22	3252
Statement of J. Lillywhite re Mormon colonies.....	22	3253
Statement of L. Witzke, German spy, now under sentence of death, Fort Sam Houston, as to Carranza-German intrigue during war.....	22	3255
Account of Rowe kidnaping.....	22	3256
Additional list of Americans killed in Mexico.....	22	3256
Treaty between Mexico and United States, December 14, 1859, made by Presidents Buchanan and Juarez; confidential; later released for publication.....	22	3257
Memorandum rights; American oil companies under Mexican and international law to property prior to May 1, 1917.....	22	3270
Decision Texas criminal court in Arce et al. case from Laredo, Tex.; United States at war with Mexico, 1918; defendant released.....	22	3279
Refutation of Forres testimony as refers to name of E. E. Dickason, M. D.....	22	3284
Statement of Mrs. R. L. ———, ravished and taken to Mexico by Car- ranza officer, El Paso, Tex.....	22	3284
Affidavit of Mr. ———, kidnaped by Villistas.....	22	3286
Statement of ——— as to robbery, etc., by Carrancistas.....	22	3287
Losses, Charles S. Dolley and wife.....	22	3290
Losses, W. A. Lyon.....	22	3292
Losses, Charles F. Simon.....	22	3293
Memorial of Charles F. Simon.....	22	3294
Murder of Wilford O. Robertson.....	22	3297
Affidavit of B. H. Brown as to murder of Wilford O. Robertson.....	22	3298
Affidavit of Joe Stempfle as to murder of Wilford O. Robertson.....	22	3299
Official confidential report re radicalism Mexico.....	22	3301
Official report to adjutant general, Texas, and to this committee by Capt. Hanson.....	22	3303
Communication of Robert H. Murray, refuting certain portions of Mr. Buckley's testimony (pp. 773, 774, 829, 830, pt. 6).....	22	3304
Statement of committee concerning Murray.....	22	3305
Harris, H. O.	17	2609
Mixed train fired into near Cumbre Tunnel.....	17	2609
Bridge burned.....	17	2610
Federals hid guns; always carry pets; Yaquis do not take women with them on trips; Yaquis fought rebels at Cumbre Tunnel; train burned; Rupert was engineer.....	17	2612
Hart, Thomas, American	14	2151
Chauffeur; migration of laborers from Mexico, and causes; guarantees better wages.....	14	2151
Not induced to come for exploitation.....	14	2151
Fear of another revolution in Mexico.....	14	2153
Harney, Edward Field, British	9	1345
The Laguna Corporation of Delaware; 650,000 acres in Campeche; producing gum, rubber, cattle, mahogany, chicle; colonization....	9	1345
Land purchased for cash.....	9	1346
Country prosperous under Diaz.....	9	1346
Attitude toward foreigners favorable.....	9	1346
Exploitation of Mexican people nonsense.....	9	1346
American enterprises beneficial to Mexican people.....	9	1346
Peonage.....	9	1347
Change in attitude of Mexicans changed on occupation of Veracruz...	9	1347
Confidence in Huerta and Henry Lane Wilson.....	9	1348
Diplomatic Corps behind H. L. Wilson.....	9	1348
Failure of Huerta due to nonsupport and interference of United States..	9	1348
Madero complete failure.....	9	1349
Life and property secure up to Veracruz incident.....	9	1349
Fluctuated afterward.....	9	1349
Have grown worse.....	9	1350
Much destruction of life and property.....	9	1350
Financial and commercial conditions prevent operating plantation...	9	1350
Physical loss $10,000.....	9	1350

	Part.	Page.
Harney, Edward Field, British—Continued.
Problem of Mexico can not be solved without outside help	9	1351
Mexicans feel contempt for United States	9	1351
Plan to solve Mexican problem	9	1351
Better class Mexicans would assist	9	1352
Sporadic revolutions useless	9	1352
Force required to pacify Mexico	9	1352
No advantage in allowing matters to drag along	9	1353
Capital to go into Mexico requires assurance of stable government	9	1353
Metallic reserves of banks seized	9	1353
Railroads and express companies taken over by government	9	1354
Obligations must be first discharged	9	1354
Not in favor of taking and keeping Mexico	9	1354
Foreign interests in Mexico said to be trying to force annexation by United States	9	1355
Propaganda resorted to by Carranza	9	1355
Radical labor in Mexico	9	1355
Foreign enterprise tremendous influence in improving condition of laborers in Mexico	9	1356
Food and clothes first step toward education	9	1356
Carranza does not act by Congress but by decree	9	1357
Unable to get teacher for school	9	1357
Teachers in Yucatan ignorant propagandists	9	1357
True story of Huerta	9	1358
Herman, Capt. Frederick J., American.	12	1811
Occurrences at Nogales, Ariz., August 27, 1918	12	1811
Situation as to international boundary line	12	1812
Battle there described	12	1812
Conference with Mexican authorities	12	1814
Mexican combatants evidently soldiers, though not in uniform	12	1814
De facto troops declared cooped in barracks, which was not true	12	1814
Women and children moved out of Nogales, Sonora, before fight	12	1814
A Mexican in a letter warned American forces of impending attack on Nogales, Ariz.	12	1815
Reinforcements and machine guns sent	12	1815
Loss among American soldiers	12	1816
Casualties on Mexican side	12	1816
Commended by department commander	12	1816
Orders prohibited American troops crossing or firing into Mexico	12	1816
Firing from Gen. Obregon's house in Nogales, Sonora	12	1817
Casualties at Naco, Arivaca, in 1913 and 1914	12	1817
No interference by American troops with shooting at Naco	12	1817
Explosive shells used at Naco	12	1819
No shrapnel fell in Nogales, Ariz.	12	1819
Mayor of Nogales, Sonora, killed with rifle in his hands	12	1819
Nothing done by Mexican authorities to discipline belligerents	12	1819
Thefts of cattle in subdistrict of Nogales, Ariz., by de facto soldiers of Mexico	12	1819
Stolen American horses in hands of Mexican troops and some returned	12	1819
Some cooperation from Mexican authorities	12	1820
Soldiers of de facto government wore no uniform	12	1820
No rule to roll up left pantaloan leg	12	1820
Hernandez, Braulio.	17	2518
Madero and Vasquez Gomez brothers against Diaz; borne by them; campaigning in Chihuahua without their aid; only $100 from Madero for stock in printing company; October, 1910, told Madero in San Antonio "we will declare war if you do not"; Madero gave him $100.	17	2518
Abraham Gonzales collected $400	17	2519
Alfonso Madero sent $2,500 and $1,600	17	2519
Later $1,800, from him while in New York; he pawned his ring to send message	17	2519
Mr. Gonzales secured several hundred dollars; Madero, senior, gave to Luz Soto $2,000	17	2519
Again received $2,000	17	2519
F. Madero and brother hid in house 22 days in El Paso; did not pay wash bill	17	2519
Gustavo Madero sends Gonzalez Garza near $10,000	17	2519
Madero brought to Barnes from New York $50,000 worth of cartridges	17	2519

	Part.	Page.
Hernandez, Braulio—Continued.
Shelton & Payne Arms Co., of El Paso, handled arms and ammunition for revolution. Did not charge commission. But loaned money to pay express and freight bills.	17	2519
Ernest Madero paid Gustavo Madero $300,000 for expenses of revolution.	17	2520
Only foreign help witness received $480 worth of arms and cartridges.	17	2520
Revolution fought out with "Abnegation and hunger" of the Mexicans	17	2520
Pays respects to Orozco and Didapp.	17	2520
Hill, Lon C., American.	8	1253
Attack on Peterson's store at Lyford, Tex.; rancho de los Indios, May, 1915.	8	1253
+ Relates murder of Bernard Boley, Texas, 1915; burning of bridge south of Sebastian, July, 1915.	8	1254
Battle between soldiers and citizens at rancho Tule, 22 miles from Brownsville; McGuire killed, two or three wounded.	8	1255
Robbery of Alexander's store at Sebastian, August, 1915; relates murder of Mr. Austin and his son; attempted assassination of Charles Jensen at Lyford, Tex., August 7, 1915.	8	1256
+ Relates attack on automobiles in which Mr. Conrad and Sonny Huff were wounded; attack on Norias ranch, August 8, 1915; Jim Forbes and Frank Martin wounded; several outlaws killed; patrol of soldiers fired upon at Palm Garden; Waterfield, a soldier, killed.	8	1257
An American killed near Palm Garden few days later; three bridges burned above Brownsville; attack of Fresno pump, 12 miles from Brownsville; burned construction works and bridges; execution of John Smith and Donaldson near Los Fresnos, Tex.	8	1258
Attack on Galveston ranch; soldiers killed and wounded; attack on American girl near Harlingen; derailling of train near Brownsville; passengers shot; killing of Dr. McCain and wounding of Harry Wallace on train.	8	1259
District Attorney Kleiber robbed; Corp. McBee killed; Brasher and engineer killed (Kendall); killing of Juan Garcia.	8	1260
Captured arms and equipment; Lieut. Newman crossed into Mexico; relates occurrences across river.	8	1261
Americans leaving for interior; loss about half million.	8	1262
Cause of raids, I. W. W., Magon, etc., their explanations.	8	1263
Instructions not to kill Germans or molest them; had officers named when they took part of Texas; Germans were to furnish arms and ammunition, etc.	8	1264
Hines, Marcus, American.	8	1309
Relates Norias fight; Martin and Forbes and three United States soldiers wounded.	8	1309
Bandits killed Mexican woman, and rangers killed four of attacking party; mentions killing of two Americans, Smith and Donaldson, also the two Austins.	8	1310
Germans back of plan to take Texas.	8	1311
German flag, owner said Mexicans told him it would save him from the raiders.	8	1311
Hinkley, W. B., American.	8	1181
Residence, San Benito, Tex., near Brownsville.	8	1181
Conditions good while Diaz was President.	8	1182
Bad conditions since revolution all along the border; raids, murder, and stealing.	8	1182
Mentions bandit raids; two Mexicans killed and two American officers wounded in first fight.	8	1182
Bands organized on Mexican side of river.	8	1183
Reign of terror on Texas side during raids.	8	1183
No farms under cultivation that year.	8	1183
Hundreds of American families had to leave their Texas homes on account of conditions along the Texas side of Rio Grande.	8	1183
Very little property taken in raids, mostly by stealing; raids were for the purpose of killing Americans.	8	1184
Hopkins, Sherburne G.	16	2411
Was attorney for Carranza between April 1, 1913, to September 15, 1914; was at Niagara conference June, 1914, at which it was agreed on embargo of arms to Mexico; subsequently a shipment of arms and ammunition was made on Antilla, New York to Tampico.	16	2411

Hopkins, Sherburne G.—Continued.

Part. Page.

- Carrancistas understood they would be allowed by United States Government to ship arms and ammunition to Cuba, but they would see that ship did not proceed to Cuba, but to Tampico instead; that vessels so engaged would be subject to fines; several cargoes were shipped in this manner and vessels fined, but remitted by order of the Secretary of the Treasury; Lind go-between Carranza junta and department while still representative of Wilson and in his pay..... 16 2412
- Quotes Buckley as to shipment of 6,000,000 cartridges on Sunshine, Grampas, and Susan, six trips from Galveston to Tampico; correct statement..... 16 2412
- Identifies letter from witness to Carranza May 8, 1914, referred to shipment of arms to Cuba, but to arrive in Mexico; denied by Lind; substantiated positively by witness; gives conversation with Lind at Hotel Willard; Lind helping Carranza, reason of letter..... 16 2413
- Identifies extract letter witness to Carranza May 10, 1914, reference Wilson's opinion; Carranza should not consent to mediation, but for complete triumph of revolution..... 16 2414
- Identifies quotation of letter to Carranza from witness advising Carranza not to be influenced by Bryan, as he will sacrifice any great principle for own political ambitions; identifies another quotation against Carranza trusting Bryan..... 16 2414
- Identifies another quotation advising that Lind as personal representative of Wilson had more influence than Bryan; Felicitas Villarreal represents Carranza here; imprisoned two years by Carranza; later was hostile to Carranza, caused by him being against issuance of paper money; superior education and fine fellow..... 16 2415
- Gives reasons why he severed relations with Carranza government September, 1914, on account of disagreement as to future policy of Carranza government..... 16 241
- Carranza arbitrary methods; issuance money; removing governors; Carranza government ghastly failure; failure to carry out provisions, etc..... 16 2417
- Attitude toward foreigners hostile; discusses new revolution in Sonora this date..... 16 2418
- Visited Mexico June 1, 1911, after triumph of Madero; summoned to confer settlement of certain affairs; familiar with National lines of Mexico..... 17 2521
- Consulted afterwards replacing of loans; Diaz appointed de la Barra in order that he might succeed him, agreed to by Madero; Ernesto Madero appointed minister of finance..... 17 2522
- Know Gustavo Madero; in constant consultation with him..... 17 2523
- Claims consulted about for secret service, etc.; employed men in charge of secret service; Sommerfeld representative Madero in El Paso; never was counsel for Standard Oil Co., never employed by them... 17 2524
- Had relations with Waters-Pierce Oil Co., employed by them in January, 1912; employed once prior to 1912 for six months; did not secure for Waters-Pierce Oil Co. or personal concession; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. never had concession; have large interests in Mexico, oil interests; had no interest in revolution, was neutral; suffered great loss by revolution..... 17 2525
- Waters-Pierce Oil Co. had no relation events 1910-11 in Mexico; Diario Oficial of Mexico shows no concessions to witness; made it hot for El Aguila Oil Co., thought them dishonest, but knows nothing of dissolution of that company; did not represent Speyer & Co.; did not receive any money from anyone to pay off a loan..... 17 2526
- De la Barra government reimbursed Gustavo Madero $300,000 gold for advances made by him in revolution; thinks he received a fee of $50,000 from this fund for services rendered from November 1, 1910, to June 1, 1911; knows of no loans to revolutionary factions from Americans or American companies..... 17 2527
- Employed by Gustavo Madero; did not act in a dual capacity; gives idea of legal advice furnished..... 17 2528
- Azcona, member of revolutionary committee in Washington, arrested on trumped-up charges; released; here to create public sentiment... 17 2529

Hopkins, Sherburne G.—Continued.

Part. Page.

Does not think Madero borrowed any money; had it; suit against Madero brought by Diaz Government to harass Madero; was not connected with Waters-Pierce Oil Co. when Limantour was in New York; employed by Henry C. Pierce in Mexico July, 1911; later, January, 1912; consulted by Pierce one month after fall of Juarez, first time.	17	2531
Pierce employed witness to expose certain crooked people, so-called Cientificos; they had secured concessions from Government, so-called Pearson concessions; Aguila Oil Co. deals in refined product of oil; Pearson Oil Co. deals in crude oil, in competition with Waters-Pierce Co.; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. operating under great disadvantage on account of Diaz Government granting vast oil concessions to competitors; had been going on for long while.	17	2532
Members of Aguila Oil Co., Landa y Escandon, Enrique Creel, Porfirio Diaz, jr., Luis Riba, Pablo Macedo, Luis Elguero; had important concessions; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. status not changed by result of revolution; reason for employment.	17	2533
Reason Pierce had private person to expose Aguila Oil Co. transaction because Government would not; willing to tell all he knows; Pierce desired decent business to prevail; to even up conditions.	17	2534
Paid about $1,000 for services; no retainer from; advice given to revolutionists to get rid of Diaz Government; war material from United States; does not know firms.	17	2535
Principally from St. Louis and New York; Bannerman, Broadway, New York, furnished rifles, cartridges, and machine guns; dealers.	17	2536
Gustavo Madero brought a large lot beginning of revolution, about three carloads equipment; does not know cost of revolution; funds advanced entirely from Mexico; knows Didapp, formerly consul at Santander, Spain, and Turkey; Syrian; did not have conversation with him as quoted.	17	2537
Didapp dismissed twice from Mexican Government; wrote articles against Madero.	17	2538
Had conversation with Mr. Dawson, of State Department, only to post him on general matters.	17	2539
Money, as fee, sent to Hopkins and Hopkins.	17	2539
Madero kept his money in San Antonio and New York.	17	2540
Details how $300,000 was deposited; Mexican Government approved fee.	17	2540
Gave witness check for his fee; does not know what became of balance of money; had not loaned them any money; had a conference with French banker about loan; met Charles R. Flint, William M. Ivins; nothing came of it; knows of no drafts being drawn on Madero.	17	2542
Does not think revolution cost Madero over $400,000.	17	2543
Others helped buy arms and ammunition; total cost of revolution over $1,500,000 gold.	17	2543
Does not believe Limantour told Diaz American capital was backing Madero.	17	2544
Madero, sr., wanted to see revolution terminated.	17	2545
Services for which fee was paid and how; received telegram at Veracruz that Mr. Root had offered resolution.	17	2547
Resolution good for Mexico and proper for United States, bad for Orozco.	17	2548
Stock given to Diaz people, $1,500,000 while they held public office; understood Standard owns Cowdray or Pierson interests.	17	2549
Knows it from papers shown witness by J. N. Galbreath of Waters-Pierce Oil Co.	17	2550
Knows no loan was made to Maderos in United States.	17	2551
Discussions; Cientificos connection with the national lines of Mexico; Madero wanted them out; Speyer & Co., Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., and Mr. Pierce hold securities; Pierce largest individual holder; Loeb & Co. and English and French banks also own a lot.	17	2553
Security holders know of plans to oust directorate; Lord Cowdray had contract with Government for managing Tehuantepec Railroad; Cientificos were directors; mismanaged; cost twice what it should; afraid same condition would be practiced on national lines, inasmuch as same people were directors.	17	2555

Hopkins, Sherburne G.—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Americans ran off national lines.....	17	2556
Object to rumor directors who were directors of Aguila Oil Co.; plan between witness and Gustavo Madero only.....	17	2557
Madero actuated only by patriotic motives as a Mexican, not for the purpose of turning railroads over to stockholders.....	17	2558
Directors friends of Cowdray feared their influence in management of national lines; Pierce effected consolidation of Mexican contract with national lines.....	17	2559
Cowdray considered the one partner of Diaz.....	17	2560
Directors forced out; new ones favorable to Madero; Pierce not consulted; Madero and Pierce had ideas in common.....	17	2561
Special appointment between Madero, sr., and Limantour in New York.....	17	2562
Quotes newspapers; Limantour said Diaz should get out, denied by Creel; Dr. F. Gomez and Vazconcelos told witness; arrangement between Limantour and Madero, sr., in New York cause of Francisco I. Madero ordering Orozco not to attack Juarez; Madero feared shot falling on United States soil might cause intervention; negotiations were to compromise.....	17	2563
Knows nothing of financial conditions of Maderos; suit against them annoying, not fictitious.....	17	2564
Does not know whether Continental Rubber Co. advanced $150,000 to Madero; knew Zelaya was to be put out as President of Nicaragua before it occurred; notified Otto Fuerth, who had large interests there.....	17	2565
Discusses pipe-line concessions in Mexico; Madero said no good, but pipe-line concessions confirmed under Madero.....	17	2566
Discusses value of Mexican Petroleum stock; understood Mexican Petroleum Co. controlled by Standard.....	17	2568
Standard and Waters-Pierce fighting in Mexico; discusses relations between Standard and Waters-Pierce.....	17	2569
Standard reenters Mexico.....	17	2570
Horton, William A., American.....	11	1707
Prevented from returning to Mexico by order of Mexican Government against those who testify before subcommittee.....	11	1707
Why he went to Mexico; inducements, a pamphlet signed by Porfirio Diaz and circular of United States Interior Department approving..	11	1708
United States anxious to extend commerce; asked Americans to go to Mexico.....	11	1708
Circular signed by Secretary of Interior.....	11	1708
Circular sent out in United States franked envelope.....	11	1708
Propaganda from individuals and companies indorsed by Mexican authorities.....	11	1708
Bryan's original and changed attitude.....	11	1709
Farm northwest of Tampico, 10 or 12 miles from Gulf.....	11	1709
Little paid for two concessions.....	11	1709
About 100 Americans, heads of families, not speculators.....	11	1709
Citizenship in colony over average.....	11	1710
Exploited peon by raising his wages.....	11	1710
Farms left in the hands of Mexican attendants.....	11	1710
Robbed by bandits.....	11	1711
Carranza's order to concentrate in populous cities.....	11	1711
Troubles began with occupation of Veracruz.....	11	1711
Depredations and indignities.....	11	1711
Ordered into Tampico and out of the country by Mr. Bryan.....	11	1711
Went to Galveston on cattle boat.....	11	1711
No reception at Galveston; quarantined out in bay seven days.....	11	1712
Given tickets to home after declaring themselves paupers.....	11	1712
Mexican tore up American flag in Tampico.....	11	1712
Returned during Huerta's administration.....	11	1712
Huerta protected Americans and committed no depredations.....	11	1712
Carrancistas took whatever they wanted.....	11	1713
Ordered out again by United States in June, 1915.....	11	1713
Went out on collier Cyclops in 1915.....	11	1713
Not allowed to ship crop of onions.....	11	1713

	Part.	Page.
Horton, William A., American—Continued.
Went back because Carranza was recognized and assurances of both Governments.....	11	1714
Assurances not fulfilled.....	11	1714
Americans disarmed at mercy of bandits.....	11	1714
Colonists roughly treated by Mexicans.....	11	1714
A. J. Stovall murdered by Mexicans April 20, 1916.....	11	1714
Fletcher on conditions in Mexico in 1919, and Correll.....	11	1716
Correll killed.....	11	1717
No Americans in Atascador Colony.....	11	1717
Germans well treated.....	11	1717
Americans in other colonies.....	11	1718
Americans in other colonies similarly treated.....	11	1718
Had all they owned in those places.....	11	1718
Never asked United States for protection; was told Americans remain- ing or returning to Mexico not to look for protection.....	11	1718
American enterprise and farmers to advantage of Mexicans.....	11	1719
Invasion of Veracruz changed attitude of Mexico.....	11	1719
Mexican lower classes not quarrelsome or bloodthirsty.....	11	1719
Bases Carranza revolution on robbery.....	11	1719
Carranza officials demand his guns.....	11	1719
Indignities and theft of watch and medical surgical cases.....	11	1721
No satisfaction from American authorities.....	11	1722
Cooperation between Carrancistas and bandits.....	11	1722
Peons think they can do what they please to Americans, who will do nothing.....	11	1723
Refused emergency passport at Tampico and Monterrey because going before Fall committee.....	11	1724
Walked across line at Laredo without inspection.....	11	1725
Opinion as to what ought to be done in Mexico.....	11	1725
"Mexico for Mexicans," slogan of Carranza.....	11	1726
Favors intervention.....	11	1726
Diaz decree protecting Americans result of telegram from Roosevelt..	11	1726
Mexicans would pay no attention to President Wilson.....	11	1727
Policy of eliminating Huerta.....	11	1727
Villa Carranza's principal general.....	11	1727
Aspect of country bad; stock all gone; no farming.....	11	1727
Production better than in United States.....	11	1728
Howze, Gen. Robert L., American.....	10	1568
Major general, United States Army; sketch of military experience....	10	1568
With Pershing expedition; reported on Carrizal fight.....	10	1569
Why did not go beyond San Domingo ranch.....	10	1569
Competent to deal with any situation at Carrizal.....	10	1569
List of deaths and injuries to persons in his district since February, 1917.	10	1570
List of such casualties.....	10	1570
Details as to shots fired across boundary at El Paso, Tex., June 15, 1919.	10	1572
Intolerable conditions grown worse; Mexican Government unfriendly to United States.....	10	1572
Capture and ransom of Americans; murder and rapine and destruction prevail; Mexico left to Mexicans is hopeless.....	10	1572
Not possible to make distinctions between Mexicans raiding.....	10	1573
Term "bandit" not used officially.....	10	1573
American forces on border competent to handle any situation.....	10	1573
Hunter, John, American.....	8	1147
Went to Mexico, 1906; traveled extensively in Mexico during the Diaz régime with perfect safety; conditions good.....	8	1149
Related dynamiting houses.....	8	1150
Relates fight and robbery.....	8	1151
Stabbing of Baird and Neal; saw men hung, Mexicans; in Guadalajara after Veracruz incident; flaming anti-American literature; every- thing destroyed in American consulate; took flag down, dragged it through streets; threats toward Americans.....	8	1153
Americans protected by British; heads shaved; British citizen; Amer- icans claimed to be British subjects for protection.....	8	1154
Trampled American flag, then ripped it up in strips and burned it; threw Mexican flag at him; taken to Manzanillo.....	8	1155

Hunter, John, American—Continued.

Part Page.

Kicked Mexican boys carrying valises for Americans; taken out on German ship Maria ; Mexicans took Wilson's picture out of consulate, painted long black horns on it, made Americans march around it, walk over it, then burned it; threw ashes over their heads; German acting consul forced Mexicans to liberate an American after Consul Davis and Mr. Stratton had failed; kidnaping of Mr. Baird, an American.....	8	1156
Mr. Harrison kidnaped.....	8	1157
Harrison rescued by Americans.....	8	1157
Attack on Ameca; Mr. Foster and two Americans made fight; Mexican wounded and chopped to pieces; attack on Mr. Villamin, his fight with them; sufferings undergone by Miss Flores, her abduction; killing of former manager of El Favor mine, head chopped up.....	8	1159
Never saw a Mexican punished for killing an American in Mexico; Mr. Breakenridge was killed at Ayutla, shot through back; sentenced six years, out in six months; Mr. Gates fights Mexicans; he was the owner of Carrizo mine.....	8	1160
Tells of prejudice against Americans; murder of Americans, Hoadly and Williams, their bodies chopped up by Mexicans; list of passengers on German steamship Maria brought out of Manzanillo, 245, miners and colonists, workmen.....	8	1160
Hyde, Capt. George E., American.....	8	1195
Verifies translation telegram identified by Arthur Graham, dated Mexico, January 17, 1920, to Mexican consul at San Antonio, Tex., and signed by Hilario Medina, subsecretary of relations, forbidding Mexicans to testify before subcommittee of Senate.....	8	1195
Inman, Samuel G., American.....	1	4
Statement of.....	1	5
Pan Americanism.....	1	5
Relations with Latin America.....	1	5
American solidarity.....	1	6
Missionary activities in Mexico.....	1	6
Churches against intervention in Mexico.....	1	7
Abuses of jefe politicos.....	1	8
Holdings of large landed interests.....	1	8
Carranza ultrainternationalistic and resentful.....	1	9
Policy of Mexico for the Mexicans.....	1	9
Carranza not responsible for radical features of constitution of 1917; authority for this statement.....	1	9
Osuna adviser to Carranza, governor of Tamaulipas; States under military rule; American financial experts invited to Mexico to work out new tax system.....	1	10
Carranza's attitude on oil question; no idea of confiscation.....	1	10
Power of Congress to change constitution.....	1	12
Newspapers distrust Carranza's message to Congress.....	1	13
Newspaper exaggerations in United States.....	1	14
World War convinced Mexicans United States could and would fight. Letter of Luis Cabrera of March 17, 1917, to E. D. Trowbridge, asking committee to go to Mexico and cooperate with Government.....	1	16
Trowbridge unable to organize committee.....	1	17
Trowbridge's book, "Mexico To-Day," is friendly to Carranza government.....	1	18
Improved conditions in Mexico.....	1	18
Allotment of Mexico's income.....	1	20
Imports of crude oil from Mexico.....	1	23
Revenue spent in maintaining army.....	1	25
Conditions as to bandits improving.....	1	25
Resolutions of mission boards.....	1	26
Influence of young men in Carranza government.....	1	27
Schools.....	1	29
Alvarado and socialistic enterprise in Yucatan.....	1	31
Carranza's personal character.....	1	33
Yaqui raid on Guaymas, Sonora.....	1	34
Inman's book.....	1	35
Letter of Alvarado to Carranza, Obregon, and Pablo Gonzales.....	1	36

Inman, Samuel G., American—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Red Cross work in Coahuila and Mexico City; attack on Red Cross train.....	1	39
Red Cross ordered out by Carranza.....	1	40
Gen. Fortunato Zuazua.....	1	40
Riot-call letter to representatives of mission board and publication of..	1	41
Oil interests and association for protection in Mexico.....	1	52
Republican publicity committee and intervention.....	1	53
Appalling use of money and propaganda of oil interests with reference to intervention.....	1	55
Blanquet and assistants.....	1	57
Ammunition offered Gov. Osuna.....	1	58
Villa raids financed in United States.....	1	58
Misstatements and article from San Francisco papers.....	1	59
Nationalization of women, Bolshevism and German propaganda.....	1	60
Would great American corporation promote raids on border.....	1	62
War on Mexico to protect investors.....	1	63
Mexicans who first obtained money from oil interests.....	1	65
Resolution of Chicago Church Federation on questionable propaganda..	1	68
Business keeps Mexico out of league.....	1	69
Outrages on little girls and venereal diseases.....	1	71
Not connected with league of free nations of Mexican cooperative committee; invited to assist as outside worker; salary paid by committee on cooperation, Latin America.....	1	80
Carranza does not travel out of Mexico City without armed escort....	1	88
Did not state in book that it was necessary to guard trains on which missionaries went to Mexico City, although such was case.....	1	93
El Universal friendly to Americans.....	1	96
Carranza said he would have constitution of 1917 changed in so far as related to church.....	1	98
Introduces map explaining missionary conditions in Mexico for past 30 years.....	1	104
Purpose in Mexico was proselyting.....	1	106
Intending establishing agricultural schools in Mexico for reason great majority of Mexicans knew nothing concerning modern farming.....	1	105
Admits knew nothing himself concerning Mexican farming.....	1	110
Was favorable to recognition Carranza.....	1	113
Had not read "Official Mexican side of the petroleum controversy," by Joaquin Santaella: this had not been circulated by his committee.	1	114
No one passed on correctness of propaganda sent out by committee....	1	115
Thinks Associated Press is being influenced to paint false pictures of Mexico.....	1	117
Compares prohibition amendment of United States to article 27 of Mexican constitution.....	1	121
Refers to Monroe doctrine and refers to book of Prof. Powers.....	1	122
Mexican people being exploited by priests and land barons, also foreign interests.....	1	122
Got information from John Kenneth Turner's book.....	1	123
Attempted to explain mining law of Mexico; knew nothing about it..	1	125
Attempted to explain peonage system; knew nothing re that.....	1	128
Accused Henry Lane Wilson of complicity in murder of Madero; has no facts; received information from news items and Mexican sources.	1	133
One source of prejudice against Americans in Mexico is caused by discredited Americans in Mexico; has no proof of statements.....	1	135
Huerta issued general order for arrest of all Americans in Mexico, including consular officer, at time of occupation of Veracruz.....	1	137
States no one suggested writing his book; admits engaged in propaganda and against intervention in Mexico.....	1	141
Jacks, Dr. Odia M., American.....	8	1166
In Mexico, 1905, as practicing physician in Blalock colony; held inquest on body of Mr. Pilgrim and relates killing of Gorman, by information.....	8	1167
Farce of trial of murderer of Pilgrim; was arrested by Gen. Lopez de Lara, Carrancista, mistreated and turned loose; sentenced to be shot, etc.; shot at; all by Carranza soldiers; John Rose was also arrested, etc., with Jacks.....	8	1168

	Part.	Page.
Jacks, Dr. Odia M., American—Continued.
Robbed many times by Lieut. Col. Rodrigo Flores, whose father was a Carranza general; he also; relates assassination of Randle and Brooks at Chamal colony; mentions killing of Gorman.....	8	1170
Relates various robberies of Americans.....	8	1171
Many robberies of Americans in Chamal colony.....	8	1172
Jones, Charles E.....	20	2889
Ex-Assistant Department of Justice; newspaper man; explains connection and work with Department of Justice, reference Mexican Government, Central American countries, etc.....	20	2890
Letter Chief Bielaski to Charles E. Jones, value of services, June 28, 1916; letter from Bielaski to Mr. Winslow re Jones, June 16, 1919, addressed Capt. Hanson under name of "Creese"; letter from Forest C. Pendleton "To whom it may concern," recommending Jones, reference to introduction letters (see appendix).....	20	2894
Adam Leckie one source of information, inside man with Carranza; United States ambassador would not act on direct information; Leckie partner with Assistant United States Attorney General.....	20	2895
Andres Garcia letters (see appendix).....	20	3000
Report to Department of Justice.....	20	2896
Quotes extract letter Garcia re remittance; commissioned by secretary of foreign relations by Mexican Government satisfactory to United States Government.....	20	2897
Offered by Mexican Government $40,000 for reports; activities of Mexican Government through Carranza; Obregon to bring on revolutions in Central American countries who were friendly to United States in order to unite against Allies.....	20	2898
Cabrera friendly to United States; Salvador pro-Mexican; intrigue Wm. J. Bryan with Nicaragua; Mexican Government employed by Von Eckhardt, German ambassador, to unite Central America against United States and make it pro-German.....	20	2899
Refers to various letters and documents to be filed in appendix re De Negri, etc.....	20	2900
Refers to various letters and documents to be filed in appendix re Peralta, etc.....	20	2901
Quotations letters and documents for appendix high officials re Central American plans.....	20	2902
Carranza to offset bad impression in United States as to their pro-German activity.....	20	2903
Liberal Party of Central America under orders of Carranza to fight the United States; Carranza to furnish fund for movement; refers to correspondence in appendix.....	20	2904
Red Cross with Mexican doctors only to be established for use in Honduras and Guatemala; Obregon thanked; did more for establishment Liberal cause than any other; Obregon's connection arms and munitions out of Veracruz to Honduras.....	20	2906
Agents Carranza and Von Eckhardt in United States to further plans; proposition Carranza to Antonio Mendez Montoroso re revolutions in Central America against Allies and United States.....	20	2907
Ernest Racca, M. D., offers to sell Carranza-Obregon, etc., letters.....	20	2908
Peralta; Rosales allowed to leave United States at New Orleans by district attorney feared to antagonize Central America by prosecution; Carranza had three well-known Central American propositions broken up; third plan was known as "Plot of Morazan" by Carranza and Von Eckhardt.....	20	2909
Pan American "United Latin Race" v. United States.....	20	2910
Obregon et al., present friendship for United States not accordance previous activities.....	20	2910
All leading Mexicans now in power unfriendly to United States.....	20	2910
Alvarado's record line of blood.....	20	2911
Obregon's the same.....	20	2911
Should not be recognized.....	20	2911
Obregon book seized by Department of Justice anti-American.....	20	2911
His change of heart false.....	20	2911
Conversation with Gen. Alvarado re Sonora revolution and other matters.....	20	2913
Quotes Alvarado Sonora revolution.....	20	2914

Jones, Charles E.—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Carranza displaces governors.....	20	2914
Alvarado says Carranza a liar and dishonest.....	20	2915
Quotes Lansing letter from Arredondo to protect American life.....	20	2915
Quotes Lansing to Arredondo recognizing Carranza de facto, October 19, 1915.....	20	2915
Quotation Alvarado showing Carranza did not mean to comply with promises to United States.....	20	2916
Alvarado showing graft in Carranza government by officials.....	20	2916
Alvarado to "ditch" Obregon.....	20	2916
Alvarado head of Sonora revolution.....	20	2916
Alvarado, Carranza general when atrocities committed on Americans in Mexico.....	20	2917
Alvarado in New York to finance revolution.....	20	2918
Spreading anti-Carranza propaganda.....	20	2918
Re written proposition to act as publicity agent for Alvarado and Sonora revolution.....	20	2918
Hopkins and Alvarado.....	20	2918
Witness goes with Sergeant at Arms to summon Alvarado as witness before this committee in Hopkins's office.....	20	2919
Alvarado says he is honest, living in misery, but has costly apartment in New York, $100 to $150 per week; supposed to be worth $5,000,000.	20	2920
Alvarado shows clippings, 37 defaulting paymasters in Mexico, $500 to $400,000 each.....	20	2920
Quotes Carranza's theft from Mexican Government.....	20	2920
One hundred and eighty-two army officers arrested for theft released by Carranza, hence his power.....	20	2920
Quotes Alvarado, Carranza could have eliminated Villa if he wanted to.....	20	2920
Gives reasons why Carranza wanted bandits to operate.....	20	2921
Explains Carranza's plan to remain in power.....	20	2921
Carranza took 2,000 Mexican soldiers from Sonora, left families, later ravished and murdered.....	20	2921
Carranza allows atrocities to keep in power.....	20	2921
Alvarado says worst revolution in history of Mexico approaching; explains.....	20	2922
Predicts intervention will be sure.....	20	2922
Says Carranza will be killed when he attempts to flee country.....	20	2922
Carrancistas responsible for 90 per cent of all outrages in Mexico.....	20	2922
Carranza displeased receptions in Michoacan to Obregon.....	20	2923
Explains Carranza methods to steal election and remain in power.....	20	2923
Bonillas to be running for Carranza.....	20	2924
Letter introduction Alvarado to Cosme Hinojosa favor witness.....	20	2924
Hinojosa Obregonista.....	20	2925
Hinojosa statement that Carranza sent him on mission to weaken Obregon.....	20	2925
Andres Garcia strong Obregonista.....	20	2926
Secret police system of Carranza.....	20	2926
Alvarado discusses Carranza's political plans.....	20	2926
Alvarado discusses Sonora revolution.....	20	2926
Obregon camouflaging.....	20	2927
Plan that Obregon will not be head of revolution at first.....	20	2927
Alvarado to back revolution.....	20	2927
Mexico not safe for Mexicans; they are leaving Mexico in countless numbers.....	20	2927
Alvarado describes Luis Cabrera hatred of Americans, etc.....	20	2928
Manuel Aguirre Berlanga servile agent of Carranza.....	20	2928
Alvarado describes Bonillas.....	20	2928
Accepted nomination at Nuevo Laredo by Civilista party, March 17, 1920.....	20	2928
Bonillas attempts to interfere with legislation United States Senate.....	20	2928
Manuel Calero lied to United States for 10 months.....	20	2929
Alvarado describes Gen. Manuel M. Dieguez.....	20	2929
Alvarado describes Pastor Rouaix, Secretary Public Instruction.....	20	2929
Alvarado describes Candido Aguilar.....	20	2929
Alvarado describes Manuel Rodriguez Gutierrez.....	20	2929
Alvarado describes Pablo Gonzalez.....	20	2929

Jones, Charles E.—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Murder of Zapata by orders of Pablo Gonzalez at hands of Guajardo...	20	2930
Carranza orders Pablo Gonzalez to come out as a pro-ally to fool the United States.....	20	2930
Gonzalez manifesto in Pachuca to protect; soldiers raped, murdered, and robbed own people.....	20	2930
Quotes speech of Gonzalez, 1916, against President Wilson.....	20	2930
Gonzalez intrigues propaganda United States to fool them, etc.....	20	2931
Alvarado gives biography of Obregon, shows he was with Carranza plot against United States.....	20	2931
Obregon troops robbed, ravished, murdered, desecrated churches; thousands of girls ravished.....	20	2932
Obregon was extremely pro-German.....	20	2932
Obregon celebrated American hater.....	20	2932
Obregon flew red flag in Mexico City.....	20	2932
Obregon made contract with I. W. W.'s.....	20	2932
Obregon wrote book favoring Prussian cause.....	20	2932
Obregon appoints publicity agent.....	20	2932
Alvarado describes Calles; compares him to Satan.....	20	2933
Alvarado describes Carranza.....	20	2933
Alvarado says Carranza revolted against Madero.....	20	2933
Took advantage of American opinion, death of Madero, and declared against Huerta.....	20	2933
Alvarado further describes Carranza, lunatic, etc.....	20	2934
Alvarado further describes Carranza.....	20	2935
Alvarado to form publicity bureau in United States to further his candidacy for President of Mexico.....	20	2937
Takes oath to capture or kill Felix Diaz and Gen. Pelaez.....	20	2937
Defeat his forces March, 1918, by Diaz and Pelaez; quotes report to Department of Justice.....	20	2938
Typewritten statement prepared by Alvarado.....	20	2938
Alvarado before revolution very poor, now millionaire.....	20	2938
Alvarado record in Yucatan robber.....	20	2939
Witness Jones tells of conferences with De Negri in New York October 22, 1919.....	20	2943
Introduced to Secret Agent Seguin.....	20	2944
Quotes report to Department of Justice May 13, 1918, re M. G. Seguin, Mexican consul, arms and ammunition.....	20	2945
Offer, De Negri to Jones, to make public information he had against National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico; Mr. Fall, chairman and committee, Capt. Hanson, Buckley, et al. in order to disgrace and ruin them.....	20	2945
De Negri offers $40,000 for documents and $2,000 per month to Jones .	20	2946
To increase to $100,000 if above mentioned are ruined.....	20	2946
Describes De Negri's feelings toward above parties.....	20	2946
Seguin and Jones brothers arrived Laredo November 7, 1919, 3 p. m..	20	2947
To meet representatives from Mexican foreign office.....	20	2947
Quotes Charles A. Douglas as telling De Negri that United States State Department very anxious to discredit Fall Committee.....	20	2947
Something to drop soon to cause a sensation, to involve Congressmen and Senators, also various parties connected with Department of Justice cooperating with enemies of Mexico.....	20	2947
Activities at Laredo interesting.....	20	2948
Pena and Seguin make threats against Trout-Rumsey et al., United States officers, also Fall, Hanson, et al.....	20	2949
Work in Laredo.....	20	2951
Seguin received from De Negri confidential information to ruin Fall, Hanson et al.....	20	2951
To be used by Carranza's American friends to ruin them.....	20	2951
Left Laredo November 12, 1919; had conversation with Hanson; tipped scheme off to him.....	20	2951
Conversation with De Negri November 18, 1919; said he and Bonillas to ruin Fall and Hanson.....	20	2952
Scheme to murder Fall and Hanson.....	20	2952
De Negri criticizes Senator Fall on exposing him on I. W. W. connection.....	20	2952
Abuses newspapers.....	20	2953

Jones, Charles E.—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Acknowledges he is in with reds.....	20	2953
Acknowledges letter to New York Herald all "bunk".....	20	2953
De Negri to make fool out of newspapers.....	20	2953
De Negri securing clipping of "Outrageous atrocities and murders, etc., United States on Mexicans by Americans.....	20	2953
Mexican booklet r. Americans.....	20	2954
Met Seguin consular office, New York, November 24, 1919.....	20	2955
Mexican messenger en route to New York; sealed instructions.....	20	2955
Very bitter against Fall and Hanson; positive threat by De Negri they to be assassinated.....	20	2956
November 28, 1919, warned Hanson through Department of Justice....	20	2956
December 1, 1919, Hanson warned Fall.....	20	2956
Maj. Pullman, superintendent of police, had Senator Fall looked after..	20	2956
Two Mexicans endeavored to enter Fall's room.....	20	2956
Wrote Sullivan, Department of Justice, that Fall and Hanson marked for assassination and to notify Capt. Hanson; quotes telegram to Han- son.....	20	2956
Telegram from Hanson.....	20	2957
Visited Mexican consular office, New York; informed of message from Bonillas calling Jones to Washington that night.....	20	2957
Relates interview with Bonillas reference to ruining Fall committee, etc.....	20	2958
Scared over Fall resolution.....	20	2959
Friends of Bonillas had worked on members of Foreign Relations Com- mittee to prevent.....	20	2959
Their friends Bernard B. Baruch, Attorney General Palmer, and Jo- seph Tumulty.....	20	2959
Col. House and Lansing in bad with Wilson.....	20	2959
Judge Douglas gave strong letter to Gen. Pablo Gonzalez.....	20	2960
Mr. Lincoln Colcord, friend of Bonillas, had seen Senators Johnson, Borah, and Knox.....	20	2960
Colcord to have parties over to Washington to tell truth about Mexico; De Bekker, McDonald, et al., to talk privately with Senator Borah..	20	2961
Bonillas to have other powerful friends to see Congressmen and Sena- tors.....	20	2961
Knows Robert Murray.....	20	2961
Called John S. Weller, 915 Park Building, Pittsburgh, Pa., to work on Senators against Fall resolution.....	20	2961
Colcord, their friend, "radical".....	20	2962
Martens was secreted in Colcord's house when United States officers were seeking him.....	20	2962
Subpoena served on Martens in Colcord's apartments.....	20	2962
Bonillas suggests that Jones Bros. appear before the Foreign Relations Committee to discredit the subcommittee.....	20	2963
Bonillas could not produce any files against Fall and the committee..	20	2963
Bonillas details method to discredit Senator Fall and Hanson.....	20	2964
Bonillas offers $100,000 to ruin them.....	20	2964
Threatens National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico.....	20	2965
Bonillas offers $5,000 per month Chief of Secret Service for Mexico....	20	2965
Bonillas to get Obregon and Gonzalez to withdraw his favor.....	20	2966
Bonillas bitter toward Lansing going to resign.....	20	2967
Fletcher hissed in Mexico; Von Eckhardt cheered.....	20	2967
Danger of Fall resolution passed.....	20	2967
Several Senators and others to be ruined by scheme.....	20	2968
Proposal to ruin Fall committee et al.....	20	2968
Carranza to spend $100,000 in propaganda in United States.....	20	2969
Javier Favala great friend and secret service agent Carranza, room 203, 79 Nassau Street, telephone 6068 Courtland, residence 265 West Twenty-second Street, New York.....	20	2969
Favala said plans were on foot to assassinate Fall and Hanson.....	20	2970
Jones and Seguin have words.....	20	2970
Copy of expense check for $920.60 filed.....	20	2970
Telegram to Hanson at El Pao, January 28, 1919, asking him to come to Washington.....	20	2971
Letter November 4, 1919, Charles A. Douglas to Gen. Pablo Gonzalez, introducing witness.....	20	2971

	Part	Page
Jones, Charles E.—Continued.
Letter to Senator Fall May 12, 1920, signed by T. V. Rancke, Jones articles.....	20	2972
Kept committee advised at all times through Hanson; never received a dollar from any source for information.....	20	2973
Favela a bad actor, dangerous.....	20	2974
Hanson found out from another source that Favela was to do the assassination.....	20	2974
Favela to burn oil fields if there is intervention.....	20	2974
Favela a German spy, speaks 8 or 10 different languages.....	20	2975
Representatives of new Mexican Government goes fully into assassination plot.....	20	2976
Kept Hanson posted.....	20	2977
Refers to various letters and documents to go into index reports to Department of Justice.....	20	2977
Felix Diaz and Japan.....	20	2978
Shannon letter to Diaz.....	20	2978
England and Felicista movement.....	20	2978
Diaz correspondence and codes.....	20	2979
President Wilson code name "Meddler," Bryan's "Mr. Chump," Carranza's "Mr. Foxy".....	20	2979
Refers to files re Manuel Pelaez.....	20	2980
Quotes proclamation from Gen. Villa criticizing Wilson for recognizing Carranza.....	20	2981
Explains "Morgan" schemes for establishment new Republic Salvador and Honduras in Central America.....	20	2981
Explains Carranza's intrigues, ideas and purposes in promotion of Central American revolution.....	20	2982
Letter from Brenniman.....	20	2994
Letter, Leckie to Bonillas, May 20, 1918.....	20	2994
Letter, Muzquiz to Bonillas, June 17, 1918.....	20	2994
Letter, Conaty to Beck, October 15, 1918.....	20	2995
Letter, Bielaski to Keep, September 17, 1918.....	20	2995
Letter, Brenniman to Mock, October 3, 1918.....	20	2995
Letter, Garcia to Jones, August 6, 1918.....	20	2996
Letter, Garcia to Gonzalez, August 5, 1918.....	20	2996
Telegram, Creese to Pesqueira, October 1, 1919.....	20	2996
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, May 13, 1918, re Gov. Cantu.....	20	2997
Letter, Frezieres to Carranza, April 25, 1918.....	20	2997
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, May 14, 1918, re Antonio Villavicencio.....	20	2999
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, May 13, 1918, re Piedras Negras, Mexico.....	20	2999
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, May 13, 1918, re Conditions Eagle Pass, Tex.....	20	3001
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, May 25, 1918, re offer appointment chief Mexican secret service.....	20	3002
Telegram, Pedro (Creese) to Garcia, May 1, 1918.....	20	3004
Telegram, Pedro (Creese) to Garcia, May 11, 1918.....	20	3004
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, July 26, 1918, re plan to capture Castillo.....	20	3004
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, re Col. Gonzalez, Matamoros, Mexico, August 15, 1918.....	20	3005
Report Creese to Department of Justice, August 19, 1918, re Mexican Consul, Brownsville, Tex., pro-German.....	20	3006
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, August 17, 1918, re Mexican conditions Boquillas, Tex.....	20	3007
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, August 17, 1918, re Tomas Pinasso, Laredo, Tex.....	20	3007
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, August 19, 1918, re American Consul, Matamoros, Mexico.....	20	3008
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, August 20, 1918, re Mexican Consul, Presidio, Tex.....	20	3009
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, August 24, 1918, re Mexican Consul, Port Arthur, Tex.....	20	3010
Report, Creese to Department of Justice, August 20, 1918, re Villa bandits visiting United States Army camps.....	20	3010

Jones, Charles E.—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Report Creese to Department of Justice, September 3, 1918, re Mexican foreign policy in Central America.....	20	3011
Report Creese to Department of Justice, July 4, 1918, re Mexican minister of interior pro-German.....	20	3011
Report Creese to Department of Justice, July 24, 1918, re Mexican officials smuggling.....	20	3012
Report Creese to Department of Justice, November 14, 1918, re Mexican presidential election.....	20	3012
Report Creese to Department of Justice, September 4, 1918, re resolution by Cantu.....	20	3014
Letter Farriba to Felix Diaz, March, 1917, concerning Cantu.....	20	3015
Report Creese to Department of Justice, October 23, 1918, concerning activities Cantu.....	20	3016
Report Creese to Department of Justice, October 23, 1918, concerning Pablo Dato implicated Cantu movement.....	20	3019
Pablo Dato German subject and German agent.....	20	3023
Documentary evidence to prove.....	20	3026
Report Creese to Department of Justice, November 23, 1918, re Cantu and Betancourt smuggling arms and ammunition.....	20	3027
Re Godchaux, informant, ammunition case.....	20	3029
Telegrams Sullivan to Jones re Betancourt.....	20	3029
Letters Poole to Godchaux re ammunition.....	20	3031
Creese report re plotting Los Angeles Cantu Betancourt case.....	20	3033
Report Creese to Department of Justice, November 23, 1918, re Calzado and Cantu revolution.....	20	3037
Telegram Bielaski to Keep re Calzado, October 16, 1918.....	20	3046
Report Creese to Department of Justice, November 27, 1918, re Betancourt statement that secret service leaked.....	20	3046
Report Creese to Department of Justice, November 30, 1918, re Samuel Vasquez, Mexican consul San Diego, Calif.....	20	3048
Report Creese to Department of Justice, April 15, 1919, re Mexican Government permitted to get arms and ammunition.....	20	3049
Creese recommendation against.....	20	3050
Report Creese to Department of Justice re Carranza Central American plot.....	20	3051
Letter Garcia Lopez to Luis Cabrera, May 16, 1916, Central American plot.....	20	3059
Letter Peralta to Aguilar, June 7, 1916, Central American plot.....	20	3060
Letter Peralta to Carranza, June 7, 1916, Central American plot.....	20	3061
Letter Peralta to Obregon, June 8, 1916, Central American plot.....	20	3061
Letter Obregon to Peralta, June 13, 1916.....	20	3062
Letter Peralta to Carranza, June 16, 1916, Central American plot.....	20	3062
Letter Peralta to Jones re propaganda.....	20	3063
Telegram Peralta to Carranza and Obregon re propaganda.....	20	3063
Letter Peralta to Obregon, June 27, 1916, Central American plot.....	20	3066
Letter Peralta to Carranza, July 3, 1916, Central American plot.....	20	3067
Letter Peralta to Obregon, July 6, 1916, re assistance Central American plot.....	20	3070
Written agreement between Rosales, Peralta and Gavin to loot Honduras.....	20	3071
Written contract of de la Rosa to furnish expedition to Honduras.....	20	3072
Carranza supplies arms and ammunition.....	20	3072
Peralta and Rosales code.....	20	3073
Carranza, Peralta, and Rosales combination Central America.....	20	3078
Letter Rosales to Secretary Lansing December 26, 1916 re conditions Honduras.....	20	3081
Central American revolutionary literature.....	20	3082
Letter Julian Irias to Rosales November 26, 1916 re arms and ammunition.....	20	3089
Letter Contreras, Mexico City, to Julian Irias, Washington, re Central American revolution.....	20	3090
Arrest of Irias.....	20	3093
Agreement signed by Rosales and Jones re arms and ammunition.....	20	3099
Written agreement between Central American revolutionists.....	20	3100
Arrest of all Central American plotters New Orleans, La., August, 1917.....	20	3100
Peralta confessed to Government officers.....	20	3100
Evidence complete.....	20	3100

Jones, Charles E.—Continued.	Part.	Page.
United States Attorney recommends deportation in lieu of prosecution.	20	3100
All deported.	20	3100
Central American plots continue in Mexico.	20	3102
Letter Ladislado Santos writes Rosales that Alvarado agrees furnish equipment.	20	3102
Santos states Obregon and others will still assist revolution.	20	3102
Report Creese to Department of Justice September 25, 1918, re Juan Guevara smuggling ammunition.	20	3103
Adam Leckie and Charles A. Douglas, loyal Americans.	20	3104
Report Creese to Department of Justice re Jerome S. Hess.	20	3104
Report Creese to Department of Justice re interview with Ignacio Bonillas re German activity in Mexico.	20	3108
Jones recommendation to Department of Justice concerning German activities in Mexico.	20	3112
Report Creese to Department of Justice re Break between Carranza and Obregon.	20	3113
Jones, Gus T., American.	10	1622
List of United States soldiers killed in the Columbus, N. Mex., raid.	10	1622
Joyce, Father Francis P., chaplain, United States Army:
— Six or seven hundred sisters in Veracruz, 1914, many in disguise and in want.	18	2656
Many priests serve bishops and archbishops there; same working as waiters in restaurants; Father Kelley gave some assistance; United States Consul Silliman, personal representative of President Wilson, said, when appealed to for aid to sisters and priests, "It is generally admitted by everybody that the worst thing in Mexico, next to prostitution, is the Catholic Church, and both must go;" Mexican woman offered gold to an American officer to marry her daughter to save her from Candido Aguilar; refused, later Aguilar ruined her, then married Miss Carranza.	18	2657
Consul Canada tried to help; some sisters became mothers; many were diseased; Funston sympathetic but failed to get boat from United States departments for them.	18	2658
Mistake in not recognizing Huerta; untrue Huerta was a bad man, not guilty of killing Madero; received very discourteous treatment by United States; taken sick; bond $38,000; Dubose, United States officer, tried to graft on him.	18	2659
Moved back to prison; operation on Huerta wrongfully done, caused his death; firm of lawyers in El Paso got $7,500; Hattner, $17,400, $13,000 lost to widow in favor of United States Government.	18	2660
John Lind against Catholic Church in Mexico, said at Veracruz, "The thing wrong with Mexico is the Catholic Church, and they should keep the Catholic schools and churches closed for a generation, and they will then be rid of the church in Mexico;" quotes time of Juarez; despoiled church; influence of priests on natives good; 400 sisters left in Veracruz when Americans evacuated city; reported Villa and Carranza tried to have one prostitute to every four soldiers; Catholic Church failed to render aid to their people at first.	18	2661
Carranza at banquet board supplied each guest with a "chalice" for a wine cup; many American sisters taken off train near Veracruz by soldiers.	18	2662
Karns, H. J., American.	12	1899
Merchant, export trade with Mexico, 1899; has had no difficulty in commercial relations with Mexico and has operated during all revolutionary period, 1899; business occasionally suspended, 1900; conflicts on border at Nogales, 1900; traffic south of Nogales interrupted, 1900; railroads running south of Nogales in hands of owners and factions, 1900; experience with local authorities pleasant, 1900; Yaquis trying to make treaty, 1901; soldiers in Sonora mostly Mayos and Yaquis, 1901; Americans put to no inconvenience by Federal troops, 1902; collectors of customs and consuls of Mexico always pleasant in relations with Americans, 1902; consuls at Nogales not always friendly inclined, 1902; removal of consul at Nogales for participation in theft of an automobile, 1902; Gen. Obregon had consul removed, 1902; implicated by letter found on Mexican killed by Americans, 1903; substance of letter, 1904; Obregon friendly to Americans, 1904; business on west coast of Mexico, 1904; railroad south of Nogales out of commission, 1905; slight interruption of traffic, 1906.

	Part.	Page.
Kelley, Monsignor Francis C.	18	2665
Exiled nuns and clergymen at Veracruz.	18	2665
Part received at Castroville, Tex.; tried to tell American people about Mexico; priests penniless; disguised as peons to get out; assisted by him.	18	2666
Method of ransom for priests; how and why exodus of Catholics.	18	2667
Corroborates Mother Elias, former witness; her return to Mexico to help nuns; trouble with Mexico "anticlericalism".	18	2668
Mexico only a democracy and republic in name; Catholic candidate for vice president received more votes for vice president than Madero candidate, but counted out; quotes extract from Bryan letter of March 20, 1915 "Flower of democracy lies religious freedom"; criticizes constitution of 1857; sentiment of Mexican Catholic; Luis Cabrera no friend; politicians Mexico adopted principles French revolution; antireligious.	18	2669
People of Mexico do not hate church, only politicians; church against looting, atrocities, therefore politicians hate church; wants religious freedom in Mexico similar to United States.	18	2670
Quotes number of Catholics and makes comparisons.	18	2671
Quotes Eber Cole Byam on Catholic Church, Mexico.	18	2672
Quotes figures and makes comparisons of Catholic and Protestants, worship, etc.	18	2674
Education in Mexico among Indian tribes.	18	2676
Quotes ancient history of Mexico and work of Catholic Church, Mexico.	18	2678
Only union of church and state Spanish régime in Mexico; Catholic political party formed just before Madero took office, object to reform constitution of 1857, reference church; similar to the United States; disagrees with Lind statement about schools in Mexico; "ignorant or an intentional prevaricator;" believe what Mr. Frisbee said about Lind conversation re Catholic Church; not a Jesuit.	18	2682
Kellogg, Frederick R.	16	2380
Contradicted John Lind on Mexican and American mining laws.	16	2380
Spanish law issued.	16	2381
Minerals issued to crown.	16	2381
Ownership minerals restricted.	16	2381
Cites decrees and orders.	16	2382
Minerals, how acquired.	16	2382
Decree 1892 expresses recognition private ownership coal, etc.	16	2383
Previous interpretation, decrees, etc., beginning 1387, laws 1559, and ordinance 1783; law of Mexico after Revolution 1821; treaty between Mexico and Spain conformed to above laws to Mexico and endured until 1857; amendment to constitution of 1857 authorizing "mining codes, 1884.	16	2384
Then follows extracts from mining laws of November 22, 1884, where foreigners may acquire mining property; Lind statement on mining quoted, denied.	16	2385
Further refutes Lind.	16	2387
American owners of oil lands actually confiscated; law of 1884 to remain in force until January 4, 1892, which granted private ownership to private individuals of oil, etc.	16	2389
Three provisions of mining code do not admit change of individual rights to subsoil rights to individuals; all in accordance with laws of 1559 and 1884; constitution 1917, articles 14, 27, 126 not retroactive and might be construed not depriving owner of subsoil rights, but Carranza decrees beginning February, 1918, eliminates private ownership of petroleum beneath surface.	16	2390
Arredondo pledged protection, rights, lives, and property; foreigners not made good.	16	2391
Discusses damage to oil company affected by Carranza decrees.	16	2392
Quotes Lind, reference to statement of Cabrera; foreigner not to seek avoidance of taxes; performance of duties, etc.; explains unjust taxation Carranza government to foreigners.	16	2393
Oil companies records clear in Mexico.	16	2394
Kennedy, J. D.	17	2630
See McFramie and Kennedy.

	Part.	Page.
King, Wiley.....	13	1949
Went to Mexico, left in October, 1917; farming and stock raising. On Atascador Colony, 100 families at that time; 425 acres owned, Americans owned small tracts each, poor people; 192,000 acres in ranch before being subdivided for colonization by E. H. Campbell & Co., of Tampico; had schools and church, maintained by Americans; conditions ideal up to time of revolution; trouble began in earnest when we went into Veracruz: colonists good, honest, law-abiding citizens; treated well by Mexicans until break came; relates ravishing girls of Mr. Gourd, sent for soldiers, did not come, ordered to leave station (Huerta soldiers).....	13	1950
Later Huerta soldiers executed eight men, Javala family and another Mexican, for above crime; so reported; went to jungle, built camp, remained there 22 days; went to jungle again when Pershing went to Mexico.....	13	1952
Actual facts; Ebano occupied by Huertistas, Villistas, laying siege; Villistas robbed Bird and Zigler, and Mexican ranchmen and Americans took charge of Dunheim, Limmerfall, Morehead, and young King; killed Bird; the two Germans, Dunheim and Limmerfall, had accused Bird and Zigler of stealing, but they only took their own cattle back that the two Germans had stolen from them (Hanson).....	13	1952
Carrancistas began stealing and robbing; Weder robbed of cattle, protested, was killed by Gen. Larraga, 24th of October, 1917; no protection from Carrancistas; boy punched with a gun in back and robbed of horses; Carranza general in league with thieves.....	13	1954
Two German families remained there, well treated by Carrancistas; American colonists lost all, scattered all over world; no help from American Government, only to assist some to get out of country; no concessions; American enterprise had wonderful good effect on laborers.....	13	1956
Mentions murders of L. A. Dunn and three other Americans and one Mexican with pay roll; Franklin, Pilgrim, on Chamal, mentions San Dieguito colony losing several hundred head of cattle; ran away by Manuel Larraga; all farms grown up in brush; Germans to fight with Mexicans; depended on United States Government for protection, but received none.....	13	1954
Kirby, Thomas.....	9	1461
Mining engineer; authority on mining in Mexico; wrote review of mining in Mexico for the Mining World, of Chicago, in year 1905....	9	1461
Mines in Mexico practically abandoned in 1880; when Americans started mining operations old mines were reclaimed and placed in operation with up to date machinery, etc.; in each instance the mines were bought and paid for when obtained from Mexican owners; mining flourished under Diaz.....	9	1463
Since revolution began mining has fallen off 90 per cent.....	9	1464
Testified re execution of American citizen, Howard L. Elton, a mining engineer, by rebels after guaranty to United States that it would not be done.....	9	1468
Testified to killing of Boris Gorow, an American citizen, in Jalisco by rebels; his gold teeth were beaten from his head before he died.....	9	1469
Kleberg, C.....	8	1282
Relates conditions and attack on Norias ranch, owner.....	13	1283
Statement of Manuel Rincones, reference to raiders of Norias ranch, who was captured by raiders.....	13	1284
Nafarrate Carranza commander at Matamoras during raids.....	13	1286
Kleiber, J. I.....	8	1289
Conditions along the border good during Diaz régime; relates wrecking of train near Brownsville, in which he was robbed, engineer killed, also several soldiers, also Mr. Cain; State health officer and Wallace wounded.....	8	1270
Identifies De la Rosa past history; quotes Chino Flores confession about raid; show Nafarrate assisted in organization of raiders in Matamoras.....	8	1274

	Part.	Page.
Kleiber, J. I.—Continued.
Relates difficulties in extradition; De la Rosa commissioned by Carranza; leaders indicted for murder in Texas; two men hung for murder of Austins.	8	1275
Relates conspiracy to raid on Texas side; formed in Matamoros; approximate number of Americans murdered by raiders.	8	1277
Gives ideas on Mexico and Mexicans.	8	1278
Propaganda from Mexico on Texas side.	8	1278
Discusses extradition; Alberto Cabrera, murderer of District Judge Welsh, now a captain in Carranza army; ex-convict escaped from Texas penitentiary.	8	1278
Knox, Henry Hobart, American.	9	1417
Consulting mining engineer.	9	1417
Conditions in Mexico under Diaz.	9	1417
Difficulties began with Orozco revolution.	9	1417
Mining properties in Chihuahua closed.	9	1418
Troops sent to mining camps, but recalled at request of operators because they robbed and looted.	9	1418
Attitude of Carranza generals to conditions.	9	1420
Gen. Murguia from humble origin became multimillionaire.	9	1419
No prospects for improvement in conditions.	9	1421
Villa establishes order and does not rob poor people.	9	1421
Condition of railroads.	9	1421
Policy of United States in ordering Americans out of Mexico.	9	1423
Lopez killed Americans at Santa Isabel.	9	1423
Have never denied American citizenship.	9	1423
Treatment of Germans.	9	1424
Salvation of Mexico.	9	1424
Attitude of laboring classes as to who governs them.	9	1425
Percentage of population engaged in looting.	9	1425
Armed intervention.	9	1425
Kile, Capt. S. C.	8	1242
Testimony of Capt. Kile, intelligence officer Fort Sam Houston; introduces a brief history of the lower Rio Grande Valley.	8	1242
Compared contents with reference to raids on Rio Grande with departmental records found correct in detail, in which are related detailed occurrences.	8	1243
King, A. J.	10	1535
Sergeant Texas Ranger force, Big Bend, Tex.; known that district since 1897; unsafe for many years on that border; reason, Mexican Government employs outlaws to represent them.	10	1535
Texas rangers not allowed to go to Mexico; only go with soldiers; gives account of robbery of T. D. Baldwin's store at Ruidosa, Tex., bank of river; Chico Cano, captain in Carranza army, and 35 outlaws do the depredating on Texas side principally; several days after the first robbery they returned; arrests by rangers; Dykes and Woodland arrested man trying to kill Baldwin; Cano and his gang rescued him in fight, 20th of January, 1920; also robbed a threshing machine and stripped it; no cooperation from Carranza, never delivered any murderers or thieves to us; efforts made with Carrancistas unavailing for cooperation.	10	1536
Krakauer, Adolph.	17	2590
Protection from Diaz.	17	2591
Surprised Madero won; criticizes United States for assisting Madero; relates Diaz's words; Orozco started his revolution against Chihuahua, not against Diaz; Madero later joined with him.	17	2591
Kritzberger, Peter.	13	1977
Farmer and laborer, manager of farm, Oaxaca and Chiapas, 1909; American colony; "San Pedro De Las Papas," two or three hundred Americans there, farmers, small; had all they possessed there, lost it all; good citizens, 63,000 acres; no concessions; absolutely safe prior to revolution; trouble began Veracruz incident.	13	1977
Details fight of Smith with bandits and escape, etc.; Smith in jail at Tonalá, later marines came in and he was released; came to States; homes in ruins; took out to Guatemala line in box car 100 Americans; relates robbery by Villista company, Culebra.	13	1980

Kritzberger, Peter—Continued.

Part. Page.

Robbed by Carrancistas; had fight, wounded several, home destroyed and burned, robbed; all colonists same; ran away; killing of Jake Myers by two men who were tried and fined $300, turned loose; tried by Carranza judge at Tonalá; relates murder of Mr. McGill and Morgan; murderer of Morgan arrested, turned loose at Tonalá; relates incident of cow stealing, arrest made, turned loose; no attention paid to American consul, reason he had no backing.....	13	1984
General conditions detail dealings with United States and British consuls; robbed many times, etc.; Carrancistas all grafting.....	13	1986
Describes methods of graft in shipping stock; American woman, member of that American colony, with child, ravished, later died; several young girls and women ravished; perpetrator well known there now, nothing done with him; no colonists left there; trains and bridges burned; track grown up, limbs break windows in cars, very little to say; conditions worse below Mexico City.....	13	1988
Everyone wants intervention there; Mr. Summers held for $5,000 ransom; brother in Oklahoma paid it; details robbery by Carranza general; Germans own two-thirds of coffee plantations, well treated....	13	1990
Lane, Franklin K.....	16	2369
Refutes Lind reference United States attitude toward oil rights Mexico.	16	2370
Explains concessions in Mexico; American not workingman.....	16	2371
Shows necessity for oil on this continent for United States; speaks of wrong attitude of Mexico toward American interests there; quotes statement from England.....	16	2373
Congressional Record April 28, 1920, pages 6719, 6720, as to danger of England v. Oil business.....	16	2377
Langhorne, Col. Geo. T.....	10	1629
Commander Big Bend district two years prior to October, 1919; area Big Bend 14,000 square miles, 53 per cent canyons and mountains, 110 miles from railroad, rim rock 2,500 feet above valley on river....	10	1629
Conditions bad, relates killing of Sitter and Hulen by Carrancistas; Glenn Springs raid by Carrancistas, relates incidents in chronological order, raids, murders, etc.; received no assistance from Carrancistas; in his opinion they committed all offenses; gives in detail aviator incident in which Capt. Matlack rescued them by paying half the ransom; report on Eighth Cavalry under witness, by Adj. Gen. Gilmor to commanding general southern department.....	10	1629
Larsen, Niels.....	17	2594
Affidavit of, loss, $70,000; relates conditions and outrages.....	17	2594
Laut, Agnes, Miss.....	2	370
Journalist and farmer; traveled in Mexico to see conditions at first hand; mentions F. S. Pearson lumber interest in Chihuahua; Canadian interest.....	2	372
Association American Rights, etc., paid portion of her expense to Mexico, she paid balance.....	2	373
Gives detailed account of trip through Mexico, saw much suffering; brought back many pictures of young girls eaten up with disease, caused by Carrancistas.....	2	377
Tells of robberies; conferences with Mexican women who pleaded for relief from the United States.....	2	377
Carrancistas offered free loot and girls for or to recruits; gives many accounts of atrocities on women, tortured and murdered; many thousands actually starved to death; Weeks Carranza propagandist; refutes insinuation by Inman that she was pro-German.....	2	377
Lester, S. D.....	16	2446
Report to Senator Albert B. Fall, chairman: petition directed to the President of the United States under date of May 12, 1914, by a committee representing 3,000 Americans; shanghaied out of Tampico on April 22 and delivered at Galveston, Tex.....	16	2446
Navy Department Bulletin, May 23, 1914, granting in part petition..	16	2448
Personal account given by one of the committee as to proceedings in Washington with department in behalf of "refugees" above mentioned and also incidents occurring previous to their departure at Tampico and acts of United States Government through Admiral Mayo.....	16	2448

Lester, S. D.—Continued.

Part. Page.

Statement of "Mr. D.," an American, robbed of cattle and money; ransom of stock from bandits; no protection given by Carranza governor, Osuna; bandits and Gen. Larraga, of the Carranza army, worked together to rob Americans.....	16	2453
Statement of "Mr. E.," an American; house destroyed by Carranza soldiers; reported to Osuna; nothing done.....	16	2453
Statement of "Mr. F.," an American, near Tampico; Gen. Aguilar took horses, soldiers beat him up with guns; "kill the Gringos" their cry; in jail 3 days, paid lawyer $200 to have him released, no charge; June, 1915, Gen. Nafarrate instructed his soldiers to arrest all Americans and compel them to leave property; cut down orange trees and pineapples and destroyed houses.....	16	2454
"Mr. G.," an American gives details of methods employed by Gen. Murguia and others to commandeer cars and force the Americans to sell their products to his agents or stand for extra graft in order to get products to market; letter from Col. F. Aguilar to "Mr. H.," Columbus colony, demanding $3,000; Sergt. Mateo Haro is accused of the murder of J. H. Correl and the rape of his wife; Henequen plantation destroyed; fences cut; robbed by Gov. Caballero on fiber deal; Mexican Government canceled concessions on two mines; Carranza domineered by his generals; Gen. Gonzales gave Antonio Acosta, his friend, $50,000 to buy mine; publicly stated he would spend $2,000,000 to defend Obregon.....	16	2456
Francisco Murguia purchased a large ranch in Coahuila and property in San Antonio, Tex.....	16	2457
Gen. Hasso robbed stores of $2,000; Gen. Isidro Cardona took mine from widow Norman; killed a Spaniard; took possession of several houses; Felipe Pescador, general manager of railroads, appointed friends who made out false vouchers and gave half to Pescador; 52 trains have been dynamited in this section; gives names of bandits and locations and how they get ammunition from Carrancistas; took manager of Agua Dulce ranch, held him for $30,000; many robberies noted.....	16	2458
Women naked, all clothes taken; people starving; people eat carrion, lizards, frogs, burro meat; railroad agents robbing Government out of half of the fares; 180 bandits in Mexico; horses and cattle all gone.....	16	2459
Mr. Barnes, 20 years in Mexico.....	16	2459
Gives account of experiences and robberies in Mexico; house burned; wrecking trains; carrying away young girls; hung and tortured old man 71 years of age.....	16	2460
Reference, John Lind, advice.....	16	2461
Hiram Catron: His statement in full in record testimony; ex-soldier; son killed; Peter Catron.....	16	2461
Statement of Virginia Villasana reference murder of Peter Catron by Eleno Zequera, officer under Gen. Larraga.....	16	2462
"Mr. L.," an American, gives account of death of L. L. Weider, November 27, 1917, at Atascador colony, near Tampico, by thieves under Gen. Larraga; cattle taken; names thieves, etc.....	16	2463
Gives several robberies of cattle, etc.; Atascador in ruins; protests against article 27 of new constitution.....	16	2464
"Mr. N.," an American, lived in Tamaulipas 25 years; good conditions under Diaz; visit from Lieut. Col. Nafarrate; robberies; battle of Victoria; execution of Lucas Haces, a Spaniard; robbery of train by Col. Jesus Agustin Castro; execution officials of Llera.....	16	2465
Hanged lineman; second battle of Victoria; car of corn burned; Saldivar loots; battle of Tampico, December 5, 1913; rebels repulsed; April 13, 1914, again attacked Tampico; successful in May; Zaragoza-Huertista evacuated city.....	16	2466
Loss to rebels, killed and wounded, total both battles, 1,000; wired President Wilson to recognize Carranza; gives account of murder of municipal president and officers of Llera and murder of several leading citizens of southern Tampico; stood in with rebels, only lost $17,000; Carranza officials allowed to pad pay rolls; natives hungry and have few clothes.....	16	2468
All Carrancistas bandits; "Mr. O.," all Carrancistas bandits; no punishment; negroes to fight Gringos with Carrancistas.....	16	2468

	Part.	Page.
Lester, S. D.—Continued.
English boat picked up 125 Americans mouth of Panuco; came out on steamship Cyclops; returned, gives account of losses and mistreatment; shot at; no protection from officers; Carranza troops robbed oil companies; recognized.....	16	2469
Relates various robberies and outrages.....	16	2470
"Mr. P," an American, relates robbery of "dead" as well as himself; Carrancistas rob bandits who have robbed Mexicans, who are allowed to buy back from them.....	16	2470
"Mr. Q," an American, robbed and wounded.....	16	2470
Blame placed on him because he was not armed; Americans receive no protection.....	16	2471
Statement of Mr. Don D. Morehead; conditions good under Diaz and Huerta troops; tried to protect us; all Americans to be killed; hid in mountains for 6 weeks; object of Carrancistas to run all Americans out of Mexico; Gen. Larraga responsible largely for atrocities.....	16	2471
Account of Weider murder; robberies and outrages, sugar plantation, 1917; Pelaez treats foreigners well; Carranza forces bad.....	16	2472
"Mr. R," an American; conditions good under Diaz, 1914; American women hid in mountains to escape Carrancistas.....	16	2472
Property confiscated; robberies by Fabian Aguilar, Carrancista; taken prisoner, stood up to be shot; took mules, whipped his men with ropes; Carranza officer tried to beat him with rope and sword.....	16	2473
"Mr. S," an American; Valles colony described, established 1748; Manuel Larraga, Maderista, killed; Severo Oyarvide to get protection; rose in arms against Huerta; robberies, burning of houses, and atrocities by Carrancistas detailed; judge of court Estevan Ruiz shot....	16	2474
Two young boys murdered; two leading officers shot, one for not having good eyesight, the other too old to be a soldier; orders of Gen. Agustin Milan, now governor of State of Mexico; prisoners released; Venustiano Gonzalez released, made captain; Lieut. DeFoe murdered by Lucio Blanco.....	16	2475
Records burned; citizens held up for $16,000; widow threatened with being turned over to soldiers if she did not pay $1,000, by Gen. Galindo, a Carrancista; churches, schools, private residences, etc., converted into stables; fields of poor men destroyed; rifles supplied them at Matamoros from United States.....	16	2476
Murders by Larraga; robberies and looting of oil companies detailed..	16	2478
Detailed list of robberies and atrocities on oil companies in Tampico district; murders, held for ransom, etc., by bandits and Carrancistas.....	16	2480
Lester, S. D., supplemental report.....	16	2485
Details attitude of Americans at Tampico as to their willingness to appear as witnesses, except managers of oil companies, and his labors along this line.....	16	2485
Judge Kearful and Judge Buckley confer with oil companies in New York about witnesses.....	16	2486
Efforts in Tampico with managers of oil companies; letter from chairman from Los Angeles, Calif., March 17, 1920, authorizing subpoena for witnesses in Mexico.....	16	2487
List of Americans summoned and their replies.....	16	2488
Reference made to adverse attitude toward committee by oil company officials; telegrams quoted.....	16	2492
Several managers of oil companies charged work of committee political and lack of good faith to alleviate conditions in Mexico; confirmed by conversation with high official of oil company who stated "certain members actuated by personal and political motives instead of desire to better conditions in Mexico".....	16	2493
Lewis, W. J.....	14	2162
Labor agent, San Antonio, Tex., handled several hundred Mexican laborers from Mexico, in February, 1920; conditions bad, caused them to come to United States, low wages, no work, etc.; if crops were made would be taken from them; very little clothing, some nearly naked when they arrive here; did not advertise or offer any inducements for them to come here; handled them only after they arrive San Antonio.....	14	2162

	Part.	Page.
Lill, Thomas Russell.....	3	611
Certified public accountant, went to Mexico in May, 1917, with Henry Bruere to reorganize Mexican financial organization commission; Bruere returned, leaving Lill in charge; commission organized with Luis Cabrera as president; Lill remained in Mexico a year and a half, in which time he had Carranza carry out certain reforms; undertakes to justify Carranza administration in all financial matters; was in employ of Carranza all time in Mexico; ignorance of Mexican financial matters exposed by cross-examination by Senator Fall....	3	612
Lind, John.....	16	2317
Went to Mexico 1913; left there 1914.....	16	2317
Had no previous knowledge of Mexico; sent to Mexico on special mission by President.....	16	2318
Object of visit to Mexico.....	16	2319
Proposition of President Wilson to Huerta, August 25, 1913.....	16	2320
Election in Veracruz.....	16	2321
Conferred with Von Heintze.....	16	2324
Visited Emery hacienda, Veracruz.....	16	2325
Extract from Bryan, Commoner, January 30, 1903.....	16	2327
Compare Negro and Mexican educational.....	16	2331
Catholic Church.....	16	2332
Quotations Lind book.....	16	2335
Opinion entry American citizen Mexico.....	16	2337
Discussions; concessions.....	16	2339
His treatment in Mexico.....	16	2341
Quotes from Lind book hostility of Mexicans.....	16	2342
Captured recruits for Huerta army.....	16	2343
Believes Carranza régime to be success April 27, 1920; no faith in Villa.....	16	2345
Quotations Calero book on conditions in Mexico.....	16	2347
Defends Carrancistas commandeering residences, etc.....	16	2349
Book on Mexico not circulated; how it came to be printed.....	16	2350
Extract Shanklin secret code.....	16	2352
Charge Murray against H. Lane Wilson conspiring with Huerta.....	16	2356
Discusses export of arms and ammunition illegally to Constitutionalists with knowledge and assistance of United States officials; quotes extracts from Buckley.....	16	2358
Denies statement to Buckley with reference to Catholic Church.....	16	2360
Denies report to Wilson American invasion would be welcomed by Mexicans at Veracruz.....	16	2363
Reason for meeting Carranza on border.....	16	2365
Son employed in "Reguladora," Yucatan, 1916 or 1917.....	16	2366
Received expenses.....	16	2366
Compared robberies, etc., United States to Mexico favorably.....	16	2367
Loucks, W. B.....	9	1375
President of Tabasco Plantation Co., located in States of Tabasco and Veracruz; plantations San Miguel Juarez, State of Tabasco, and plantation La Oaxaquena, located in Veracruz, approximately 35,000 acres, devoted to raising and milling sugar; land purchased from original owners; had mills capable of handling 3,000 tons cane daily; modern machinery, 35 kilometers railway, and 4,000 acres under cultivation.....	9	1375
At time commenced operations Mexican scale of labor in their vicinity was from 17 to 37 centavos daily; increased their scale to $1.60 per day; established free hospital, schools, and built houses for laborers who lived in them rent free; did not operate under any special concession and did not ask any.....	9	1378
1917 was last year able to harvest any sugar, when got out 4,076 bags; this compared to 50,000 bags in 1912, 38,000 bags 1913, 38,000 bags 1914, 26,000 bags 1915, 17,000 bags 1916; this reduction was caused by continual harassing by Madero and Carranza governments; labor agents were sent to plantations by these governments, who took laborers away and forced them into army.....	9	1379
Had 38,000 bags of sugar stored in warehouse in 1914, when all employees were ordered out of Mexico by American Government; chief engineer managed to get back to plantation under British flag and save most of sugar.....	9	1380

Loucks, W. B.—Continued.

Part. Page.

In year 1915 forced to pay tribute to bandits under Alor in amount several thousand dollars; during most of time was also forced to feed and house Carranza troops on plantation; was forced to turn company boats over to Col. Silva, of Carranza army, to use in clearing river of bandits as protection to plantations; later learned that Carrancistas and rebels were in accord; Col. Silva was using their boats in transporting loot being turned over to him by bandits who were working on 50-50 basis.	9	1382
Luis Cabrera tried to force company to pay $2,500 export duty on consignment of sugar that had been shipped at time when no export was on sugar; amount not paid, matter dropped.	9	1388
Carranza authorities tried to force payment of $300,000 for alleged use of 260 Yaqui prisoners of war in time of Diaz; prisoners had not been used and payment was refused; matter finally dropped.	9	1388
In 1915 an embargo was placed on exportations of all foodstuffs, hides, etc.; knows personally of large shipments of beans, etc., allowed to go out by Candido Aguilar, commander of Veracruz; Aguilar and others collected large quantities of hides and when large shipment was ready the embargo would be suddenly raised for 10 days.	9	1391
On August 13, 1915, E. F. Wells, auditor of the company, was murdered while coming from Veracruz to plantation with $10,000 pay roll; no one ever arrested and no attempt made by Carranza authorities to locate murderers.	9	1383
While American Government was asking Americans in United States to send food to starving Mexico, Candido Aguilar and other officials were sending thousands of head of cattle and other foodstuffs out to markets in Cuba and elsewhere; American colony, city of Mexico, made up fund and brought into city a carload of corn for starving Mexicans and it was promptly seized by Obregon, who was in charge.	9	1391
Describes sisal monopoly and alleged connection of John Lind's son; company forced to cease operations in May, 1917; in September, 1918, Carranza government undertook to confiscate property.	9	1386
Only advice received from John Lind while he was in Mexico was to support Carranza.	9	1394
Believes that present administration policy is cause of trouble in Mexico; testified was willing to forfeit all holdings in Mexico if could be for betterment of common people of Mexico and assist in settling country.	9	1398
Manley, Dr. Paul G.	15	2194
Physician; resides Mount Carmel, Ill.	15	2194
Went Mexico 1906, purchased 6,000 acres land, State of Oaxaca; cleared 800 acres; shipped in thoroughbred cattle and horses, hogs, chickens, household furniture, and agricultural implements.	15	2195
No trouble under Diaz; went Mexico because understood that American investments were desired by Diaz Government.	15	2196
Manager and overseer was ordered out in 1914.	15	2199
Everything lost; houses burned, cattle stolen, fences destroyed; all since 1914.	15	2196
Claim filed with State Department, $20,000.	15	2200
Matlack, Capt. Leonard	10	1647
Captain Eighth Cavalry, Big Bend section, Texas; re crossing into United States of 17 Mexican women who had been raped; re raid on Tigner ranch, his troop ambushed by Mexicans, five horses killed.	10	1648
December, 1917, patrol fired on by Mexicans; his troop crossed and had fight; same month Gen. Jose Murguia, Carranza commander, crossed and stole horses.	10	1649
Tried to obtain assistance from Carranza garrison in running down Mexican raiders of Nevells ranch; assistance refused by Gen. Jose Murguia.	10	1650
Found where Carranza military official had tapped American military telegraph line on American side of border.	10	1651
Affidavits to this.	10	1652
Found where notorious bandits, when captured, had exhibited commission in Carranza army.	10	1654
Re rescue of United States Army aviators held by Mexican bandits.	10	1658
No assistance or cooperation from Carranza authorities during three years in Big Bend; Carranza authorities standing in with bandits	10	1660

	Part.	Page.
Mayfield, Tom.....	8	1287
Continuous raiding, 1915, on Texas side.....	8	1287
Pursued raiders; raiders returned to Mexico; captured Mexicans who were in Progreso raid; statement of Guadalupe Cuellar.....	8	1288
Two Carranza garrisons on Mexican side divided the looted goods taken from Government garrison on this side; soldier, American, captured, ears cut off, mutilated, head stuck on pole, body thrown into river; Johnson.....	8	1288
Further describes mutilation of Johnson, American soldier; describes bombs manufactured by Japs on Mexican side for Carrancistas; identifies German guns and flag captured from raiders.....	8	1290
Further describes guns, etc.....	8	1291
Further describes guns, belts, pistol, German cross, etc., taken from dead bandits.....	8	1292
Describes commission taken from captured Mexican at Mercedes; Japs, bombs, and flags, etc., described.....	8	1293
Efforts to have raiders captured and prosecuted without avail; raids planned by De la Rosa and Nafarrate.....	8	1294
Present when Forres passport was denied by De la Mata, Mexican consul; captured Basilio Ramos, signer of plan of San Diego; took original from his pocket; turned it over to United States officials; Ramos had pass through Carranza lines.....	8	1295
Relates connection between German officers in Mexico training Mexicans as soldiers; German people on border to assist them destroy spies in McAllen and San Juan.....	8	1321
McBee, F. M.....	8	1012
Ranchman, Mexico; resides Del Rio, Tex.; robbed, cattle taken, Carrancistas.....	8	1013
Relates assassination Americans, Sharp and Sellars, most brutal manner, by Gen. Neda and Lieut. Juan Quiroz, of Carranza army; Carranza soldiers stole cattle.....	8	1016
Telegrams Senator Fall and Luis Cabrera.....	8	1019
McCain, A. H.....	8	1098
In Y. M. C. A. canteen service; murder of Dr. Eugene Shannon McCain, State health officer (Texas), by Carrancistas, de la Rosa gang, near Brownsville, Tex.; October 18, 1915, furtherance of plan of San Diego.....	8	1098
McCaleb, Walter Flavius.....	5	727
Banker and writer; made study of Mexican finance since 1876; gives very complete history of banking in Mexico from 1876 to present time; details how each revolutionary faction handled financial matters during their particular terms of office.....	5	727
McCollough, S. H.....	10	1584
Section foreman, Columbus, N. Mex.; testified regarding signal fires night before raid and wire fence being cut east of town.....	10	1584
Testified relative to what took place at military hospital during raid on Columbus.....	10	1587
McCormick, D. R.....	8	1100
In Mexico off and on 1882; business, ranchman; conditions good prior to 1910; in Chihuahua and Coahuila most of the time; worked for several large cattle companies; son held for ransom by Inez Salazar; Palomas Land & Cattle Co. paid five thousand for release; Maximo Castillo captured son second time; held for ransom; First National Bank, El Paso, paid five thousand gold for release; captured third time by Castillo; paid 5,000 pesos for release; paid by Mr. Stevenson, vice president of company, who went to El Paso for the money; Stevenson held three times; Bunk (Negro), held for $5,000 ransom; relates assassination of Bishop, Tom Kingsbury, and Arthur McKinney; supposed by Villa bunch.....	8	1100
McCranie, J. D. and Kennedy, J. D.....	17	2630
J. D. Kennedy, affidavit of; account of attack on trains by Maderistas; American woman beat on feet to give up jewelry; Conductor Kane shot in mouth; wounded brakeman.....	17	2630
McDonald, James C.....	1	189
Chairman League of Free Nations; gives synopsis of formation of league and objects in chronological order.....	1	189

	Part.	Page.
McDonald, James C.—Continued.
Requests committee to call list of witnesses given in detail in record..	1	190
Offers to file list of receipts and disbursements.....	1	190
Asks that association for protection rights in Mexico do the same.....	1	191
Their committee to leave for Mexico to study conditions in October..	1	191
Gives partial list of members.....	1	191
George W. Weeks furnished them data on Mexico; their committee meets often.....	1	192
Consult New York and other parties to substantiate stories from Mexico.	1	192
Translation of interview of Joaquin Santaella, chief of petroleum section, Mexican department of commerce and labor.....	1	192
Excelsior, August 14, 1919, published as truth, considered it official from Mexican Government in May.....	1	193
De Bekker, former reporter for Tribune.....	1	193
Furnished by Weeks.....	1	193
Just glances at articles before sending out for publication.....	1	193
Attention called to several articles, and he explains what methods pursued prior to having them published.....	1	192
Certain articles sent out without approval of his committee, on his personal authority.....	1	193
Chairman quotes from several articles in League of Free Nations implicates De Bekker, sent out by him, without proof as to truth.....	1	194
Chairman then goes into operations of league, several pages, fully.....	1	196
League favors world organization to remove causes for war, took referendum vote, submits four questions, then follows resolutions.....	1	200
Letter to President Wilson, signed by De Bekker, September 3, 1919, reference intervention in Mexico.....	1	202
Chairman reads quotation accusing oil interests and mine owners fomenting intervention ideas by painting Mexico black.....	1	202
Denies having any information and acknowledges he knew nothing about it.....	1	203
Mentions Pelaez matter of payments.....	1	202
Discussion about Pelaez payments; witness acknowledged wrote State Department but no answer.....	1	203
Then wrote President and published it.....	1	204
Don't know anything for certain; always took De Bekker's opinion on everything.....	1	205
McGavock, William J.....	7	866
Contractor in Mexico since 1881.....	7	866
Americans have not exploited that country.....	7	866
Wages when he arrived there one and a half to three reals a day (real 12½ cents), now $2.50 to $3 a day.....	7	866
Laboring class very favorable to Americans.....	7	867
Wonderfully improved.....	7	867
Prefer to work for Americans.....	7	867
Left Mexico, 1919.....	7	867
Two extracts from League of Free Nations read, showing Mexico prosperous now.....	7	868
Denied by witness (extracts from Dr. Winston).....	7	868
Gives experience in Chiapas, Jalisco, to Tuxtla Gutierrez; conditions bad; homes deserted and furniture missing; fields not cultivated....	7	868
Peons living in fine houses; Carrancistas drove people out, robbed and murdered, destroyed churches.....	7	868
Cal y Mayor, a bandit chief, took Mr. Carl Sturgis, his wife, and mother-in-law prisoners; tortured them; Mrs. Sturgis came to States; her husband still there.....	7	869
Mother died of starvation and deprivation.....	7	869
Peons flocked to Mexico City in large numbers.....	7	869
No protection on haciendas.....	7	869
Americans generally in Mexico had rather see a settlement other than intervention if possible.....	7	870
Witness thinks intervention the only way.....	7	870
Upper class of Mexicans want intervention.....	7	870
All the bad feeling toward Americans caused by action of our Government in our "watchful waiting policy".....	7	870
Mexico in normal conditions now, abnormal under Diaz.....	7	871

	Part.	Page.
Medler, Judge E. L.	10	1624
January, 1912, to January, 1919, judge of the third judicial district of New Mexico; prior to that date assistant United States district attorney in New Mexico; designated by Supreme Court of New Mexico to hold court in Deming, Luna County, N. Mex.; Luna County in district of United States Judge Colin Neblitt; Columbus raid came before him; raiders tried before him; seven and a little boy, Jesus Paiz; six were tried under one indictment and one and the boy under another; first-named six were tried and sentenced to be hung, which was done later; executions held up by President for investigation into facts in case; all took stand in own behalf, plead they were under military orders, therefore not guilty; evidence by them nature of confessions..	10	1624
Attorney General of the United States, Secretary of War, Secretary of State, and Mr. Stone, Department of Justice, and Gen. Funston wired protesting against their trial for the reason it would cause complications with the Mexican Government; gives reasons to Stone why request would not be granted; Pershing in Mexico chasing Villa a co-defendant of these prisoners, etc., and that he would have no "watchful waiting" around his court, etc.; Summers Burkhardt, United States attorney at Albuquerque, phoned witness he had received instructions from the Attorney General to go to Deming and protest, for the reason they could not get a fair trial there; ordered to come into court and repeat his message; he apologized and trial proceeded.....	10	1627
Metzlinthin, Paul, American	8	1105
In Mexico, 1913, southern part Sonora; ranchman; irrigated farm; raided 6th of May, 1913, by Yaqui Indians; Lieut. Espinosa, of the Carranza government; held machetes to the throats of the three Americans; took hogs, stock; destroyed irrigation canals; took all clothing off family but underclothes; 30 days later burned house and barn; young sister not normal since assault; lapse of memory; 200 American families driven out; loss, $20,000, no reimbursement; sister assaulted 14 years of age.....	8	1105
Miller, W. W.	8	1069
Went to Mexico 1906; invited there; promised protection; lost all his investments; no protection under Taft or Wilson; investment, $70,000; all colonists with him lost all they had; damage claim denied, colonies; San Antonio plantation, Faulkner plantation; Boco de Copa.....	8	1069
Mitchell, William Bain	5	685
Banker in Mexico many years, different places, 1898 to 1917; exchange broke when Obregon entered Mexico City with worthless paper money in August, 1914.....	5	686
Huerta's loan; arbitrary.....	5	686
Witness and his attorney arrested when they went before De la Lama, secretary of finance.....	5	687
Later released when they agreed to comply with their part of the loan..	5	687
Huerta did not personally benefit by it.....	5	687
Carranza remitted large sums of money to the United States and other countries, sometimes by special messengers.....	5	687
Carranza remittances began at once and continued to date.....	5	687
Witness then goes fully into different issues of money in detail.....	5	688
Worthless issues forced on laborers and small merchants who suffered thereby greatly.....	5	690
Any refusal was punished by fine and jail, which had to be paid in gold and silver; his bank forced to take this paper heavily.....	5	690
Sud Americanische, a German bank, had unusual protection and privileges, explains.....	5	690
Explains looting of the banks of Mexico by government.....	5	691
Explains suit filed in New York, for funds of Bank of London and Mexico.....	5	692
Luis Cabrera was minister of finance when banks were looted.....	5	692
Had conversation with Cabrera, protesting that action was against their laws; his reply was "Necessity knows no law, and we need the money".....	5	693
Troops not paid yet; Government took large sums from all the banks daily.....	5	693

	Part.	Page.
Mitchell, William Bain—Continued.
Mrs. Carranza crossed border October, 1916, with nine cases of gold and silver.....	5	693
Franklin K. Lane received notification of this while he was with delegation at Atlantic City by telegram from custom officer at Laredo; later witness was at Laredo and checked it up; true.....	5	693
New York bankers on lending money to Mexican Government dubbed them as "bunch of bandits".....	5	694
Monohan, Mike.....	8	1265
Wounded in Los Tultitos fight.....	8	1265
Raiders came from Mexico.....	8	1265
Relates details as to fight, in which he and Sonny Huff were wounded.....	8	1266
Conditions bad on Texas side of border; Mexicans wore khaki clothes.....	8	1266
Nafarrate, Carranza general in charge Matamoros at that time, relates Galveston ranch fight, killed soldier Sergt. McGrath.....	8	1267
Moore, Mrs. Susan.....	7	956
Had been living Columbus, N. Mex., several years prior to March, 1916; husband and herself owned and operated general merchandise store, carrying stock approximately $12,000.....	7	962
Had built fine bungalow home on outskirts of town of Columbus.....	7	962
March 7 and 8 noticed many strange Mexicans in town of Columbus; one Mexican in particular came into store and bought suit overalls.....	7	957
Night of March 9 town was raided by approximately 700 Mexicans; store was ransacked, windows broken, and goods carried away; bandits entered their home; while two Mexicans held her others killed her husband before her eyes, laughing and joking while so doing; bandits tore rings from her fingers; robbed house of everything of value.....	7	959
In confusion managed to escape and ran toward town, which was on fire.....	7	959
Bandits shot her in the leg.....	7	959
Laid out in bushes until found by American soldiers next morning.....	7	959
Was in hospital several months from wound and is permanently crippled from wound and nervous wreck from treatment; financial loss, $10,000 in goods and damage to store and home; Mexican who tore rings from her finger recognized as one who had bought overalls day previous.....	7	962
Morrison, N. S., American.....	8	1116
Reporter San Antonio paper: reference to publications that members of committee were privately interested in Mexico; referred committee to Miss Smith, another reporter.....	8	1116
Murphy, W. S.....	10	1577
Telegraph operator, Columbus, N. Mex.; testified relative to Col. Slocum, commander at Columbus, receiving telegram from military headquarters at Douglas, Ariz., day or two before raid warning him that Villa was in vicinity, etc.....	10	1578
Relative to arrival in Columbus two days before the raid of George Sees, Associated Press correspondent, with telegraph operator.....	10	1579
Relative to Associated Press operator being in telegraph office trying to get wire connection hardly before Villistas were out of town.....	10	1580
Relative to signal fires and wire fence being cut night before raid.....	10	1581
Generally suspected by civilians that town might be raided for several days before actual raid.....	10	1582
Neill, Sam H.....	10	1540
Relates "Brite Ranch" raid; wounded.....	10	1541
Details fight, Mexican killed had on uniform coat, Carranza; raiders went back to Mexico, soldiers and officers in pursuit.....	10	1544
Robbery of Baldwin's store, Candelaria, Big Bend.....	10	1548
Carrancistas stationed across from place of robbery could see robbers from this side; no assistance from them.....	10	1548
Relates theft of cattle by Chico Cano bunch from Eulalio Nunez.....	10	1549
Testifies as to conditions before and after revolution; Mexican officer seen riding stolen horse from this side.....	10	1550
Relates fight with Mexicans Christmas night, 1919.....	10	1551
Nevill, E. W.....	10	1510
Details robbery of his ranch and murder of his son March 25, 1918, Texas soil.....	10	1511

	Part.	Page.
Nevill, E. W.—Continued.
Details condition of house and murder of Mexican woman in his house during fight.....	10	1513
Bandits with Carrancistas guilty.....	10	1513
Col. Langhorne followed them into Mexico, two troops, killed several.	10	1514
November 12, 1917, Carranza officer sent 50 men over to Texas side to capture us, but did not do it; drove off seven head of cattle as they returned.....	10	1514
Carrancistas stole and killed all cattle and took off horses; ranch abandoned.....	10	1515
Ochs, Capt. William V., United States Army.....	10	1643
Big Bend district; no assistance from Carrancistas; raids and thefts too numerous to mention.....	10	1643
Took part in following Tigner raiders into Mexico with Capt. Matlack; Ricardo Flores and three soldiers killed, identified by Mexican officers and consul as Carrancistas, December 17, 1918, in Texas....	10	1644
No discipline in Carrancista Army at Ojinaga.....	10	1644
Mexican consul admitted they were not able to cope with depredations; Col. Cevallos in charge under indictment for embezzlement.....	10	1645
Many deserters from Ojinaga in March came to this side; they made brick for United States officers; Carranza officers tried to get them back, but they refused; deported, went with them, watched over them, saw they were not punished; consul, Mexican, only promised cooperation; did not do anything.....	10	1645
Impossible for either Mexicans or Americans to remain in Big Bend if soldiers should be withdrawn.....	10	1647
Oliver, H. T.....	4	679
President Oliver, American Trading Co., New York, has contract with Maj. R. B. Sutton, president American Gun Co., for 5,000 Mauser rifles for Carranza Government, under license, war trade, September 16, for 15,000 guns and 15,000,000 rounds of ammunition, 1919.....	4	679
Letter to Oliver American Trading Co, date October 14, 1919, showing Fletcher refused to allow arms and ammunition enter Mexico; Secretary Lansing states only temporary delay.....	4	680
Ortiz, Melquiades.....	14	2143
Labor Agency, San Antonio, Tex., shipped during February, Mexican laborers into interior of United States; many gave as their reason for coming here no work, small wages, etc., in Mexico; came of own accord.....	14	2143
Osborn, M. L.....	14	2153
Labor Agency in San Antonio, Tex., handled about 400 in February for interior points, Mexican laborers from Mexico, furnished list; no solicitation, no advertising to get them.....	14	2153
Shipped six or seven thousand during war times; told him that corn was very high, also beans; no meat, starving, very little work, low wages; better prices here; one stole two burros and sold them to get here.....	14	2154
Children and women naked, some with paper around them, where they came from.....	14	2155
If they plant corn, Carrancistas or other bands take it; glad to escape with their lives; class ignorant but able-bodied men; approximately 75,000 came in the United States in February and March.....	14	2155
Waded the river, robbed on Mexican side by supposed Carranza officials.	14	2156
Laborers, principally from Michoacan, Jalisco, and Guanajuato, few from the border States.....	14	2156
O'Shaughnessy, Nelson.....	18	2705
Diplomat.....	18	2705
Madero analyzed: Procrastinator, did nothing; wanted division of land; not consummated; land situation Mexico exaggerated.....	18	2706
Gustavo Madero ran Government—Madero Government—similar to that of Diaz towards last; only way to rule Mexico; knew Huerta secured results through Huerta; Bryan instructed to make request of Huerta; Huerta strong character.....	18	2707
Liked Americans, as were all public men; always protected Americans, even protected them after Veracruz incident; pulled statue George Washington down; no Americans injured or killed; Huerta saved them by orders; Lind's mission to Mexico to force Huerta out; Lind favored Carranza.....	18	2708

O'Shaugnessy, Nelson—Continued.

Part. Page.

Present conference with Huerta and Gamboa and Lind when presenting document from Wilson; relates Lind threat to Gamboa and Huerta; threatened with intervention; Lind knew nothing of conditions; Lind strong against English oil interests and oil companies and religious situation; against Catholic Church; relates conversation Lind about Carranza killing people; objected to United States alliance with him, defended by Lind; Americans high class in Mexico; disagrees with United States policy towards Huerta; gives reasons.....	18	2711
Discusses United States policy with Mexico; Carranza anti-American; State Department fully posted; relates Huerta statement reference to law and order, establishment of same; rebels, Carrancistas turned on United States.....	18	2712
Henry L. Wilson did not connive at overthrow of Madero; Americans in Mexico approved his work; compared attitude of Mexican Government and United States as to protection of Americans in Mexico; would not stop at letting them be good.....	18	2713
Advises intervention only as a last resort; detail of how; best men in Mexico exiled; discusses Catholic Church.....	18	2714
Discusses religious matters; Catholics always stood for law and order..	18	2715
Discusses elections; substantiates Buckley as to conversation or statement re Catholic Church made by Lind.....	18	2716
Paiz, Jesus.....	10	1616
Carrancistas killed his three brothers, he and his father then joined Villa; relates Columbus raid by Villa outfit; his leg shot off; later testified several raiders hung.....	10	1618
Parmelee, Mrs. F. M.....	8	1175
Murder of her husband, F. M. Parmelee, near Brownsville on Texas side of River, by Carrancistas under de la Rosa, furtherance of plan of San Diego, 1917.....	8	1175
Peterson, Mrs. Ethel.....	10	1665
Relates to killing of her husband, her brother, Mr. Akard, and Mr. Jensen, at Corner Ranch, on Mexican side; no one ever punished for murders.....	10	1665
Poorbaugh, P. F.....	8	1050
Invited to invest in Mexico, assured of protection; bought 1,000 acres out of tract; colonized 162,000 acres, Santa Lucrecia, Isthmus.....	8	1050
Forced to leave for United States by representatives of this Government, only hand bags allowed to be taken.....	8	1052
Mentions killing of E. E. Morgan, April 8, 1920; warned by German Consul to claim to be an Englishman or German.....	8	1053
Described assault on Americans at ranch.....	8	1054
Conversation with John Lind about Huerta.....	8	1057
Confiscation of property.....	8	1059
Rathbone, C. H.....	2	545
Controls about 30,000 acres; oil leases and fee simple, in Tampico oil fields; secured same from owners; Mexican citizen secured permits to drill on his land, legal proceedings followed; not decided; brought in 30,000-barrel well, drilling another; kept United States department fully advised.....	2	545
Corresponded with United States and British Government about it; Promised to file correspondence, not with him.....	2	547
Files copies of documents to British Embassy and State Department...	2	548
Depredated upon by Candido Aguilar, Carranza's son-in-law, and Pedro Rodriguez, Carranza official; sugar plantation robbed and damaged; account filed with consul; will get it for committee (Rathbone Appendix C, p. 580); related damage to ranch, 25,000 acres, manager ran away stock, and henequen complete loss.....	2	550
Rathbone Exhibit C—letter New York, August 16, 1919, to Rathbone, signed Burton W. Wilson, translation of amparo and papers; letter to Scottish Mexican Oil Co., 120 Broadway, New York, signed R. Pardo; legal opinion as to proceedings, reference circular November 15, 1915; commerce and labor as to permits to drill.....	2	580
Opinion rendered by Ignacio Rodriguez, against Scottish Mexican Oil Co., on amparo represented by Lic. Rafael Pardo,.....	2	581

	Part.	Page.
Rathbone, C. H.—Continued.
Case of the Scottish Mexican Oil Co. with Commerce and Industry Department of Mexico; signed Scottish Mexican Oil Co., by C. H. Rathbone, attorney in fact, January 22, 1919.....	2	582
Case of the Scottish Mexican Oil Co. with Commerce and Industry Department in Mexico; translation No. 1 and translation No. 2, December 4 and December 28, 1918, signed Rafael Pardo.....	2	585
Renard, P. C.	8	1080
Architect and engineer, in Mexico 1907 to 1913; relates Chinese massacre, Torreon, May, 1913.....	8	1080
Richards, Joseph Allen.	7	967
Found bodies of Cecil Connolly and Frederick B. Waterhouse, September 21, in Bay of Los Angeles, Lower California; circumstances under which bodies were found; Italian William Rose present finding bodies, also Mexican captain, 11 Mexicans, and a prostitute; Mexican boat Navari, of Santa Rosalia, Alejandro Abaro, captain; exhibits snap shots marked "Exhibit Nos. 1, 2, 3".....	7	969
Arrival Santa Rosalia on Navari, went to Providencia, made sworn affidavit as to finding of bodies; captain Navari threatened witness; later arrested by Abaro; arrived Nogales, conferred with Intelligence officers, later returned to get bodies on destroyer Aaron Ward.....	7	972
Arrived Port of Angeles October 19, 5 p. m.; recovered bodies, Mexican authorities examined first; went 20 miles up coast to get aeroplane.....	7	972
Crew of Navari stole property at near Angeles belonging to Mr. Thompson of Nogales; exhibits picture of recovered aeroplane, Exhibit 5; Exhibit 6 of engine.....	7	973
Recovered papers, but not personal effects.....	7	974
Mexicans took insignias from witness taken from bodies of dead men; telegram requesting witness to join expedition after bodies; Washington, D. C., October 11, 1919, Mr. Joe Allen Richards, signed Harris; special orders, No. 135, Nogales, Ariz., October 12, 1919, authority for transportation, signed by Fred L. Walker, lieutenant colonel, Twenty-fifth Infantry, United States Army adjutant.....	7	974
Germans strong in Santa Rosalia, treated well, quotes letters from Connelly and Waterhouse to their mothers.....	7	975
Descriptions of where they fell, signed Fred Waterhouse; bodies covered by human agency; Mexican made sworn statement that the Mexican boat Esperanza had picked up these men, landed them at Port of Angeles for water, Americans had money; Esperanza searched and found them; altitude, clock, compass, and chairs of aeroplane aboard this boat; claimed to have been given him by Mexican to keep; no representations made to Cantu.....	7	979
Riggs, Lee.	10	1588
Deputy collector of customs, Columbus, N. Mex., interpreted for Col. Slocum, Juan Favela report on approach of Villa on Columbus....	10	1589
Relates beginning of Columbus raid.....	10	1592
Statement of Bunk, a Negro, given to witness; saw bodies of murdered and burned Americans.....	10	1594
American reinforcements came from Deming, N. Mex.; called by Mrs. Parks, telephone operator; saw memorandum book found after raid..	10	1595
Mexican Francisco Prado written in book; gives synopsis of contents of book.....	10	1596
Saw six prisoners after raid, relates trial, etc.; five hung; made confession to witness.....	10	1597
All prisoners wounded in raid; related raiding of Moody ranch; disappearance of Tom Kingsbury; relates killing of Andy Peterson, Jensen, and Hugh Akard on Corner ranch.....	10	1598
Gives names of Americans murdered at Columbus raid; N. T. Ritchie, H. H. Walker, Charles De Witt Miller, Dr. H. M. Hart, James T. Dean, J. J. Moore, Mrs. M. James, C. C. Miller, and Harry Davis; tells who each was; wounded; Mr. James, Mrs. J. J. Moore, A. D. Frost, and M. Puchi.....	10	1623
Ritchie, Mrs. Laura.	10	1599
Relates murder of her husband in Columbus raid March 9, 1916; also description of attack, robbery of houses, and burning of same.....	10	1599
Saved, with three daughters, by Juan Favela, half-breed Mexican; Yaqui Indian; four escaped from hotel.....	10	1602

	Part.	Page.
Ritchie, Mrs. Laura—Continued.
Saw no officers, but saw soldiers, five dead ones; did not see Col. Slocum until 10 o'clock; one soldier burned up in fire of hotel; only found buttons, etc.; relates Favela saving them; tells about hotel ownership and insurance; company refused to pay.	10	1603
Romney, Junius.	17	2574
Ecclesiastical representative of Mormon colonies in Mexico.	17	2574
Four thousand and thirty Mormons went to Mexico; had shoe, harness, and saddle factory, canning factory, stores, grist mills, saw mills, etc.; went there to reside permanently; exodus began (back to United States) July 28, 1912; there since 1885; do not practice polygamy, only as in United States.	17	2575
Excellent school system; about 1,500 Mormons in El Paso now (1912).	17	2576
On charity; came out penniless; all interests in Mexico; witness advised them to come out.	17	2577
Ten Mormon colonies in Mexico; average from 250 to 1,100 in each colony.	17	2578
Head Mormon church orders strict neutrality.	17	2579
Atrocities began, second revolution, Orozco and Madero; some receipts given.	17	2580
Explains in detail as to treatment and outrages; relates conversation with Orozco on train; wanted the United States to furnish arms and ammunition to him; accused United States of killing them off in assisting Madero and to force the United States to get out and fight.	17	2581
Salazar demanded guns and ammunition.	17	2583
Looted homes, ran people away, Chuichupa.	17	2585
Same at Colonia Juarez; threatened Mormons.	17	2586
Demands for money made.	17	2587
Heard rumor that Standard Oil was backing Madero; knows of no Americans exempt from depredations.	17	2588
Explains why they came out without a fight.	17	2589
Requested by United States to remain neutral and not forget an order not to bring on complications.	17	2590
Salazar, Inez.	17	2591
Affidavit of Salazar showing he depredated on Americans by superior orders; details amounts and owners; signed Inez Salazar; jurat, notary public.	17	2592
San Luis Potosi, plan of.	17	2631
Sartwell, Edward R.	7	845
Furnished map, murder map of Mexico; explains map.	7	845
Americans killed along border and in Mexico indicated by four symbols.	7	845
First period, November 20, 1910, to April 24, 1914, represents period under control of Madero and Huerta; second period, April 24, 1914, to October 19, 1915, covers dissolution of Huerta Government to date Carranza was recognized by United States as de facto head; third period, October 19, 1915, to April 7, 1917, Carranza régime prior to United States entering war; fourth period, April 7, 1917, to September 30, 1919; Carranza régime while United States was in World War; first period, 41 months, 147 American civilians and 2 United States military force killed in Mexico; 18 civilians killed in United States by Mexicans; second period, 17 civilians and 21 members United States military killed in Mexico, and 13 civilians and 15 United States military killed in United States by Mexicans; third period, 83 civilians and 28 United States military killed in Mexico, and 19 civilians and 33 United States military killed in United States by Mexicans; fourth period, 58 American civilians, 8 United States military killed in Mexico, and 12 civilians and 16 United States military killed in the United States by Mexicans; first three periods, 383 were killed, Carranza régime, how map was made and by whom.	7	846
Formation of map, various authentic sources.	7	847
Appears itemized list of Americans killed, location, by whom killed, etc., showing an aggregate of 550; note authorities.	7	848
Murder of Eugene Lack; 3 cases shown where murderers were given six months, then released; 18 American women and 10 children in list; 8 women outraged in list.	7	864

	Part.	Page.
Sartwell, Edward R.—Continued.
Whitfield killed, planned by German agents, suppressed by United States departments.....	7	864
Great brutality, torture, and mutilation, American soldier burned, passport pinned to breast of Mr. Beard for target; foreigners murdered; Lansing to Senate: (Chinese, 471; Spanish, 209; Arabs, 111; British, 38; Italian, 16; French, 14; Japanese, 10; miscellaneous, 58; total, 927; no Germans; letter from Lansing October 31, 1919; Americans in Mexico when Diaz retired, 31,707; September, 1919, 8,862.....	7	865
Casualty lists do not include Americans killed on border and in Mexico between the dates of October 1, 1916, and February 14, 1917.....	7	866
Schuls, J. G.....	8	1065
From Mexico City; gives testimony on conditions in 1916; disarmed by Carrancistas and robbed; wife robbed on train; worse now than in past: Diaz O. K.; Madero no better than the rest.....	8	1065
Schultz, W. A.....	10	1494
Went to Mexico in 1907, organized the Comanche Land Co., 11,000 acres, in Tamaulipas; titles dated back to 1639; took in farm supplies under Diaz; no trouble until Madero revolution.....	10	1495
Treated well by Huerta soldiers, bad by Carrancistas; left after Veracruz incident; made him cry "Viva Carranza and Gomez" at point of gun; robbed him; names men who made his wife cook for them.....	10	1496
Relates killing of Sawyer; threatened Mrs. Sawyer: no one punished.....	10	1498
Conversation with Nafarrate, clean out all Americans.....	10	1498
Assisted American women out; spit on by Mexican, saw de la Rosa drilling soldiers on drill ground at Ciudad Victoria, Tamps., 1916, identified by Evariste Storms, an American also; drilling for attack on United States.....	10	1499
All colonies under Diaz régime prosperous, just the reverse now; gives names of partners.....	10	1500
Tells of Blalock colony; hid in mountains.....	10	1501
Gen. Cesar de Lara, Carranza commander there, robbed them; mentions Hacienda El Conejo, robbed, and destroyed.....	10	1502
Schriener, Mrs. Julia A.....	12	1906
Lives Tucson, husband killed by Mexicans who escaped to Mexico, no arrests made, killed at Homestake Production Co. mine, Arizona; owns half interest in mine but so near Mexican border no one will buy it; gold and silver; tells of murder of two Frasier boys by Mexicans, near Ruby, Ariz.; shot her husband in back, set fire to store, robbed them.....	12	1908
Seggerson, Christopher.....	10	1509
Son killed in Juarez by Villistas, driving in automobile when shot; first battle of Juarez; name Charles Christopher Seggerson.....	10	1509
Sheahan, James D.....	16	2395
Owner of 362,000 acres; paid $350,000 gold, near Jiminez, Chihuahua; developed water for irrigation for one-third of property, Agua Fria River.....	16	2395
In addition spent $300,000 in improvements; had imported stock....	16	2396
Refutes John Lind as to Americans not being benefit to natives.....	16	2397
Natives prepared to work for Americans.....	16	2398
Conditions under Diaz good; natives honest.....	16	2399
Trouble began 1913 after Madero; caused by Carrancistas; crops and stock taken.....	16	2400
Villa and Carranza forces the same.....	16	2401
Hacienda total wreck.....	16	2402
Disagrees with Lind as to revolutionists of North having high ideals; gives true conditions.....	16	2403
Six hundred head, 3-year old steers, stolen by Carrancistas and shipped to Fort Worth, Tex.; Russian Jew also robbed of 4,000 head of cattle.....	16	2404
Appealed personally to Bryan without any result and who intimated we were robbing the Mexicans.....	16	2406
On committee of twenty-one who waited on Bryan, who asked "why are you not honest in what you came for" and accused us of coming for intervention, which was untrue; gave no advice only to bring Americans and a Scotchman out of Mexico.....	16	2407
Confirms statement Bryan, 1903, and present attitude; "just the reverse"; Mexicans on starvation.....	16	2409
Schools on ranch discontinued after revolution.....	16	2410

	Part	Page
Simons, W. R.....	10	1662
Member of American Legion, made to take his button off in Mexico City; also another soldier same; made to move from Hotel Regis on account insults, and ignored at hotel.....	10	1662
Americans ordered to move from Hotel Regis to give room for foreign officers (Japs); Government and bandits cooperating; tells about murder of Bowles and robbery of paymasters at Tampico.....	10	1663
Bad treatment of Jenkins; Senator Fall criticised in Mexico; held up in getting berth out of Mexico.....	10	1663
Slattery, Michael J.....	13	1995
Miner, in 1901, to Mexico, came out April, 1914; Zacatecas, Jalisco, and Colima; his companies had invested about $7,000,000; quotes invitation of Diaz to Americans to go to Mexico and invest; Diaz wonderful President.....	13	1996
Describes mining in Mexico; all large mines in Mexico due to American development.....	13	1997
All railroads and large enterprises due to Americans; Mexicans would not do it.....	13	1998
No special privileges; profits reinvested; raised wages from 6 cents to $3 a day; shows operation commissary.....	13	1999
Good treatment of Mexicans by Americans.....	13	2001
Attitude of laborers good toward Americans under Diaz; not much faith in school system as generally written about.....	13	2001
Mexicans honest under Diaz toward Americans; different since.....	13	2001
Bandit means soldiers under all leaders; felt no insecurity up to revolution; change, 1910: from men closely connected with Madero was told that anti-American riots were inaugurated to show world outside of Mexico that Diaz was not capable of protection; Diaz defeated by propaganda.....	13	2002
Americans gave athletic show in Guadalajara, 1910; relates circumstance; medal; two months afterwards house stoned and disturbance; rioting two days and nights; Viva Madero que Mueran los Gringos; all factions robbed him.....	13	2003
Americans neutral; good class of Americans in Mexico, against Bryan strong.....	13	2004
Wrote letter in Commoner, 1903, quotes Bryan; quotes Democratic platform on Mexico; 400,000 dominates 16,000,000; best element driven out; August 27, 1913, Bryan ordered Americans out to keep United States out of trouble.....	13	2006
Mexicans wanted Huerta; Lind wanted to bribe Huerta; criticizes Wilson.....	13	2007
Describes loss of Americans in Mining; lost all he had.....	13	2008
Criticizes Mexican Government for attitude toward witness who testified before committee; could have remained in Mexico in peace by erecting a British flag.....	13	2009
Criticizes Bryan for attitude; Gov. Mier, under Huerta, told Americans to remain; he would protect even if they were not protected by the United States; United States consul begged us to get out to save our country trouble.....	13	2010
Blames the United States Government for Veracruz incident; elected Irish consul; received protection from Huerta; Americans lost all when they got out.....	13	2011
Talks of Tampico incident; governor advised to get out at Manzanillo; tells of flight with women and children.....	13	2013
Left $7,000 with storekeeper to take care of his laborers; best friends ridiculed them for leaving; in mob at station when leaving country; rescued from mob by British consul; dug trenches; prepared for siege; Germans celebrating with Mexicans over sinking of Louisiana and other ships.....	13	2014
Tells of Newspaper articles over German success; young Ahumada, son of the governor, educated in the United States, Harvard, showed telegram from his father, a senator in Mexico City, sinking of Louisiana. "We are putting it all over you"; chest out; Germans would not fraternize with Americans; saw Germans in cantina celebrating with Mexicans.....	13	2015

Slattery, Michael J.—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Mexicans would have nothing to do with United States consul; British consul had to get them out; Gov. Delgadillo, of Colima, issues orders for Americans to become Mexican citizens, get out, or be killed; quotes order.....	13	2016
Disarmed and mistreated en route; paid $350 to get out of State; United States repaid it later; relates mob violence en route; had 239 Americans with him; lived in three rooms.....	13	2017
Related trouble with jefe politico and governor at Manzanillo; insulted. Paid them $1,000 to allow him to place the Americans on a Chinese ship then in port; robbed again.....	13	2018
Sixteen Americans held as hostages, as they thought a battleship was approaching; mistake; again burned American flags; threw ashes in face.....	13	2019
Furnished full statement of sufferings to Bryan; see his reply; relates life on Chinese ship.....	13	2020
Water low; little children begging for water; signaled flagship Albany, Pacific Fleet, United States, asked for food, water, blankets; did not get them; would not take them on board; proceeded to San Diego, Calif.; radio from United States to Albany quoted.....	13	2021
Relates bad treatment and insults from United States officers in charge at San Diego; called tramps; no business in going to Mexico, etc.; allowed 25 cents a day, second class passage to homes; Americans on that trip worth $27,000,000; paid own transportation home; refused to accept any money, including witness fees, before this committee.....	13	2022
Related committee visit to Washington; insulted by Bryan; talked with Senators Borah and Mondell.....	13	2023
Relates how he got his statement into Bryan's hands; had to write for receipt; criticizes Richard Harding Davis, and press for saying, "This from a refugee".....	13	2024
Press reports and magazines.....	13	2025
Wife invalid account treatment; names several Americans same malady; some dead.....	13	2026
Jack Delany in insane asylum; Billie Hoeing died of broken heart.. Letter quoted from 150 women who were on trip from Mexico; tells of destruction of churches by Carranza; never collects from any one for speeches; Bryan, while Secretary of State, did.....	13	2027
Made address before Catholic societies in Baltimore; relates outrages on nuns; Bryan refused to let them return to Mexico.....	13	2028
Relates correspondence with Bryan to get back into Mexico; did go without passport; entered at Eagle Pass; went only as far as Aguascalientes; returned; his head miner killed; discusses ratio of exchange in Mexico under Carranza.....	13	2030
Mexicans want United States to go in.....	13	2034
Smith, Barnett.....	17	2596
Affidavit of, as to depredations and robbery.....	17	2596
Smith, Charles.....	17	2616
Miner at Trinidad; business conditions disturbed.....	17	2616
Gives account of rebel depredations; Gordon Harding robbed; American women would have been outraged but for Mexican women.....	17	2618
Poor Mexican people shot at; ran to mountains with families; took clothes; robbed them.....	17	2619
Reds or Colorados, Cheche Campos, a brother, and El Toro arrived Santa Rosalia; disarmed witness; robbed and destroyed small towns; robbed grist mill, stores, killed cattle, etc. at Nuri.....	17	2621
Government can not restore, conditions in Sahuaripa district bad; no law or order.....	17	2622
No schools since Diaz went out; life and property under Diaz as safe as in United States; told Americans were not respected because United States would not let them bring over arms and ammunition to fight Madero; Americans outside of Texas will not fight; Texas does not belong to United States opinion of ignorant Mexicans; do not bother English.....	17	2623
Smith, Miss Genevieve.....	8	1124
Reporter local, San Antonio paper; relates conversation with Guillermo Hall as to Mexico investigating Senator Fall and his being connected with Terrazas in Mexico.....	8	1124

	Part.	Page.
Smith, Miss Genevieve—Continued.
Clearly contradicts Guillermo Hall on several items.	8	1125
States that she handled copy of "Conspiracy against Mexico" by Thomson, by Guillermo Hall, who told her he had secured it from Mexican Consul de la Mata, and it was Bolsheviki literature.	9	1126
Books received from Mexican consulate by express; identifies booklet.	8	1126
Statement that 5,000 copies of the Thomson book had been handled by Mexican consul in Los Angeles; sent to other Mexican consuls for distribution.	8	1129
Smith Levi.	1	295
Oil producer, 1914 to 1918, Tampico; corroborates Mr. Walker to Mr. Polk, November 5, 1917; manager Penn-Mexico; made contributions to Manuel Pelaez; severed connection with that company January 1, 1919; made under same conditions as related by Mr. Walker.	1	296
Conversation with Mr. Polk; Arredondo also gave advice to pay rebels; Gen. Alaman, Carranza general, told him if he paid he would shoot him.	1	297
Met Dr. Henry Allen Tupper coming from Veracruz; Carranza generals antagonistic, 1914.	1	298
Copy of order to Americans to get out of Tampico in 1916: signed by Dawson, United States consul.	1	300
Bad conditions in and around Tampico.	1	301
Refers to killing and robbing of paymaster at Tampico.	1	302
Prefers to give balance of evidence in executive session.	1	302
Information as to oil fields, Tampico.	1	303
Safer under Pelaez than Carranza; no confidence in their officers; asks to go into executive session.	1	304
Smith, Michael J.	7	873
New York hemp merchant; population Yucatan 300,000, area 22,000 square miles; capital, Merida, 60,000; Henequen discussed in testimony.	7	873
Life in Yucatan under Diaz safe; did not revolt against Diaz; accepted all governments; 1915 Carranza sent his governor, Eleuterio Avila, there; imposed forced loan several million pesos; later Gen. Toribio de los Santos took place of Avila as governor; during first six weeks committed many outrages; de los Santos fled country; Argumedo won; wrote Carranza uprising not against him; allow them to elect their own governor or send a good one; he sent Gen. Salvador Alvarado with several thousand men; captured many young men and executed them; committed many acts of violence; seized railroads; took possession of "Reguladora Fiber Co."; own directors could not ship without order from him.	7	874
Details Alvarado's arbitrary methods.	7	877
Further details bad methods of Alvarado; absolute dictator, merciless, inhuman.	7	879
Further describes the henequen plants, etc., and financial system in Yucatan.	7	880
Henequen plantations back in hands of owners; relates forced letter of credit by Argumedo; later Alvarado returned and canceled money issue three or four million dollars.	7	882
Relates buying Carranza money and it being declared counterfeit by Luis Cabrera; quotes Cabrera reference to running Americans out of Mexico; agrees with Buckley; quotes conversation on Morro Castle with Cabrera and Douglas; Carranza attorney, and others.	7	884
Discusses Americans in Mexico, their rights and what they have done; railroads in Mexico.	7	886
Relates efforts of United States to get fiber company moved, and arrangements with Arredondo; Alvarado's scheme for presidency.	7	898
Alvarado advocated division of land in Yucatan and Bolshevism; Indians refused to take the land; figures on henequen as it affects the United States.	7	890
Spellacy, Michael A.	7	939
Driller; then oil producer in Tampico; general conditions there several years ago; relates Tampico incident.	7	939
State Department, note of, of October 1, 1919.	19	2887
Exhibits:
Acting Secretary of State to embassy, Mexico City, October 1, 1919, further protest that Mexico respect vested rights of Americans concerning petroleum decrees.	21	3171

State Department—Continued.

Part. Page.

Exhibits—Continued.

Agrarian law, State of Sonora.....	21	3180
American consul, Nogales, to Secretary of State, July 29, 1919, advising that Agrarian law was passed effective July 27, 1919.....	21	3180
Bryan to Carothers June 29, 1914, concerning Carranza nonacceptance constitutionalists currency payment oil tax.....	21	3120
Bryan to consul general July 10, 1914, further protest re nonacceptance Carrancista currency.....	21	3120
Canada to State Department, July 9, 1914, concerning oil tax.....	21	3120
Canada to State Department, July 17, 1914, quoting wireless from Consul Miller, Tampico, re oil tax.....	21	3120
Canada, Veracruz, to State Department, Washington, June 28, 1914, concerning oil-production tax.....	21	3119
Canova, Saltillo, to Secretary of State, July 11, 1914, re nonacceptance.....	21	3120
Carranza petroleum tax decree.....	21	3155
Fletcher to Mexican foreign office, April 2, 1918, protesting against petroleum decree.....	21	3157
Fletcher to secretary industry and commerce, July 22, 1917, re refusal to allow oil companies to drill.....	21	3153
Fletcher to Secretary of State, February 20, 1917, concerning decree affecting property rights Americans.....	21	3152
Fletcher to Secretary of State, August 2, 1917, advising that Carranza promised there would be no confiscation of property.....	21	3154
Fletcher to Secretary of State, March 1, 1918, transmitting Carranza decree fixing tax on petroleum lands.....	21	3155
Fletcher to Secretary State, August 13, 1918, advising that Carranza refused postpone decree.....	21	3159
Fletcher to Secretary State, August 14, 1918, advising that new petroleum decrees had been issued.....	21	3160
Further decree requiring foreigners renounce their national protection when acquiring real estate in Mexico.....	21	3173
Governor of Sonora answer to Lansing protest.....	21	3187
Hanna to Secretary State, July 18, 1914, quoting Vice Consul Silliman re export oil tax.....	21	3121
Hanna to State Department, July 15, 1914, concerning oil tax.....	21	3120
Lansing to American consul, Nogales, August 14, 1919, protesting to Sonora State authorities against enforcement agrarian law.....	21	3185
Lansing to Charles Parker, American representative, Queretaro, protesting against sections of Mexican Constitution of 1917.....	21	3121
Lansing to embassy, Mexico City, August 12, 1918, requesting that petroleum-tax decree be postponed.....	21	3158
Lansing to embassy, Mexico City, August 14, 1919, protesting against putting into effect agrarian law.....	21	3184
Lansing to Rodgers, Mexico City, August 16, 1916, advising that renunciation of national rights as to company affairs by American individuals will not annul relations between individual and American governments.....	21	3172
Lansing to Silliman, January 19, 1916, protesting against nationalization of petroleum.....	21	3121
Lansing to Thurston, Mexico City, January 19, 1917, protesting against decree requiring Americans to renounce right of protection.....	21	3174
Lawton, American consul, Nogales, to Secretary State, December 5, 1918, transmitting draft of proposed agrarian law of State of Sonora.....	21	3174
Letter Acting Secretary State to Fall transmitting 37 copies of communications State Department and diplomatic officers, Mexico.....	21	3119
Letter Brazilian minister, Mexico City, to State Department, May 7, 1915, re suffering in Mexico City.....	21	3200
Letter Lansing to Fall, November 14, 1919, transmitting additional documents concerning Mexico.....	21	3171
Mexican constitution of 1917.....	21	3123
Mexican decree requiring foreigners renounce their national protection when acquiring property in Mexico.....	21	3172
Mexican foreign affairs department to Fletcher, August 17, 1918, stating Mexico's position in full regarding petroleum tax and decrees.....	21	3162

State Department—Continued.

Exhibits—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Mexican foreign office to Summerlin, July 28, 1919, willing to give protection to Americans.....	21	3189
Mexico orders to notaries that in charters news corporations for exploitation oil lands stockholders should renounce their national rights.....	21	3171
Mexican Petroleum Division Circular No. 9, setting out that petroleum companies may obtain permission Chief Executive to drill provided they obligate themselves to respect petroleum law which Congress may enact.....	21	3170
Mexican secretary of state to Summerlin, May 29, 1919, advising that oil companies are to blame for their situation.....	21	3168
Phillips, acting secretary to embassy, Mexico City, June 16, 1919, protesting that oil companies were within their rights.....	21	3169
Polk to American consul, Nogales, December 24, 1918, further protesting against enactment agrarian law.....	21	3179
Polk to American consul, Nogales, March 20, 1919, renewed protest against enactment agrarian law.....	21	3179
Polk to American consul, Nogales, July 17, 1919, requesting to be advised if agrarian law was passed.....	21	3180
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, January 23, 1918, further protesting against article 27, constitution of 1917.....	21	3154
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, March 18, 1919, protesting against attempt collect royalties from American petroleum companies.....	21	3167
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, April 16, 1919, protesting against denouncement American property by third parties.....	21	3167
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, April 16, 1919, further protests against confiscatory decree.....	21	3167
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, January 31, 1917, further protesting against decree requiring Americans renounce rights protection..	21	3174
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, December 24, 1918, protesting against enactment of agrarian law.....	21	3178
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, July 16, 1919, instruction to protest anew against enactment agrarian law.....	21	3180
Polk to Fletcher, December 13, 1918, acknowledging receipt of Mexican foreign office note and reiterating protests on behalf Americans.....	21	3163
Press statements by Lansing, November 12, 1919, re Jenkins case..	21	3190
Prohibition oil companies drilling is part of measure taken for purpose making constitutional text effective.....	21	3153
Proposed agrarian law.....	21	3174
Silliman to Secretary of State, January 21, 1916, advising that Mexicans do not intend nationalize petroleum.....	21	3121
State Department to embassy, Mexico City, April 4, 1918, further protesting against article 27, constitution.....	21	3155
State Department to embassy, June 18, 1919, further protesting against drilling decree.....	21	3169
State Department reply to Mexican Government, letter of November 26, 1919, re Jenkins case.....	21	3196
Statement of William O. Jenkins made to State Department concerning his kidnaping.....	21	3191
Summerlin to Mexican foreign affairs department, July 22, 1919, relative to murder of Peter Catron and advising if such murders continued, radical change in policy would be adopted.....	21	3189
Summerlin to Secretary of State, July 9, 1917, re refusal to allow oil companies to drill.....	21	3153
Summerlin to Secretary of State, June 2, 1919, quoting Mexican Government that "protests from a foreign nation can not suspend effects of laws of another nation".....	21	3168
Summerlin to Secretary of State, August 6, 1919, transmitting copy Mexican Petroleum Division Circular No. 9.....	21	3170
Summerlin to State Department, January 27, 1918, re article 27, Mexican Constitution.....	21	3154
Text of note from Mexican Government to State Department, November 26, 1919, regarding Jenkins case.....	21	3196
Vice consul, Nogales, to Secretary of State, March 13, 1919, advising that agrarian law not be enacted.....	21	3179

	Part.	Page.
Stephenson, H. S.	17	2633
Paid ransom October 15, 1912, $5,000, for Arthur McCormick to Capt. Pedro Galvan and Lindo Miranda, rebel reds, against Madero; paid in Chihuahua.	17	2633
Letter from Salazar to manager of Nogales Co., all ranches and farms defended by Madero to be destroyed November 18, 1912.	17	2634
Stevens, Ella	17	2602
Detailed account of murder of her father.	17	2602
Stevens, Emma	17	2607
Corroborates sister, Ella, as to murder of her father.	17	2607
Stevens, Walter J.	17	2607
Gives account of murder of father; corroborates his sisters, Ella and Emma.	17	2607
Straube, William	15	2165
Bought Pacheco estate, Motogrongo, Veracruz, 165,000 acres; paid $300,000 gold for it; another ranch in Veracruz and one in Oaxaca; in Mexico 1902 to 1911; no special concessions; conditions good under Diaz; conditions bad since revolution.	15	2168
General conditions favors action as in Cuba; Mexicans can not control the situation.	15	2169
Sturgis, Cora Lee	7	919
Went to Mexico with husband, father, and mother in 1906; owned in fee 3,000 acres of land, State of Chiapas; owned 300 head of cattle; half of land under cultivation; protection and prosperity under Diaz, reign most excellent; very good under Madero; first trouble began under administration of Carranza.	7	920
June, 1918, place raided by Zapatistas; everything stolen, even to personal belongings; Mrs. Sturgis, her husband, and mother held prisoners for over eight months, during which time they were given such food as would be fed to a dog; Mrs. Sturgis was compelled to cut wood and do other manual labor around the rebel camp; her husband became an invalid from treatment received; was forced to carry message to Zapata and other rebel leaders and when returned found that her mother had died of starvation.	7	929
Reported matter to Chargé Summerlin, Mexico City, also State Department, Washington; these reports were made in person by Mrs. Sturgis.	7	928
Everything total loss and now compelled to live off charity of friends and relatives in the United States.	7	935
Taylor, Creed	10	1521
Customs inspector in charge Big Bend district of Texas.	10	1521
Raid on Petit ranch, May, 1918, by Mexicans from Mexico; cattle stolen; later Carranza authorities offered to return cattle for $10 per head.	10	1523
Raid on Granger brothers ranch, July, 1919.	10	1524
Raid on Cleveland ranch, September, 1918; Carranza officers later seen riding horses stolen at this raid.	10	1525
Raid on Russell ranch April, 1918.	10	1526
At no time were American authorities able to get any assistance in running down raiders, who were being given moral support by Carrancistas.	10	1526
Taylor, Dr. James M.	9	1404
Secretary board of foreign relations, Methodist Church, 1920.	9	1404
Went to Mexico on special mission for church to investigate conditions; visited many cities in southern part of Mexico.	9	1405
That Americans who had established colonies in Mexico had been a blessing to the country from a religious and educational standpoint; that he went to Mexico with the impression that they were exploiters, but came away with a different opinion, the result of his investigation.	9	1405
Noticed the extreme danger to travel on trains even in the vicinity of capital, this is 1920; also extreme poverty prevailing in city of Mexico.	9	1411
Was arrested and fined $500 for taking kodak pictures, although had a permit from the Government.	9	1413
Teitlebaum, William	19	2761
Not an American citizen; broker; no place of business.	19	2761

	Part	Page
Teitlebaum, William—Continued.
Business, amusement, San Antonio, 1910-11; air lift; organized the American Anti-Intervention Association; he and Dr. Brumby, of Austin, Tex., whole organization.....	19	2762
Cards sent out; had float.....	19	2763
Knew Madero.....	19	2764
Memory fails him; clipping newspapers.....	19	2765
Set himself to have United States offer him citizenship; imparted secret to Bonillas.....	19	2766
Knew nothing of Mexico only what Madero told him; went to Mexico 1914 with Jesus Aguilar, nephew of Madero, to Culiacan.....	19	2767
Had to have interpreter; Carranza revolution to get back to constitution of 1857; quotes letter January 31, 1914, to Bryan protesting against extradition of Gen. Salazar, etc.....	19	2770
Quotes clipping from Globe, charge Uruata.....	19	2773
Dudley Field Malone, Mr. Wright, Mr. Conova.....	19	2775
A. B. C.....	19	2776
Hotel Knickerbocker; Gen. and Mrs. Angeles at Aguascalientes convention.....	19	2779
Only one song to sing.....	19	2780
Photo Angeles.....	19	2781
Eulalio Gutierrez.....	19	2782
Llorente, J. F. Del Valle, etc.....	19	2783
Chairman tries to enlighten him on Mexico.....	19	2784
Bag stolen, Mexican shot.....	19	2785
International commission to settle conditions.....	19	2786
Quotes resolutions Duval West; Americans killed with bullets in Mexico; Americans raided from Mexico to United States.....	19	2787
Called down.....	19	2787
Committee declines to hear further.....	19	2788
Insults chairman, called down, fails to substantiate.....	19	2789
Quotes resolution congratulating Ambassador Wilson, Mexico Society of New York.....	19	2789
Ambassador Wilson's speech recognition of Huerta; Salazar robberies; letter to President of United States July 17, 1917, by Senator Fall; interests in Mexico.....	19	2793
Newspaper clippings.....	19	2794
Chairman makes statement and quotes resolution after Columbus raid.....	19	2795
Pershing in Mexico, 14,000 strong.....	19	2796
Calles against Carranza, Guillermo Hall.....	19	2797
Telegrams Guillermo Hall, Calles, Cabrera, Garcia, Barragan, Fernandez, reference to $5,000 paid Hall for excursion, San Antonio to Mexico.....	19	2798
Amount received by witness from Mexicans.....	19	2800
Quotations Alfredo Robles Dominguez.....	19	2801
Telegram from Oliver to Fall asking authority to refute false statements published in Mexico press and answer.....	19	2802
Witness offers solution.....	19	2803
Angeles sacrificed to great cause.....	19	2806
Thomson, Arthur.....	14	2093
Testified wrote book entitled "Crime against Mexico".....	14	2093
Sold 5,000 copies to Mexican consulate and Mexican embassy.....	14	2094
Got his intervention ideas from reading De Bekker.....	14	2095
Native of Australia; not naturalized; been in United States 10 years; never been in Mexico; can not speak Spanish.....	14	2098
Obtained data for his book from reading John Kenneth Turner, Gutierrez de Lara, and other Socialists.....	14	2099
Admits know nothing of Mexican Constitution of 1857.....	14	2101
Approves Carranza constitution of 1917 and states United States meddling.....	14	2104
Did not believe in World War and obtained exemption from draft.....	14	2122
Thompson, Wallace.....	13	1909
News editor Mexican Herald six years prior to leaving Mexico in 1910; returned to Mexico in 1918 as vice consul at Monterrey.....	13	1909
Testified that in time of Diaz, country was perfectly safe for Americans.....	13	1909
Chairman read witness article on Mexico written by W. J. Bryan in Commoner of January 30, 1903; witness stated that he agreed with Bryan in so far as the article was concerned, and could not account for Bryan's attitude after becoming Secretary of State.....	13	1914

	Part.	Page.
Thompson, Wallace—Continued.
Testified re anti-American parade held in Monterrey in fall of 1918, backed by German influence.....	13	1918
Re I. W. W. agitation in Monterrey in 1915 headed by de Lara backed by German influence.....	13	1920
Re currency condition in Monterrey in 1918 and after.....	13	1921
Re Mexican consular officers grafting.....	13	1924
Tigner, J. F.	10	1538
Owned a large ranch located in Big Bend section of Texas; ranch raided several times beginning in 1917.....	10	1538
Followed raiders into Mexico on one occasion; ranch foreman was killed and Tigner had horses shot from under him.....	10	1539
Compelled to sell ranch at sacrifice as too dangerous to live on it.....	10	1538
Tolen, Henry L.	14	2051
Immigrant inspector stationed at Yuma, Ariz., testified relative to kidnaping of Rodolfo Ibarra from Yuma, Ariz., by Capt. Calles, of Carranza army; Ibarra was taken to Mexico and executed.....	14	2054
Calles arrested at Yuma, Ariz., and placed under $5,000 bond, which he forfeited; still is in command of Carranza troops on Mexican side..	14	2066
Testified to kidnaping and execution of Luguen and Herrera by Capt. Calles.....	14	2065
Re assistance rendered Calles in these kidnaping by Col. B. F. Fly, of Chamber of Commerce of Yuma, Ariz.....	14	2068
Re crossing at will of armed Carranza soldiers; no American soldiers stationed in vicinity of Yuma.....	14	2069
Tupper, Henry Allen	2	497
Pastor First Baptist Church, Washington, D. C.; first went to Mexico 30 years ago; Diaz most remarkable man ever met.....	2	498
Went back to Mexico 1912 as representative International Peace Forum; met Pascual Orozco in Juarez; obtained 3,000 word statement of principals.....	2	498
Went to Mexico in 1913 and obtained similar statement from Carranza; states purpose was to get factions together.....	2	499
Stated refused to accept pay for services in efforts to bring about peace..	2	499
Admitted accepting valuable presents of jewelry for himself and daughter from Carranza at Saltillo, Mexico.....	2	500
Accepted check for $3,400 from Carranza in Veracruz, Mexico.....	2	502
Denied acquaintance with David Starr Jordan.....	2	502
Introduced printed interview published in the Watchman, of New York, in 1915, wherein his entire activity is alleged to be told by himself, particularly his part in obtaining recognition for Carranza..	2	512
Admits is now disappointed in results after his efforts to have Carranza recognized.....	2	520
Admitted never heard of article 130 of constitution of 1917 relative to ministers.....	2	520
Chairman read into record report of O'Connor and J. C. Weller, of American Red Cross, describing conditions and how Red Cross was run out of Mexico by Carranza.....	2	522
Chairman read into record telegrams exchanged by committee and El Universal relative to attitude of committee.....	2	527
Witness introduced into record number of letters from Senator Sheppard, W. J. Bryan, President Wilson, and others.....	2	551
Taylor, Joe	8	1315
Relates Norias raid, was in the fight; went back across into Carranza territory; understood that Gen. Nafarrate, of the Carranza army, was responsible for raids.....	8	1315
Turner, George	10	1561
Ex-United States soldier, Tenth Cavalry.....	10	1562
Names officers of his troop; at Carrizal, relates speech of Capt. Boyd..	10	1563
Gives account of fight at Carrizal; wounded; took clothes off prisoners; 9 days in jail; 17 wounded.....	10	1564
Treatment of prisoners in jail; beat and kicked; ate beans off ground; released.....	10	1567
Valls, J. A.	8	1199
District attorney, forty-ninth judicial district of Texas, Laredo, Tex.; qualifies as expert on Mexican matters; relations with President Diaz; letter from Diaz.....	10	1200

Valls, J. A.—Continued.

Part. Page.

Letter from Diaz; first heard of plan of San Diego, 1915; discovered branch of that organization in Laredo, Tex.; received letter of warning.	10	1201
Quotes anonymous letter; shows Federico Gutierrez Zapata, Carranza officer, Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, promised Lieut. Rucker to intercept them; later lead plan of San Diego bunch into San Ignacio, Zapata County, Tex.; American soldiers killed in that battle; Carranza officials, Col. Cruz Ruiz and Col. Frias led the attack on American garrison at San Ignacio, Tex.	10	1202
Four Carranza soldiers given the death penalty at Laredo for San Ignacio raid; shows Zeferino Zambrano, treasurer general of Mexico, recruited men in plan of San Diego in Monterrey; Zambrano and a Carranza general brought these men to Monterrey, there others were recruited; full account; court reversed case; prisoners delivered to Col. Ferguson, United States Army, returned to Mexico; acclaimed heroes in Mexico; see Arce v. State of Texas .	10	1203
Not generally known in Texas; Mario Mendez, director general of telegraph, anti-American; Webb Station raid.	8	1204
Gives further account of San Ignacio raid; purpose to kill American soldiers; plan of San Diego read into record.	8	1205
Flag found at San Ignacio and Webb Station after raids; men participating in above raids were led by Carranza soldiers, Isabel de los Santos, Zeferino Zambrano, and others; Zambrano afterwards governor of Nuevo Leon.	8	1207
Relates further Webb Station raid, Webb County, Tex., by Lieut. Col. Villarreal, who had Carranza commission in pocket; mentions Gen. Maurillo Rodriguez as directing the bands; Webb Station raiders now in Texas penitentiary; Villarreal in Carranza uniform.	8	120*
Webb Station raiders captured, confessed that they had been under Gen. Torres in Mexico City; mentions El Progreso , published in Laredo, Tex., violent against President Wilson, etc.; citizens escorted Leo D. Walker and Emeterio Flores, editors, to river and threw them in and made them go to Mexico; complained to Arredondo, who made complaint to our Government; nothing done.	8	120*
Opinion that all raids were in furtherance of the plan of San Diego; refers to indictment of signers of the plan of San Diego in United States court, Brownsville, Tex., 13th of May, 1916; the Agustin S. Garza that signed the plan of San Diego was known in Mexico as Leon Caballo; heard that Fortunato Zuazua (Gen.) was engaged in raising money for the plan of San Diego.	8	1210
Reports that Nafarrate was killed by Carrancista officer in Tampico to keep him from divulging the fact that Carranza had ordered the raids into Texas under the plan of San Diego in 1915-1917; Mrs. Nafarrate's name mentioned often in trial of San Ignacio raids, also Webb Station raid; Jose Ayala Villarreal connected with Zuazua frequently connected in trials.	8	1212
Col. Maurillo Rodriguez, nephew of Carranza; Gen. Juan Barragan's name mentioned in trial of raiders; Candido Aguilar's name also connected.	8	1213
Heard that Mauro Mendez attempted to get one Forseyck to come to United States to blow up buildings; knew Luis de la Rosa with connection to raids; commission found in pocket of Cerda at San Ignacio signed by de la Rosa and Isabel de los Santos, both high officers in Carranza government; de la Rosa, Esteban Fierros, and Leocadio Fierros, Zeferino Zambrano were together at time of raids; Manuel Amaya, introducer of ambassadors for Carranza government; Amaya was also mentioned prominently in plan of San Diego; quotes Lansing note saying that Carranza did not try to intercept raiders and arraignment; note in full.	8	1214
Extradition impossible from Carranza of murderers.	8	1223
Mention Dionisio Martinez, murderer of American in Wilson County, Tex., now holding commission under Carranza; also Crecencio Barrera, murderer of American, in Zapata County, also official under Carranza; relates robbery of Ignacio Benavides ranch near Laredo, and in few days Carranza officials at Guerrero were riding horses; refused extradition to thieves by Carranza; chairman calls attention to witness to Zimmerman note, who remembers it, comparing it to the plan of San Diego; reads into the record letter to Manuel Aguirre Berlanga, reference to Lino Caballo, signed by V. Carranza, under date of June 14, 1919.	8	1224

	Part.	Page.
Valls, J. A.—Continued.
Testifies as to German propaganda during the war along the border...	3	1225
Vann, W. E.	8	1296
Reference to raids on lower Rio Grande 1915-16.....	8	1296
Conferred with Carranza officials reference to raids; Nafarrate promised to assist officers against raiders, but did not; two raiders killed in Carranza uniform; raiders told him military were with them; refers to confession of Chino Flores.....	8	1297
Relates confession of Pedro Paz reference to bandits; hand bombs found at train wreck; rail loosened, pulled with wire.....	8	1298
All extradition refused 10 or 11 but last two, Gov. Osuna, of Tamaulipas, granted for Pedro Paz and Antonio Rocha, two raiders.....	8	1299
Relates killing of Antonio Rocha on Mexican side by Mexican officers as he was being delivered to witness.....	8	1300
Relates killing of Toribio Rodriguez on Texas side by above two men, Paz and Rocha.....	8	1301
Veater, Capt. S. H.	10	1478
1902 went to Colonia Chuichupa, Chihuahua; 200 people there; ranched there 13 years; revolutionists began to rob; gave up arms and ammunition.....	10	1479
Colonists left, except 42; rioting; colonists successful in business, saw-mills, also improved machinery for farming, and dairying; names six colonies in Chihuahua: Colonia Juarez, 300; Colonia Pacheco, about 150; Colonia Diaz, 300 families; Dublin, 300; Colonia Garcia; Colonia Chuichupa; all in flourishing condition under Diaz.....	10	1489
Bank at Colonia Diaz robbed; homes destroyed; used schoolhouse for stable; irrigation dams blown up; estimates in his colony loss $500,000 alone; refugees broke, bad conditions; Government United States had to feed them.....	10	1482
Much property turned over to Rojas through force; gave horses and mules away to Mexicans; made efforts through Gen. Calles but to no avail to recover stock; stock taken to Sonora.....	8	1484
Gives account of murder of Johnnie Brooks; account of murder of Ben Griffith, soldier knocked out gold tooth with sword, put tooth in pocket; had row over it and threw it back in grave.....	8	1486
Brought some cattle out, paid $20 gold duties to Mexican official at Juarez.....	8	1488
Gives account of assassination of Stevens, George Redd, Mr. Cain, John Cramer, John Henry, Hays.....	8	1488
Appealed for protection to Huerta, Madero, and Carranza, but to no avail; home destroyed and burned, etc.; Abelino Rascon killed in Cumbre Tunnel affair.....	8	1490
Made efforts to recapture cattle stolen through Col. del Arce and Maj. Tagle, of Juarez; gives account of trip; everything in colonies destroyed; homes burned, etc.....	8	1492
Gives account of killing of his Jersey cows, milch cows, instead of beeves, no remuneration.....	8	1492
Wadsworth, R. M.	10	1532
Gives account of killing of Sitters and Hulen and Jack Howard, and wounding of Harvis in Big Bend by the Chico Cano outfit; Chico Cano holds commissions under Villa and Carranza, either one in charge of the Ojinaga district; he acts.....	10	1532
Walker, Norman	12	1821
Gives account of battle of Juarez on May 8, 9, and 10, 1911; 18 Americans killed and wounded in that fight in El Paso; for the last nine years El Paso people have been in nearly constant dread, and necessary for soldiers to be there to render protection; Americans killed and wounded in Agua Prieta and Naco, Ariz.....	12	1821
Wallis, H. J.	8	1342
Was wounded in train wreck near Brownsville, 1915, time Dr. McCain was killed and others; details story.....	8	1342
Ward, J. G.	8	1162
"Colonia" (American colony near Tampico), 15 families, relates hanging of one German-American and another German citizen, both robbed but American German hung up.....	8	1162
Relates fight with Mexicans in which he killed several, defending his home and family (Carranza soldiers led by an officer).....	8	1163
Robbed Negro man and ravished his wife.....	8	1165

	Part.	Page.
Ward, J. G.—Continued.
Came to United States after family had been robbed, and his trouble with Carranza soldiers.....	8	1166
Warner, P. W.....	8	1034
General agent, Atascador Colony, 135,000 acres, near Tampico; describes colonists, farmers, had church and school, 305 families; good conditions under Diaz; colonists were men of small means, not capitalists; raids by revolutionists.....	8	1035
Murder of Weeder by Gen. Larraga, Carrancista; mentions killing of Mr. Byrd; Mr. Byrd's father later died from being hit over the head with guns by Carrancistas.....	8	1039
Ravishment of the Misses Gourd, of Iowa.....	8	1041
Only German remaining on Atascador Colony 1920; list of colonists on Atascador.....	8	1045
Quotes President on intervention; criticizes action United States taking people out of Mexico; Praises Huerta; afraid to return account bad conditions.....	8	1045
Watriss, Frederick N.....	2	426
Attorney, New York; interested in Sonora and attorney for Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico.....	2	426
Explains oil producers' position, refers to publications, and quotes letter from Mr. Polk under date of December 31, 1918.....	2	472
Richardson Construction Co., of Sonora, Yaqui Valley; bought direct from owners; 750,000 acres; 500,000 acres irrigable; large irrigation plant.....	2	429
Reads extract from communication to Department of State explaining extent of irrigation investment; 300 settlers on land when trouble broke out; explains title to lands and water; quotes extract from concession, agreeing to invest 1,000,000 pesos.....	2	430
Having trouble with the Government about taxation and sold some of the land, embargoed some, and advertised for sale; national Government decided they could not interfere with the State Government, and so notified the United States Government; quotes extract communication from bureau of waters, December 21, 1918, canceling concession under article 27; complete answer to six causes of forfeiture, quotes.....	2	432
Continues to read from document giving his company permission to suspend bond for concession, and quoted part of document sent to State Department, asking United States department to intervene to prevent Mexican Government from disregarding request.....	2	434
Quotes statement and attitude of Mr. Polk in conversation or conference with oil men on intervention; Polk said when they failed, then it was up to Congress; refers to documents passing between the Petroleum Association and department to show efforts of Mexican Government to get possession of oil rights on his land (Watriss Appendix B).....	2	468
Water concession of "Compania Constructora Richardson," S. A., of Sonora, Mexico, published in Diario Oficial December 28, 1911, ratifying contract amended (contract above referred to).....	2	469
Water regulations of "Compania Constructora Richardson," S. A., Sonora, Mexico, English translation.....	2	472
Tariff pertinent to water concession of "Compania Constructora Richardson," S. A., Sonora; tariff, English translation.....	2	475
Concession relative to State taxes on lands of "Compania Constructora Richardson," S. A., Sonora; Spanish and English.....	2	475
Defense submitted to the Federal Government of Mexico, by the Richardson Construction Co. (Inc.) against the proposed nullification of its concession granted August 18, 1911, for the use of the water of the Yaqui River, consisting of a copy of the original Spanish and English translation.....	2	477
Protest of Yaqui Delta Land & Water Co. filed with the Secretary of State of the United States on the — day of May, 1917, against certain acts threatened under the new constitution of Mexico promulgated May 1, 1917, to stay proceedings referred to.....	2	489
Letters to Secretary of State, Washington, D. C., Los Angeles, Calif., November 13, 1916, signed "Richardson;" letter to United States Secretary of State, date New York, February 17, 1919, signed "Frederick N. Watriss," on behalf of Delta Land & Water Co., asking their good offices in their favor with Mexico to stay action.....	2	491

	Part.	Page.
Webb, Grover.....	10	1526
Inspector of customs, Big Bend district, Texas; Carrancistas in charge of country opposite Big Bend do not preserve order; United States side not safe without armed forces; relates loss of stock from Hancock ranch; thieves not followed across river.....	10	1527
Capt. Loreto Aguilar, Carranza officer, and men appeared on Texas side, raiding, stole horses, arrested; saw stolen horses, Ojinaga, ridden by Carranza officer; horse belonged to Inspector Allen, officer wanted 300 pesos for him, would not give him up; demand from officials, Ojinaga, for horse, refused; filed claim; followed Brite raiders into Mexico as guide for Col. Langhorne; relates flight of raiders, fight with them in Mexico, murder of Mickey Welsh at Brite store.....	10	1529
Chico Cano in Ojinaga, as captain of Carranza force, being paid off by Mexican Government officials.....	10	1530
Welsh, F.....	8	1139
Stock stolen from him taken to Mexico, captured by Gen. Ramos, Carrancista general, refused to return them unless reward was paid, refused, stock shipped out; Texas farmer, stock stolen many times, taken to Mexico.....	8	1139
Wetherell, Miss Lucille.....	11	1685
Part owner of Vista Hermosa in Oaxaca, Mexico.....	11	1685
Conditions good under Diaz, bad after revolution; relates conditions..	11	1686
Lost all she had.....	11	1696
Ordered out of Mexico by United States through Consul Canada.....	11	1687
General conditions discussed, Madero and his régime.....	11	1686
Talks of contract labor, etc; thrilling account of escape to Veracruz, etc.....	11	1686
Heard Lincoln Steffens lecture on Mexico, propaganda against Diaz, remonstrates with him.....	11	1701
Whatley, Miss A.....	8	1083
Educational work, Texas; in Mexico off and on, 1900 to 1911; robbed by Maderistas at Parral; loss $60,000; girls ordered shot; held knife to her throat; said they would cut off her fingers and toes; cut her foot with knife.....	8	1084
Wheeler, Capt. Harry.....	12	1873
Relates attack of Mexicans on Agua Prieta by Gen. Blanco; no Americans wounded, 1873, and in later attack; American lives unsafe: remember orders United States troops not to fire across the line; Villa attack on Agua Prieta; as sheriff of Cochise County, met advance guard and told them 7,000 Carranza troops had been allowed to come through United States; I told them this in order to avoid any more fighting on line as many Americans had been killed and wounded in previous battles; fight lasts two days; Jones, an American soldier, killed; Villa so placed troops from east as to not fire into United States.....	12	1876
Present battle at Naco, American lives endangered, 1913, five or six weeks; next battle of Naco lasted 80 or 90 days; a few casualties that time; continuous firing into United States American lives endangered; 71 casualties in this battle on United States side of the line; relates machine gun dropping bullets into Main Street, wounding girl in face from broken glass; made appeal to Mexicans, United States officers, and Gov. Hunt to stop it; got no relief, then went into their trenches and finally succeeded in getting gun turned another way; saw girl shot in neck in the streets; 52 shot in this battle.....	12	1878
Relates trouble at Bisbee, Ariz., 1917, resulting in deportations, many Mexicans in I. W. W. ranks, etc.; heard of the plan of San Diego several times; Mexico to take this country back.....	12	1882
Relates causes leading to deportation at Bisbee; to curtail output of copper by Germans and Mexicans; organizes to take Arizona for Mexico.....	12	1886
States that our policy was weak, no firmness shown; should have prevented killing of Americans; relates occurrences at Naco battle; no extradition.....	12	1888
Relates hanging of Huerta-Leyva, 1893; letters from Gov. Hunt to Capt. Wheeler, reference to expected attack on Naco, Sonora, reference to affording protection to American citizens.....	12	1896

	Part.	Page.
Williams, Ira Jewell.....	2	589
Member Philadelphia bar, president of Panuco Boston Oil Co.; company refused to recognize article 27; quotes telegram Sept. 6, 1911, from attorney, Mexico City; Mexico oil department sore over representations from United States State Department; pay roll, $10,000, stolen; offers book showing all Carranza decrees filed with committee, but not shown in record; meeting called in New York for protecting American rights; declined to recognize article 27; Aug. 6, 1918; State Department made solemn protest to Mexico Aug. 12, 1918, modifying decree by Carranza, but laws not passed; Britain, France, Netherlands protested against confiscation; oil men during war would not accept any decree that would keep United States from getting oil.....	2	590
Properties of the Atlantica Compania Mexicana Productora y Refinadora de Petroleo, purchased from Mexican owners, have been denounced under article 27 and decrees of Carranza; filed Amparos; applications to drill on own property denied; shocked because news suppressed by our own Government from Mexico; Associated and other press refrained from publishing news on request of our Government; refused to publish comments on article 27.....	2	591
Panuco Boston Co. stopped by military and fined $500; chronological statement in detail follows actions of his company and the oil men, continued on page 594; pamphlets issued by Mr. Frederick R. Kellog, true, filed with committee, but not in record, marked "Williams Exhibit No. 2".....	2	595
Judge Beaty's comments, filed with the committee, but not in record, marked "Exhibit, Williams, No. 3"; Williams Exhibits Nos. 4 and 5 filed with the committee pamphlets, but not in record; letter to the editor of the New York Times, signed by Frank L. Polk, reference to Panuco Boston Co., in record, protesting to Mexico against confiscation; extract from letter signed by Ira Jewell Williams to Times, under date of July 3, 1919, reference to assurances of Aguilar, son-in-law of Carranza, who denied confiscation.....	2	596
Williams Exhibit No. 6 filed with committee but not in record; same with Exhibit No. 8; oil men only trying to get real facts before American people.....	2	597
Relates murder of Leroy Moye near Tampico; quotes letter from British as to robbery.....	2	598
Relates robberies of pay rolls by order of Carranza, so reported there..	2	599
Quotes Mexican Review of Aug. 19, 1919; Weeks on oil matter.....	2	600
Explains Carranza's desire to get Americans to accept his idea; telegram from William Phillips, Acting Secretary of State, to witness, reference to unsafety of Americans near Tampico.....	2	602
Quotes extract from Amparo, translated to our point of view; Government may rob foreigners if they are recipient of the stolen property; extract accused of rebellion by not accepting article 27 and decrees, signed by division of petroleum No. 2277, Mexico, June 26, 1919; letter from Robert E. Speer to Mr. Chester O. Swain, 26 Broadway, reference to whether Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico was in favor of intervention, etc.; answered by Mr. Walker and witness, in record; criticizes Dr. Inman; other correspondence by witness on this subject.....	2	605
Letter from witness to Dr. Halsey on intervention and Inman.....	2	606
Chairman quotes extract from speech of President Wilson, Helena, Mont., about American liars.....	2	606
Witness quotes extract from William Burgess that Constitution might have been written by Emma Goldman and Berkman.....	2	607
Willis, F. B., Mrs.....	8	1030
Details loss of her husband as mentioned by Mrs. Bailey; lost child by death, caused by lack of attention.....	8	1032
Mentions murder of Catron; Carrancista officials in charge Aguascalientes time of disappearance husband; Gen. Urbina and one-legged Orozco; Benito Diaz, governor.....	8	1033
United States Consul Edwards refused to hear her story; told her he could do nothing for her, Juarez; Mrs. Willis, an invalid, caused by her mistreatment in Mexico; Red Cross sent her home.....	8	1034

	Part.	Page.
Wilson, Henry Lane.....	15	2249
Conditions under Diaz ideal; most of the development done by Americans; had it not been for them Mexico would have remained in an uncivilized state; downfall of Diaz, 75,000 Americans there, official; Americans there away above the average; 2,000 railroad men, 5,000 farmers, 5,000 miners, 8,000 in other lines, many doctors, dentists, engineers, and all professions there in abundance; none of the lower type of Americans, as compared to our cities; false that Americans secured special favors by bribery and concessions; did not exploit the country or people.....	15	2250
Explains concessions; estimated that one billion two hundred thousand American capital in Mexico when Diaz left; all others combined about same amount; all nations; gives estimates on population of all nations in Mexico; population, American, in the city about 10,000; explains about railroads in Mexico.....	15	2252
Gives his idea as to fall of Diaz, "old men, inefficiency, and race demands," "Mexico for Mexicans"; 80 per cent ignorant; invitations of Diaz to Mexico.....	15	2254
Business in Mexico in hands of foreigners; gives beginning of and progress of Madero revolution to downfall of Diaz; Madero of unsound mind, visionary; made incendiary speeches, in jail, out in few hours; appealed for popular sympathy for Indians; endowed with personal honesty and excellent morals; Madero did not overthrow Diaz, he was overthrown by wave of anarchy and desertion of friends; Madero proceeded against Reyes candidacy just as Carranza is against Obregon to-day; much anti-Americanism later days of Diaz.....	15	2256
Diaz government very much pro-American.....	15	2256
Gives evidence of unsound mind of Madero, Ambassador Calero as instructed to misrepresent conditions in Mexico; many atrocities committed while Madero was in power; conditions went from bad to worse; Madero was more despotic than Diaz toward end of régime; general anarchy all over Mexico; not a dollar for public instruction, not an acre of land divided; no freedom of press, some suppressed; organization of "La Porra," by Gustavo Madero. Formed to discontinue anti-Maderism.....	15	2258
La Porra composed of hired assassins and cut-throats hired especially for their purpose; gives outline of revolution with Madero and Huerta in company with English, French, Spanish representatives; Blanquet by his actions upon arrival overthrew Madero; Huerta took advantage of the situation. Col. Burnside reported that the revolution could not be suppressed, therefore called the ambassadors together again; report to witness from Burnside in full, date Mexico City, June 5, 1913.....	15	2262
Diplomatic corps advised Madero unofficially best to turn the government over to congress; selected Spanish minister to deliver request or advice; upon his arrival met the senate who had been refused admittance, their advice was to have been the same; Spanish Minister, Mr. Cologan, secured an audience. Madero was insulting; Madero sent telegram to United States accusing witness of controlling diplomatic corps, and wanted to land troops at Veracruz; later withdrew it and apologized, next day supreme court went to Madero with same request; badly received; Col. Riverol and Col. Izquierdo went to Madero with four privates, same request; took pistol from his pocket, shot both colonels and two or three privates; escaped to corridor and captured by Gen. Blanquet; placed in prison; gives conditions of people at that time, children starving, etc., felt great responsibility; sent for Diaz, Huerta, and Blanquet..	15	2263
Three actual breaks, forced by persuasion and threat, finally agreed and made contract depositing it with witness; 50,000 Mexicans celebrated that night and gave thanks to the United States for bringing peace to Mexico; all ministers of strong nations thanked witness, and sent letters, in record.....	8	2264
Copy of resolution, mass meeting American colony, February 28, 1913; telegram to President United States, signed by American colony; case submitted by American colony reference to sending committee to Washington.....	8	2266

Wilson, Henry Lane—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Argument to Bryan by committee, the retention of witness as ambassador, April 2, 1913.	8	2268
Resolutions of thanks inserted in the record, from British subjects, Protestants, Catholics, Y. M. C. A.; not a dissenting voice; explains procedure under Mexican constitution as to seating president; urged Huerta to protect the lives of Madero and Suarez; relates the murder of Madero, in transfer from one prison to another; shot by officer in charge.	8	2271
Letter from Von Heintz, January 8, 1916, from China to witness, commendatory of his action in Mexico City; relates relations between Madero and Villa, latter in revolt against Madero at time of his death, but changed to protest against Huerta.	8	2274
Justifies action with Madero, who had not kept faith with United States; resolution brotherhood men, resolutions sent to President United States; another resolution by same parties asking that he be retained; remonstrated with Madero about throwing Americans wrongfully in jail; one case of friction.	8	2276
Quotes from book by Calero on murder of Madero; enumerates five questions that he wanted settled prior to recognition of Huerta.	8	2278
Enumerates them, successful in five of the six questions when Huerta was in power; goes into the latter part of the Taft administration.	15	2280
First portion of Wilson's administration critical.	15	2281
Diplomats met in Mexico City and sent telegrams to their Governments after they had recognized Huerta, and the United States had not, asking them to request the United States to either recognize Huerta or come down and make peace.	15	2282
Sent to Veracruz on July 4, by Wilson, to keep him from having to reply to Huerta's speech on that day in Mexico City.	15	2283
Contradicts William Bayard Hale about telegram he sent to Washington; Huerta protected Americans.	15	2282
Huerta was very pro-American and the greater part of the Mexican people were in favor of him; did not receive any backing or assistance from Wilson Government; explains; refutes Guy Inman's story as published in his book, page 134, in which he attempts to give facts on the Madero-Diaz-Huerta episode in Mexico City, 1913; "Ciudadela" calls Inman a liar in diplomatic language.	15	2284
Sworn statement as to witness's attitude in affair here inserted, signed by United States consular agents in Mexico City; untrue story sent out by Robert H. Murray; secured judgments, and apologies from many, including John Lind; made false report to ladies in Mexico City; witness ordered Murray out of embassy; goes fully into the mutilated records of all messages from and to the department, and discusses how Murray might have secured them; uncoded messages sent by Bryan; Bryan several times requested witness to invite Mexican Government (Huerta) to join United States in conferences and to recognize the new Republic of China, and to join the universal peace movement, all this while he was fighting Huerta.	15	2286
Mentions several private representatives sent to Mexico without his knowledge, which action discredited him.	15	2289
Protested to the United States, but no relief; reads letter into the record under date of July 1, 1913, directed to Wilson reference to William Bayard Hale; received no answer, did not expect any; called to Washington after Hale's report for consultation; asked to make report to President on Mexican situation. President had only read reports confidential at time of Madero overthrow; had not read any in two years; here he inserts in record his recommendations to Wilson.	15	2290
Later sent to Foreign Relations Committee.	15	2294
Agreeably received; later Wilson told Senators Bacon and Flood he did not care for any further exploitation of my views.	15	2294
President requested investigating committee not to hear anything further from me.	15	2294
Committee was Democratic at that time; quotes Calero's book, page 68, reference to Carranza; opinion on Carranza.	15	2294
Mentions telegrams United States consul and Carranza after death of Madero.	15	2294

Wilson, Henry Lane—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Relates his connection with Huerta and Carranza at that time; discusses John Lind; Tampico incident and United States policy; relates conditions of Mexico, cost of troops on border, schools and churches, desecration of same; Carranza downfall would be an admission of Wilson's Government's mistaken policy.....	15	2296
Quotation from Calero book, page 34, reference to Carranza; quotes Calero again on page 81, reference to Agrarian problem.....	15	2298
Reasons given for witness's resignation as ambassador.....	15	2298
Discusses Bryan and British diplomacy reference Huerta.....	15	2300
Discusses Fletcher's statements before the committee; resignation of George A. Chamberlain, John Bassett Moore.....	15	2302
Gives estimate on Americans in Mexico time he resigned, why they left Mexico, etc.....	15	2303
Relates again conversation with President, who said "Huerta would not carry out his promises"; no notice given by Taft for Americans to get out of Mexico; condition of Mexico later days of Taft bad; why Carranza went against Huerta.....	15	2304
Discusses Wilson's policies, including league; gives information on Sonora; quotes Calero again, page 77, Wilson's misconception on Mexico, in record.....	15	2306
Again quotes Calero, pages 68 and 61, reference motives of revolution; compares his idea and that of Calero on this subject; Secretary Lansing's note, June, 1916; relates difference in Indians in Mexico.....	15	2308
Quotes Bryan on Diaz Commoner, January 30, 1903; Huerta like Diaz. Memorandum of ambassador's interview with Huerta, May 7, 1913; usual courtesies lacking; slap at Wilson attitude.....	15	2312
Gives suggestions on Mexico to reestablish that Government on peaceful basis.....	15	2314
Winton, Dr. George B.....	1	159
Member of League of Free Nations and Mexico committee; delivers document and report on education in Mexico.....	1	159
(Not in record) also wrote two books on Mexico by request.....	1	160
Makes statement as to his knowledge of Mexico as an educator and missionary, 1884-1902, 14 years.....	1	160
Very friendly to Mexican people; knows many leaders.....	1	160
Against intervention.....	1	161
Discusses Mexicans of this country and Mexico, and different sections; good Americans all.....	1	162
Have similar sentiments about Mexico and her people.....	1	163
Mexicans think more of an American "boss" than any other.....	1	163
Does not know the mountainous country.....	1	164
Discusses different Indians.....	1	166
Knows nothing of labor organizations.....	1	170
Chairman gives him information on mining laws.....	1	172
He knows little about it; quotes extracts from law.....	1	174
Testifies as to the $400 fund coming to League of Free Nations as mentioned by Inman; old organization voted this money to League of Free Nations.....	1	176
Chairman reads quotation from Christian Advocate by witness.....	1	178
Knows very little of Mexico. Stated, "You know we make wholesale statements when we are writing or making speeches," this when pinned down on his article by chairman; served on several committees.....	1	180
Quotation from A. B. C. of Mexico City under date of July 26, 1919, reference to intervention; how intervention looks to Mexicans by witness, inserted in record.....	1	184
Discusses subsidy by Carranza to Inman at Piedras Negras; don't know much about it.....	1	187
Relates his advice to his church reference to clause in new constitution reference churches.....	1	188
Wood, C. D.....	10	1517
Glenn Springs raid, Big Bend, Tex., occurred on May 6, 1916.....	10	1517
Disorders for several years.....	10	1517
Stealing, etc.....	10	1517
Gives account of raid and burning of Montell's store.....	10	1518

Wood, C. D.—Continued.

Part. Page.

Killing of Conklin boy and three soldiers, and two soldiers were burned, one wounded; Mr. Elias and wife had their house burned and they stayed in hills all night	10	1519
Two Mexicans were found at scene under brush	10	1519
One was a Carrancista officer; had commission as such in his pocket..	10	1520
Wright, Mrs. Mary	8	1020
Depredations on person and property; women lived in cane field to escape Madero revolutionists; raided several times	8	1020
A - Governor San Luis could not protect us	8	1023
Our Government refused; told to get out	8	1023
Brought out on German lumber boat	8	1024
Abducted Mexican girls	8	1025
Robbed completely; fruit orchard burned, fences cut	8	1026
Losses, $48,000	8	1026

EXECUTIVE SESSIONS.

	Part.	Page.
Mr. _____	15	2
Fears reprisals from Mexican Government if known he testified before committee; conditions under Huerta good; graft worse under Carranza régime.....	15	4
Serious trouble begun 1914.....	15	5
Horses and mules taken generally over country by Carrancistas; by Manuel Larraga generally, a Carranza general.....	15	6
Robbed oil camps, provisions and clothing. Payroll robberies. Law and order in Pelaez territory; reverse in Carranza territory. Robbers recognized many times as Carranza soldiers and officers, by horses and outfit.....	15	11
Relates many robberies, etc.....	15	15
Taylor, American, killed; details; murderer not apprehended nor punished.....	15	20
Killing of Americans common there.....	15	21
Guesses at number killed in oil district; details of some of murders; mentions Sweeny, renegade American.....	15	22
Relates information reference Hotel Southern incident, April 21, 1914..	15	31
Americans rescued by German boat commander brought out to Galveston.....	15	32
Americans ordered out of Mexico many times.....	15	35
Intelligent Mexicans would welcome intervention.....	15	36
Officer would welcome American Army to Mexico.....	15	37
Would protect Americans. Shots fired over heads of Americans and threatened.....	15	38
Several Americans held for ransom and robbed.....	15	39
Relates more robberies; wounding of Eads; killed two bandits and wounded a third.....	15	40
Train robberies.....	15	44
Mr. _____	R	61
Described battle at Nogales in 1913 between Obregon and Kosterlitzky; Americans shot from Mexican side of line.....	R	61
Describes battle of Agua Prieta in 1915 between Villa and Calles, wherein several Americans were killed on American side of line; also as to passing of Mexican troops from Piedras Negras through United States to Agua Prieta to assist Calles.....	R	62
That removal of infantry from Nogales really brought on fight in 1918; seemed that Mexicans had been prepared for it for some time.....	R	68
Mexican collector of customs admitted to affiant that Mexicans fired first shots that started battle in 1918.....	R	70
Re Mexican collector of customs at Naco, Sonora, accumulating $75,000 in two years as graft; resigned and crossed to American side; inspector checked his account and found that 7,800 head of cattle had been crossed at regular rate of $10 per head; books showed that only 689 head accounted for.....	R	72
Nothing but United States money being used in Sonora.....	R	77
Mr. _____	D	420
Went to Mexico in 1883; railroaded for 21 years; bought 1,700 acres and leased 2,500.....	D	422
First trouble in 1911. Madero brothers took stock; colonists began leaving until dwindled from 125 to 2 families.....	D	427
First arrested by Huertistas in 1914; party held 19 days and released; only known reason for arrest was because troops had landed at Veracruz.....	D	430
Huerta troops took ballot as to whether all Americans of Colony should be massacred. Ballot 150 to 25 against. Massacre prevented by friendly Mexicans.....	D	433
Ordered out in May, 1914, landed at New Orleans.....	D	434

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page.
Returned to ranch in August, 1914. Everything destroyed. Stock stolen by Huerta soldiers under Zaragosa and Higinio Aguilar.	D	436
Again ordered out in 1916.	D	437
Had $15,000 cash taken from him by Carranza customs officers.	D	439
After refugees were loaded into boats to be taken to steamer, Carranza colonel searched them all for money, taking all found; took 45 cents from 3-year old girl; entire party landed in United States for second time penniless.	D	445
Huerta stated he would pay way of any American who desired to leave.	D	446
Went back again in 1916; in May, 1917, place was again pillaged by Zapatistas.	D	448
Carrancistas raided place 4 miles away, killed 28.	D	449
Felix Diaz spent 30 days at his place; well treated.	D	479
Arrest by Carrancistas, sentenced to be shot, 1917.	D	470
Finally forced to leave for good in June, 1919; loss $259,000. earnings of 47 years labor.	D	486
Mr. ———	11	2
Employed in land and legal department; gives reason why he wants to testify in executive session; informed by attaché of foreign relations in Mexico City that any Mexican appearing before Fall committee would be considered as a traitor and that an American so appearing had better not return to Mexico; would be murdered if known; relates conditions in ———; passes freely from Carrancista to Pelaez lines, to and fro; gives location of different cuartels, both factions; people generally for Pelaez; not considered as bandit; gives protection to all people; Carrancistas murder, rob, and commit depredations.	11	4
Describes Santa Maria Indians. Chief very bloodthirsty and cruel; black Indian; joined the Carrancistas; Williams and American captive held 35 days; given two tortillas a day; fell in weight from 160 to less than 100 pounds; chief's name Higinio Malgoea; barbarous to prisoners; won't allow any Carrancistas in his district; Tepicintella, another small tribe of Indians, in same section about as Santa Marias; Huasteca Indians against Carranza, for all have had relatives murdered and property destroyed by them; ——— ships Pelaez ammunition through custom house at Tampico, in knowledge of customs officer, bought up, few at a time, from Carranza soldiers, etc.	11	8
Describes Carrancista methods as to graft, robbery, etc.	11	11
Describes Gen. Pablo Gonzalez and Gen. de Lara; gives account of Carranza soldiers shooting at Mr. Mikel, a British geologist.	11	14
Describes manner of sending pay rolls to camps; danger, etc.; refused to allow airplane to be used.	11	18
Details arrest of himself and two Americans by Carrancistas; insulted and detained several days; documents taken; mistreated; finally released.	11	21
Details another arrest of witness and Parker by ———, a Carrancista; made him go ahead of column to Pelaez stronghold; loaned them two mules to ride to camp later and found mules had been stolen from his company; relates robbery of Aguila camp by Ortiz, who formerly was a sandal-footed butcher from town of Colims; details many robberies by Carrancistas; also blowing up of train by Cedillo brothers; lieutenant colonel in charge of train, ———, renegade American ex-soldier.	11	31
Carranza pay rolls padded; soldiers allowed to rob instead of being paid salary; great many refugees from oil fields who have lost their homes and working for living; Americans taking up claims with their Government are at once blacklisted by Carranza; 10 Americans robbed.	11	35
Robbers were Carrancistas masked; known by their dress.	11	39
Robbery Walter Fitch; embezzlement of Gloria from New Laredo of $30,000 from company; never punished; United States officials, Mexico City, feel humiliated by attitude of their Government; refutes Fletcher about conditions in Mexico; opinions of Americans in city he has stated untruths.	11	40

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page.
Mentions murder of Correll and ravishment of his wife; discusses Fletcher's statements; 200,000 in arms robbing, murdering, etc., out of 14,000,000; intelligent class in Mexico favor intervention; Pelaez officer to give dance and champagne when he heard Americans were fighting Mexicans in north.....	11	43
Details conditions, financial and otherwise, opinions, etc.; Bolshevism rampant in ———; working class publicly espouse cause; much propaganda there; all workmen have to belong to Bolshevik union; relates boatman took charge of company boat and charged for passage although being paid salary.....	11	46
Mr. ———	9	614
General business and looking after Mormon colonies in Mexico; gives general description of Mormon colonies; population, 4,000; Colonia Dublan, Juarez, Pacheco, Garcia, Chuichupa, Diaz, Morelos, and Oaxaca; prosperous under Diaz; manufacturing establishments, life, and customs of colonists; murders, atrocities, etc.....	9	614
Mr. ———	D	693
Went to Mexico with father, mother, and two brothers in 1908; established ranch at Atascador colony, State of San Luis Potosi, mother and sister compelled to leave in 1913.....	D	694
Father arrested by Huerta colonel in 1913; held 43 days; beaten and taken to Mexico City in box car.....	D	695
Held in prison there; O'Shaughnessy promised to obtain release; did nothing; finally released through Mexican captain who was friendly. Only assistance received was order to get out of Mexico, which he obeyed.....	D	703
Died in San Antonio, Tex., in December, 1919, as result of treatment. Brother executed by Villistas under Col. Tomas Urbina because had no horses to give him on ranch.....	D	706
Mr. ———	D	708
Was for two years constructing quartermaster, United States Army; during 1918 and 1919 stationed at Nogales, Ariz.....	D	711
Was wounded in battle of Nogales in August, 1918; described battle. Mexicans had trenches and fortifications for over a year.....	R	2
Present disorder in Mexico due to lack of respect by Mexicans of central government.....	R	2
Central government was respected in time of Diaz.....	R	3
Sees no reason why individual American merchant can not get along with individual Mexican merchant; cites experience of his own to illustrate that it can be done.....	R	8
Does not consider that the business relations between Arizona and Sonora are relations with Mexico; that Sonora handles its own affairs.....	R	10
Mr. ———	R	11
Went to Mexico in 1906, purchased ranch near Las Palmas in San Luis Potosi; took cattle, horses, and farming implements from States....	R	13
First trouble in 1916 when commenced robbing place; compelled to hide in brush for days to save life.....	R	22
July, 1919, son, ———, murdered by men under Carranza general, Manuel Larraga; lost everything.....	H	2
Mr. ———	H	7
Minister and professor, now in Mexico four years; Methodist; executive board had charge of or general direction of all the schools in Mexico; outline of work.....	H	14
Increase of schools from 10 to 20 per cent; gives account what has been done; can not carry on work in certain districts account had conditions, unsafe; to quite an extent, money for his work contributed by individuals and churches throughout country (United States); no financial aid from Mexican Government; attitude very kindly.....	H	39
Only cooperate in certain districts.....	4	1
Diaz method very ambitious but not carried out, account Catholic Church and lack of funds; purpose of Carranza in revolution to inaugurate extensive educational enterprises but not carried out....	4	2
Teachers of old Diaz regime, but not paid; impossible to carry out plans by Osuna, Saenz, and Barranco; plan in Inman's book very elaborate, page 165, but not carried out only limited extent; lacked finances and teachers.....	4	4
	4	6
	4	8
	4	8

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page.
Impossible to get teachers, some educated in United States, others in Europe under Diaz but insufficient in number.....	4	10
Generals had to be paid before teachers.....	4	12
Explains what happened to schools in Mexico City; Osuna brought down from north, wanted to put in system as in United States, others wanted the French system, much disagreement, bill in Congress to do away with "National Preparatory," lost, but was made impossible to carry it out; Osuna made governor of Tamaulipas, to get him out of the way; was not successful in that position; successor in school matters incompetent.....	4	14
Prof. Moises Saenz was in charge after Osuna, but resigned to go into evangelical board work at reduced salary; teachers are paid "I. O. U's." and per cent of salary. Many schools closed time of strike, have not been reopened.....	4	16
Carranza favored his friends in teachers; discriminated against old Diaz men who were let out; latter most competent; money received by government used to pay military authorities; income of government three times more than under Diaz; Carranza generals extravagant, fine homes, etc. All discouraged, must have firm hand. Told Inman he could not do anything for he was surrounded by bad people.....	4	20
Relates answer of Carranza to committee, "Good people did not assist him to get into power, bad people did, knows latter grafters and dishonest, but will stay with them to the end." This his general policy; Carranza has no great power; on account of closing of Mexican schools, American schools received more pupils.....	4	22
Refutes Inman on character of Americans in Mexico; prefers an honest business man in Mexico to four preachers; not possible to prosper in educational work unless assisted by material progress.....	4	26
Jefe Politico under Diaz changed under Madero to Jefe de Armas, same.....	4	29
Agrees with Inman that Mexicans rather work under Americans than Mexicans; says Inman's statement on page 175 his book "Authorities making headway under odds, etc., Americans who remained in Mexico have most hope for country under Carranza" "Absolutely untrue"; all Americans in Mexico can see no hope for Mexico under present régime. Mexicans also agree to financial intervention in Mexico necessary.....	4	32
If this intervention failed, armed intervention was inevitable; Banco Nacional looted, taken over as all banks were. French plan not feasible of loan by United States without strong government like Diaz had at time; favors armed intervention when all else fails; Department of State has not shown strong hand; an ultimatum should have been given before Carranza was recognized; a great many things should have been done that were not; criticizes administration; notes, instead of ultimatums that meant something, have been indulged in causing Mexican government to believe we do not intend to do anything; Mexicans have told witnesses we did not because we were afraid; military move all that can eradicate their ideas; stay out of Mexico if we are going to withdraw soon; training Mexicans so that they can withdraw from Mexico.....	4	36
Mr. ———	12	2
Objection to publication of testimony, fears death at hands of Carrancistas, might be denied admission, reason; came out 1913; no serious disturbances north Mexico under Huerta.....	12	5
Objection to Huerta by United States caused some trouble.....	12	7
Carranza attack on Monterrey 1913 and 1914; Carrancistas destroyed much property Monterrey.....	12	8
Financial; Carranza paper money, metallic reserve.....	12	9
Ordered to leave Mexico, employees did not do so; cry of "wolf" not heeded.....	12	15
Great injustice to Americans in Mexico, charge that they were exploiters; favors sending Americans as pioneers.....	12	17
Americans had to submit to unlawful exactions.....	12	18
In addition to full payment on tobacco in stamps, had to pay "gratification;" nothing like this under Diaz or Huerta.....	12	19

Mr. ———	Continued.	Part.	Page.
	Constitution of 1917, little effect on his business.....	12	20
	Shutting down of American enterprises detrimental to Mexican laborers; American operations bettered laborers and country.....	12	21
	Carranza imported much tobacco free of duty, which put legitimate dealers out of the running; this done by concessions to favored few..	12	22
	Concessionaires approached him to sell concession twice.....	12	23
	Luis Cabrera head of treasury department at that time.....	12	24
	Has $275,000 invested there.....	12	25
	Conditions in Mexico not improving.....	12	26
	Favors this government going in there.....	12	27
Mr. ———		10	722
	Relates death and circumstances of death of Pvt. Troib, Medical Corps, Company D, Nineteenth Infantry, United States Army, by Carranza lieutenant, Juan Azpeitia, of Juarez, December 28, 1918; full court proceedings, etc.....	10	722
Mr. ———		Q	10
	Re killing of Americans, Rooney and Bowles; no one ever arrested; generally was done by Carranza soldiers.....	Q	3
	Re killing of Dan Foley, American citizen by Mexican; no one arrested for crime.....	Q	4
	Re anti-American sentiments of Gen. Pablo Gonzalez; re attack on Mr. Starkweather, American citizen, in public plaza of Tepetate by Gonzalez, who was in drunken rage.....	Q	5
	Americans in Mexico have lost respect for their own government due to treatment they have received and no protection.....	Q	7
Mr. ———		10	604
	Been all over Mexico; came out in 1915; father ran out of Mexico in 1916; was in cattle business in Durango; threatened to hang father, took wedding ring off finger, wanted to undress him, finally released him; he left country but returned to save his 850 head of cattle; robbed him of everything and killed his milk cows.....	10	604
	Relates the murder of Charlie Chee, Chinaman, the arrest of two Englishmen, McClure and Henderson; his father robbed again; started to execute two Englishmen but released them and murdered Chee; all factions practically same.....	10	606
	Relates murder of Edward Hayes at Madera by Santana Caraveo, also murder of a negro; another man killed at same time.....	10	610
	Details robbery by Cheche Campos of Madera Co. store, sent loot away in cars.....	10	611
	Certain degree of safety in large centers; danger of being murdered in rural districts; expects another revolution; no help for country from within.....	10	612
Mr. ———		2	1
	Attorney, New York and Washington; landowner; property seized; manager and important employees killed; took matter up with State Department, finally Mr. Polk made representations to Mexico City, referred to Candido Aguilar, Governor of Veracruz, for adjustment; later was referred to Acuña, Minister of relations, who resigned and Aguilar took his place; nothing further heard from it....	2	2
	Crops were sold to firm in which Aguilar was partner, later traced to New Orleans and attached; witness won and years later property returned to him; last inventory shows much property lost.....	2	4
	While suit was pending several Carranza officials offered to appear as witnesses; favor witness, if large sums of money were paid them; full report of this matter filed with State Department, United States; refuses to give names of clients for fear they would be murdered....	2	6
Mr. ———		K	33
	Conditions as to safety of life bad until battle of August, 1918, when American troops invaded Nogales, Sonora; since that time conditions are some better.....	K	36
	Exports through Nogales for 1918 $22,000,000; for 1919, $18,000,000; leading export during 1918 was garbanzo, $6,677,000.....	K	37
	Of the $12,000,000 majority was mineral from American-owned mines..	K	37
	Re Gen. Calles forcing collector of customs, Nogales, Sonora, to deliver to him $15,000 gold; refused to give him a receipt; collector afterwards came to the United States to keep from being executed for reporting matter.....	K	39

	Part.	Page.
Mr. —Continued.
Re stores in Nogales, Ariz., keeping open on Mexican holidays and those who did not being boycotted by Mexicans; Mexican customs guards refused to allow goods purchased in these stores to cross line.	K	45
Re American citizen Frank Diamos, who operated a picture show in Nogales, Ariz., showing a picture that was not pleasing to the Mexican consul, who afterwards would not let Diamos or any of his relatives cross into Mexico and told Diamos if he did cross Gen. Calles would have him executed.	K	46
Re Collins, an American citizen, who had a fight in Nogales, Ariz., with a relative of a German living in Nogales, Sonora, being arrested and held in jail in Nogales, Sonora, at instigation of Mexican consul who was friend of German; Collins finally deported from Mexico; matter never reported to State Department.	K	48
Re kidnapping of Huerta et al. from Douglas, Ariz., and execution in Agua Prieta, Sonora, by Gen. Calles, 52 and 60; re conversation between Gen. Cabell and Mexican consul, Nogales, Ariz., relative to insulting letter written American consul re American soldiers crossing line; also re Huerta kidnapping.	K	59
Obregon exported $5,000,000 worth of garbanzo from Sonora in 1918; all went to Spain and Cuba; handled by W. R. Grace Co., of San Francisco, Calif.	K	71
Obregon was given permission to import 5,000,000 pounds of lard, 200 car loads corn and flour during 1918; there was a surplus of rice in Sonora and when Americans tried to export same to relieve food situation in the United States, Gen. Calles said it would rot before he would allow a pound to go to the United States.	K	74
No question that another revolution will take place before many months.	K	77
Mr. —	R	50
Owner and operator chain motion-picture shows in Nogales, Naco, Douglas, and Bisbee, Ariz.	R	51
On one occasion was showing picture entitled "Fighting Through"; picture showed American soldier forcing Mexican to salute American flag; Mexican vice consul in Nogales, Ariz., was present and created disturbance; stationed himself in front of theater and picketed place, advising Mexicans not to patronize theater; later refused to allow him to cross line into Mexico on account picture being shown.	R	52
Mr. —	G	2
Re being ambushed by men in Carranza uniform, October 25, 1918.	G	3
Matter reported to Carranza commander; nothing done, was not even interviewed by Carranza officials.	G	4
Re ravishing of the Misses Gourd at Atascador colony during Huerta régime.	G	6
Most of murders and robberies in Tampico district have taken place since time of Carrancistas.	G	7
Re destruction of Atascador and other colonies by Carrancistas.	G	9
During time Manuel Pelaez controlled Tepetate oil district no robberies or murders; Americans enjoyed peace until present Mexican Government took charge; Carrancistas would send escort with pay rolls of mining companies who would themselves steal pay roll.	G	12
Re election held in Tampico in January, 1920, where all political leaders opposing Carrancistas were placed in jail until after election.	G	14
Mr. —	E	672
Lived in Torreon, 1892 until 1916; safe under Diaz; had more protection while Villa was in charge than under Carranza.	E	672
Was present in Torreon during massacre of 303 Chinese by Maderistas under Emilio Madero; massacre was investigated by De la Barra.	E	675
Huerta troops under Munguia held town and looted banks, etc., November, 1913, to April, 1914.	E	675
Villa had control from April, 1914, to September, 1915; forced loan of 3,000,000 pesos.	E	677
Villa evacuated town in September, 1915; Carranza occupied until December, 1916, when again captured by Villa; good order under Villa.	E	681
Ordered out by State Department April 23, 1914.	E	682

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page.
Re purchase of 250,000 acres of land for guayule, part of same being claimed by one Hernandez, relative of Madero; fighting in courts, finally being forced to settle with Ernesto Madero; loss estimated at $1,000,000; claim on file known as Acatita claim.....	E	688
Mr. ———	P	178
Mining engineer; in Mexico 15 years; properties in State of ———	P	178
In June Federal troops burned one of mines; was arrested and started to San Blas.....	P	180
Entire party was captured by rebels; affiant escaped and made way to Tepic; with aid of German consul made way to American cruiser, where took refuge and was brought to United States.....	P	181
In June, 1918, Gen. Calles, while on way to Mexico City, burned and destroyed the other mine owned by affiant, taking away everything that could be moved; protests made to both Mexican and American State Departments; no relief.....	P	182
Had been repeatedly robbed prior to destruction of property; rebels would take all supplies they could carry, stack the rest in the street and burn it; these matters always reported with evidence to American State Department.....	P	183
All surface property now destroyed and mines flooded with water; has caretaker living on property.....	P	184
For some time one mine was in charge of rebels and the other in charge of Federals; mines 20 miles apart; forced to pay taxes to both sides..	P	188
Witness exhibits several photographs of his destroyed property, of Mexicans hanging to trees.....	P	189
Re holding of Whitford, an American citizen, prisoner by rebels, who would cut off a finger at a time and send it into Tepic to his company; after sending all his fingers he was finally murdered; witness exhibits photo of place where man was held.....	P	190
Mr. ———	9	482
Residence, Hachita, N. Mex.; went to work for the Land & Cattle Co. in 1909, D. R. McCormick, foreman; ranch in Mexico; was at Campbell's wells, 7 miles north of Corner Ranch just prior to Villa's raid on Columbus; was at Warren's Alamo Hueco, N. Mex.; in jog Sunday before, but at Campbell's wells first he heard of it; at Culberson's ranch a captain showed him a telegram from Slocum, stating that Villa was coming north on his way to Washington by way of Columbus; this was two or three days prior to raid; took mules over to Culberson's ranch, 16 miles from Alamo Hueco.....	9	483
Locates lines and places; goes into Mexico to find McKinney.....	9	485
Struck a trail at Biznaga Larga, about 1,000 horse tracks, going north; followed it 6 miles; 3 miles east of Corner ranch they turned southeast from Corner ranch; quit trail because saw fires west, seven big camp fires; stayed all night at Campbell's, saw them break camp next morning with spyglass; later turned out they were Carrancistas and not Villistas.....	9	488
Turned back when they found Villa's trail: describes Villa's route toward Columbus; went to Alamo Hueco and reported to United States officer what he had seen; then informed that Villa had raided Columbus and was coming to Hachita that night.....	9	497
Did not know that McCormick had been captured; captured Luz Ortiz, Simon Verdugo, who were in raid; delivered them to United States officers; later knew that McKinney, Corbet, and O'Neil had been captured and killed by Villistas.....	9	499
Andy Peterson, Akard, and Jenson killed near Corner ranch.....	9	505
Relates happenings of Silvestre Quevedo and about 18 men and at different ranches under his supervision.....	9	506
Relates poisoning of several horses by mistake.....	9	507
Continues statement leading up to and including murder of above-mentioned men.....	9	509
Quevedo strung Mexican up to make him tell where Fonville was...	9	516
Lem Spillsbury found the three bodies.....	9	517
Tom Kingsbury disappeared, supposed to be dead.....	9	518

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page
Describes Villa's trail to Columbus; followed it after raid.....	9	519
Carrancista depredations; Birchfield stuff taken by Jose Ines Salazar; took 251 horses.....	9	524
McCornick held for ransom; he took the money one time, Stevenson thereafter.....	9	529
Mr. ———	F	728
Testified regarding holdup by Carrancistas and demand for $30,000; was eyewitness to killing of Lee Moya at this time by Carranza soldiers	F	732
Testified re shooting of John Fads by Carranza soldiers.....	F	733
Mr. ———	9	573
Manager ——— ranch, ——— district of ———, 17,000 cattle; now less than 1,000; arrested by Carranza Red Flaggers, held for ransom September 20, 1915.....	9	575
Foreman taken also; Manuel Gutierrez, Carrancista, was in charge; paid $10,000 for release.....	9	576
Wife shocked; has never gotten over it; house looted; trouble, loot, robbery ever since.....	9	577
Went after bodies at Carrizal with others; recovered bodies and brought them to El Paso.....	9	578
Teeth knocked out; Mexican offers to sell them; gold crowned.....	9	581
Col. Rivera, Carrancista, was in charge, after murders.....	9	582
Heard of monument to be raised to Gomez, who was leading murderers at Carrizal; never knew honest or honorable Carrancistas; no protection.....	9	583
Not one punished by Carrancistas; one only by Villa, and later he was executed for his zeal in assisting us.....	9	584
Gen. Ornelas, Villista, turned over Juarez to Carranza; later made Carranza official; later killed by Villa.....	9	585
Depredated upon by Villa, details; battle, Villa Ahumada; row between Villa and Martin Lopez; Angeles peacemaker; 12 miles to Carranza garrison; did nothing.....	9	586
Villa took property valued at $30,324.75 when he went south.....	9	588
No attempt to intercept Villa by Carrancistas; details route of Villa, Lopez, and Angeles; Carrancistas did not want to eliminate bandits.	9	590
Everybody against Villa and Carranza; want peace.....	9	592
Losses $996,442; no reimbursement.....	9	593
Complaint to State Department referred to Gen. Espinosa, who did the robbery, and Murguia, who "cursed me out," saying, "Refer your complaints to me;" asked Gen. Gonzalez for protection; sent 50 soldiers, who "stole $5,000 worth of property from us"; asked to say nothing about it; not paid; inspector general broke into store and took what he wanted; took cooking utensils; camped in patio; used house for closet.....	9	594
After battle of ——— took everything and destroyed balance; favors intervention as the only way; Frank Knotts and Bruce Smith held for ransom by Villa; witness and foreman arrested by Lieut. Col. Nicolas Quiroga, Carrancista, for trying to release Americans; given much trouble; American consul, Chihuahua, James Stewart, did nothing; refused to see him after release; 100 families on ranch, all loyal.....	9	596
Document from Martin Lopez, ordering that property be not removed by witness; suffer the consequences.....	9	602
Mr. ———	G	18
Went Mexico, 1917, in charge metals department ——— Oil Co., Tampico district.....	G	18
Testified re robbery Cortes Oil Co.; several Mexicans were arrested by Carrancistas, but all released; murder of Ed House and Stevenson of Texas Oil Co.; matter reported, nothing done.....	G	18
All Americans in Tampico district loyal; all in draft age came out and went to war.....	G	20
Had to sign waiver holding Carranza government not responsible for any harm to self or family upon entering Mexico; conditions so bad had to get out.....	G	22

	Part.	Page.
Mr. ———	S	2
Engaged in mercantile business at Colonia Morelos from 1906 to 1913; described flourishing condition of colony, how homes, schools, and churches were built, etc.; first trouble when colony was destroyed by Salazar; made trip with American consul to inspect colony after destruction; what few houses that had not been destroyed were occupied by Mexicans; consul made full report to State Department, sending photographs of destruction, etc.; Mexicans stated they were occupying property under authority of Gen. Calles, who had given it to them.	S	2
Colony consists of 122,000 acres of land under valid titles; is at present time still occupied by Mexicans.	S	8
Battle of Agua Prieta; Americans killed.	S	9
Predicted another revolution in few months, based on knowledge of conditions and what Mexicans have told him.	S	11
Believes that presence of Gen. Dieguez, Carranza commander sent to Sonora, will cause revolt of Sonora from balance of Mexico.	S	13
Believes that only solution is intervention, although from interest personally would not like to see it.	S	16
Can not see solution of anti-American situation in Mexico due to fact that young generation now growing up in Mexico are having hatred of Americans taught them.	S	17
Mr. ———	9	563
Now candidate for governor of ———, was ordered by Carranza June, 1919, to organize "Defensas Sociales" in Chihuahua; he made speeches saying he was going to divide up all Gringo property, etc.; asked for 100 horses; refused; he confiscated 49, all they had; June, 1919, robbed again of cattle; kicked; Murguia demanded apology; permission was given to feed hungry people; witness purchased 1,000 hectoliters of corn, sent to governor for distribution; every grain was sold and not one grain reached the starving people; Mexicans on ranch absolutely loyal; hundreds killed defending property, taking care of the widows and orphans.	9	564
Mexicans caught stealing cattle, 1920, arrested by his men; jailed; confessed; later released, and bill, $48, sent him with word that if in future he sent thieves to jail to send money for their board; this shows attitude of Carrancistas; no hope for relief or reform.	9	566
Not sufficient horses left on ranch to run it; took all imported stallions and improved stock.	9	567
Attitude of Mexicans along Pershing route very friendly; begged Pershing to stay and give protection; 1 per cent of people in favor of revolution, balance against it; 25,000 inhabitants in districts named, 99 per cent against Carranza; Gen. ——— not a Carrancista, but an anarchist, popular because he promises to divide the property to Mexicans; large properties.	9	568
Conditions flourishing prior to Madero revolution; thieves always punished under Diaz, but very little violations; never knew of a holdup; safer there than in United States; not punished now; Government stands in with that class and assists them; had thorough acquaintance with all through that district.	9	570
Went there 1903; 65,000 head of cattle; taken prisoner by Orozco in 1910.	9	532
Relates capture, treatment; wanted ransom; saved by Orozco, sr.	9	533
Assisted wounded soldiers; finally released; Madero apologized.	9	534
Orozquistas, 250, had battle with witness; Rojas made the attack.	9	535
Gives description of battle and losses.	9	536
Killed several Mexicans; escaped to main ranch.	9	537
Had several fights with Mexicans; threw bombs in house.	9	539
Ran Castillo across river, where he was captured; same that burned train in Cumbre Tunnel; deported to Cuba by United States; Villa published a demand for him.	9	543
Always received protection and assistance and good treatment from Huerta.	9	544
Villa notified him that he could not maintain armed forces in Mexico; that started the trouble with Villa.	9	545

Mr. ———Continued.

Part. Page.

Villa's army maintained from his ranch after battle of Celaya; robbed many times.....	9	546
Execution of Mr. ———, bookkeeper.....	9	547
Gen. Manuel Medina Veitia then joined Carranza forces and is now an officer; Castillo issues offer to Carranza offering services to expel Yankees from Veracruz.....	9	550
Quevedo, Carranza official, is a general.....	9	553
Daughter of foreman, ———, taken by Martin Lopez and violated; kept 10 days; later took 200 girls from Namiquipa and kept them with army; many died; many not over 10 years old; later abandoned in mountains and many died from abuse or starvation; American killed at Nahuera chic, Chihuahua, by Gen. Julio Acosta forces; robbed ranch; later battle with Gen. Pedro Favela of Carranza forces, who whipped him and recaptured all loot, which he kept for his own use, "Botin de Guerra".....	9	555
Appealed to Gen. Murguia; did no good; Favela killed hundreds of cattle, sold hides, gave meat away, shipped hides; very offensive; protested about killing cattle; put messenger in jail, kept him in jail 27 days, threatened to execute him for protecting American interests; cost $1,000 to save his life; Gen. Corona also depredated same as Gen. Avila.....	9	556
Home guards named by Favela and Corona, worst men in country; they continued to depredate under authority; Villistas took 280 head big steers; Carranza gave him amnesty and appointed him to a command and in return he turned over the beeves for 10 pesos a head; Carrancistas refused to give them back; later sent soldiers and took them back and they were slaughtered in Chihuahua; worth $80 or $90 a head.....	9	558
Williams robbed of cattle by Carrancista general, Herrera; paid him $10 a head to get them back; later sent soldiers and took them back and slaughtered them in Chihuahua; Gen. Quevedo killed milk cows on ranch; vindictiveness; treated Mexicans as bad as Americans because they were "our friends"; several pages of robberies by all factions.....	9	559
Mr. ———	7	1
Mining engineer; professionally in Mexico, 1906 to 1916; in Jalisco, Aguascalientes, Michoacan, Sonora, and Chihuahua; no trouble in time of Diaz, much trouble after revolution started; had peace in Sonora when Villa was there.....	7	2
Generally understood that United States was backing Villa until Carranza was recognized; break with Villa caused raids on Americans by Villa when United States allowed Carranza soldiers to cross the United States soil.....	7	4
Arrangements made for American miners to enter Mexico at El Paso at the Obregon dinner, January 9, 1916; United States in favor of Americans returning to Mexico; Mexican general at Juarez notified Americans that passports were not necessary to enter Chihuahua; previous to this passports to enter for entire party had been secured, 20 going to ———, one to Chihuahua.....	7	6
About 40 Americans were in party going to Mexico; on same train Gen. Trevino told Dr. Watson that 1,000 troops had been sent ahead for protection; not allowed to carry arms; felt secure; salesman told him later in El Paso that he had received advice from a Carranza officer that it was not safe to make the trip.....	7	8
Nineteen Americans were in party for ———	7	12
Five miles beyond Santa Isabel had trouble.....	7	13
Relates details of massacre.....	7	15
Antonio Lopez was in charge; does not think Villa was responsible for it; ex-colonel told him Villa was not there; no Mexican on train was killed; sure massacre was prearranged, for reason that when the Mexicans took Americans from train one remarked: "We are one short," indicating they had a complete knowledge of how many secured passports; the 1,000 soldiers were not seen along the line.....	7	17
Doubts statements made by Trevino; two Mexicans at Isabel rode up and asked if any soldiers were on board and to size up train.....	7	21

	Part.	Page.
Mr. ————	8	816
Lives Mesilla Park, N. Mex.; property in Chihuahua; doing business there since 1880; at breaking out of Madero revolution had 40,000 head of cattle on ranch; none on ranch now; brought eighteen or twenty thousand to the United States; under Diaz good; then nearest Federal garrison was Chihuahua, 210 miles; no protection since; no notable difference between Carrancistas and Villistas; amount of loss filed with committee about $700,000; lost control of ranch and used it.	8	818
Silvestre Quevedo killed Chinaman; Villa sent Lopez ahead; lined up ——— people; accused them of being traitors because they were loyal to witness; Villa arrived next forenoon; hung men up by wrists to bells; whipped them with a sword to make them tell where arms and ammunition were hidden; got no information; lined up five and killed them; sixth man was given letter to Col. Saenz at Casas Grandes, that he, Villa, would be there by next forenoon and wanted to see him; widows and orphans of these men are pensioned by company and are in New Mexico.	8	820
Had two large farms; people happy and contented; good wages; 100 families then; now only five; received no protection from Carranza Government.	8	823
Carranza officer by name Cisneros shipped carloads of stuff from this ranch to Durango; Carrancistas committed vandalism; gave lists of members of company and residence of each; deriving no revenue; paying $6,000 per annum; 600,000 acres in ranch; State Department kept fully advised; horse stock improved; some costing four or five thousand dollars a head; ranch stocked with all red Durham cattle.	8	824
Mr. ————	N	1
Correspondent Chicago Tribune; went to Mexico December, 1919; introduced copy of report made by ———, giving list of all outrages against companies during the years 1918 and 1919 (insert 1); also written report made by Mr. ——— relative to outrages committed on American colony at Atascador (insert 2); personally visited Atascador colony and found same deserted, confirming report made by ———.	N	3
Re attempt to murder man named McDonald near Tampico, in December, 1919; McDonald stated that the Mexicans tried to murder him because his brother had made a statement to an investigator for the State Department and the Mexicans had found it out; the local magistrate in the district in which McDonald lived showed him a verbatim copy of the report made by the State Department investigator not later than 30 days after his brother had made his statement; the report had evidently passed through official channels back to the Mexican Government, although his brother had been promised that he would be protected in every way.	N	5
Large companies operating in Mexico able to pay for protection; small man not able to operate because can not afford to pay.	N	7
Statement of ———, ranch in Chihuahua and Sonora, that in 1910 had 100,000 head cattle and in 1920 less than 12,000, due to depredation of bandits and present Mexican Government.	N	7
Mr. ————	L	24
Read into record list of killed and wounded on American side of line in Nogales district during past three years.	L	27
Re killing of Frazier brothers on American side of line in Nogales district by bandits; to trailing bandits to line where American troops were compelled to stop.	L	40
Gen. Jesus Ferrera, chief of staff of Gen. Dieguez, is very anti-American.	L	43
Re smuggling of ammunition by Mexican consul at Nogales, Ariz., also by paymasters of Mexican army.	L	47
Re fight between Yaqui Indians and Carrancistas during February, 1920; re fact that Yaqui is good worker and all right if let alone; unable to trace any murder of American to Yaquis.	L	51
Re objection to American flags being displayed in Nogales, Sonora, prior to activities of Senate committee.	S	21
Since appearance of committee on border, Mexicans in ——— have assumed a more friendly attitude for policy sake.	S	23

	Part.	Page.
Mrs.	N	9
Exhibited to the committee Mexican bonds of the State of Chihuahua, City of Parral, City of Veracruz and Cordoba. Interest had been paid prior to 1910. No interest paid since that time.
Mr.	K	2
Does business principally in Mexico. States of Nayarit and Sinaloa.	K	2
Principal crops sugar and garbanzo; most of garbanzo crop handled by Obregon during 1918-19; money handled through Nogales banks.	K	5
Knows of Cananea riots in 1906 when Dieguez, now Carranza general, was leader of Reds.	K	6
Knew of lot of murders being committed near Guaymas by Yaquis in past few months.	K	8
Believes Carranza government will be able to restore peace and prosperity to Mexico.	K	19
Believes that present peaceful condition in State of ——— due to order being maintained by state troops.	K	19
Judges Carranza government by his relations with ——— State government; admits has had no dealing with Federal Government.	K	24
Does not allow any goods he sells in Mexico to cross line until money is paid.	K	28
No money hardly in circulation in Sinaloa and Nayarit except American money.	K	31
Mr.	5	2512
Travels over States, Laredo to Mexico City, Veracruz, Oaxaca, Tamaulipas, Guanajuato, Jalisco, Mexico, Michoacan, Aguas Calientes, Zacatecas, Durango, and Chihuahua; acquainted with Mexico 22 years; only prosperous place he saw was Tampico; opening of silver mines in Guanajuato by foreign capital improved a little, gave employment to 6,000 natives; former population of Guanajuato 75,000, down to 5,000 in 1916-17, now gone back to 40,000; everything shut down in Torreon; good cotton crop; Durango in very bad shape.	5	2512
American sawmill only plant in operation; Zacatecas had population 1910, 35,000, now only 9,000; stores all closed; many residences vacant; no traffic on streets; all mines shut down but one; Chihuahua in poor shape; mines and smelter not running to full capacity; dangerous away from railroad.	5	2515
Gives causes of smelters being shut down, lack of necessities, lack of transportation facilities and materials; people living on prickly pear; refutes statement of Inman, page 177 his book, as to population of San Luis Potosi; conditions there very bad; people living on tunas, prickly pear.	5	2517
Refutes statement of Douglas as reported by Weeks in November, 1919, that people were prosperous; crops good, etc., between Laredo and Mexico City; houses in San Luis unfinished; people without work, hungry; not contented; opinions of Mexicans that all factions were in it for what they could make, had no thought for betterment of their people; lives and property unsafe 20 miles from any railroad; speaks of definition of bandits, several captured but country not bettered; refutes Douglas again; in Oaxaca less than 10 per cent of people of country controlled by Carranza; Government can make no impression on that section.	5	2522
Veracruz similar to Oaxaca; disturbances, robbing of plantations, running managers away, etc.; in Puerto Mexico Castulo Perez raided the Waters Pierce Oil warehouse, destroyed 50 or 60 thousand pesos worth of oil; attacked Minatitlan, captured 40 pesos goods; no cattle there, stolen and shipped from country.	5	2524
Cattle shipped by Candido Aguilar 1914-15; conditions Jalisco average, considering conditions; American robbed there of several hundred cattle; his name is ———; along coast cattle taken by combination of Carranza officers under pretence of threatened revolution in that section; Manuel Dieguez and Juan Jose Montes leaders, three-eighths to each, balance to men who took them; Jesus Cintora with 6,000 men in Guerrero levies tribute on haciendas; he is anti-Carranza; levied tribute 50,000 on a sugar company; gets arms and ammunition by whipping Carrancistas; properties intervened by Carranza because they were old Diaz adherents.	5	2527

Mr. —Continued.

Part. Page.

Properties turned over to his favored friends; robbed them of everything they had; was with rebel leader Meixueiro, who controls Oaxaca, Villa Alta, and Choapan; has 5,000 well armed men; treats people fairly well; people very anti-Carranza; will not take his money; his issue gold refused, American money only in circulation in Tampico.....	5	2532
Was with Felix Diaz; has very small force in Veracruz, poorly armed and scattered; half the ammunition used by rebels in Mexico Mexican manufacture, other half American, very little European ammunition there; larger part bought or captured from Carrancistas; rebels can not take offensive for lack of ammunition; gives condition of arms in hands of rebels; Americans liked there but Washington Government very unpopular on account of recognition of Carranza and not allowing them to get arms and ammunition.....	5	2535
Rebel leaders criticized treatment of Blanquet and Angeles by our Government, giving passports, etc.....	5	2539
Saw Carranza officers loot many business houses and residences when Carranza took Mexico City.....	5	2541
Lucio Blanco stole 170 horses; police tried to prevent looting; 30 to 150 killed, then disbanded.....	5	2543
Oregon arrived Mexico City August 19, Carranza later.....	5	2544
No change in looting and robbing houses; many men shot for minor offenses, bodies laid out on street; one officer, lieutenant colonel, shot for being drunk in Colon restaurant; no generals shot for looting or bothered; Carranza officers took fine horses from neighboring plantation.....	5	2545
Details destruction in Durango; churches torn down by Gov. Gavira; many dead in ruins dug up, carted to fields; influenza took from 10 per cent in Durango to 40 per cent San Pedro de las Colonias, Coahuila; malnutrition cause.....	5	2548
When Villa took Torreon cut off ears of enlisted men and testicles and penises with butcher knife; reported by officer who was under doctor's care one year; details raping of girls in most brutal manner by rebels and Carranza staff officer, Gen. Merigo.....	5	2550
Gives account of "gray automobile" affair.....	5	2553
Gives account of how Gen. Pablo Gonzales secured several haciendas in Morelos through his agent, Canedo; sugar deals also; 17 haciendas taken in this way; machinery disposed of, etc.; parts sold to copper-smiths in Mexico City.....	5	2555
Oregon and his garbanzo deals; gives details of Jack Johnson-Sanborn incident; Juan Barragan and Merigo forced them to serve Johnson..	5	2556
Killing of McManus, Mexico City; killed by Barona, a Zapatista.....	5	2558
Had conference with Bryan reference killing of McManus, insulted; Government was supposed to protect Americans, but they should so comport themselves they did not require protection; Villa paid indemnity to Mrs. McManus, $20,000 gold; only indemnity paid in history of revolution.....	5	2559
Indemnity paid by Madero in 1911 for four Germans killed in Cova-donga, $100,000 silver; Von Heintz threatened Madero that Bremen would seize Veracruz if not paid; only two more Germans killed after this incident, one "Thadun" in Colima and a storekeeper in Durango; Germans treated well in all revolutions; Mexican admire Germans for their fighting qualities and because they did not believe the great war was fought for betterment of smaller nations; again goes into condition of railroads and guards; stations destroyed.....	5	2561
Blockhouses, railroad repairs temporary; only 25 per cent of Mexico under control of Carranza; very little security in any part of Mexico.	5	2564
One hundred and sixty schools closed for lack of funds out of 360 in city, leaving 116,000 children without instruction; teachers charged on collection of their 75 per cent salary.....	5	2566
Opinion on rehabilitation of Mexico; no man from inside can put Mexico on her feet; must have outside assistance; quotes Mexico history for 100 years; no help for them from inside; condition Mexico to-day normal.....	5	2569
Favors plan as with Cuba.....	5	2572
Discusses agrarian problem, lengthy; relates Red Cross story in Oaxaca; Wilson refused to have anything to do with them, although they had the money for supplies and expenses.....	5	2576

	Part	Page
Mr. _____	O	85
Testified relative to immoral conditions at Tia Juana, Baja Calif., Mexico, and requested that the committee do something looking to the regulation of the passport law in order that the deplorable condition might be bettered	O	86
Mr. _____	D	549
Lived in Mexico since 1897, State of Veracruz; speaks Spanish fluently; re conversation in room in Hotel Francis at Zacatecas latter part of 1915 between Gen. Francisco Murguia and Gen. Benjamin Hill of Carranza army; doctor was in adjoining room and could hear plainly; Murguia and Hill were discussing invasion of United States with assistance of Japanese and American Negroes, etc.....	D	550
Re Gen. Palacios, Carranza commander at Tezuitlan, who was the doctor's former coachman; now very wealthy.....	D	552
Re Gen. Macara, Carranza general now in Michoacan, is illiterate son of de la Torre; was pimp and was serving term for murder when released by some faction; now wealthy.....	D	554
Re Carranza elections in Tezuitlan wherein box was declared unanimous for Carranza in 1916, although doctor had helped 69 Mexicans fill out ballots against Carranza; Mexican colonel was elected senator and celebrated by shooting several people.....	D	557
Was arrested in April, 1914, day after landing of Americans in Veracruz by Col. Hernandez of Huerta army; was told that Mexican troops had captured all border points; had captured San Antonio, Tex., 10 o'clock that morning and would march on Washington next day; was sentenced to be publicly executed in plaza at _____ at 1.30 that evening; execution not carried out but was forced to walk out of country.....	D	562
Mr. _____	L	16
Lived in Cochise County, Ariz, 25 years; was interested in _____ cattle company across the line in Sonora, Mexico; compelled to cease operations at great loss on account revolutionists helping themselves to cattle and horses.....	L	18
Testified relative to different attacks on Naco, Sonora, Mexico, and killing of American citizens on Arizona side of line; became so bad that could not get juries to hold inquests over bodies of persons accidentally killed in Naco, Ariz.; military did nothing to stop shooting; approximately 50 persons killed and wounded.....	L	19
Mr. _____	10	685
Cattle and real estate: refers to report of former committee, conditions chaotic then; names companies he represents; list of their properties. Conditions under Diaz good; reverse now; paid ransom for McCormick, $5,000, held by Lincho Miranda; $5,000 for "Bunk," a Negro, and E. R. Spencer, same to Salazar; later paid again for "Bunk" to Miranda, Bunk Spencer; paid $5,000 ransom for Englishman, _____ ranch, resulted finally in his death; $5,000 ransom for W. N. Fink, paid to Marcelo Caraveo; $5,000 ransom for Ledwidge; $5,000 paid by William Benton for his foreman, Solis; knows ransom paid for Stevenson, Smith, and Knotts.....	10	688
Conditions west coast bad; protection from Carrancistas asked for soldiers two weeks ago, none sent.....	10	692
Knows and has known all factions, none give protection, no chance for better conditions; no honorable Mexican in power since Diaz; in that time there were perfect conditions and protection; none worthy of confidence, but Villa as good as any.....	10	694
Present at Obregon banquet in El Paso, Tex., just prior to Santa Isabel massacre. Gave absolute promises of protection and invited miners and Americans to return to his northern jurisdiction; gives names of men massacred at Santa Isabel by Lopez, Villista; _____ headed party that brought bodies to El Paso; gives details as to massacre and how and when it was reported to him.....	10	697
Chairman reads statement of massacre as before prior Senate committee.....	10	704
List of names, statement of _____	10	706

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page.
Statement of Jose Maria Sanchez.....	10	708
Report of Dr. Felix P. Miller.....	10	709
Lansing note to Carranza, January 12 through Silliman, Arredondo's reply.....	10	717
Quotes Carranza guarantee upon recognition.....	10	718
Statement of conductor of train, extra No. 41, out of Chihuahua, 11.50 a. m., January 10, 1916, about massacre.....	10	719
Witness confirms to all statements of witnesses and report as just read into record reference to this massacre.....	10	721
Mr. ———	R	24
Been on border 23 years.....	R	24
Was present and eyewitness to first shot fired in Nogales fight of August, 1918; Mexican customs officer started fight; gives detailed account.	R	26
Re picture show put on in Nogales, Sonora, describing Nogales fight, wherein Mexicans were shown butchering American soldiers, etc....	R	30
Never heard of Americans invading Mexico committing thefts.....	R	32
Never heard of Mexican officers delivering to American authorities anyone who was wanted in this country for outrages.....	R	33
Was arrested in ———, ———, for having arrested a Mexican on the American side of the line; release obtained by personal courage of Vice Consul ———.....	R	34
How Mr. Venado, an American, was robbed of 3,000 head of cattle by Mexican officials in 1917.....	R	36
Thinks majority of Mexicans who are American citizens and who live on American side loyal to United States.....	R	43
American merchants in ——— secure favors from Mexican officials by bribery.....	R	44
American merchants in ——— placed themselves in contempt of all good Americans by closing stores on Mexican holidays and remain- ing open on American holidays.....	R	45
Re American consul appearing during Nogales fight and waving white flag; his official position prevented loyal Americans from killing him for cowardice.....	R	46
Re murder of Al. P. Hennessey by Mexicans in State of Sonora.....	R	47
Murders of Americans in Sonora attributed to Yaqui Indians were in reality committed by Mexicans.....	R	48
Mr. ———	3	1
Exporter into Mexico, dynamite, implements, etc.; runs own trains in Mexico; American Metals Co. and the American Smelting & Refin- ing Co. also run trains.....	3	2
75 to 85 per cent of all freight handled by the national lines of Mexico is handled by privately owned trains.....	3	4
All pay regular tariff rates to Government; no trackage fees; expenses of guards paid by American companies; no reduction for this; ma- jority of trains only run at night, account danger from rebels.....	3	5
Roadbeds going from bad to worse; bridges temporary, many destroyed, built up on ties; ties in roadbed in bad shape; engine repairs made in Mexican shops plus 15 per cent, very expensive.....	3	7
Gives instance of bad condition of engines; revenue turned over to Government.....	3	9
Pescador, railroad director, resigned on account graft; graft in securing cars for freight explained.....	3	11
Explains how and to whom they deliver freight to companies.....	3	13
Two Americans in Mexico City bought a lot of farming implements; few days later robbed of everything and held for ransom; not in bandit country, but within 10 miles of the city.....	3	15
Only small enterprises owned by Mexicans, large ones by foreigners..	3	17
Discusses American business, American railroad men and Mexican railroad men; difference, Mexicans run trains for personal gain, no thought of public welfare.....	3	19
Mexican newspapers state not a Mexican store on calle de Francisco I. Madero. All wealthy institutions owned by foreigners; Mexican stores in side streets; was in Mexico City when lights went out, kept in house about that time.....	3	21

	Part	Page
Mr. ———	M	2
Owned large ranch across line in ———, Mexico; during time May-torena and others were fighting on his ranch helped themselves to cattle and horses, etc.; finally bribed one faction for $6,000 gold to stay away for three days till could run what cattle were left across to American side; appealed to Washington, but received no response..	M	5
Taxes in Sonora increased 40 times what they were before the revolution.....	M	10
Mr. ———	L	2
Testified relative to different attacks on Naco, Sonora, Mex., and shooting of Americans on American side of line; was himself wounded has been cripple since that time.....	L	2
Mr. ———	14	2
Went to Mexico 1881. railroad man; American railroad men ran out of Mexico; roads went down immediately; Mexicans not able to keep them up.....	14	4
Conditions good under Diaz; began to be bad when Madero started; very little banditry; put down by Diaz.....	14	5
When Madero fell, people were pleased with Huerta; Huerta congress would not back him to put down revolution; he put them out.....	14	7
Trouble with Carrancistas and Villistas in Panuco; mules lost, not paid for.....	14	8
Every one robbed, commanding officer, Gen. Larraga, Carrancista, sold to Spaniards near San Luis Potosi.....	14	9
Carrancistas business to rob, etc.; ——— also lost mules; we had to stop work.....	14	10
Ropes put around him and another American; gives account of experiences.....	14	12
Gives description and impression of Pelaez, good.....	14	14
Little security any where in oil fields.....	14	16
Relates bad conditions, robberies, etc.....	14	17
Relates killing of Bowles and Rooney.....	14	24
Robberies and murders not committed in Pelaez territory.....	14	25
Relates resistance of Americans to robbery, killed.....	14	26
Pelaez secured ammunition from Carrancistas.....	14	27
Gives account of trip out of Mexico, February, 1920.....	14	28
Discusses attitude of Government toward oil companies, drilling, etc.; Buckley can not return to Mexico.....	14	31
Rather testimony would not be published; wants to return there; Mexican official Maderista said United States needed a President like Roosevelt. Roosevelt would tell us where to head in and we would do it.....	14	38
Liberty to Mexicans means license to rob, murder, etc.....	14	39
Mr. ———	1	1
Carranza officers responsible for robbery of pay rolls, etc.; Lieut. Col. Carraiges and two captains head of robbers; five peons employed, second time to kill paymaster.....	1	2
Company robbed 25,000; Carranza officer shot.....	1	3
Company fed Carrancistas, did not feed Palaez soldiers; five British citizens murdered, June 6, 1915.....	1	4
Safe robbed; commissary taken.....	1	5
Prior to arrangements, Pelaez robbed them, Gen. Chao and 300 men..	1	6
——— and ——— explain payment to Pelaez.....	1	9
Plan of "Tierra Amarilla," return to constitution of 1857; Pelaez army composed of landowners, small farmers.....	1	12
American laborers of company had to get out, 1916-1918.....	1	13
Demanded protection from company before returning.....	1	13
Stevenson killed, many beat up; companies of Doheny, Tex., Gulf, and Cortes left on account bad conditions.....	1	14
Doheny godfather of Indian children, treated them well and they liked him; did much for people and country; explanation of why Carranza soldiers are against Americans.....	1	15
Carranza hostile against Americans; education of Mexicans in the United States causes them to hate us; ———; Bonillas educated here; married American woman; hates us.....	1	16
Statement of Pelaez, what he would do if we intervened; letter from Felix Diaz to Pelaez, and answer thereto.....	1	17

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page.
Would not be as well protected under Carranza as under Pelaez; his pipe line 52 kilometers; Doheny pipe line 100 miles.....	1	19
Mr. ———	6	2
Made study of history and character of Latin Americans; in Mexico September to October, 1919; relates travels and business in church work; conditions of travel next to impossible, except from Laredo to Mexico City; all trains carried armed guards; bridges temporary, dangerous.....	6	3
Monterrey fairly prosperous; laborers greatly reduced; Tampico lively and good business; some Mexican laborers paid by Americans as high as $16 pesos a day, overtime, etc.; 4 to 12 pesos average wages for peons; in addition to above wages, house, lights, etc., given them, ice and water also, and corn sold to them at cost; Americans found them eight years before as peons, took them, educated them, and made finished artisans of them; peons received 25 to 50 centavos when they took charge of them eight years before.....	6	6
Prosperity in Tampico due to oil men; gives conditions in Pachuca, Queretaro, Torreon; only average, dull; calls Zacatecas "The city of the living dead"; only 9,000 inhabitants, against 75,000 a few years ago; no traffic, no work; only 300 men employed in that district....	6	9
Cargador told him he had formerly been a foreman in a large smelter, receiving 12 to 14 pesos a day, now had to carry baggage as cargador; cause, the revolution; did not think any party in Mexico can bring peace; people living on prickly pears, tunas, very poor; no corn nor beans and tunas only to last two months; asked what would become of them when tunas were gone, answered "Quien sabe;" San Luis Potosi, poor people living on tunas, conditions bad; very little supplies in stores in Zacatecas and San Luis; church people, bad condition; no congregation; people all gone; poorly clad.....	6	12
Apathetic movements, half starved, pitiful; populace did not respond to music and parade of policemen; normal population of Mexico City 500,000, now 1,000,000; rural people crowded to city for lack of protection in their homes; can not imagine how they existed, no work for them; streets, very bad sanitary conditions; back streets an abomination; worst he ever saw, worse than the crude, filthy streets in China.....	6	15
Two hundred schools out of 360 lack funds; teachers went on strike; rapid-fire guns turned on them; Mexicans acknowledged it true some had been wounded; refutes statement of Douglas in Mexican Review of November, 1919, about good conditions there; beggars throng trains, men, women, and children; larger portion are not well dressed nor clean.....	6	18
Refutes statement of Dr. Winton, in his letter to League of Free Nations, under date of November 26, 1919, as to good conditions in Mexico; witness states that while he was traveling in Mexico there were 17 wrecks on trains and roads over which he traveled, showing that the country was not at peace; 13 of them were blowups and 3 removing fishplates and rails, causing destruction of several hundred lives; if that is peace, then they have peace in Mexico; Government controls about 25 or 30 per cent of the country; in those sections they have incursions of rebels.....	6	21
Calls attention to our consular agent, Jenkins, taken from second largest city in Mexico; gives pitiful account of starving children clawing and fighting over banana peels thrown out of window, proving that the "kiddies" were hungry.....	6	23
Pitiful story of hungry boy begging for fig peelings; everything of like nature thrown near track eaten by starving people.....	6	24
Disagrees with Inman that troubles of Mexico caused by American exploitation; says it is untrue; people of Mexico have been benefited by Americans; explains.....	6	25
Disagrees with Inman on class of Americans in Mexico.....	6	26
Only found one disreputable American and he was a lieutenant colonel in Carranza's army (see p. 136 of Inman's book); in given locality in United States would be hard to find a like class who did not measure up to class in Mexico; generally men trained for some particular trade go to Mexico; therefore better all-around class.....	6	27

Mr. —Continued.

Part Page

Refutes statement made by Inman in letter to mission board, February, 1919, "Riot call," "Great missionary program to be destroyed," etc.; found general feeling among clergymen of Mexico disgusted with and very bitter toward Inman for his stories.....	6	29
Invited to a meeting in the city to protest as to Inman, but refused to hear anything as Inman was not present; feeling against him very bitter; "Wide in statement of fact, and missionaries not allowed to do propaganda work or take part in politics"; refutes Douglas statement about "Growing confidence in ability of Mexican officials to set Government on firm foundation".....	6	31
High officials told him present Government could not make good, neither could Obregon, and the election of Obregon meant another revolution; asked if Gonzalez was elected or if Carranza stays in what would be the outcome, answers "Another revolution".....	6	34
Another said he would fight intervention and the invader, but would surrender his arms, as he was a sensible Mexican; both Mexicans were loyal Federals and leading and influential men; another leading hacendado said intervention was the only thing for Mexico and bound to come; gives other interviews with leading men, Mexicans, all to same effect.....	6	35
Talked to many leading women of Mexico; 100 per cent wanted armed intervention by United States.....	6	35
Relates conversation with highly educated Mexican woman, who asked "How long are your American women and men going to permit us to be used as we are by our own people?" read whole story..	6	36
This conversation typical with all with whom he conversed; landlady at hotel asked them when is that American Army going to get down here and clean this thing up? Educated Mexican women not afraid of American soldier; knows the record they left at Veracruz; more afraid of her own soldiers than the American; Carranza army made up of penitentiary birds, press gang peons, recruits who lost all they had and enlisted in the army to get even.....	6	39
Relates of boy and others whom he saw with ears cut off by Villa, and officers had their privates cut off.....	6	40
Opinion mixed as to intervention by foreigners in Mexico; great majority against it, but thought United States could settle it; Spaniards 100 per cent for intervention; only way.....	6	41
Not able to say what should be done, but if armed intervention is the only way, the quicker the better; something must be done if we expect to be or to appear self-respecting; if course right in Spanish War, Philippines, Cuba, and Porto Rico, right in Mexico; does not believe educational, religious, or charitable projects can be successful in Mexico without material benefits that come from industrial enterprises; one needs the other.....	6	43
Estimate by people who know $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 needed to rehabilitate Mexico. $150,000,000 needed for railroads alone, quotes English engineer; 15,000 miles of railroads in Mexico; recognized that force of arms necessary for distribution of money in Mexico; believes armed intervention inevitable; suggests that A. B. C. taken in on deal even if we had to pay all bills, to remove general distrust of United States.....	6	45
Bull fight's not eliminated from Mexico; attended a brutal one at Aguascalientes; refutes Inman when he says atrocities, depredations, and murders exaggerated in Mexico, while in Mexico daily papers give horrible accounts of them all; gives many instances of insecurity, one wherein attempts in streets of Mexico to kidnap servant girl, she was saved by witness; this occurred at 4 p. m. at Jockey Club in heart of city.....	6	50
Mr. —.....	E	538
Carranza policy one of interference in his district, 539; Mexican officials told him they would not permit Mexican laborers to cross to fill war contracts against the German Government, as they considered Germany better friend than America.....	E	539
Carranza officials offered to do personal service or favors for him but not for American Government.....	E	540

Mr. ———Continued.	Part.	Page.
Carranza Vice Consul Pena, told him their passports regulations were not because Mexico needed it but was in retaliation of our regulations.....	E	542
Re smuggling ammunition in June, 1919.....	E	543
Re killing of immigration officers, Hopkins and Hill, by Mexican smugglers, May, 1919; Carranza customs authorities present on Mexican side at time.....	E	545
Mr. ———	13	2
Mexican citizen; refugee from Mexico; bad class of Mexicans in power in Mexico, do not want good class there; refugees scattered all over world; compares releasing of prisoners from jails and penitentiaries in this country and placing them in power; such is condition in Mexico to-day; men in power in Mexico to-day are same as jail birds in this country; no hope for peace in Mexico till that kind of people are out of power and the good people back in Mexico.....	13	3
Nephews not allowed to work in Mexico, for they are for law and order; suggests private capital in hands of honest men to bring peace; only 1 per cent ran away from Mexico still honest men there.....	13	4
Favors importation of arms from this country to the free honest class in Mexico who would overthrow the bad ones; rebels have proven in their districts law and order prevailed.....	13	6
Favors withdrawal of recognition from Carranza.....	13	7
Reads letter from sister showing suffering in Mexico.....	13	8
Her condition represents suffering by all in Mexico of the unfavored class.....	13	9
Gives condition of 100 in his family, deaths, etc.....	13	10
Armed American forces not necessary for peace; favors allowing honest Mexicans to have arms and settle it themselves.....	13	11
Asks one more chance; if failure, then intervention, which would be acceded to by all good Mexicans; pleads for just one more chance....	13	12
Carranza not honest in his promises to this Government; sole object to gain power in order to rob, murder, and steal.....	13	13
Financial situation in Mexico.....	13	15
Mr. ———	M	12
Started in 1906; no difficulty till Madero revolution; mine raided, mill burned and commissary robbed by man named Campa, who claimed to be revolutionist; compelled to abandon property in 1913.....	M	13
Mine confiscated by State authorities who turned same over to Mexicans who are still trying to operate it; appealed to governor who stated would not do anything; told him would appeal to State Department. He laughed and pulled from drawer of desk roll of papers and said: "Here are some claims of Americans that have appealed to their State Department; they have all been referred to me; go ahead and appeal".....	M	19
Forced by Carranza official to carry message from Carranza forces through Villa lines to another Carranza force.....	M	22
Operated ranch in district from 1913 till 1917; had 4,500 head of cattle.....	M	16
Ran out of country by ———, managed to sell some of cattle; loss over $75,000. No claim filed.....	M	26
Re on one occasion during time of ——— Mexican soldiers took American flag and tied it to tail of horse and drove through town.....	M	32
Were preparing for round-up and Col. ——— army took all their saddle horses so could not round up.....	M	33
Re killing of his cattle for hides by men.....	M	34

INDEX.

	A.	Part.	Page.
A. B. C.....		19	2776
Action, direct, socialists and I. W. W.'s.....		17	2507
Activities:
At Laredo, Tex.....		20	2949
Carranza, military.....		22	3209
German-Mexican.....		22	3241
Mexican Government, through Carranza.....		20	2898
Pro-German, of Carranza, to be offset.....		20	2903
Affidavits:
Filed with State Department.....		18	2739
Of Mr. ———, kidnaped by Villistas.....		22	3286
Agrarian law, Sonora.....		12	1843
De la Huerta, governor, letter of.....		12	1844
Problem.....		15	2193
Question.....		18	2688
Agua Prieta, attack on:
By Gen. Blanco.....		12	1875
By Gen. Villa.....		12	1876
Aguila Oil Co.....		17	2526
Shareholders of.....		17	2533
Aguilar, Candido:
Efforts to save daughter from.....		18	2651
Tribute paid to.....		1	276
Alliance, Carranza-Spaniards.....		19	2863
Altendorf, Dr. P. B.....		8	1229
Alvarado, Salvador:
Agent, publicity, for revolution.....		20	2918
Aguilar, Candido, describes.....		20	2929
And Hopkins.....		20	2918
Anti-Carranza propaganda.....		20	2918
Arbitrary methods of.....		7	877
Atrocities—
Carranza allows to keep in power.....		20	2921
In Mexico.....		20	2917
Bandits, reason for leaving.....		20	2921
Berlanga, M. A., servile tool of Carranza.....		20	2928
Bolshevism, center of.....		19	2820
Bonillas—
Accepts nomination.....		20	2928
Describes.....		20	2928
Interferes with legislation, United States Senate.....		20	2928
Running for Carranza.....		20	2924
Cabrera, Luis, hatred for Americans.....		20	2928
Calles, describes, as Satan.....		20	2933
Canceled money issues.....		7	882
Carrancistas responsible for outrages.....		20	2922
Carranza—
Could have eliminated Villa.....		20	2920
Declared against Huerta.....		20	2933
Describes.....		20	2933
Lunatic.....		20	2934
Political plans of.....		20	2926
Revolted against Madero.....		20	2933
Theft from Government.....		20	2920
Will be killed.....		20	2922
Dictator, merciless, inhuman.....		7	879
Diaz, Felix, oath to kill.....		20	2937
Dieguez, Gen. M. M., describes.....		20	2929
Ditch Obregon, to.....		20	2916

	Part	Page
Alvarado, Salvador—Continued.
Division of land, Indians refuse.....	7	890
Elections, Carranza's method for stealing.....	20	2923
Families, soldiers', left in Sonora.....	20	2921
Forces of, defeated by Diaz and Pelaez.....	20	2938
Governs under revolutionary plan.....	19	2820
Gonzalez, Pablo—
Describes.....	20	2929
Manifestos of, in Puebla.....	20	2930
Ordered become pro-ally.....	20	2930
Gutierrez, Manuel Rodriguez, describes.....	20	2929
Hinojosa, Cosme, letter of.....	20	2924
Intervention sure, predicts.....	20	2922
Letter, open, to Carranza, Obregon, Gonzalez.....	1	36
Mexico not safe for Mexicans.....	20	2927
Millionaire, a.....	20	2938
New York—
In, to finance revolution.....	20	2918
On Carranza.....	20	2915
Paymasters, defaulting.....	20	2920
Pelaez, M., oath to kill.....	20	2937
Plan to remain in power.....	20	2921
Propaganda to fool the United States.....	20	2931
Publicity bureau for candidacy.....	20	2937
Record in Yucatan
A robber.....	20	2939
One of blood.....	20	2911
Represents Obregon.....	19	2825
Revolution—
In Sonora.....	20	2926
Obregon—
Camouflaging.....	20	2927
Not head of.....	20	2927
To back.....	20	2927
Worst approaching.....	20	2922
Rouaix, Pastor, describes.....	20	2929
Scheme for Presidency.....	7	888
Seized railroads, etc.....	7	875
Socialistic enterprise in Yucatan.....	1	31
Speech against President Wilson.....	20	2930
Summons of, by Senate sub-committee.....	20	2919
Visits Washington.....	19	2825
Wealth of, from poverty.....	20	2920
Zapata, murder of.....	20	2930
Alvin, A. D., testimony of.....	8	1088
American enterprise to advantage of Mexicans.....	11	1719
forces competent to handle Mexican situation.....	10	1573
Americans:
In colonies illtreated.....	11	1718
In Mexico—
And Mexicans, good feeling between.....	22	3227
Arrested by Mexican troops.....	15	2179
Attitude—
Their Government toward.....	6	777
To American Government.....	9	1453
Blessing to country, not exploiters.....	9	1405
Brought out by British officers.....	15	2181
Capture and ransom of.....	10	1572
Common people of Mexico friendly to.....	19	2844
Compelled to leave Veracruz.....	15	2185
Crossing border must go unarmed.....	22	3242
Diaz decree protecting.....	11	1726
Dictators, military, enemies of.....	19	2844
Feelings against, and other foreigners.....	13	1972
Four, murdered, Lower California.....	18	2738
High class in Mexico.....	18	2711
List, additional, of, killed in Mexico.....	22	3256
Lopez killed, at Santa Isabel.....	9	1423

Americans—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
In Mexico—Continued
Near Mexican ports, report on.....	22	3207
Not allowed to go armed.....	22	3240
Opinions of, as to what ought to be done.....	9	1454
Paid for what they got.....	9	1433
Pan-Latin Bolsheviks, enemies of.....	19	2844
Peons believe can do with, as they please.....	11	1723
Plan to drive out.....	18	2726
Policy of United States ordering, out of Mexico.....	9	1423
President's attitude toward.....	6	777
Protected by British.....	8	1153
Put mining on flourishing basis.....	9	1463
Radical and robber class against.....	22	3240
Renegades.....	9	1433
Return of some.....	15	2183
Returning arrested and mistreated.....	18	2755
Safe anywhere under Diaz.....	22	3240
Salazar boasted of outrages on.....	18	2752
Taken out on German ship.....	8	1156
Taunted by Mexicans.....	18	2749
Threatened in Guadalajara.....	8	1153
To be run out of Mexico.....	7	884
Wanted to get out and stay out.....	18	2754
What they have done.....	7	886
Do.....	9	1458
American solidarity.....	1	6
Ammunition offered Gen. Osuna.....	1	58
Anderson, J. E., testimony of.....	12	1827
Angeles, Gen. Felipe:
And Col. Glover.....	10	1574
Photo of.....	19	2781
Sacrificed to a great cause.....	19	2806
Anglin, Capt. Everette, testimony of.....	8	1302
Annin, Joseph P., testimony of.....	5	715
Anticlericalism in Mexico.....	18	2668
Antireligious agitation, why.....	18	2699
Antiintervention Association, American.....	19	2762
Appendix, Capt. Hanson's testimony.....	22	3250
Araujo, Antonio P., indicted.....	17	2516
Arce et al., United States at war with Mexico.....	22	3279
Arce v. State of Texas, reversed.....	8	1203
Archbishop, letter to.....	18	2652
Argumedo, Abel Ortiz:
Governor of Yucatan.....	7	874
Forced letter of credit.....	7	882
Arms and ammunition:
Contracts for.....	4	679
Embargo on.....	6	792
Fletcher refused allow enter Mexico.....	4	680
Foreigners not allowed to have.....	13	1971
Shipments of.....	6	793
To Salvador, by Carranza.....	22	3212
Army, revenue spent in maintaining.....	1	25
Arredondo, Eliseo:
Letter to Lansing on protection.....	20	2915
"Reguladora," return of.....	7	888
Associated Press, influence against Mexico.....	1	117
Association:
Citrus Fruit, Gulf Coast.....	22	3225
National, for the Protection of American Interests in Mexico—
Charges against.....	12	1865
Purpose of.....	1	290
Receipts and disbursements of.....	1	190
National, for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico.....	2	403
Charged with being interventionist.....	2	408
Publicity matter.....	2	403

	Part.	Page.
Atascador colony abandoned.....	11	1717
Atrocities in Mexico.....	20	2917
Atwood, L. P.:.....
Affidavit of.....	17	2599
Losses in his section, list of.....	17	2601
Ault, Leroy H., testimony of.....	15	2229
Austin, Mrs. Mary, testimony of.....	8	1312
Avila, Eleuterio, governor of Yucatan, forced loan.....	7	874
Axelson, C. H., subscription list, Magon movement.....	17	2502
Azcona, Washington junta, arrested.....	17	2529
B.
Bacon, chairman Foreign Relations Committee, October 25, 1918.....	19	2880
Bagge, Nils Olaf, testimony of.....	9	1426
Bailey, Mrs. Lola C., testimony of.....	8	1027
Bailey, Senator Joseph, Senate joint resolution 129, transportation of refugees.....	17	2640
Baird, kidnaped.....	8	1155
Baldwin, T. D., store robbery, Riudosa.....	10	1536
Bandit conditions improving.....	1	25
Banditry:.....
Generals evaded wiping out.....	19	2863
Kept alive by Carranza generals.....	9	1433
No intention of wiping out.....	19	2875
No, meant no military organization.....	19	2863
Wiped out by Diaz.....	19	2875
Bandits, Carranza authorities stand in with.....	10	1573
Do.....	10	1660
Bankers, New York, and bunch of bandits.....	5	694
Banks in Sonora.....	12	1834
Large sums taken from.....	5	693
Metallic reserves seized.....	11	1752
"Barbarous Mexico".....	9	1362
Do.....	18	2687
Barnes, A. C., testimony of.....	12	1869
Barnes, Maj. R. L., testimony of.....	8	1231
Barra, Francisco L. de la:.....
Exile.....	18	2722
Nominated by Catholic party.....	18	2704
Vote for.....	18	2704
Bartch, G. W., testimony of.....	18	2719
Diaz and other notables, met.....	18	2720
Mining in Oaxaca.....	18	2719
Railroad—.....
American policy in.....	18	2721
Building, engaged in.....	18	2719
Concession for.....	18	2720
Bonds for.....	18	2720
Not built.....	18	2720
Battle at Nogales, Ariz., 1918.....	12	1849
Beauregard, Commander A. T., testimony of.....	22	3216
Interpreter for admirals.....	22	3219
Opinion on solution of Mexican question.....	22	3220
Winslow, Admiral, on staff of.....	22	3216
Beaty, Amos L., testimony of.....	2	528
Becker, Henry:.....
Affidavit of.....	17	2625
Robbery of.....	17	2625
Beggars in Mexico.....	11	1679
Abundant.....	11	1673
Belts, German, from raiders in Texas.....	8	1290
Benavides, loyal Texas Americans.....	22	3243
Benton, William, murder of.....	11	1784
Berlanga, M. A.:.....
Carranza letter to, on Texas raids.....	7	902
Letter from Carranza to, re Lino Caballo.....	8	1224
Servile tool of Carranza.....	20	2928

	Part.	Page.
Bernstern, Sadie L., letter from, to R. Flores Magon.....	17	2500
Big Bend district, Texas:
Conditions in.....	10	1643
Unsafe for years.....	10	1535
Bisbee, deportations from.....	12	1882
Bishops and archbishops.....	18	2657
Blackford, Francis W.....	9	1401
Blalock, George E., testimony of.....	8	979
Blanco, Gen., letter of, to Farnsworth.....	18	2732
Blanquet and assistance.....	1	57
Blessed sacrament exposed.....	18	2651
Blocker, John R., testimony of.....	8	1177
Boca de Copa plantation.....	8	1073
Bollinger, D. B., testimony of.....	8	1073
Bolshevism:
All Mexico to adopt.....	19	2820
Cabrera's views on.....	6	829
In Yucatan.....	7	890
Salvador Alvarado center of.....	19	2820
The fact.....	18	2700
Bombs:
At train wreck, Texas.....	8	1298
Taken at Mercedes, Tex.....	8	1293
Bonillas, Ignacio:
Given credit for release of cartridges.....	19	2867
Jones Bros. and subcommittee of Senate.....	20	2965
✓Lansing, bitter against.....	20	2967
Legislation in United States Senate, interferes with.....	20	2928
National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mex- ico threatened.....	20	2965
Obregon and Gonzalez, to have withdraw.....	20	2966
Booker, Lewis E., testimony of.....	17	2613
Americans treated—
Well under Diaz.....	17	2615
With contempt under Madero.....	17	2615
Proclamation of President Wilson, effect bad.....	17	2615
Protection, none for life or property.....	17	2613
Robbed.....	17	2614
Booklet on Americans.....	20	2954
Boundary, international situation as to.....	12	1812
Boynton, Charles H., testimony of.....	2	403
Bowman, H. E.:
Affidavit of.....	17	2597
Losses, robbery, outrages.....	17	2597
Brandon, Gerald, testimony of.....	14	2037
Expelled from Mexico, as pernicious foreigner.....	14	2038
Investigated Jenkins case.....	14	2038
Breckenridge, killed at Ayutla.....	8	1160
Bribery and corruption.....	8	1008
Business impossible without.....	19	2864
Trade with United States impossible without.....	19	2864
Brown, Edward N., testimony of.....	11	1789
Brown, Rev. Edwin R., testimony of.....	14	2071
Bryan, W. J.:
Attitude of.....	13	1973
Original and changed.....	11	1709
Do.....	13	1914
Conference, Carothers, with.....	11	1771
International committee, labor, wired.....	6	802
Intrigue with Nicaragua.....	20	2899
Letter of.....	18	2669
Letter to, extradition of Salazar.....	19	2770
Secretary, statement of October 28, 1918.....	19	2880
Bryant, V. V., testimony of.....	14	2159
Buckley, William F., testimony of.....	6	767
Burbank, Roscoe C., testimony of.....	14	2148

	Part.	Page.
Burkhead, L. L., testimony of.....	10	1605
Burnett, Charles M., testimony of.....	15	2169
Bullets, dum-dum, at Columbus, N. Mex.....	10	1609
Business, big:
And Mexicans.....	8	1007
In Sonora.....	12	1841
Byam, Eber Cole, testimony of.....	18	2684
C.
Caballo, Leon:
Is Agustin S. Garza.....	8	1210
Letter, Carranza to Berlanga, reference to.....	8	1224
Cabrera, Luis:
Bolshevism, views of, on.....	6	829
Friendly to United States.....	20	2899
Grafting in sugar.....	9	1388
Issues of paper money.....	5	693
Letter to Trowbridge.....	1	16
Not a friend to the United States.....	18	2669
Running Americans out of Mexico.....	7	882
Telegram to Senator A. B. Fall.....	8	1019
Calero, Manuel:
In Huerta cabinet.....	9	1440
Lied to United States.....	20	2929
California, Lower, invasion of.....	19	2830
Calles, Capt., arrest of, kidnaping Ibarra.....	14	2066
Cal y Mayor, bandit chief.....	7	869
Campa, E., testimony of.....	14	2157
Canada, William Wesley, testimony of.....	16	2421
Americans leaving Mexico—
Cause.....	16	2436
Huerta offered pay fares.....	16	2440
Orders to arrest.....	16	2423
Cabrera, Luis, speech to drive out Americans.....	16	2424
Church, Catholic—
Of good influence.....	16	2442
Carrancistas made barracks of.....	16	2442
Douglas, Charles A., Bryan's letter introducing.....	16	2429
Files, proposal to steal his.....	16	2442
Gold and silver bars, theft of.....	16	2425
Luis Cabrera on, and answer.....	16	2426
Graft, unavoidable under Carranza.....	16	2435
Hall on pay roll of United States.....	16	2437
Huerta friendly.....	16	2422
Intervention, Mexican, favor.....	16	2444
Letter threatening.....	16	2428
Lind, John—
Daily conversation with Carrancistas.....	16	2436
Ideas contrary thereof.....	16	2422
Impressions as to.....	16	2430
Influence of Americans on natives.....	16	2433
Hall and Zapata brothers.....	16	2436
And Shanklin, secret messenger between.....	16	2438
Natives starving, food rotting.....	16	2435
Nuns—
In hiding.....	16	2443
Turned over to Father Joyce.....	16	2442
With child, one.....	16	2443
Outrages, Lind and Silliman justified.....	16	2439
Relations with Mexico until Carranza.....	16	2422
Ryan, D., arrest and release of.....	16	2423
Scavengers, Veracruz, buzzards.....	16	2445
Shanklin, telegram to receive Hall, etc.....	16	2436
Silliman, John R., consul:
Activities of.....	16	2427
In pay of Carranza.....	16	2428

	Part.	Page.
Canada, William Wesley—Continued.
Traps laid for.....	16	2441
Tupper, Henry Allen, in pay of Carranza.....	16	2428
United States Consular Service 20 years.....	16	2421
Weeks, George F., in pay of Carranza.....	16	2428
Candidates, presidential.....	12	1851
Cannon, Bishop James J.....	1	141
Cano, Chico:
Holds Carranza-Villa commission.....	10	1532
Paid in Ojinaga as Carranza officer.....	10	1530
Cantu, governor Lower California.....	11	1872
Caperton, Admiral W. B., testimony of.....	22	3203
Activities, foreign in Mexico.....	22	3212
Instructions, letters of, to commanders.....	22	3206
Letters, confidential, to commanders.....	22	3206
Mexican coast in charge of.....	22	3203
Mexico—
Conclusions as to.....	22	3213
Conditions in, report on.....	22	3210
Impressions of.....	22	3211
Report of, to Navy Department.....	22	3214
Visit and conference, Central America.....	22	3215
Capital requires assurance of stable government.....	9	1353
Capitalists to be driven out.....	19	2820
Carlin, Margaret, affidavit on I. W. W.'s.....	17	2593
Carlin, P. H., affidavit of, looting of home, etc.....	17	2623
Carlson, Carl L., statement of, on Alamo mining camp.....	14	2129
Carney, Mrs. James, testimony of.....	10	1507
Carothers, George C., testimony of.....	11	1755
Conference with Bryan.....	11	1771
Opinion of, as to outside help.....	11	1783
Carpentier, E. L., testimony of.....	17	2626
Arrested, robbed by Salazar's men.....	17	2629
Cannon, made two.....	17	2628
Consul, American, refused to assist.....	17	2629
Fountain, Tom, shooting of.....	17	2627
Frenchman.....	17	2626
Laws, neutrality, arrested violation of.....	17	2626
Spv, charged with being Madero.....	17	2627
Villa joined.....	17	2628
Carrancistas:
Against United States.....	18	2712
All grafting.....	13	1986
And rebels looting together.....	9	1382
Bandits cooperate.....	11	1722
How distinguished from Villistas.....	10	1576
Troops in Mexico City.....	11	1736
Carranza:
Alternative, war.....	12	1848
American Government sustains.....	8	1238
Anti-American.....	18	2712
Assurances to missionaries.....	11	1742
Attitude—
On oil question.....	1	10
To Americans because of Veracruz.....	11	1767
Authorities stand in with bandits.....	10	1660
Calles against.....	19	2797
Can not pacify country.....	15	2245
Controls cities only.....	8	1191
Doctrine.....	13	1969
Doctrine, the, Miss Galindo.....	7	904
Does not travel without armed escort.....	1	88
Executes opponents.....	6	817
General in league with thieves.....	13	1954
Governs by decrees without Congress.....	9	1357

Carranza—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Government—
Based on graft.....	18	2702
Influence young men in.....	1	27
Yucatecans, no respect for.....	14	2050
Helpless in many respects.....	11	1684
Imposition of military governors by.....	6	815
Insulted the United States.....	6	822
Intrigues in—
Central America.....	20	2982
Veracruz.....	22	3204
Letter to Berlanga on Texas raids.....	7	902
Lieutenant, three soldiers, and woman captured.....	8	1320
Message to Congress.....	1	13
Mrs. Carranza crossed border with money.....	5	693
No confidence in.....	9	1452
Note to, and recognition.....	6	805
Reply.....	6	803
Not recognized by Oaxaca.....	11	1669
Oaxaca never recognized.....	15	2185
Orders concentration in populous cities.....	11	1711
Personal character of.....	1	68
Pro-German.....	8	1234
Promises to United States not to be kept.....	20	2916
Protected American slackers.....	8	1236
Recognition—
Efforts to secure.....	1	293
Of.....	19	2862
Refusal to arbitrate with Villa.....	6	806
Revolutionary program.....	17	1720
Soldiers crossed Rio Grande at.....	8	1319
Speech to supreme court.....	6	817
State Department informed.....	18	2712
Strengthened at home by flouting United States.....	19	2869
Sympathy of oil companies for.....	1	279
Ultrainternationalistic.....	1	9
Unable to get teachers for schools.....	9	1357
Villa's estimate of.....	11	1770
revolt against.....	6	799
Carrillo, Felipe:
Acting governor of Yucatan.....	19	2824
Against Pablo Gonzales.....	19	2825
Carried letter to—
"Ambassador" Martens.....	19	2825
"Comrad" Obregon.....	19	2824
Threatened the whites.....	19	2824
Visits socialists in United States.....	19	2824
Visits United States.....	19	2824
Vouched for by Consul de Negri.....	19	2825
Carrillo, Rafael Martinez:
Testimony of.....	7	909
Bail bond of Consular Agent Jenkins.....	7	912
Protest against testifying.....	7	910
Carrizal:
Ambush at.....	18	2760
Fight at.....	10	1569
Castelanos, exile.....	18	2722
Castro, General.....	8	1142
Catholic political party.....	18	2682
Nominated—
De la Barra.....	18	2704
Madero.....	18	2704
Catholics:
And Protestants.....	18	2674
Exodus of, from Mexico.....	18	2667
For law and order.....	18	2715
Mexican, sentiments of.....	18	2669

	Part.	Page.
Cattle, Nufiez, shipping of	10	1556
Central American countries:
Carranza, Peralta, Rosales	20	3078
Three plans shattered	20	2909
Liberal Party—
Carranza to furnish funds	20	2904
Literature, revolutionary	20	3082
To fight United States	20	2904
Plans—
Letters and documents	20	2902
Plot of Morazan	20	2909
Revolution in—
Against Allies	20	2907
Promoted by Obregon	20	2898
Von Eckhardt to make, pro-German	20	2890
Chalices:
Mexican woman sold	18	2651
Thrown into streets by soldiers	18	2651
Used for wine cups at banquet	18	2662
Chamal colonists:
All they owned was in colony	11	1718
Disarmed, at mercy of bandits	11	1714
German, well treated	11	1717
Given tickets to homes as paupers	11	1712
Never asked for protection	11	1718
Not allowed to ship crops	11	1713
Ordered out of Mexico by Bryan	11	1711
Again in 1915	11	1713
Quarantined at Galveston	11	1712
Returned to Mexico—
During Huerta rule	11	1712
After Carranza recognized	11	1714
Chamal colony:
Carrancistas took whatever they wanted	11	1713
Depredations and indignities at	11	1711
Farms left with attendants	11	1710
One hundred families in	11	1709
Robbed by bandits	11	1711
Troubles at, began with Veracruz	11	1711
Chamberlain, George Agnew, testimony of	19	2861
Consular Service, in	19	2861
Commercial feature, special province	19	2863
Consul general, Mexico—
Activities ceased	19	2863
Personal standing swept away	19	2870
Policy—
Efforts of, and ambassador to create	19	2863
Lack of, with Mexico	19	2863
Resignation of, reasons for	19	2870
Charges, Mexican consular, changes in	9	1367
Check:
From Waters-Pierce Oil Co. to Madero	15	2222
Of Huasteca Petroleum Co. to Henry Allen Tupper	1	292
Cherback, A. P., receipt for money from John Kolody	17	2501
Chierago, P., letter and money order to A. L. Figueroa	17	2501
Chinese massacred by Maderistas	11	1761
Do	8	1080
Chuichupa colony, invasion of	18	2733
Church, Catholic:
And state, union of	18	2682
Education by, good	18	2692
For law and order	18	2700
Influence of	18	2725
In Mexico, E. C. Byam on	18	2672
Juarez despoiled	18	2661
Mexicans do not hate	18	2670

	Part	Page
Churches, desecration of.....	18	2650
Church, D. W., testimony of.....	14	2125
Church:
Against intervention.....	1	68
Destroyed in Chiapas.....	7	868
Federation, on propaganda.....	1	68
In Mexico.....	15	2220
Methodist Episcopal South in Mexico.....	1	142
Methodist Episcopal South and Constitution 1917.....	1	153
Priests, character of.....	15	2221
Proselyting.....	1	106
Protestant in Mexico.....	14	2071
Cientificos, who are.....	6	771
Claim filed by J. E. Ellis.....	8	1093
Claims, plantation, La Esmeralda rubber, losses.....	15	2242
Clawson, Joseph, home confiscated.....	18	2747
Clergy, death to, cry of socialists.....	18	2687
Coffee and tobacco.....	18	2699
Colcord, Lincoln:
Hid Martens.....	20	2962
Radical and Fall resolution.....	20	2961
Collectors of customs always pleasant.....	12	1902
Colonies:
American—
In Tampico section.....	22	3236
Pioneers.....	22	3237
Stock raising.....	22	3236
Lost $200,000.....	8	1069
Mormon—
Claims of, investigated.....	18	2723
Confiscation of homes in.....	18	2729
Everything destroyed.....	10	1492
Four thousand driven from.....	18	2739
List of.....	10	1489
Losses at Chuichupa.....	10	1482
No trouble up to Madero.....	18	2723
Protection, none from United States.....	18	2734
Refugees from.....	10	1482
Soldiers, Mexican, nude, bathe in streets of.....	18	2746
Statement of J. Lillywhite.....	22	3253
Colonists:
Atascador.....	8	988
Chamal Tampico.....	8	984
Consul, advices to.....	8	984
Losses of.....	22	3246
Not exploiting Mexicans.....	13	1970
Refugees—
In humble conditions.....	22	3239
Would return to Mexico.....	22	3238
Return of, to Chamal.....	8	985
Wages, raise of.....	8	984
Colony, American:
Atascador—
Farms now jungle.....	13	1958
Lost everything.....	13	1956
Claim filed by.....	15	2186
Medina—
Mexicans seized.....	15	2184
Oaxaca.....	15	2173
Columbus, N. Mex.:
Associated Press agent, George Sees, in.....	10	1579
Before midnight.....	10	1580
Fences cut.....	10	1582
Raid in.....	10	1578
Signal fires.....	10	1581
Warning of coming raid.....	10	1578
Commerce with Mexico, knowledge of.....	19	2863

	Part.	Page.
Commission from—
Captured Mexican, Texas.....	8	1293
International.....	19	2786
Suggested.....	18	2743
Committee, international:
And Mr. Bryan.....	6	802
Missions.....	11	1744
Companies, oil:
Petition of, to President Wilson.....	6	833
Vicissitudes of.....	6	829
Complaints to Mexican State authorities.....	12	1859
Compton, O. G., testimony of.....	8	1059
Concerns:
Large, operated by buying protection.....	19	2885
Small, lost out.....	19	2885
Proof.....	19	2885
Concessions:
Building materials.....	9	1365
Declared forfeited by Carrancistas.....	18	2741
Diario Oficial shows none for Hopkins.....	17	2526
I. C. Thoresen's, described.....	18	2740
Land—
Forfeiture of.....	12	1842
Protest of United States.....	12	1843
Meaning of.....	9	1364
Do.....	11	1759
Not special privileges.....	8	1008
Protest useless.....	18	2742
Selling of.....	9	1366
So-called Pearson.....	17	2532
To import cigarettes.....	8	1008
Condition, normal, revolutionary.....	6	768
Conditions in Mexico.....	1	288
Do.....	9	1451
Attitude of Carranza generals to.....	9	1420
Bad.....	11	1673
Good under Diaz.....	8	1187
Do.....	8	1321
Do.....	9	1401
Do.....	9	1417
Economic.....	9	1456
Financial and commercial.....	9	1350
Grown worse since Veracruz.....	9	1350
Huerta, under.....	15	2231
Improvements, prospects for.....	9	1421
In agricultural districts.....	14	2136
In Tampico.....	8	994
Intolerable and growing worse.....	10	1572
Madero, under.....	15	2231
Not safe.....	11	1680
On Texas side of border.....	8	1266
Religious, and in United States.....	18	2702
Remedy for bad.....	9	1403
Unsafe.....	8	1190
Villa, better under, than under Carranza.....	8	1097
Worse—
After Veracruz.....	8	1143
Below City of Mexico.....	13	1983
Conductors, railroad, American.....	19	2842
Confederation, Revolutionary, of Veracruz.....	19	2820
Obregon one of signers.....	19	2820
Conference, Niagara:
Agreement reached at, violated.....	9	1364
Bryan, Mr., and.....	6	795
Bryan-Carothers.....	11	1771
Letter to Mexican delegates to.....	6	794
Pan-American.....	6	807
Do.....	9	1369

	Part	Page
Conger, Rev. Sidney S., testimony of.....	11	1729
"Conspiracy against Mexico," Thomson.....	8	1126
Constitution, Carranza, 1917.....	6	829
Amendment of.....	18	2682
And church.....	1	153
And prohibition amendment.....	1	121
Article 27 means confiscation.....	8	1188
Offered change as to church.....	1	98
Power of Congress to change.....	1	12
Purpose of.....	19	2770
Radical, Carranza not responsible.....	1	9
Russian Bolshevik, sold in Mexico.....	19	2834
Violated by Catholics.....	18	2694
Who wrote.....	2	607
Consulate, American Guadalajara, destroyed.....	8	1152
Consuls at Nogales:
Implicated by letter.....	12	1902
Not always friendly.....	12	1902
Removal of one.....	12	1902
Contributions, forced, to dredge Tampico Harbor.....	2	534
Convention, Aguascalientes.....	19	2718
Do.....	19	2779
Villa.....	11	1774
Corbin, Dr. Bruce Baker, testimony of.....	9	1450
Disagrees with Dr. Winton.....	9	1450
Crecelius, H. A., letter from, to A. L. Figueroa.....	17	2499
Creel, George, issues an agrarian system.....	18	2690
Creese, telegram to Pesqueira.....	20	2996
Cross, German, from raider in Texas.....	8	1292
Cross, Ida, letters, two, from, to A. L. Figueroa.....	17	2498
Cumbre Tunnel disaster.....	10	1503
Curtis, Bracey, testimony of.....	12	1834
Letter of, on viséing passports.....	12	1869
Cuellar, Guadalupe, statement on raids.....	8	1288
Currency conditions, Monterrey, 1918.....	13	1921
Customs, Mexican.....	18	2625

D.

Dabney, Dr. T. H., testimony of.....	10	1609
Land entry and patent to daughter.....	10	1611
Damage and destruction to property:
Associated Tropical Plantation Co., losses of.....	9	1372
Baldwin's store, Candelaria, Big Bend, Tex.....	10	1548
Brite ranch raid, Texas.....	10	1543
Café of J. E. Ellis, Matamoros.....	8	1092
Damages.....	8	1093
Cattle and horses stolen—
Nevill's ranch, Texas.....	10	1515
Theft of.....	10	1549
Chuichupa colony, losses.....	10	1482
Cleveland ranch, horses stolen.....	10	1525
Colonies, Mormon, robbed of stock, etc.....	10	1484
Colony, Medina, Oaxaca.....	15	2175
Confiscation, Santa Lucrecia, property.....	8	1059
Depredations, Rathbone oil leases.....	2	548
District Attorney Kleiber robbed on train.....	8	1260
Farms and houses of colonists destroyed.....	13	1970
Hacienda, El Conejo, robbed and destroyed.....	10	1502
Hancock ranch, loss of stock.....	10	1527
Horses—
Customs Inspector Webb.....	10	1529
Of C. W. Enders taken.....	8	1080
Garrett, demands for, frequent.....	13	1964
Hotel Ritchie, Columbus, N. Mex., burned.....	10	1603
House, Dr. Hunter, dynamited.....	8	1149
Laguna Corporation, losses.....	9	1350

Damage and destruction to property—Continued.		Part.	Page.
Losses near Los Fresnos, Tex.....	8	1262
McBee cattle stolen.....	8	1013
Do.....	8	1016
Manley, Dr. Paul, lost everything.....	15	2196
Metzenthin, house burned, stock stolen.....	8	1105
Miller, W. W., losses of.....	8	1069
Mining, at Alamo, Lower California, destroyed.....	14	2126
Moore, damages, Columbus, N. Mex.....	7	962
Negro robbed.....	8	1165
Oil companies, safe robbed at Tuxpam.....	14	2131
Pay roll stolen.....	2	589
Do.....	2	599
Paymasters, oil companies, robbed, Tampico.....	10	1663
Piedra Blanca Cattle Co., robbed.....	8	1135
Petit ranch, Texas, cattle stolen.....	10	1523
Plantation, Garrett—
Ruined.....	13	1975
Destroyed.....	13	1963
Power plant at El Oro dynamited.....	8	1096
Property.....	9	1454
A. E. Frasier, loss of all.....	8	1147
Ranch, Rathbone, complete loss.....	2	550
Robbery:
M. Garcia, Texas.....	8	1320
Baldwin, Tex.....	10	1559
Store at Salinero, Texas.....	8	1320
Alexander's store, Texas.....	8	1256
W. E. Frasier.....	8	1142
Saddles, books, etc., Garrett, burned.....	13	1966
Schuls—
Disarmed and robbed.....	8	1065
Wife robbed on train.....	8	1065
Schultz robbed.....	10	1496
Scrivner's store robbed and burned.....	12	1908
Sturgis ranch, Chiapas, total loss.....	7	935
Sugar plantation, Rathbone, robbed.....	2	548
Theft—
From auditor Tabasco Plantation Co.....	9	1383
Watch and surgical case, Dr. Horton.....	11	1721
Veater house burned.....	10	1490
Vista Hermosa Sugar Co., total loss.....	15	2206
Property confiscated.....	15	2208
Ward, J. G., robbed.....	8	1166
Whitley, Miss, robbed by Maderistas.....	8	1084
Wright, Mrs. Mary, losses.....	8	1026
Damages and outrages:
Abduction of Mexican girl.....	8	1115
At Atascador colony.....	8	992
At Chamal colony.....	8	986
Bailey ranch destroyed.....	8	1027
Baird and Neal stabbed.....	8	1151
Blocker ranch—
Cattle driven off.....	8	1179
Stock taken.....	8	1178
Conrad and Huff wounded.....	8	1257
Depredations.....	8	993
Forbes and Martin wounded.....	8	1257
Frost, A. B., wounded twice.....	10	1615
Gourd, Misses—
Rape of.....	8	1142
Ravished.....	13	1950
Do.....	8	1041
Harvis, wounded, Texas.....	10	1532
Home of Elias burned, Texas.....	10	1519
McCain and Wallace wounded, Texas.....	8	1270
Medlin and McElroy, arrest of.....	8	1143

	Part.	Page.
Damages and outrages—Continued.
Metzenthin's sister assaulted.....	8	1105
Monohan and Huff wounded, Texas.....	8	1266
Montell's store burned, Texas.....	10	1518
Moore, Mrs., wounded, Columbus, N. Mex.....	7	959
Mother of Mrs. Sturgis starved to death.....	7	929
Do.....	7	869
Negro's wife ravished.....	8	1165
Personal.....	2	533
Plantation, La Esmeralda rubber, destroyed.....	15	2241
Ranch near Acapulco destroyed.....	8	1088
Robberies at Tampico.....	2	531
Do.....	8	1006
Soldiers wounded—
Norias, Tex.....	8	1310
One, Glenn Springs, Tex.....	10	1518
Two American officers wounded, San Benito, Tex.....	8	1182
Two American soldiers burned, Glenn Springs, Tex.....	10	1518
Willis, H. J., wounded, Texas.....	8	1342
✓ Dato, Pablo, German and German agent.....	20	3023
Documentary evidence to prove.....	20	3026
Dean, Edwin G., testimony of.....	10	1612
De Bekker, L. J., testimony of.....	2	331
Telegram quoted by.....	2	345
Decree, Carranza, death on strikers.....	19	2839
Delamain, G. O., testimony of.....	8	1135
Ranch foreman of, ransom.....	8	1179
De Negri:
Abuses newspapers.....	20	2953
And Bonillas to ruin Fall, Hanson, etc.....	20	2952
Conferences with.....	20	2943
Criticizes Fall.....	20	2952
Feelings of, toward Fall, etc.....	20	2946
Letters—
In relation to.....	20	2900
To New York Herald "bunk".....	20	2953
Offer to publish derogatory information.....	20	2945
Offer of $100,000 if above are ruined.....	20	2946
To purchase documents.....	20	2946
Outrages on Mexicans in United States.....	20	2953
Threat to assassinate Fall and Hanson.....	20	2956
Fall warned.....	20	2956
Hanson warned.....	20	2956
Deportations:
Bisbee.....	12	1882
Causes leading to.....	12	1886
Of Americans.....	15	2240
Depredations. See Damages and outrages.
Deavernine, Raoul E., testimony of.....	7	906
Not adviser of Carranza.....	7	907
No part in bail matter of Jenkins.....	7	908
Desavastation, trip of.....	14	2136
Diaz Colony, colonists driven from.....	18	2731
Diaz, Felix:
And England.....	20	2978
And Japan.....	20	2978
Correspondence and codes.....	20	2978
Shannon letters to.....	20	2978
Diaz, Porfirio:
Controlled Mexico by threat of intervention.....	18	2701
Country safe under.....	18	2685
Law and order under.....	11	1765
Miztec Indian.....	19	2815
Honest man.....	19	2864
Official family grafters.....	19	2864
Liked Americans.....	18	2722
Dickman, J. H., testimony of.....	9	1372

	Part.	Page.
Dictatorship necessary to Mexico.....	22	3214
Diseases:
Averages higher than in United States.....	19	2878
Venereal.....	1	71
Documents in appendix to Hanson testimony.....	22	3248
Dodds, S. S., testimony of.....	8	1250
Dodson, Thomas M., letter from, to editor of Regeneracion.....	17	2504
Doheny, Edward L., testimony of.....	1	207
Enemies of, Mexican Government attempts to make.....	1	272
Research foundation.....	1	271
Donoho, Harry O., testimony of.....	14	2130
Douglas, Charles A.....	6	814
Says United States wishes to discredit Senate subcommittee.....	20	2947
Strong letter to Pablo Gonzales.....	20	2960
Dowe, O. C., testimony of.....	10	1556
Draft explained to Mexicans.....	8	1240
Dublan colony:
Mormons, exodus of, from.....	18	2730
Raid on, by Salazar.....	18	2729
Dunn, James, letter to, from Melbourne.....	17	2603
E.
Eck, R. H., testimony of.....	10	1503
Economic control of Mexico.....	19	2873
Edmunds, George L., testimony of.....	2	423
Education:
By Catholic Church good.....	18	2692
Of Indians described.....	18	2692
Election, 1912, votes in.....	18	2704
Elections:
Mexico.....	13	1973
Yucatan.....	19	2817
Veracruz.....	19	2818
Five classes disfranchised.....	19	2818
Elias, Mother, testimony of.....	18	2649
Carranza, first trouble under.....	18	2649
Diaz, no trouble under.....	18	2649
Discalced Carmelite, a.....	18	2649
Nuns—
Four, hiding in Mexico.....	18	2654
Lewd women posed as.....	18	2651
Priests held for ransom.....	18	2655
Returned to Mexico.....	18	2651
Sisters—
About to become mothers.....	18	2651
And priests, sport of church.....	18	2651
Attempts to rob.....	18	2652
Kept in hills with soldiers.....	18	2651
Ellis, James E., testimony of.....	8	1091
Emery, Sloan W., testimony of.....	15	2203
Enders, C. W., testimony of.....	8	1077
Horses of, taken.....	8	1080
Claims for, filed.....	8	1080
Ranch owner, Santa Rosalia, Chihuahua.....	8	1077
Enemy trading act.....	19	2863
Esteva, Miguel A., testimony of.....	9	1361
Consul of Mexico.....	9	1361
Experts:
American financial, to Mexico.....	1	10
Citrus, from California.....	22	3225
Exodus of families from Chamal colony, Tampico.....	8	983
Extradition of criminals.....	12	1860
Difficulties of.....	8	1275
Discussion of.....	8	1275
Impossible.....	8	1299
Pedro Baz and Antonio Rocha, granted.....	8	1299

	F.	Part.	Page.
Factions will never get together.....		18	2743
Fall, Senator A. B.:
Cabrera, Luis, telegram to.....		8	1019
Criticized in Mexico.....		10	1663
Evidence, documentary.....		8	1226
Interests of, in Mexico.....		19	2793
Statement of.....		8	1130
Letter—
To President Wilson.....		19	2790
To, from T. V. Rancke.....		20	2972
Mexican secret service investigating.....		8	1120
On purpose of subcommittee.....		12	1862
Resolution of, danger of, if passed.....		20	2967
Scheme to murder.....		20	2952
Senate resolution—
No. 127, refugees, El Paso.....		17	2640
No. 335, Sixty-second Congress.....		17	2496
Evidence taken under.....		17	2496
Report on.....		17	2634
Subcommittee, proposal to ruin.....		20	2968
Famine in Mexico.....		19	2872
Farms, acreage of, in United States and Mexico.....		18	2689
Faulkner, plantation.....		8	1073
Favela, Juan:
Burn oil fields.....		20	2974
Dangerous.....		20	2974
German spy and linguist.....		20	2975
Plan to assassinate Fall, etc.....		20	2970
Report on, Villa, Columbus, N. Mex.....		10	1589
Secret service agent, Carranza.....		20	2969
Figueroa, Anselmo M., letter:
And money order from—
P. Chierago to.....		17	2505
G. C. Kraal to.....		17	2505
From H. A. Crecelius to.....		17	2499
Two, to, from Ida Cross.....		17	2498
Figueroa, Emiliano Lopez, testimony of.....		7	895
Not in Mexican secret service.....		7	905
Protests against testifying.....		7	895
Finances of Mexico.....		5	727
T. R. Lill.....		3	611
Flag, American:
In Tampico incident.....		6	778
Mexicans tore up, at Tampico.....		11	1712
Torn and burned at Guadalajara.....		8	1154
German captured, from raiders in Texas.....		8	1291
Fletcher, Ambassador:
Cartridges, release of, for Carranza.....		19	2867
Hissed in Mexico.....		20	2967
Nieto, to negotiate with.....		19	2867
Opinion of.....		19	2867
Would not act.....		20	2895
Flores, Chino, confession.....		8	1297
Fly, Col. B. F., aided in kidnaping near Yuma.....		14	2068
Food question.....		22	3208
Foodstuffs:
Bought by American colony, sold by Obregon.....		9	1391
Embargo on, in 1915.....		9	1391
Exportation of.....		6	804
While the people starve.....		9	1391
Ford, Dr. C. Oscar, testimony of.....		11	1677
Foreigners:
Pernicious, expelled as.....		14	2038
Treatment accorded.....		13	1974
Forres, Henry, testimony of.....		8	1186
As to E. E. Dickason.....		22	3284
Disagrees with preachers as to peace in Mexico.....		8	1194

Forres, Henry—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Not allowed to denounce own land.....	8	1189
Recalled.....	8	1241
To denounce own land, bribery necessary.....	8	1189
Forrest, Wilbur, testimony of.....	14	2046
Left Mexico to escape capture.....	14	2051
Foundation, Doheny Research.....	1	271
Frazier, W. E., testimony of.....	8	1141
General business, Blalock colony.....	8	1141
Jailed by Mexicans.....	8	1145
Freedom, religious, in Mexico.....	18	2670
Frezieres, F., account, expenses, from Julio Mancillas.....	17	2500
Frias, Gen. Nicaragua, conspiring with Mexico and Germany.....	22	3216
Frost, Archibald B., testimony of.....	10	1614
Fruits:
Citrus—
Acreage of.....	22	3224
Destroyed.....	22	3228
Other, in same section.....	22	3226
Production, Tampico.....	22	3226
Fuller, Paul.....	6	814
Funston, Gen. Fred., attitude at Veracruz.....	9	1440

G.

Gale, Lynn:
Close to Carranza.....	8	1237
Investigated.....	8	1236
Galindo, Miss, the Carranza doctrine.....	7	904
Gamboa, great statesman.....	18	2722
Gandara, Prof., Mexico City.....	22	3225
Garbanzo crop, handling of.....	12	1854
Garcia, Andres G.:
Letters of.....	20	3000
Obregonista.....	20	2926
Garcia colony, invasion of.....	18	2733
Gardner, C. L., testimony of.....	8	1111
Conductor, railroad.....	8	1111
Garrett, William C., testimony of.....	13	1961
Planter of henequen, Tamaulipas.....	13	1962
Gates, William.....	2	335
Testimony of.....	1	305
Do.....	19	2806
Archæology—
Interested in.....	19	2811
Wrote articles on.....	19	2811
Article of, David Lawrence quotes.....	1	306
Article by—
Not at request of interests.....	1	328
Why he wrote.....	1	329
Baker-Gates correspondence.....	1	310
Secretary, correspondence with.....	1	307
Correspondence, mission published.....	1	308
Intervention—
Against.....	19	2845
No conspiracy for.....	1	329
Not influenced by.....	1	329
Letter—
Pelaez to Secretary Bacon.....	19	2816
Secretary Baker to.....	19	2807
And exhibits.....	19	2808
Mexico, student of.....	19	2808
Professor, honorary, museum.....	19	2809
Propagandist—
Is not a.....	19	2813
No agreement for.....	1	330
Ruins, Mexican—
Expenses paid.....	19	2813
Visited by.....	19	2812

	Part.	Page.
Gavito, Vicente Sanchez, testimony of.....	9	1439
Approves—
Bulnes's book.....	9	1442
Calero's book.....	9	1441
House in Mexico City looted.....	9	1442
Intervention, against.....	9	1448
Member Mexican Senate, 1912.....	9	1439
Germans:
And Alvarado.....	19	2824
Back of plan to take Texas.....	8	1311
Coffee plantations, well treated on.....	13	1990
Families—
At Atascador.....	8	993
Well treated by Carrancistas.....	13	1956
Flag as protection in Texas.....	8	1311
Mexican activity.....	22	3241
Mexicans gathered information for.....	8	1239
Officers trained Mexicans.....	8	1322
Orders not to kill, in Texas raids.....	8	1264
Propaganda.....	8	1240
Mexican consuls in false.....	8	1240
Tampico.....	8	994
Treatment of.....	9	1424
Were to furnish arms, etc., for Texas raids.....	8	1264
Gilkey, Herbert S., testimony of.....	11	1667
Carranza not recognized by Oaxaca.....	11	1669
Depredations by bandits in 1911.....	11	1669
Labor, no trouble with.....	11	1668
Rio Verde Agricultural Co., Oaxaca.....	11	1667
Glover, Col. Francis W., testimony of.....	10	1573
Angeles, Gen. F., note to.....	10	1574
Plans of, for crossing river at El Paso.....	10	1576
Godchaux, ammunition case.....	20	3029
Gold, export of, to Mexico.....	12	1855
Gompers, Samuel:
A. F. of L., position of.....	17	2641
Alliance, Labor, Mexicans initiated.....	17	2643
Appeal to Mexican labor.....	19	2833
Carranza notified of recognition.....	17	2642
Declaration of, and E. C. of A. F. L.....	17	2645
Defends radical Magon brothers.....	17	2641
Letter of—
To Secretary Casa del Obrero Mundial.....	17	2643
How distributed.....	17	2644
To President Wilson recommending Carranza.....	17	2642
Mexican labor, relations, etc.....	17	2641
Telegram of, to Carranza—
To release American soldiers.....	17	2646
With thanks.....	17	2647
Telegram to, from Carranza.....	17	2647
War, labor's efforts to avoid.....	17	2646
Gourd, Miss, ravishment of.....	22	3230
Government, American:
Flouted with impunity.....	19	2868
In Mexico, majority can establish.....	13	2701
Mexican, activities of, by Carranza.....	20	2898
Improper practices of.....	19	2863
Policy of, directed by rebel junta.....	6	797
Governors:
Carranza displaces.....	20	2914
Military, imposition of.....	6	816
Graft and maladministration cause of trouble.....	19	2864
By Carranza officials.....	20	2916
Carranza—
Cabinet officers received.....	19	2864
Knew of, by officials.....	19	2865
Not personally charged with.....	19	2865

	Part.	Page.
Graft and maladministration—Continued.
Cause of all revolutions.....	19	2364
Information of, sent to Washington.....	19	2365
Mexican consular officers received.....	13	1924
Graham, Arthur, testimony of.....	8	1194
Identifies telegram.....	8	1194
Telegram identified.....	8	1195
Greuling, Marcus C., letter and express money order.....	17	2505
Grewell, R. O., outrages on, by Gen. Blanco.....	18	2745
Guatemala and Germany.....	22	3213
Guerra, Jacobo, testimony of.....	8	1318
Guiliani, Antonio, subscription to revolution.....	17	2500
Guns, German, captured from raiders, Texas.....	8	1290
Gutierrez, Eulalio.....	19	2782
Hale, William Bayard.....	6	814
Hall, Guillermo F., testimony of.....	8	1117
Director Mexican trade bureau.....	8	1117
Excursion, San Antonio to Mexico.....	19	2798
Telegram to.....	19	2798
Hall, H. L.....	6	814
Handshy, H. M., testimony of.....	8	1094
Hanson, Capt. W. M., testimony of.....	8	1225
Do.....	22	3223
Appendix to testimony of.....	22	3250
Arrested, tried, sentenced to be shot.....	22	3229
Brought out of Mexico by United States.....	22	3230
Bryan, Secretary, rendered assistance.....	22	3234
Committee to Washington.....	22	3234
Confers with department heads.....	22	3234
Insulted by Secretary Daniels.....	22	3234
Called to Tampico for protection.....	22	3229
Conditions good under Diaz.....	22	3225
Expelled from Mexico 1914.....	22	3229
Identifies—
Photostat letters.....	22	3241
Statement of I. Witzke.....	8	1226
Informed of plot to assassinate him.....	20	2974
Kept informed.....	20	2977
Land, division of, unsuccessful.....	22	3227
Occupation after leaving Mexico.....	22	3240
Other official positions.....	22	3223
Property—
Confiscated, returned.....	22	3236
Hacienda El Conejo.....	22	3224
In Mexico, titles to.....	22	3224
Stock and improvements.....	22	3224
Ranchman in Mexico.....	22	3223
Reimbursement for losses, none.....	22	3238
Report to adjutant general, Texas.....	22	3303
Returned to—
Ranch, 1914.....	22	3229
Tampico, 1914.....	22	3230
Scheme to murder.....	20	2950
Senior captain Texas Rangers.....	22	3223
Stock, live, taken.....	22	3228
Summoned to Washington.....	20	2971
Harney, Edward F., testimony of.....	9	1345
Laguna Corporation of Delaware.....	9	1345
Hart, Thomas, testimony of.....	14	2151
Harris, H. O., testimony of.....	17	2609
Bridge burned.....	17	2610
Cumbre Tunnel, train burned in.....	17	2609
Federals hid guns.....	17	2611
Yaqui Indians—
Do not carry women.....	17	2612
Fought rebels.....	17	2612
Harrison, kidnapped.....	8	1156

	Part.	Page.
Harvey, J. D., murder of.....	18	2747
Hazeltop, Stanley White, murder of, Anderson.....	12	1827
Henequen in Yucatan.....	7	873
Figures on, as to United States.....	7	890
Plantations back to owners.....	7	882
Plants described.....	7	880
Hennessey, murder of, Anderson.....	12	1830
Herman, Capt. Frederick J., testimony of.....	12	1811
Hernandez, Braulio.....	17	2518
Ammunition.....	17	2519
Assistance, foreign.....	17	2520
Funds, source of.....	17	2519
Madero, received $100 from.....	17	2518
Orozco and Didapp, pays respects to.....	17	2520
Revolution—
Cost of.....	17	2520
Financed by Madero.....	17	2518
Fought with "abnegation and hunger".....	17	2520
In Chihuahua.....	17	2518
Herrera, kidnaping and execution of.....	14	2065
Hidalgo:
Career of.....	18	2700
Misunderstood people.....	18	2700
Ordered citizens murdered.....	18	2700
Hides, embargo on, lifted.....	9	1391
Hill, Lon C., testimony of.....	8	1253
Hines, Marcus, testimony of.....	8	1309
Relates Norias, Tex., fight.....	8	1310
Hinkley, W. B., testimony of.....	8	1181
Residence near Brownsville, Tex.....	8	1181
Hinojosa:
Mission of, to weaken Obregon.....	20	2925
Obregonista.....	20	2925
Honduras:
Ammunition for, Carranza.....	20	3078
Code.....	20	3073
Expedition into.....	20	3072
Plot to loot.....	20	3071
Hopkins, Sherburne G., testimony of.....	16	2411
Advice, legal, given.....	17	2528
Aguila Oil Co.....	17	2526
Shareholders of.....	17	2533
Attorney for V. Carranza.....	6	2411
Azcona, Washington junta, arrested.....	17	2529
Capacity, dual, did not act in.....	17	2528
Carranza—
Attitude toward foreigners.....	16	2418
Government a failure.....	16	2417
Cartridges shipped on Sunshine.....	16	2412
Concessions—
So-called Pearson.....	17	2532
To, Diario Oficial shows none.....	17	2525
Conference, Niagara, attended.....	16	2411
Cowdray, Lord, one partner of Diaz.....	17	2560
Dawson, State Department, conversation with.....	17	2522
Diaz, advice to get rid of.....	17	2535
Didapp—
Against Madero.....	17	2538
Knows.....	17	2537
No connection with, as quoted.....	17	2537
Embargo—
On arms and ammunition.....	16	2411
Violated by shipment on Antilla.....	16	2411
Fee—
Approved by Mexican Government.....	17	2540
Disposal of.....	17	2539
Services for which and how paid.....	17	2546

Hopkins, Sherburne G.—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Lent Madero no money.....	17	2541
Letter from, to Carranza.....	16	2413
Denied by John Lind.....	16	2413
Influence of John Lind on Bryan.....	16	2415
Not to trust Bryan.....	16	2414
Wilson on Carranza.....	16	2414
Limantour—
And Madero, sr.....	17	2545
Reported to Diaz.....	17	2544
Threats to.....	17	2545
Lind, John, go-between, Carranza junta and department.....	16	2412
Loan—
Conference about.....	17	2541
Discusses, with C. R. Flint.....	17	2542
Loans—
None from Americans.....	17	2527
Placed for Madero.....	17	2522
Maderos—
Advance to, Continental Rubber Co.....	17	2565
Borrowed no money.....	17	2531
Financial condition of.....	17	2564
Gustavo—
Fee received by.....	17	2527
Reimbursed.....	17	2527
Kept money in United States.....	17	2540
No drafts drawn on.....	17	2542
No loan to, in United States.....	17	2551
Patriotic.....	17	2558
Revolution cost.....	17	2543
Senior and Limantour conference.....	17	2562
Suit against to harass.....	17	2531
Mexican petroleum stock controlled by.....	17	2568
Money, received none to pay off loan.....	17	2526
National railways of Mexico—
Americans removed from.....	17	2556
And "Cientificos".....	17	2553
Consolidation of.....	17	2559
Directors favorable to Madero.....	17	2561
Familiar with.....	17	2521
Who owns stock of.....	17	2553
Neutral and suffered in revolution.....	17	2525
Oil interest, has in Mexico.....	17	2525
Pay for services.....	17	2534
Pierce, Henry—
Consulted by.....	17	2531
Employed by.....	17	2531
To expose.....	17	2532
Reason for exposure.....	17	2534
Pipe-line concessions under Madero.....	17	2566
Relations with Carranza, why severed.....	16	2416
Resolution, Root—
Effect of.....	17	2548
Telegram about.....	17	2547
Revolution—
Does not know cost.....	17	2537
Funds for, wholly from Mexico.....	17	2537
Negotiation for cessation of.....	17	2563
New, in Sonora.....	16	2418
Total cost of.....	17	2543
Secret Service, etc.....	17	2524
Sommerfeld, Madero agent in El Paso.....	17	2524
Speyer & Co., did not represent.....	17	2526
Standard Oil Co.—
And Waters Pierce Oil Co., fighting.....	17	2569
Relations between.....	17	2569
Never in service of.....	17	2524
Owns Cowdray & Pearson interests.....	17	2549
Reenters Mexico.....	17	2570

	Part	Page
Hopkins, Sherburne G.—Continued.
Stock, oil, given Diaz people.....	17	2549
Tehuantepec Railway.....	17	2555
Villarreal, Felicitas, Carranza agent.....	16	2415
War material—
Firms, does not know.....	17	2536
From United States.....	17	2535
Waters Pierce Oil Co.—
Employment by, reasons for.....	17	2533
In employ of.....	17	2525
No part in events 1910-11.....	17	2526
Not with, when Limantour.....	17	2531
Operating under disadvantages.....	17	2532
Secured no concession for.....	17	2525
Status of, after revolution.....	17	2533
Zelaya, Nicaragua, removal of.....	17	2565
Horton, William A., testimony of.....	11	1707
Arms demanded by Carranza officer.....	11	1719
Farm near Tampico.....	11	1709
Intervention favored by.....	11	1726
Opinion as to what to do to Mexico.....	11	1726
Prevented from returning to Mexico.....	11	1707
Propaganda to go to Mexico.....	11	1708
Walked across line at Laredo.....	11	1725
Why went to Mexico.....	11	1708
House, Col., in bad with Wilson.....	20	2959
Howze, Gen. Robert L., testimony of.....	10	1568
Carrizal fight.....	10	1569
Details shooting across line, El Paso.....	10	1572
List of casualties in his district.....	10	1570
Military experience.....	10	1568
Huasteca Petroleum Co.:
Check of, indorsed by Henry Allen Tupper.....	1	292
Huerta, Victoriano:
Attitude, Mexican, toward.....	6	770
Bond of.....	18	2659
Cost to widow.....	18	2660
Bryan instructs requests be made of.....	18	2707
Conditions under.....	15	2231
Confidence in.....	9	1348
Did not kill Madero.....	18	2659
Elimination of.....	6	778
Failure of, due to interference by United States.....	9	1348
Favored.....	15	2244
Gamboa-Lind conference, attended.....	18	2711
Government, American.....	6	773
Law and order, for.....	18	2712
Liked and protected Americans.....	18	2708
Lind, John.....	6	775
Against.....	13	2007
Wanted to bribe.....	18	2708
Mission to force out.....	18	2708
Mistake not to recognize.....	18	2659
Not bad man.....	18	2659
Operation on, wrong.....	18	2660
Ordered to eliminate himself.....	6	821
People of Oaxaca favored.....	15	2217
Policy—
Of United States with, wrong.....	18	2660
To eliminate.....	11	1727
Praised by P. W. Warner.....	8	1049
Recognition of.....	19	2793
Removed to prison.....	18	2659
Saved Americans.....	18	2708
Strong character.....	18	2708
Huerta-Leyva hanging.....	12	1893
Hunt, Gov., letter of Sheriff Wheeler to.....	12	1897

	Part.	Page.
Hunter, John, testimony of.....	8	1147
House dynamited.....	8	1149
Hyde, Capt. George E., testimony of.....	8	1195
Verifies translation.....	8	1195

I.

Ibarra, Rudolfo, kidnapping and execution of.....	14	205 ⁴
Imports, tariff on, changed day to day.....	19	2864
Indians:
And Spanish, basic stock of Mexico.....	22	3220
Dialects of.....	19	2812
Early history of.....	19	2810
Map, ethnographic.....	19	2810
Mexican, described.....	19	2884
Number of.....	19	2812
Races of.....	19	2812
Southern, differ from northern.....	22	2812
Tractable if not molested.....	19	2874
Industries:
Ninety per cent wiped out.....	19	2880
None that can not pay tribute.....	19	2866
Inman, Dr. Samuel Guy, testimony of.....	1	4
Book.....	1	35
Carranza, favored recognizing.....	1	113
Farming, knows nothing about Mexican.....	1	110
Mexican cooperation committee, with.....	1	80
Not with league of free nations.....	1	80
"Official Mexican side of petroleum controversy," had not read.....	1	114
Paid by committee on cooperation Latin America.....	1	80
Report of, repudiated.....	2	417
Williams, Ira J., criticizes.....	2	605
Insecurity among Carrancistas.....	14	2141
Insults or attacks:
Redress of.....	22	3218
To United States for two years.....	19	2866
Intelligence Department:
Altendorf, Dr. P. B.....	8	1229
Barnes, Maj. R. L.....	8	1232
Interests:
Landed, large holdings of.....	1	8
Private, members of subcommittee.....	8	1116
Intervention:
Armed.....	6	842
Do.....	9	1425
All want it.....	13	1990
Americans in Mexico City opposed to.....	7	870
A mistake.....	1	144
And Republican publicity committee.....	1	53
Anti, propaganda.....	2	544
Attitude, National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico.....	2	605
Bad.....	9	1368
Better class would welcome.....	18	2744
Churches against.....	1	7
Efforts oil, mining, and ranch interests to bring about.....	2	333
Gates in no conspiracy to bring about.....	1	329
Gavito against.....	9	1448
Horton for.....	11	1726
Last resort.....	9	1372
McGavock favors.....	7	870
Mexican people not opposed to.....	15	2246
Mexican upper classes favor.....	7	870
Oil and mine interests foment.....	1	202
Oil interests, propaganda for.....	1	55
Only resort.....	18	2714
Over Jenkins.....	7	916

	Part.	Page.
Intervention—Continued.
Peons oppose.....	13	1975
Plot against Mexico for.....	2	338
Straube favors.....	15	2169
Investments:
Associated Tropical Plantation Co.....	9	1373
In Mexico not armed.....	19	2863
Land near Acapulco.....	8	1088
Mining in Mexico.....	9	1427
Plantation, La Esmeralda Rubber.....	15	2229
Vista Hermosa Sugar & Mercantile Co., Oaxaca.....	15	2204
Safe under Diaz.....	15	2196
Investors:
Obey laws in Mexico.....	8	1006
War on Mexico to protect.....	1	63
I. W. W. agitation in Monterrey, 1915, de Lara.....	13	1920
Aims of.....	17	2507
And Carrancistas, agreement between.....	19	2882
And Communists both sides of border.....	22	3242
Have branches in Mexico.....	19	2820
Manifesto of R. Flores Magon et al.....	17	2506
People of superior intelligence.....	17	2505
Report of investigation of, by Senate Committee.....	19	2858
J.
Jacks, Dr. Odia M., testimony of.....	8	1166
Arrested and robbed.....	8	1168
Physician, Blalock colony.....	8	1167
Jahnke, Kurt.....	8	1235
Japanese:
Cached ammunition.....	11	1778
Described, Mercedes, Tex.....	8	1293
Made bombs for Mexicans.....	8	1290
Officer—
And Villa.....	11	1777
Killed Ojo de Agua, Texas, raid.....	8	1304
Jefes Politicos, abuses of.....	1	8
Jenkins, W. O., consular agent:
Arrest and investigation of.....	14	2047
Attitude toward.....	9	1456
Badly treated.....	10	1663
Bail bond of.....	7	912
Bail for.....	7	897
Mexican law as to.....	7	898
Case of.....	7	896
Cordoba—
Intervention over.....	7	916
Interview with.....	14	2048
Letter of, to.....	14	2047
Not afraid of capture.....	14	2050
Kidnaping of, purpose of.....	14	2049
Johnson, Jack, incident in restaurant.....	8	1113
Jones, C. E., testimony of.....	20	2889
Activities at Laredo.....	20	2948
Bonillas—
Friends of, to defeat Fall resolution.....	20	2959
Interview with.....	20	2958
Offers to make, Chief of Secret Service.....	20	2965
Scared over Fall resolution.....	20	2959
Called to Washington by Bonillas.....	20	2957
Check for expenses, copy filed.....	20	2970
Commissioned by secretary foreign relations, Mexico.....	20	2897
Department of Justice—
Connection and work with.....	20	2890
Ex-assistant.....	20	2890
Report to.....	20	2896

Jones, C. E.—Continued.	Part.	Page.
De Negri offers position and salary to.....	20	2946
Douglas, C. A., letter introducing.....	20	2971
Enemies of Mexico, Senators, etc., cooperating with.....	20	2947
Lansing—
In bad with President Wilson.....	20	2959
Letter recognizing de facto government.....	20	2915
Leckie, Adam, source of information.....	20	2895
Letter, Alvarado to Cosme Hinojosa introducing.....	20	2924
Letters—
Andres Garcia.....	20	3000
And documents.....	20	2977
Extracts from, re remittance.....	20	2897
From—
Bielaski to Keep.....	20	2995
Bielaski to Winslow.....	20	2893
Brenniman.....	20	2994
Conaty to Beck.....	20	2995
Garcia to Gonzalez.....	20	2996
Garcia to Jones.....	20	2996
Leckie to Bonillas.....	20	2994
Muzguiz to Bonillas.....	20	2994
Pendleton, F. C., recommending.....	20	2894
Liberal cause—
Agents Carranza and Von Eckhardt.....	20	2907
Arms and ammunition for.....	20	2906
Establishment of.....	20	2905
Obregon thanked for.....	20	2905
Mexican Government, reference to.....	20	2890
Mexican leaders in power, unfriendly to United States.....	20	2910
Montoraso, Mendez, Carranza proposals to.....	20	2907
Murray, Robert, knows.....	20	2961
Obregon—
Agent, publicity, appoints.....	20	2932
American hater.....	20	2932
Biography of.....	20	2932
Book, anti-American.....	20	2911
Contracted with I. W. W's.....	20	2932
Friendship for United States recent.....	20	2910
In plot with Carranza against United States.....	20	2931
Pro-German.....	20	2932
Record, one of blood.....	20	2911
Red flag of, in Mexico City.....	20	2932
Troops of, robbed, ravished, etc.....	20	2932
Wrote book favoring Prussian cause.....	20	2932
Pay, none, for information.....	20	2973
Peralta—
And Rosales leave United States.....	20	2909
Confession of.....	20	3100
Letter in relation to.....	20	2901
Pelaez, files as to.....	20	2980
Plots, Central American, in Mexico.....	20	3102
Plotters, Central American, arrest of.....	20	3100
Plotters, deportation of.....	20	3100
Police, Carranza, secret.....	20	2926
Reports—
To Department of Justice.....	20	2938
On Seguin.....	20	2945
Of, Mexico offers to buy.....	20	2898
Rosales and, arms and ammunition.....	20	3099
Seguin, secret agent, introduced to.....	20	2944
Services, value of.....	20	2890
Work of, at Laredo.....	20	2951
Jones, Gus T., testimony of.....	10	1622
Soldiers, list of, killed at Columbus, N. Mex.....	10	1622
Joyce, Father Francis P., chaplain United States Army, testimony of.....	18	2656

Jaurez, Benito:	Part	Page
Despoiled churches.....	18	2661
"Liberator of Mexico".....	19	2880
Prestige of.....	19	2883
Zapotec Indian.....	19	2815

K.

Kapplin, Otto, letter from, to R. Flores Magon.....	17	2499
Karns, H. J., testimony of.....	12	1899
Business with Mexico occasionally suspended.....	12	1900
Merchant, export trade with Mexico.....	12	1899
Relations—
Commercial, no difficulty in.....	12	1899
With local authorities pleasant.....	12	1900
Kelley, Monsignor Francis C., testimony of.....	18	2665
Constitution of 1857, criticizes.....	18	2669
Elias, Mother, corroborates.....	18	2663
Jesuit, not a.....	18	2682
Lind, John, disagrees with.....	18	2682
Kellogg, Frederic R., testimony of.....	16	2390
Cabrera, Luis, avoidance of taxes by foreigners.....	16	2393
Coal, private ownership of.....	16	2383
Code, mining, 1884.....	16	2384
Constitution 1857—
Amendment to.....	16	2384
Not retroactive.....	16	2390
Laws—
Brief on.....	16	2381
John Lind contradicts as American and Mexican.....	16	2380
Spanish, discussed.....	16	2381
Decrees, etc., 1387 to 1783.....	16	2384
Mexico after revolution.....	16	2384
Mexico and Spain, treaty.....	16	2384
Mineral—
How acquired.....	16	2382
Ownership restricted.....	16	2381
Reserved to Crown.....	16	2381
Mines, acquisition of, by foreigners.....	16	2385
Mining—
John Lind contradicted.....	16	2385
Further refutation.....	16	2387
Oil companies—
Damage to.....	16	2392
Records in Mexico clean.....	16	2394
Oil lands—
Of Americans confiscated.....	16	2389
Private ownership of.....	16	2389
Protection pledge of Arredondo.....	16	2391
Rights, subsoil—
Eliminated.....	16	2390
In existing laws.....	16	2390
Taxation of foreigners unjust.....	16	2393
Kennedy, J. D., affidavit of.....	17	2630
Kile, Capt. S. C., testimony of.....	8	1242
History, brief, of lower Rio Grande.....	8	1242
Intelligence officer.....	8	1242
King, A. J., testimony of.....	10	1535
Sergeant Texas Ranges force.....	10	1535
King, Wiley, testimony of.....	13	1949
Farming in Atascador Colony.....	13	1950
Kleberg, C., testimony of.....	8	1282
Norias ranch—
Attack on.....	8	1283
Statement of M. Rincones.....	8	1284
Kleiber, J. I., testimony of.....	8	1269
Knox, Henry Hobart, testimony of.....	9	1417
Citizenship, never denied American.....	9	1423
Consulting mining engineer.....	9	1417

	Part.	Page.
Kolody, John, receipt for money.....	17	2501
Kraal, G. C., letter and money order to A. L. Figueroa.....	17	2505
Krakauer, Adolph, testimony of.....	17	2590
Diaz, protection under.....	17	2591
Madero—
Criticizes United States for aiding.....	17	2591
Surprised he won.....	17	2591
Orozco—
Against Creel and Terrazas.....	17	2591
Madero joined.....	17	2591
Kritzberger, Peter, testimony of.....	13	1977
Colony, San Pedro de las Papas.....	13	1977
Robbed many times.....	13	1986
L.
Labor, Mexican:
Armenta, Eloy, statement of, as to.....	19	2833
Barron, radical, address of.....	19	2826
Commissary.....	22	3227
Conference, Pan-American.....	19	2826
Gompers wired sympathy.....	19	2829
Gov. Hunt attends.....	19	2829
Proposal to free workers in United States jails.....	19	2837
Wilson, Secretary of Labor, at.....	19	2829
Contract, Oaxaca Indian.....	15	2218
Convict, same as in Texas.....	18	2687
Gompers, appeal to.....	19	2833
Medical service free.....	22	3227
Organized in Mexico, history of.....	19	2831
Wages of.....	22	3227
Laborers, Mexican:
Americans benefited.....	18	2685
American enterprise, good effect on.....	13	1956
Attitude as to who governs them.....	9	1425
Children and women of, naked.....	14	2155
Exodus of.....	14	2136
From Mexico.....	14	2162
Favorable to Americans.....	7	867
Fear of another revolution.....	14	2153
Foreign enterprise promotes improvement of.....	9	1356
Glad to escape with lives.....	14	2155
Good and honest.....	22	3225
Do.....	18	2684
Homes, schools, hospitals for.....	18	2685
Improvement in, wonderful.....	7	867
In oil regions—
Relations to.....	1	224
Wages of.....	1	220
Do.....	1	228
Wages of, to native.....	1	225
Migration of, to United States.....	14	2148
Do.....	14	2157
Do.....	14	2169
Causes.....	14	2143
Do.....	14	2151
Causes and number.....	14	2153
List of.....	14	2153
Number shipped in war time.....	14	2154
Not induced, for exploitation.....	14	2151
Prefer to work for Americans.....	7	867
Relations with, good, Garrett.....	13	1968
Robbed on Mexican side.....	14	2156
Scale of wages formerly and afterwards.....	9	1378
Seventy-five thousand, approximate number.....	14	2155
Want Americans in Mexico.....	22	3239

Land:

	Part.	Page.
Division of—
In Yucatan, Indians refuse.....	7	890
Means for extorting blackmail.....	19	2877
Mexicans do not want.....	18	2691
Not consummated.....	18	2706
How Mexicans acquire.....	18	2691
Large holdings of.....	7	8
Situation exaggerated.....	19	2877
System of working.....	18	2691
Lane, Franklin K., testimony of.....	16	2369
Attitude of Mexico toward American interests wrong.....	16	2373
Citation from Congressional Record.....	16	2377
Concession in Mexico, explains.....	16	2371
Oil—
Necessity for, on this continent.....	16	2373
Rights, Mexico, refutes John Lind.....	16	2370
Statement from England.....	16	2374
Langhorne, Col. George T., testimony of.....	10	1629
Commander Big Bend district, Texas.....	10	1629
Lansing, Robert, note to Carranza.....	8	1215
Lara, Lazaro Gutierrez de.....	14	2099
Do.....	19	2829
Radical.....	18	2687
Larsen, Neils:
Affidavit of.....	17	2594
Conditions on Mexico and outrages.....	17	2595
Losses of.....	17	2596
Latin America:
Effect of Mexican policy on.....	6	817
Relations with.....	1	5
Secretary Root's trip to.....	13	1972
Laut, Miss Agnes C.:
Activities of.....	2	333
Testimony of.....	2	370
Law:
Agrarian, Sonora.....	12	1843
Antireligious, Diaz encouraged violation of.....	18	2701
League, business keeps Mexico out of.....	1	69
League of free nations:
Articles without—
Approval of committee.....	1	193
Proof as to truth.....	1	194
Committee to study conditions in Mexico.....	1	191
Data from—
George W. Weeks.....	1	192
Other persons.....	1	192
De Bekker.....	1	193
"Excelsior," newspaper article.....	1	193
Interview with chief of petroleum bureau.....	1	192
Letter to President Wilson.....	1	202
List of members, partial.....	1	191
Literature.....	2	337
Method pursued with articles.....	1	193
Oil and mine interests foment intervention.....	1	202
Operations of.....	1	196
Organization, world, to remove causes for war.....	1	200
Pelaez, payments to.....	1	202
Receipts and disbursements of.....	1	190
Legion, American, in Tampico.....	8	995
Do.....	8	1002
Legislation, oil.....	6	835
Leiffert, P. H., receipt for money from John Kolody.....	17	2501
Lester, S. D., report of.....	16	2446
Mr. D., statement of, robberies, etc.....	16	2453
Mr. E., statement of, destruction of house.....	16	2453
Mr. F., statement of, robbery of, beating of, etc.....	16	2454
Mr. G., statement of, graft.....	16	2454

Lester, S. D.—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Mr. H.—
Statement of, demand for money.....	16	2455
Correll, Mr., murder of.....	16	2456
Correll, Mrs., raping of.....	16	2456
Mr. I.—
Statement of, Carranza domineered by generals.....	16	2456
Defeat of Obregon.....	16	2457
Graft and thefts by Carranza generals.....	16	2458
Henequen plantation destroyed.....	16	2456
Mines, titles cancelled.....	16	2456
Murguia, Gen., purchased properties.....	16	2457
People starving and naked.....	16	2458
Robbed on fiber deal.....	16	2456
Barnes, R. E., Atascador colony, statement.....	16	2459
Catron, Hiram, Las Palmas ranch, statement.....	16	2461
Villasana, Virginia, murder of Peter Catron, statement.....	16	2462
Sanchez, Francisca, murder of Peter Catron, statement.....	16	2463
Mr. L., statement of, murder of L. L. Wieder.....	16	2463
Mr. H., statement of.....	16	2464
Mr. O., statement of.....	16	2470
Mr. Q., statement of.....	16	2470
Morehead, Don D., statement of.....	16	2471
Mr. R., statement of.....	16	2472
Mr. S., statement of.....	16	2473
Oil companies, list of outrages on.....	16	2479
Petition of a committee for 3,000 Americans from Tampico.....	16	2446
Granting of part of.....	16	2448
Report of member of committee.....	16	2448
Report, supplemental of.....	16	2485
Lewis, W. J., labor agent, testimony of.....	14	2162
Leyva-Huerta hanging.....	12	1893
Liberal Party, Mexican.....	17	2497
Circular from, to fellow workers.....	17	2501
Liga, La Gran.....	8	1112
Lill, Thomas Russell, testimony of.....	3	611
Certified public accountant.....	3	611
Lind, John, testimony of.....	16	2317
Advised support of Carranza.....	9	1394
Tribute be paid to Candido Aguilar.....	1	276
Against Catholic Church.....	18	2661
English oil interests.....	18	2711
Huerta.....	9	1363
Religious situation.....	18	2711
Americans in Mexico, duties of.....	16	2337
Arms and ammunition, export of.....	16	2358
Book of—
Quotations from.....	16	2335
Hostility of Mexico.....	16	2342
Not circulated.....	16	2350
Buckley, quotes testimony of.....	16	2358
Calero's book, quotes from.....	16	2347
Carranza—
Reason for meeting on border.....	16	2365
Régime, a success.....	16	2345
Church, Catholic.....	16	2332
Denies Buckley's statement.....	16	2360
Code, Shanklin, secret, extract from.....	16	2352
Commoner, the, extract from.....	16	2327
Concessions, discusses.....	16	2339
Conversation with, about Huerta.....	8	1057
Copied from Encyclopedia Britannica.....	18	2696
Elections in Veracruz.....	16	2321
Expenses, personal, paid.....	16	2366
Emery plantation, Veracruz, visited.....	16	2325
Favored Carranza.....	18	2708

	Part	Page
Lind, John—Continued.
Garrett, met.....	13	1967
In error as to plantation story.....	18	2696
Intervention, threatened by.....	18	2708
Invasion, American, denies welcome to.....	16	2325
Mission to force Huerta out.....	18	2708
Negroes and Mexicans compared.....	16	2331
Proposition, President Wilson to Huerta.....	16	2320
Recruits for Huerta army.....	16	2343
Residences, defends seizures of.....	16	2349
Robberies in United States and Mexico compared.....	16	2367
Sent to Mexico on special mission.....	16	2318
Son of—
Connected with monopoly.....	9	1386
Employed with "Reguladora," Yucatan.....	16	2365
Threat to Gambia and Huerta.....	18	2711
Treatment accorded in Mexico.....	16	2341
Villa, no faith in.....	16	2343
Wanted to bribe Huerta.....	13	2007
Wilson, Henry Lane, Murray charges.....	16	2356
Wrong, concerning Indians.....	18	2744
Wrong as to conditions.....	18	2687
Loans:
Conference about.....	17	2541
None from Americans.....	17	2527
Lopez killed Americans at Santa Isabel.....	9	1423
Losses:
Dolley, Charles S., and wife.....	22	3290
Ewing, Thomas.....	22	3250
Glaze, C. L.....	22	3250
Gunter, L.....	22	3250
Individual Americans.....	22	3248
Kolklosch, L. J.....	22	3252
Lyon, W. A.....	22	3292
Simons, Charles F.....	22	3293
Loucks, W. B., testimony of.....	9	1375
Bandits, paid tribute to.....	9	1382
Carranza troops fed and housed.....	9	1382
Company boat seized by bandits.....	9	1382
Harassed by labor agents sent to plantation.....	9	1379
Ordered out of Mexico.....	9	1380
President Tabasco Plantation Co.....	9	1375
Purchased from original owners.....	9	1375
Lugden, kidnapping and execution of.....	14	2065
Lumholtz, unknown Mexico correct.....	19	2811

M.

Machinery, ammunition from Japanese.....	22	3212
Madero, Gustavo:
Attempt to control sugar in Mexico.....	15	2209
Fees received by.....	17	2527
Real head of government.....	18	2707
Reimbursed $300,000 gold.....	17	2527
Madero, Francisco:
A joke.....	11	1761
Borrowed no money.....	17	2531
Complete failure.....	9	1349
Conditions under.....	15	2231
Drafts, none drawn on.....	17	2542
Financial condition of.....	17	2564
Government similar to Diaz.....	18	2707
Henry Lane Wilson and murder of.....	1	133
Did not connive at.....	18	2713
Kept money in United States.....	17	2540
Loan none to, in United States.....	17	2551
Nominated by Catholic party.....	18	2704
Patriotic.....	17	2558

	Part.	Page.
Madero, Francisco—Continued.
Pipe-line concession under.....	17	2566
Revolution cost.....	17	2543
Senior and Limantour, conference.....	17	2562
Suits against, to harass.....	17	2531
Magazine de la Raza.....	7	898
Magonistas, driven from Chihuahua.....	17	2507
And insurrectos.....	17	2508
Magon, Ricardo Flores:
Advised by best attorneys.....	17	2508
Agitation for money and publicity.....	17	2510
Army in Mexico, how maintained.....	17	2512
Bros. et al., convicted.....	17	2516
Denounced revolution.....	17	2508
Diaz first, then Roosevelt to go.....	17	2514
Forces, Tirzo de la Toba, commander.....	17	2516
Captured with impedimenta.....	17	2517
Letters of instructions to.....	17	2516
Funds collected monthly.....	17	2511
John Kenneth Turner to A. G. Rogers for guns.....	17	2511
I. W. W. manifesto to, signed by.....	17	2506
Whites and negroes from United States assisted.....	17	2515
Mosby, Gen. Jack, in command.....	17	2515
Letter to, from—
Alex T. Wilson.....	17	2502
Wm. Fawcett Smith, Dr.....	17	2510
Literature of, circulated in Mexico.....	17	2512
Madero, against, for President.....	17	2511
Refused to recognize or fight for.....	17	2507
Officers of organization.....	17	2514
Organization in many States of Mexico.....	17	2514
Trial of, demonstration of I. W. W.'s in court.....	17	2518
Salazar, aid from socialists in United States.....	17	2514
United States Government against.....	17	2514
Villarreal propaganda.....	17	2513
Laws violation of neutrality.....	17	2497
Letter to, from—
J. Menke.....	17	2498
Otto Kapplin.....	17	2499
Letter from, organizing Junta Mexican Liberal Party.....	17	2499
To Joe Moon.....	17	2504
Sadie L. Bernstein.....	17	2500
Mancillas, Julio, expense money.....	17	2500
Manifesto, to I. W. W. by R. Flores Magon.....	17	2506
Manley, Dr. Paul, testimony of.....	15	2194
Bought land in Oaxaca.....	15	2195
Claim filed in State Department.....	15	2200
Lost everything, houses burnt, etc.....	15	2199
No trouble under Diaz.....	15	2196
Overseer ordered out in 1914.....	15	2199
Marines, Annapolis, fired on at Mazatlan.....	6	780
At Mazatlan.....	22	3207
Incident misunderstood by Mexican officials.....	22	3206
Oregon version untrue.....	22	3218
One killed, several injured.....	22	3218
Tampico, incident not allowed demand apology.....	22	3217
Martens, soviet ambassador.....	8	1237
Massacre, Santa Isabel, described.....	18	2757
Matlack, Capt. Leonard, testimony of.....	10	1647
Aviators, rescue of, by.....	10	1658
Rescues.....	10	1629
His troop ambushed Big Bend, Tex.....	10	1648
Crossed into Mexico.....	10	1649
Mayfield, Tom, testimony of.....	8	1287
Present when visé of passport refused.....	8	1295
Maya race:
Languages among.....	19	2811
Map of.....	19	2811

	Part.	Page.
Mayo, Admiral, statement of.....	6	784
Mazatlan incident.....	22	3207
Marines assaulted.....	22	3216
One killed, several wounded.....	22	3216
McBee, F. M., testimony of.....	8	1012
Ranchman in Mexico.....	8	1012
McCain, A. H., testimony of.....	8	1098
In Y. M. C. A. canteen service.....	8	1098
McCaleb, Walter Flavius, testimony of.....	5	727
Banker and writer.....	5	727
Finances of Mexico.....	5	727
McCormick, A. J., testimony of.....	17	2497
McCormick, D. R., testimony of.....	8	1100
Ranchman in Mexico.....	8	1100
Son held for ransom.....	8	1103
McCranie, J. S.....	17	2630
Brakeman wounded.....	17	2630
Kane, conductor, shot in mouth.....	17	2630
Maderistas attack train.....	17	2630
Woman, American, beat on feet.....	17	2630
McCullough, S. H., testimony of.....	10	1584
Raid on Columbus, N. Mex.....	10	1584
McDonald, James G., testimony of.....	1	189
Chairman League of Free Nations.....	1	189
De Bekker, accepted opinion of.....	1	205
No personal knowledge of Mexico.....	1	203
Wrote State Department.....	1	203
President and published letter.....	1	203
McDonnell, Maj., and intervention.....	2	412
McGavock, William J., testimony of.....	7	866
Contractor in Mexico.....	7	866
Denies statements of League of Free Nations.....	7	868
Experiences in Chiapas.....	7	868
McGuire, American soldier killed at Los Tulitos, Tex.....	8	1266
Medler, Judge E. L., testimony of.....	10	1624
Tried Columbus raiders.....	10	1624
Melbourne, letter from, to James Dunn.....	17	2503
Men, best in Mexico, exiled.....	18	2714
Mendez, Mario, director telegraphs.....	18	1204
Menke, J., letter from, to R. Flores Magon.....	17	2498
Messages to Americans to leave Mexico.....	15	2176
Metzenthin, Paul, testimony of.....	8	1105
Ranchman in Sonora.....	8	1105
Mexican petroleum stock.....	17	2567
Controlled by Standard Oil Co.....	17	2569
Mexican nation, slander of whole.....	2	343
People capable of ruling themselves.....	15	2225
Difficulties in educating.....	9	1457
Feeling of, toward United States.....	6	822
Kindly and lovable.....	14	2140
Want United States to help them.....	14	2140
Mexicans:
Attitude of, change in.....	9	1347
Colonists, American, not exploiting.....	13	1970
Condition of, in Mexico.....	22	3244
Cultured.....	19	2815
Do not know how to work or live.....	11	1683
Educated in exile.....	9	1445
Eighty per cent naturally pacific.....	19	2874
Enterprises, American, beneficial to.....	9	1346
Exploitation of, nonsense.....	9	1346
Exploited by raising wages.....	11	1710
Priests, etc.....	1	22
Forbidden testify before subcommittee.....	8	1194
Friendly, Salazar murdered.....	18	2756
Gompers and American Federation of Labor do not understand.....	19	2938

Mexicans—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Have no confidence in United States Government.....	22	3239
Hostility of, to friendly Mexicans.....	18	2753
Killed along border, raiders.....	22	3243
Lower classes not quarrelsome.....	11	1719
Pecunage of.....	9	1347
Raiding indistinguishable.....	10	1573
Spirit and intellectual welfare of.....	11	1693
Suffered more than foreigners.....	15	2226
Texas border, law-abiding.....	22	3243
Treatment of, by oil companies.....	22	3244
Wanted Huerta.....	13	2007
Would accept if United States meant business.....	19	2874
Mexico:
Americans advised to leave.....	13	1967
Did not exploit.....	9	1443
Beneficial to.....	9	1444
Annexation of.....	9	1355
Aspect of, bad.....	11	1727
Attitude toward foreigners.....	9	1346
Changed by invasion Veracruz.....	11	1719
And Mexicans, ideas on.....	8	1278
Banking in.....	11	1676
Beggars in.....	11	1679
Benefited by foreign investments.....	13	1969
Better class of Mexicans out of.....	9	1369
Business keeps out of league.....	1	69
Business, etc., on west coast.....	12	1904
Catholic candidate counted out.....	18	2669
Cause of trouble in.....	15	2243
Do.....	15	2222
Policy American Government.....	9	1398
Committee to study, organized.....	1	271
Conditions in—
Improved.....	1	18
Not safe.....	11	1680
Cubanize.....	13	1974
Democracy in name only.....	18	2669
Education in, among Indians.....	18	2676
Excursion, trade to.....	14	2135
Farmers, small, new to.....	15	2194
Finances of, T. R. Lill.....	3	611
Force required to pacify.....	9	1352
For Mexicans—
Carranza slogan.....	11	1726
Policy of.....	1	9
Graft and anti-Americanism.....	14	2079
Help for, from outside.....	11	1682
History, ancient, of.....	18	2678
Hope of, in expatriated Mexicans.....	9	1447
How United States can help.....	9	1368
Improvement in, not expected.....	11	1675
Income of, allotment of.....	1	20
Indebtedness of, and failure to arrest.....	9	1448
Intrinsically wealthy.....	19	2876
Jenkins, consular agent, case of.....	14	2081
Left to Mexicans, hopeless.....	10	1572
Life and property insecure till Veracruz.....	9	1349
Mandate over, practically exists.....	19	2876
Accumulating shame.....	19	2876
Newspapers, American, do not publish facts.....	6	800
Opinions as to what should be done.....	13	1974
Orders to Americans to leave.....	15	2231
Outlook in, bad.....	14	2075
Plot against—
For intervention.....	2	338
Quotations as to.....	2	343

Murders—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Murphy, W. S., testimony of.....	10	1577
Myers, Jake, colony in Oaxaca.....	13	1984
Nevill, E. W., son.....	10	1511
Number of, by raiders in Texas.....	8	1277
Passengers on train, Brownsville, Tex.....	8	1259
Parmelee, F. M., near Brownsville, Tex.....	8	1175
Paymaster, attempt to rob, Tampico.....	2	529
Peterson, Akard, Jensen.....	10	1665
Pilgrim at Chermal Colony.....	13	1958
And Gorman.....	8	1167
Randall and Brooks, Chermal Colony.....	8	1170
Randle at Chermal Colony.....	8	1144
Ritchie in Columbus, N. Mex., raid.....	10	1599
Rooney and Bowlee, Tampico.....	8	996
Do.....	8	1190
Scrivener and Frasier Bros.....	12	1906
Seggerson, Juarez.....	10	1509
Sharp and Sellars.....	8	1016
Sitter and Hulen.....	10	1629
And Howard.....	10	1532
Sitters, Joe, Howard, Jack.....	10	1557
Smith and Donaldson in Texas.....	8	1253
Executed.....	8	1258
Do.....	8	1311
Smith hung by Villistas at El Oro.....	8	1095
Soldiers, American—
At Ojo de Agua, Tex.....	8	1304
At San Ignacio, Tex.....	8	1202
One burned at Columbus, N. Mex.....	10	1603
Three, Glenn Springs, Tex.....	10	1518
At Galveston ranch.....	8	1259
Stevens, Redd, McCain, Cramer, John, Harry, and Hays.....	10	1488
Stevenson, near Tampico.....	2	530
Stovall, A. J., Chermal Colony.....	11	1714
Wallace, Tampico.....	8	998
Waterfield, soldier, Palm Garden, Tex.....	8	1257
Weder.....	13	1954
Wells, E. F., Tabasco Plantation Co.....	9	1383
Welsh, Big Bend, Tex.....	10	1529
Wieder, Byrd.....	8	1039
Wieder, L. L.....	16	2463
Willis, Mrs., husband.....	8	1030
Murray, R. H., letter refuting testimony of Buckley.....	22	3304
Statement of subcommittee concerning.....	22	3305

N.

Naco, battle at.....	12	1878
Casualties at.....	12	1817
No interference by American troops.....	12	1817
Shells, explosive, used at.....	12	1819
Nafarrate, Gen.:
Carranza commander at Matamoras.....	8	1286
— Killed to prevent divulging Carranza ordered raids into Texas.....	8	1215
Organized raiders.....	8	1270
Planned raids.....	8	1294
Responsible for raids into Texas.....	8	1315
Navy, orders official.....	22	3205
To avoid trouble.....	22	3205
Neill, Sam H., testimony of.....	10	1540
Ranch, Brite, Tex., robbery of.....	10	1543
Nevill, E. W., testimony of.....	10	1510
Robbery of ranch, Big Bend, Tex.....	10	1511
Newman, Lieut., crossed into Mexico from Texas.....	8	1261
Newspapers, American, paid by Carranza.....	8	1193
Niagara conference.....	6	787
Do.....	9	1364

	Part.	Page.
Nieto, Rafael:
And German colony in Mexico.....	7	899
Fletcher—
Called to negotiate with.....	19	2867
Returned to Mexico with.....	19	2867
Repudiated by Carranza.....	19	2867
Sent to Washington without credentials.....	19	2867
Without power to negotiate.....	19	2867
Nogales, Arizona:
Battle, August 27, 1918.....	12	1819
Do.....	12	1811
Described.....	12	1812
Belligerents, no discipline for.....	12	1819
Border conflicts at.....	12	1900
Casualties in—
American.....	12	1816
Mexican.....	12	1816
Cattle, theft of.....	12	1819
Combatants, Mexican, soldiers not in uniform.....	12	1816
Conference with Mexican authorities.....	12	1814
Consuls at—
Not always friendly.....	12	1902
Removal of one of.....	12	1902
Cooperation some, by Mexican authorities.....	12	1820
Horses stolen, American, with Mexican troops.....	12	1819
Mayor Mexican town killed.....	12	1819
No order to roll up trousers.....	12	1820
No shrapnel fell in.....	12	1819
Railroad running south of.....	12	1900
Reenforcements and machine gun.....	12	1815
Soldiers de facto government wore no uniform.....	12	1820
Traffic south of, interrupted.....	12	1900
Troops—
American, not allowed to cross.....	12	1816
Not in barracks, as claimed.....	12	1814
Warning of attack on.....	12	1815
Women and children moved out of.....	12	1814
Norias ranch:
Attack on.....	8	1283
Statement of Manuel Rincones.....	8	1284
Nuns, exiled, at Veracruz.....	18	2665
O.
Oaxaca:
Citizens forbidden counsel by State government.....	19	2819
Election law of.....	19	2819
Three classes can not vote.....	19	2819
Obligations must be discharged.....	9	1354
Obregon, Gen. Alvaro:
A Bolshevik.....	19	2825
And people of Mexico City.....	11	1739
Red Cross.....	11	1741
Friendly to Americans.....	12	1904
Looted Mexico City.....	6	801
Worst of Mexican leaders.....	6	800
Ocha, Capt. William V., testimony of.....	10	1643
Big Bend, Tex., conditions in.....	10	1643
Oil, companies, American, rights of.....	22	3270
Oil in Mexico:
Adverse locator.....	2	540
Commission, fuel, letter to.....	1	250
Companies—
Association of.....	2	542
Facts as to tribute, memorandum of.....	1	283
Have not advocated intervention.....	2	543
Not engaged in propaganda.....	2	543
Pelaez demands on.....	1	279

Oil in Mexico—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Companies—Continued.
Petition of, to President Wilson	6	833
Policy of	6	836
Sympathy of, for Carranza	1	279
Vicissitudes of	6	829
Confiscation, other than legislation	1	259
Crude, imports of	1	23
Decrees, reason for refusing to comply with	2	540
Carranza, August 8, 1918	1	259
Fletcher, Ambassador, letter from, on	1	265
Doheny found	1	200
Drilling for—
Permits for	2	539
Do	8	1009
Prohibited	2	536
Fields—
Forces controlling	1	279
Moving pictures of	1	293
Fuel on railroads	1	215
Fuel	1	258
Gonzalez-Satil-Ryan Co.	8	1193
Industry, 100 per cent efficient	1	249
Interests—
And Association for Protection	1	52
In Mexico, Hopkins has	17	2525
And use of money, etc., for intervention	1	55
Mexico first obtained money from	1	65
Promote intervention	1	202
Kinds of, produced in Mexico	1	269
Land, mining claim rights for title	1	268
Legislation, confiscatory, against interests	1	258
Nationalization of, attempts at	1	217
People, attitude of, to Mexican people	1	274
Possession of, British in Persia	1	254
Producers—
Position explained	2	427
Trying to get facts before people	2	597
Production of, for importation supplies for	1	213
Question, Carranza attitude on	1	10
Region, permits to drill in	1	267
Taxes on	1	244
Paid	1	248
Value of	1	244
Trust, London, and Cecil Rhodes	1	242
Oliver, H. T., testimony of	4	679
Arms and ammunition contracts	4	679
President of Oliver Trading Co.	4	679
Senator Fall, telegram to	19	2802
Oro, El, Battle of, 1918	8
Orozco drove Magonistas from Chihuahua	17	2507
Ortiz, Melquiades, testimony of	14	2143
Osborn, M. L., testimony of	14	2153
Labor agent, San Antonio, Tex.	14	2153
O'Shaughnessy, Nelson, testimony of	18	2705
Buckley, corroborates	18	2716
Church, Catholic, discusses	18	2714
Diplomat	18	2705
Huerta, got results from	18	2707
Lind, John, conversation with, about Carranza	18	2711
Madero, analyzes	18	2705
Outrages (see also Damages and outrages):
By socialists	18	2687
On little girls	1	68
Owen, W. C., letter to, from John Kenneth Turner	17	2503

P.	Part.	Page.
Paiz, Juan, testimony of.....	10	1816
Raid on Columbus, N. Mex., in.....	10	1816
Palavicini, proally, expelled.....	8	1235
Pan American Conference.....	9	1369
Inman.....	1	5
"United Latin race" versus United States.....	20	2910
Panuco River, dredging of.....	6	836
Parks, S., letter from, to John Kenneth Turner.....	17	2500
Parmelee, Mrs. F. M., testimony of.....	8	1175
Passports.....	1	154
Curtis to Senator Fall on viséing his.....	12	1869
Emergency, refused at Tampico.....	11	1724
Order on viséing.....	12	1858
Refusal to visé.....	12	1837
Forres refused visé.....	12	1838
Viséing of.....	8	1192
Visé of, refused.....	8	1241
Waivers—
Form of, for visé.....	2	544
Required for visé.....	2	532
Paz, Pedro, confession of.....	8	1298
Pelaez, Gen.:.....
Activities of, radiogram of.....	1	280
And oil fields.....	8	996
Demands on oil companies.....	1	279
Inability of Carranza to drive out.....	1	289
Tribute to—
Arrendondo agrees to.....	1	282
Paying.....	1	289
State Department approves.....	1	283
Who he is.....	6	840
Peonage:.....
Ignorance as to.....	1	128
None.....	18	2687
Peon can not establish government.....	9	1449
Pershing:.....
Expedition.....	9	1435
Do.....	6	810
In Mexico.....	19	2796
Warning from Gen. Trevino.....	9	1435
Pesqueira, telegram from Creese to.....	20	2996
Peterson, Mrs. Ethel, testimony of.....	10	1665
Petition, people of Puebla to governor.....	19	2856
Petroleum. See Oil in Mexico.....
Philippines, a parallel.....	19	2874
Pino Suarez:.....
Plan of San Diego.....	22	3244
Plots, German and Mexican.....	22	3213
Vote for.....	18	2704
Pistols, German, taken from raiders in Texas.....	8	1290
Policy of Washington.....	9	1368
United States with Mexico.....	18	2712
Watchful waiting.....	15	2174
Poorbaugh, P. F., testimony of.....	8	1050
Assault on Americans at ranch.....	8	1054
Confiscation.....	8	1059
Forced to leave by United States Government.....	8	1052
Santa Lucrecia colony.....	8	1050
Warned by German consul.....	8	1053
Poverty among Mexicans.....	11	1750
Precedents with foreign countries wiped out.....	19	2872
Priests:.....
Character of.....	15	2221
Disguised to get out.....	18	2666
Exiled, penniless.....	18	2666
Influence of, on natives, good.....	18	2661

	Part.	Page.
Priests—Continued.
Lind, John, in error as to.	18	2692
Proportion of, to population.	18	2693
Ransom of.	18	2667
Serving as waiters.	18	2657
Problem, Mexican:
Agrarian.	15	2193
Assistance of better class Mexicans.	9	1352
Plan to save.	9	1351
Requires outside help.	9	1351
Solution of.	6	841
Proclamation to the nation:
Bolshevist, of Salvador Alvarado.	19	2880
Robles and Meixueiro.	19	2856
Propaganda:
Anti-intervention.	2	544
By Carranza.	9	1355
Weeks, danger in.	8	1193
German.	8	1240
Do.	1	60
Correspondence not passed on.	1	115
From Mexico on Texas side.	8	1278
German, along border.	8	1225
Interventionist, no agreement for.	1	330
German—
Meeting, Puebla.	14	2078
None.	11	1683
Tampico.	8	994
Mexican consuls in false.	8	1240
Questionable, Chicago Church Federation on.	1	68
Protection of United States expected, Garrett.	13	1975
Protectorate over Mexico.	14	2075
Protestants secure attendance with coin.	18	2694
Pryce, Gen. Rhys:
Extradition of, failed.	17	2509
Took Tia Juana.	17	2509
Do.	17	2515

R.

Rabb, collector of customs, and Villa.	11	1779
Racca, Ernest, M. D., Carranza-Obregon letters.	20	2908
Radicalism in Mexico.	22	3201
Radio outfit donated to Salvador by Carranza.	22	3213
Raiders:
Columbus, N. Mex.—
Protest against trial of.	10	1626
Tried and sentenced.	10	1624
Cuellar, Guadalupe, statement of.	8	1288
In Carranza uniforms.	8	1297
Organized by Nafarrate.	8	1274
Return to Mexico.	8	1288
Tulitos, Los, Tex., came from Mexico.	8	1265
Raids:
Big Bend, Tex.	8	1232
Boquillas, Tex.	8	1063
Brite ranch, Texas.	10	1540
Brownsville, Tex.	8	1232
Chemal colony, Tamaulipas.	8	984
Cleveland ranch, Texas.	10	1525
Horse stolen.	10	1525
Columbus, N. Mex.—
How made.	6	810
Do.	10	1584
Do.	10	1605
Do.	10	1609
Do.	10	1612

Raids—Continued.

Columbus, N. Mex.—Continued.	Part.	Page.
How made	10	1614
Do.....	11	1781
Do.....	9	1435
Soldiers killed in.....	10	1622
Conspiracy to, on Texas side.....	8	1277
Continuous, on Texas side.....	8	1287
Fresno pump plant, Brownsville, Tex.....	8	1251
Generals, Carranza, directed.....	8	1232
Granger Bros. ranch, Texas.....	10	1524
Glenn Springs, Tex.....	8	1060
Do.....	10	1517
Account of.....	10	1518
Mexican, one, colonel's commission.....	10	1520
Two killed.....	10	1519
Lower Rio Grande.....	8	1296
Novelle ranch, Mexican aid refused.....	10	1650
Norias, Tex.....	8	1315
Ojo de Agua, Tex.....	8	1305
Petit ranch.....	10	1523
Cattle stolen.....	10	1523
Planned by de la Rosa and Nafarrate.....	8	1294
Rio Verde Agricultural Co.....	11	1670
Russell Ranch.....	10	1526
Texas under de la Rosa.....	6	780
Tigner ranch, Texas.....	10	1647
Do.....	10	1538
Villa financed in United States.....	1	58
Webb Station, Tex.....	8	1204
Participants in, named.....	8	1212
Yaqui, on Guaymas.....	1	34
Raids in Texas:
Cause of.....	8	1263
Drive families out.....	8	1183
Organized on Mexican side.....	8	1183
Prevent farming.....	8	1183
Reign of terror during.....	8	1183
To kill Americans.....	8	1184
Railroad men:
American, run out of Mexico.....	19	2840
A. F. L. showed no interest in.....	19	2844
Railroads:
Condition of.....	9	1421
In Mexico.....	7	886
Mexican.....	22	3209
Taken over by Government.....	9	1354
Railways, National:
Americans removed from.....	17	2556
And cientificos.....	17	2553
Consolidation of.....	17	2559
Directors favorable to Madero.....	17	2561
Inception, present condition, etc.....	11	1789
Stock of.....	17	2553
Tehuantepec.....	17	2555
Ramos, Basilio:
Had pass through Carranza lines.....	8	1295
Plan of San Diego, signed.....	8	1295
Rangers, Texas:
Arrest robbers at Ruidosa.....	10	1536
Cooperation by Carranza authorities, none.....	10	1536
Do not cross border.....	22	3242
Not allowed to cross to Mexico.....	10	1536
Ransom:
Bunk, negro, held for.....	8	1103
Delamain, ranch foreman.....	8	1179
Held for, and paid.....	8	1135

Ransom—Continued.	Part.	Page.
Maline, held for, and paid.....	8	1135
Summers.....	13	1990
Son of D. R. McCormick, three times.....	8	1103
Stevenson, held for.....	8	1103
Rathbone, C. H., testimony of.....	2	545
Amparo and papers.....	2	580
Letter of, to Department of Commerce, etc.....	2	580
Wilson to.....	2	580
Pardo-Scottish Mexican Oil Co.....	2	580
Mexicans got permits to drill on land of.....	2	545
Oil operator Tampico.....	2	545
Opinion of Rodriguez as to S. M. Oil Co.....	2	580
Translations.....	2	585
Red Cross:
And Dr. Inman.....	11	1742
And Obregon.....	11	1741
In Mexico City.....	11	1740
Ordered out of Mexico by Carranza.....	1	40
Personnel of, for Honduras and Guatemala.....	20	2905
Report.....	6	804
Report on conditions in Mexico.....	2	522
Work in Coahuila and Mexico City.....	1	39
Redding, M. A., letter from, to John Kenneth Turner.....	17	2501
Refugees:
Marietta, from Tampico.....	6	779
Mormon colonies fed by United States.....	10	1482
Regeneracion, La.:
Letter to, from Thomas M. Dodson.....	17	2504
Letter with check from Jerome Miners' Union.....	17	2505
Plant seized.....	17	2497
Reguladora Fiber Co., controlled by Gen. S. Alvarado.....	7	875
Efforts of United States to have returned to owners.....	7	888
Renard, P. C., testimony of.....	8	1080
Chinese massacre at Torreón.....	8	1080
Representatives of Mexican foreign office to meet at Laredo.....	20	2947
Republic, new, Salvador and Honduras.....	20	2981
Resolution, Root.....	17	2547
Revenue spent in maintaining army.....	1	25
Sixty per cent to military.....	19	2865
Revista, Mexicana, La.:
Purpose of.....	2	424
Weeks, G. F., editor; paid by Carranza.....	2	424
Through Arredondo.....	4	425
Revolution:
Aims of, interview with Carranza.....	6	796
Carranza—
Inception of.....	6	795
Based on robbery.....	11	1719
Fear of another, drive laborers from Mexico.....	14	2153
Funds for, wholly from Mexico.....	17	2537
In Mexico, without aid from United States.....	9	1367
Negotiation for cessation of.....	17	2563
Normal condition of Mexico.....	7	871
Orozco, beginning of difficulties.....	9	1417
Per cent of population engaged in.....	9	1425
Sonora and Alvarado.....	20	2913
Alvarado, head of.....	20	2916
Sporadic, useless.....	9	1352
Total cost of.....	17	2543
Revolutionists:
Central American agreement.....	20	3100
Promises of.....	9	1371
Richards, Joseph Allen, testimony of.....	7	967
Aviators Connolly and Waterhouse found.....	7	969
Bodies, etc., recovered.....	7	972

	Part.	Page.
Richardson Construction Co., of Sonora.....	2	429
Appeal to United States Government.....	2	434
Concession, extract from.....	2	430
Confiscated by Carranza government.....	2	432
Defense of, against nullification.....	2	477
Irrigation plant and extent.....	2	430
Letters of, to Secretary of State.....	2	491
Oil rights on lands of.....	2	435
Protest of Yaqui Delta Land & Water Co.....	2	489
Tariff.....	2	475
Taxation troubles.....	2	432
Taxes, State, concession as to.....	2	477
Title to land and water.....	2	430
Water—
Concession.....	2	469
Regulations.....	2	472
Riggs, Lee, testimony of.....	10	1588
Bunk, a negro, statement of.....	10	1594
Columbus, N. Mex., beginning of raid on.....	10	1592
Deputy collector of customs, Columbus, N. Mex.....	10	1588
Prisoners confessed to him, five hung.....	10	1597
Moody ranch, raid on.....	10	1598
Rincones, Manuel, statement of.....	8	1284
Riot call, letter to mission board.....	1	41
Ritchie, Mrs. Laura, testimony of.....	10	1599
Columbus, N. Mex., describes raid on.....	10	1599
Favela, Juan, saved by.....	10	1602
R. L. ———, Mrs., ravished, statement of.....	22	3284
Robberies of Americans, Chermal colony.....	8	1171
Robbery, bank, unheard of.....	22	3240
Robertson, W. O., murder of.....	22	3297
Brown, B. H., affidavit as to.....	22	3298
Stempfle, Joe, affidavit as to.....	22	3299
Robinson, Dudley W., testimony of.....	17	2497
Attorney, United States, southern district of California.....	17	2497
Magon, Ricardo Flores, et al., trial of.....	17	2497
Revolution in Lower California.....	17	2508
Enlistments for, method of.....	17	2508
Of different nationalities.....	17	2509
Socialists and I. W. W's—
Aims of.....	17	2507
Action, direct.....	17	2507
Rodel, George A., offers services to Mexican insurgents.....	17	2499
Rogers, A. G., money from J. K. Turner to buy guns.....	17	2511
Rogers, Congressman, speeches of.....	6	823
Rojas, Gen. Antonio, speech at Chuichupa.....	18	2728
Romney, Junius, testimony of.....	17	2574
Colonies, Mormon:
Atrocities begun when.....	17	2580
Ecclesiastical representative of.....	17	2574
Exodus from.....	17	2575
Industries in.....	17	2575
Inhabitants in each.....	17	2578
Madero, Standard Oil Co.....	17	2588
Money, demands for.....	17	2587
Neutrality of, ordered by head of church.....	17	2579
Orozco's wishes.....	17	2581
Penniless.....	17	2577
Permanent, intended to be.....	17	2575
Polygamy not practiced.....	17	2575
Salazar at Chuichupa.....	17	2585
Demanded guns, etc.....	17	2585
Looted homes.....	17	2585
Threatened Mormons.....	17	2586
Schools.....	17	2575
Treatment and outrages.....	17	2581
United States requested remain neutral.....	17	2590
Why they came out without a fight.....	17	2589

	Part.	Page.
Root, Secretary of State, trip to Latin America.....	13	1972
Roosevelt telegram to Diaz.....	11	1726
Rosa, de la:
Identified.....	8	1274
Commissioned by Carranza.....	8	1275
Rowe, kidnaping of.....	22	3256
Rubber enterprise.....	18	2698
S.
Safety among rebels.....	14	2141
Salazar, Ines:
Affidavit of.....	17	2591
Americans, depredations on, by orders.....	17	2592
Amount of.....	17	2592
Robberies of.....	19	2793
Dublan raided by.....	18	2729
Colonia Juarez.....	18	2729
Speech of, at Pearson.....	18	2727
Salvador, pro-German.....	20	2899
San Antonio plantation.....	8	1075
San Diego, plan of.....	8	1303
Do.....	8	1232
Do.....	8	1201
Do.....	22	3241
Read into decision.....	8	1205
B. Ramos signed.....	8	1295
Raid Fresno pumping plant.....	8	1251
In furtherance of.....	8	1210
San Ignacio:
Attack on.....	8	1202
Commission of Carranza officer.....	8	1215
Flag found at.....	8	1207
Full account of.....	8	1205
Purpose of.....	8	1205
San Jose Colony:
Invaded by Salazar.....	18	2736
Salazar's speech at.....	18	2736
San Luis Potosi, plan of.....	17	2631
Santa Isabel, Lopez killed Americans at.....	9	1423
Santos, Toribio de los, governor of Yucatan.....	7	874
Outrages committed, many.....	7	874
Sartwell, Edward R., testimony of.....	7	845
List of Americans killed in Mexico.....	7	848
Schnalls, Daniel, mistreatment of, by Salazar.....	18	2748
Schools in Mexico.....	1	151
Do.....	1	29
Do.....	22	3228
Agricultural, church to establish.....	1	105
During Diaz régime.....	18	2723
No teachers for.....	9	1357
Schuls, J. G., testimony of.....	8	1065
Disarmed and robbed.....	8	1065
Wife robbed on train.....	8	1065
Schultz, W. A., testimony of.....	10	1494
Comanche Land Co., Tamaulipas.....	10	1495
Left after Veracruz incident.....	10	1496
Saw de la Rosa drilling recruits.....	10	1499
Scott, Capt.....	6	799
Scott, Gen., and Villa.....	11	1776
Scrivener, Mrs. Julia A., testimony of.....	12	1906
Answer of Carranza.....	19	2887
Secretary of State:
Note of—
June 20, 1916.....	2	347
August 12, 1918.....	19	2886

	Part.	Page.
Seggerson, Christopher, testimony of.....	10	1509
Seguin:
Confidential information, ruin of—
Fall and Hanson.....	20	2951
Hanson informed.....	20	2951
Threats of, against United States officers.....	20	2948
Fall and Hanson.....	20	2948
Words with.....	20	2970
Service, secret, Mexican, investigating Senator Fall.....	8	1120
Sheahan, James D., testimony of.....	16	2395
Bryan, appeal to—
Fruitless.....	12	2406
Former and present attitude of.....	16	2408
On committee to see, insulted.....	16	2407
Cattle, stolen by Carrancistas.....	16	2404
Conditions under Diaz good.....	16	2399
Crops and stock stolen.....	16	2401
Investments in land, stock, and water.....	16	2396
Lind, John—
Disagrees with, as to natives.....	16	2403
Refutes as to benefits of Americans.....	16	2397
Mexicans starving.....	16	2409
Natives honest.....	16	2399
Natives prefer to work for Americans.....	16	2398
Property total wreck.....	16	2402
Rancher, Jimenez, Chihuahua.....	16	2395
Shipping.....	22	3209
Ships, American shadow Mexican ship.....	22	3213
Silliman:
Ineptitude of.....	6	813
Remarks of, on Catholic Church.....	18	2657
Silver, shipment of, to United States for coinage.....	9	1366
Simons, W. R., testimony of.....	10	1662
Government and bandits cooperating.....	10	1663
Member American Legion.....	10	1662
Ordered from hotel to make room for foreign officer.....	10	1662
Sisters:
American, taken from train by soldiers.....	18	2662
Became mothers.....	18	2658
Canada, consul, tried to help.....	18	2658
Disguised and in want in Veracruz.....	18	2656
Funston failed to get boat for.....	18	2658
Left in Veracruz at evacuation.....	18	2661
Many diseased.....	18	2658
Slackers, American, protected by Carranza.....	8	1236
Slattery, Michael J., testimony of.....	13	1995
Address before Catholic societies.....	13	2028
Americans—
Bryan strong against.....	13	2004
Ordered out by.....	13	2006
Dead or insane.....	13	2026
Good class in Mexico.....	13	2004
Losses of, in mining.....	13	2008
Lost all when they came out.....	13	2011
Neutral.....	13	2004
Sixteen held as hostages.....	13	2020
Two hundred and thirty-nine in party.....	13	2017
Anti-American riots, purpose of.....	13	2002
Attitude of laborers good.....	13	2001
Big mines due to American development.....	13	1997
Bryan—
Criticizes attitude of.....	13	2010
Full report to, and his reply.....	13	2020
Refused to allow return to Mexico.....	13	2028
Churches, destruction of, by Carranza.....	13	2027

Slattery, Michael J.—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Committee—	13	2023
Insulted by Bryan.....	13	2023
Visit of, to Washington.....	13	2010
Consul, American, begged to get out to save country trouble.....	13	2009
Could have remained in Mexico under British flag.....	13	2024
Criticizes press.....	13	2002
Diaz defeated by propaganda.....	13	2017
Disarmed and mistreated en route.....	13	2020
Flag, American, burned and ashes thrown in faces.....	13	2013
Flight through Manzanillo with women and children.....	13	2014
Germans and Mexicans celebrate sinking of Louisiana.....	13	2001
Good treatment of Mexicans.....	13	2016
Governor of Colima ordered Americans to become citizens or get out..	13	1996
His companies, investments of.....	13	2030
His head miner killed.....	13	2007
Huerta—
Lind wanted to bribe.....	13	2007
Mexicans wanted.....	13	2011
Received protection from.....	13	2034
Intervention, Mexicans want.....	13	2014
Left funds for laborers.....	13	2027
Letter of 150 women in party.....	13	2010
Mexican governor offered to protect.....	13	2001
Mexicans honest under Diaz, not now.....	13	1995
Miner in Mexico.....	13	2014
Mob at station when leaving.....	13	2017
Violence en route.....	13	2014
Newspapers, Mexican, laud German successes.....	13	1999
No special privileges.....	13	2022
Offered second-class transportation home, refused.....	13	2028
Outrages on nuns.....	13	2019
Paid $1,000 permission to put party on Chinese ship.....	13	2025
Press reports and magazines.....	13	2021
Proceeded to San Diego, Calif.....	13	1998
Railroads and big enterprises due to Americans.....	13	2030
Returned to Mexico without passport.....	13	2003
Robbed by all factions.....	13	2001
School system not good.....	13	2021
Signaled Albany, Pacific Fleet, for supplies, refused.....	13	2013
Tampico incident.....	13	2022
Treated as tramps at San Diego.....	13	1999
Wages raised.....	13	2020
Water supply low, children suffered.....	13	2026
Wife invalid on account of treatment.....	17	2596
Smith, Burnett, affidavit of, on depredations, etc.....	17	2616
Smith, Charles, testimony of.....
Americans—
Not respected.....	17	2623
Will not fight.....	17	2616
Conditions, disturbed.....	17	2618
Depredations by rebels.....	17	2623
English not molested.....
Families, Mexican—
Fled from rebels.....	17	2619
Robbed of clothing.....	17	2622
Law and order, none.....	17	2623
Life and property safe under Diaz.....	17	2616
Miner in Sonora.....	17	2622
Peace, Mexicans can not restore.....	17	2621
Recruits, Federal, from prisons.....	17	2620
Robbery of cattle, stores, etc., at Nuri.....	17	2623
Schools, none since Diaz went out.....	17	2621
S. P. Railroad property in Sonora destroyed.....	17	2618
Women, American, saved from assault.....	1	295
Smith, Levi, testimony of.....	1	300
Americans ordered out of Tampico.....	1	297
Arredondo advised paying tribute.....

	Part.	Page.
Smith, Levi—Continued.
Oil producer, Tampico.....	1	295
Paid tribute to Pelaez.....	1	296
Safer under Pelaez than Carranza.....	1	303
Tampico, conditions bad in and around.....	1	301
Smith, Michael J., testimony of.....	7	873
Hemp merchant, New York.....	7	873
Smith, Miss Genevieve, testimony of.....	8	1124
And Hall on Mexican investigation.....	8	1124
Contradicts Hall.....	8	1125
Identifies book by Arthur Thomson.....	8	1126
Reporter San Antonio, Tex., paper.....	8	1124
Smith, Dr. William Fawcett:
Letter to R. Flores Magon, pay for services.....	17	2510
Smith, Senator M. A., S. J. Res. 133, subsistence of refugees.....	17	2641
Socialism, the theory.....	18	2700
Socialists, aims of.....	17	2507
Soldiers—
American, old indorse Mexican revolution.....	17	2499
Few under Diaz.....	22	3240
Mexican, cross boundary at will.....	14	2069
Solis, Antonio, conquest of Mexico.....	18	2694
Solution, Mexican troubles.....	19	2803
Sommerfeld, Madero agent in El Paso, Tex.....	17	2524
Soto y Gama, what is thought of United States policy.....	6	824
South America, attitude of, toward United States.....	1	145
Spellacy, Michael A., testimony of.....	7	939
Driller and oil producer, Tampico.....	7	939
Speyer & Co.....	17	2526
Standard Oil Co.:
And Waters Pierce Oil Co.—
Fighting.....	17	2569
Relations between.....	17	2569
Hopkins never in service of.....	17	2524
Owens Cowdray and Pearson interests.....	17	2549
Reenters Mexico.....	17	2570
Starvation and exportation of foodstuffs.....	6	804
State Department, note of, of October 1, 1919.....	19	2887
Exhibits:
Acting Secretary of State to embassy, Mexico City, October 1, 1919; further protest that Mexico respect vested rights of Americans concerning petroleum decrees.....	21	3171
Agrarian law, State of Sonora.....	21	3180
American consul, Nogales, to Secretary of State, July 29, 1919, advising that agrarian law was passed, effective July 27, 1919..	21	3180
Bryan, to Carothers, June 29, 1914, concerning Carranza non-acceptance Constitutionalists currency payment oil tax.....	21	3120
Bryan to consul general, July 10, 1914; further protest re non-acceptance Carrancista currency.....	21	3120
Canada to State Department, July 9, 1914, concerning oil tax....	21	3120
Canada to State Department, July 17, 1914, quoting wireless from Consul Miller, Tampico, re oil tax.....	21	3120
Canada, Veracruz, to State Department, Washington, June 28, 1914, concerning oil-production tax.....	21	3119
Canova, Saltillo to Secretary of State, July 11, 1914, re nonacceptance.....	21	3120
Carranza petroleum tax decree.....	21	3155
Fletcher to Mexican foreign office, April 2, 1918, protesting against petroleum decree.....	21	3157
Fletcher to Secretary of Industry and Commerce, July 22, 1917, re refusal to allow oil companies to drill.....	21	3153
Fletcher to Secretary of State, February 20, 1917, concerning decree affecting property rights of Americans.....	21	3152
Fletcher to Secretary of State, August 2, 1917, advising that Carranza promised there would be no confiscation of property..	21	3154
Fletcher to Secretary of State, March 1, 1918, transmitting Carranza decree fixing tax on petroleum lands.....	21	3155

State Department—Continued.

Exhibits—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Fletcher to Secretary of State, August 13, 1918, advising that Carranza refused to postpone decree.....	21	3159
Fletcher to Secretary of State, August 14, 1918, advising that new petroleum decree had been issued.....	21	3160
Further decree requiring foreigners renounce their national protection when acquiring real estate in Mexico.....	21	3173
Governor of Sonora answer to Lansing protest.....	21	3187
Hanna to Secretary of State, July 18, 1914, quoting Vice Consul Silliman re export oil tax.....	21	3121
Hanna to State Department, July 15, 1914, concerning oil tax....	21	3120
Lansing to American consul, Nogales, August 14, 1919, protesting to Sonora State authorities against enforcement agrarian law....	21	3185
Lansing to Charles Parker, American representative Queretaro, protesting against sections of Mexican constitution of 1917.....	21	3121
Lansing to embassy, Mexico City, August 12, 1918, requesting that petroleum tax decree be postponed.....	21	3158
Lansing to embassy, Mexico City, August 14, 1919, protesting against putting into effect agrarian law.....	21	3184
Lansing to Rodgers, Mexico City, August 16, 1916, advising that renunciation of national rights as to company affairs by American individuals will not annul relations between individual and American Governments.....	21	3172
Lansing to Silliman January 19, 1916; protest against nationalization of petroleum.....	21	3121
Lansing to Thurston, Mexico City, January 19, 1917, protesting against decree requiring Americans to renounce right of protection.....	21	3174
Lawton, American consul Nogales, to Secretary of State December 5, 1918, transmitting draft of proposed agrarian law of State of Sonora.....	21	3174
Letter Acting Secretary of State to Fall, transmitting 37 copies of communications State Department and diplomatic officers Mexico.....	21	3119
Letter Brazilian minister, Mexico City, to State Department, May 7, 1915, re suffering in Mexico City.....	21	3200
Letter, Lansing to Fall, November 14, 1919, transmitting additional documents concerning Mexico.....	21	3171
Mexican constitution of 1917.....	21	3123
Mexican decree requiring foreigners renounce their national protection when acquiring property in Mexico.....	21	3172
Mexican foreign affairs department to Fletcher, August 17, 1918, stating Mexico's position in full regarding petroleum tax and decrees.....	21	3162
Mexican foreign office to Summerlin, July 28, 1919, willing to give protection to Americans.....	21	3189
Mexico orders to notaries that in charters new corporations for exploitation oil lands stockholders should renounce their national rights.....	21	3171
Mexican Petroleum Division Circular No. 9 setting out that petroleum companies may obtain permission chief executive to drill provided they obligate themselves to respect petroleum law which congress may enact.....	21	3170
Mexican secretary of state to Summerlin, May 29, 1919, advising that oil companies are to blame for their situation.....	21	3168
Phillips, acting secretary to embassy, Mexico City, June 16, 1919, protesting that oil companies were within their rights.....	21	3169
Polk to American consul, Nogales, December 24, 1918; further protest against enactment agrarian law.....	21	3179
Polk to American consul, Nogales, March 20, 1919; renewed protest against enactment agrarian law.....	21	3179
Polk to American consul, Nogales, July 17, 1919, requesting to be advised if agrarian law was passed.....	21	3180
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, January 23, 1918, further protest against article 27, constitution of 1917.....	21	3154

State Department—Continued.

Exhibits—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, March 18, 1919, protesting against attempt collect royalties from American petroleum companies..	21	3167
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, April 16, 1919, protesting against denouncement American property by third parties.....	21	3167
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, April 16, 1919; further protests against confiscatory decree.....	21	3167
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, January 31, 1917; further protesting against decree requiring Americans renounce rights protection..	21	3174
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, December 24, 1918, protesting against enactment of Agrarian law.....	21	3178
Polk to embassy, Mexico City, July 16, 1919, instruction to protest anew against enactment agrarian law.....	21	3180
Polk to Fletcher, December 13, 1918, acknowledging receipt of Mexican foreign office note and reiterating protests on behalf Americans.....	21	3163
Press statements by Lansing, November 12, 1919, re Jenkins case..	21	3190
Prohibition oil companies drilling is part of measure taken for purpose making constitutional text effective.....	21	3153
Proposed agrarian law.....	21	3174
Silliman to Secretary of State, January 21, 1916, advising that Mexicans do not intend nationalize petroleum.....	21	3121
State Department to embassy Mexican City, April 4, 1918; further protest against article 27 of constitution.....	21	3155
State Department to embassy, June 18, 1919; further protesting against drilling decree.....	21	3169
State Department reply to Mexican Government letter of November 26, 1919, re Jenkins case.....	21	3198
Statement of William O. Jenkins made to State Department concerning his kidnaping.....	21	3191
Summerlin to Mexican foreign affairs department, July 22, 1919, relative to murder of Peter Catron and advising if such murders continued radical change in policy would be adopted.....	21	3189
Summerlin to Secretary of State, July 9, 1917, re refusal to allow oil companies to drill.....	21	3153
Summerlin to Secretary of State, June 2, 1919, quoting Mexican Government that "protests from a foreign nation can not suspend effects of laws of another nation".....	21	3168
Summerlin to Secretary of State, August 6, 1919, transmitting copy Mexican Petroleum Division Circular No. 9.....	21	3170
Summerlin to State Department, January 27, 1918 re article 27 Mexican Constitution.....	21	3154
Text of note from Mexican Government to State Department, November 26, 1919, regarding Jenkins case.....	21	3196
Vice consul, Nogales, to Secretary of State, March 13, 1919, advising that agrarian law not be enacted.....	21	3179
State Department, recommendations of.....	11	1745
Stations, telegraph and radio.....	22	3209
Stephens, Joshua, murder of.....	18	2748
Stephenson, H. S., testimony of.....	17	2633
Ransom for Arthur McCormick, paid.....	17	2633
Salazar, letter of, to managers of ranches.....	17	2634
Stevens, Ella, testimony of.....	17	2602
Murder of her father, details.....	17	2602
Stevens, Emma, testimony of.....	17	2607
Murder of father, corroborates sister.....	17	2607
Stevens, Walter J., testimony of.....	17	2607
Murder of father, corroborates sisters.....	17	2607
Stiles, Prof., teaching natives to bud trees.....	22	3226
Stock, oil, given Diaz officials.....	17	2549
Store, Peterson's, Lyford, Tex., attack on.....	8	1253
Straube, William, testimony of.....	15	2165
Conditions in Mexico.....	15	2168
Intervention, favors.....	15	2169
Ranches in Veracruz and Oaxaca.....	15	2165

	Part.	Page.
Sturgis, Cora Lee, testimony of.....	7	919
Mother starved to death.....	7	929
Prisoner eight months with husband and mother.....	7	920
Protection and prosperity under Diaz.....	7	920
Ranch in Chiapas.....	7	919
Mr. and Mrs., ill-treated by Cal y Mayor.....	7	869
Subcommittee of Senate.....	12	1861
Fall, Senator A. B., statement of.....	12	1862
Subscription, Italian to Mexican revolution.....	17	2500
List, for Magon movement.....	17	2502
Sugar:
Attempt of Gustavo Madero to control.....	15	2209
Polariscope test of.....	15	2208
T.
Tampico incident.....	22	3230
Americans delivered to United States boats.....	22	3232
Commander English ships neutral.....	22	3231
Flag incident, 1914.....	22	3235
General conditions in.....	7	939
Gunboats at.....	6	783
Kroehler and German boat.....	22	3231
Rescue by English, German, etc., boats.....	22	3232
Riot and Southern Hotel incident.....	22	3231
Ships, American, left Americans at mercy of mob.....	22	3231
Miller, Consul, protested.....	22	3233
Tax system, American experts on.....	1	10
Taylor, Creed, testimony of.....	10	1521
Assistance, none from Mexican authorities.....	10	1526
Customs inspector Big Bend district, Texas.....	10	1521
Taylor, Dr. James M., testimony of.....	9	1404
Arrested and fined for taking kodak pictures.....	9	1413
Secretary board foreign relations, Methodist Episcopal Church.....	9	1404
Taylor, Joe, testimony of.....	8	1315
Relates Norias, Tex., raid.....	8	1357
Teachers in Yucatan:
Ignorant propagandists.....	9	1357
None for schools.....	9	1357
Teitlebaum, William, testimony of.....	19	2761
Chairman subcommittee, statement of.....	19	2766
Dominguez, Alfredo Robles, quotes.....	19	2801
Madero, knew.....	19	2764
Memory fails.....	19	2765
Mexico, knew only what Madero told him.....	19	2767
Not American citizen.....	19	2761
Song, only one to sing.....	19	2780
Subcommittee refuses to hear further.....	19	2788
What he received from Mexico.....	19	2800
Telegrams:
Creese to Pesqueira.....	20	2996
Fall-Cabrera.....	8	1019
Texas Oil Co.:
Locations, adverse on leases of.....	2	536
Organization, etc.....	2	536
Thomas, Kirby, testimony of.....	9	1461
Mining engineer, authority on mining.....	9	1461
Thompson, Wallace, testimony of.....	13	1909
Anti-American parade, Monterrey, 1918.....	13	1918
Agrees with Bryan article in the Commoner.....	13	1914
Currency conditions in Monterrey, 1918.....	13	1921
Grafting, Mexican consular officers.....	13	1924
I. W. W. agitation in Monterrey, 1915, de Lara.....	13	1920
News editor, Mexican Herald.....	13	1909

	Part.	Page.
Thomson, Arthur:
Testimony of.....	14	2093
Approves Constitution of 1917.....	14	2104
Australian, never been in Mexico.....	14	2098
Data for book, source of.....	14	2099
Draft, exemption obtained.....	14	2122
Intervention ideas from De Bekker.....	14	2095
Knows nothing of constitution of 1957.....	14	2101
Propaganda for Carranza.....	22	3245
Sold 5,000 booklets to Mexican consulate.....	14	2094
Wrote "Crime against Mexico".....	14	2093
Yellow booklet of.....	7	900
Do.....	8	1128
Thurber, Tom E., offers services to Mexican insurgents.....	17	2499
Tigner, J. T., testimony of.....	10	1538
Rancher, Big Bend, Tex.....	10	1538
Ranch, compelled by raids to sell.....	10	1540
Titles, property in Mexico.....	8	1007
Toba, Tirzo de la:
Commander Magon, etc., forces.....	17	2516
Letter of instructions to, from R. F. Magon.....	17	2516
Tolen, Harry L., testimony of.....	14	2051
Immigration inspector, Yuma, Ariz.....	14	2051
Trains:
Dynamited.....	19	2878
Held-up, only one.....	22	3240
Travel near Capital:
Danger in.....	9	1411
Under military escort.....	11	1678
Treaty:
Gadsden.....	19	2883
Guadalupe.....	19	2883
Juarez and United States 1859.....	19	1881
With Mexico, 1859.....	22	3257
Trevino, Gen. Jacinto B., warning to Pershing.....	9	1435
Tribute to:
Candido Aguilar.....	8	996
Gen. M. Pelaez.....	2	535
Do.....	8	996
Troops, Mexican.....	22	3208
Trowbridge, Ed:
Book of, Mexico To-day.....	1	18
Friendly to Carranza.....	1	18
Unable to form committee of cooperation.....	1	17
Tulitos, Los, Tex., details of fight at.....	8	1266
Tupper, Henry Allen.....	6	814
Accepted check from Carranza.....	2	502
Accepted presents from Carranza.....	2	500
Carranza, part in securing recognition of.....	2	512
Disappointed in result of efforts.....	2	520
Does not know David Starr Jordan.....	2	502
International Peace Forum, representative of.....	2	498
Interviewed—
Carranza.....	2	499
Orozco.....	2	498
Letters from Sheppard, Bryan, etc.....	2	551
Never heard of article 130 re ministers.....	2	520
Pastor First Baptist Church, Washington, D. C.....	2	498
Red Cross report on conditions in Mexico.....	2	522
Refused pay for peace efforts.....	2	499
Testimony of.....	2	497
Turner, Edith L., letter to, from S. Parks.....	17	2500
Turner, George, testimony of.....	10	1561
Ate beans off ground.....	10	1567
Boyd, Capt., speech of.....	10	1563

Turner, George—Continued.

	Part.	Page.
Carrizal—
Took part in fight at.....	10	1563
Gives account of.....	10	1564
Ex-soldier with United States Cavalry.....	10	1562
Jail, nine days in, beaten and kicked.....	10	1564
Turner, John Kenneth.....	14	2099
Book of information from.....	1	123
Funds given to A. G. Rogers to buy guns.....	17	2511
Letter—
To, from Jose Moore.....	17	2502
From, to W. C. Owen.....	17	2503
To, from—
S. Parks.....	17	2500
M. A. Redding.....	17	2501
Radical socialist.....	18	2687
Wrong.....	18	2687

U.

Universal, El:

Friendly to Americans.....	1	96
Telegrams exchanged.....	2	527

V.

Valls, J. A., testimony of.....	8	1199
Arce v. State of Texas reversed.....	8	1203
Diaz, relations with.....	8	1200
District attorney, forty-ninth judicial district of Texas.....	8	1199
San Diego, plan of, first heard of.....	8	1201
San Ignacio, attack on.....	8	1202
Progreso, El, editors escorted to river.....	8	1209
Vandalism in Mexico, photos of.....	22	3246
Vann, W. E., testimony of.....	8	1296
Raiders—
Confession of—
Chino Flores.....	8	1297
Pedro Baz.....	8	1298
In Carranza uniform.....	8	1297
Raids, conferred with Carranza officials on.....	8	1297
On lower Rio Grande.....	8	1296
Veater, Capt. S. H., testimony of.....	10	1478
Brought out some of his cattle.....	10	1488
Chuichupa colony—
Chihuahua.....	10	1478
Prosperous.....	10	1489
Robbed by revolutionists.....	10	1479
Colonies, Mormon, list of.....	10	1489
Milch cows killed for beef.....	10	1493
Veracruz:
Occupation of.....	6	781
Troops, American, land at.....	15	2178
Why occupied.....	6	782
Vessels:
American, location of in 1916.....	22	3205
German, interned Tampico, refuge for Americans.....	22	3204
Villa and Aguascalientes conference.....	11	1774
General Scott.....	11	1776
Japanese officer.....	11	1777
Rabb, collector of customs at Brownsville.....	11	1779
Zapata.....	11	1775
Forces in Mexico City.....	11	1738
Carranza's principal general.....	11	1727
Conditions better than under Carranza.....	8	1097
Establishes order and does not rob poor.....	9	1421
Forces a loan.....	8	1004
Life, moving picture of.....	9	1363
Proclamation criticizing President Wilson.....	20	2981
Raids financed in United States.....	1	58
Revolt against Carranza.....	6	799

	Part.	Page.
Villarreal, Antonio I.....	19	2829
Organized Mexican Labor Revolutionary Junta.....	19	2829
Villistas:
How distinguished from Carrancistas.....	10	1576
Fired on United States boat.....	22	3204
Tampico, 1915.....	22	3213
Vista Hermosa Sugar & Mercantile Co.....	15	2203
Concession or special privileges, none.....	15	2217
Condition of property.....	15	2226
Investigated by shareholders.....	15	2228
Investment, amount of.....	15	2204
Labor, Oaxaca Indians.....	15	2218
Profits.....	15	2227
Troubles of, began with occupation of Veracruz.....	15	2210
Von Eckhardt cheered in Mexico.....	20	2967
Wadsworth, R. M., testimony of.....	10	1532
Wages in Mexico.....	7	866
Oil region.....	1	220
Raise of, by Americans.....	11	1731
Waiver:
Damages, of claims for.....	1	151
Form of.....	2	544
Required for visé of passports.....	2	532
Right to file claims in order to enter Mexico.....	1	289
Walker, James D., murder of.....	18	2746
Walker, Norman, testimony of.....	12	1821
Battle of Juarez, May, 1911.....	12	1821
Wallis, H. J., testimony of.....	8	1342
Wounded in train wreck, Brownsville, Tex.....	8	1342
War on Mexico to protect investors.....	1	63
World, convinced Mexicans.....	1	15
Witzke, L., statement of.....	22	3255
Ward, J. G., testimony of.....	8	1162
After being robbed came to United States.....	8	1166
Colonia colony near Tampico.....	8	1162
Fought Mexicans to defend his home.....	8	1163
Warner, P. W., testimony of.....	8	1034
Atascador colony—
General agent of.....	8	1034
List of colonists.....	8	1045
One German remains in.....	8	1045
Raided by revolutionists.....	8	1035
Praises Huerta.....	8	1049
Quotes President Wilson on intervention.....	8	1045
Washington, George, statue of, pulled down.....	18	2708
Waters Pierce Oil Co.:
Check from, to Madero.....	15	2222
Had no part in events, 1910-11.....	17	2526
Hopkins's employment, reasons for.....	17	2533
In employ of.....	17	2525
Not in, when Limantour.....	17	2531
Secured no concession for.....	17	2525
Operating under disadvantages.....	17	2532
Status of, after revolution.....	17	2533
Watriss, Frederick N., testimony of.....	2	426
Attorney, New York.....	2	426
Oil producers' position, explains.....	2	427
Richardson Construction Co.....	2	429
Webb, Grover, testimony of.....	10	1526
Carrancistas do not preserve law and order.....	10	1527
Customs inspector, Big Bend, Tex.....	10	1526
Followed Brite ranch raiders into Mexico.....	10	1529
Hancock ranch, loss of stock.....	10	1527
Webb station, Tex., attack on.....	8	1208
Flag found at.....	8	1207
Raiders in penitentiary.....	8	1208

	Part.	Page.
Weeks, George F.:
Connected with Mexican foreign office.....	2	425
Editor of La Revista Mexicana	2	424
Paid by Carranza.....	2	424
Through Arredondo.....	2	425
Propaganda by, dangerous.....	8	1193
Weller, J. S., and Fall resolution.....	20	2961
Welsh, F., testimony of.....	8	1139
Farmer, Hidalgo, Tex.....	8	1139
Stock stolen and taken to Mexico.....	8	1139
West, Duval.....	6	814
Resolution of.....	19	2787
Wetherell, Miss Lucille, testimony of.....	11	1685
Conditions in Oaxaca, Mexico.....	11	1686
Lecture by Lincoln Steffens on Mexico.....	11	1701
Lost everything.....	11	1687
Madero and his régime.....	11	1700
Part owner of Vista Hermosa plantation.....	11	1685
Thrilling account of escape.....	11	1688
Whatley, Miss A., testimony of.....	8	1083
Educational work in Mexico.....	8	1083
Maderistas at Parral cut her.....	8	1084
Robbed by Maderistas at Parral.....	8	1084
Wheeler, Capt. Harry, testimony of.....	12	1873
Agua Prieta, attack on, by Gen. Blanco.....	12	1875
Bisbee, trouble at, 1917.....	12	1882
Causes leading to.....	12	1886
Huerta-Leyva, hanging of.....	12	1893
Letter to Gov. Hunt.....	12	1897
Naco battles.....	12	1888
Williams held for ransom by Rojas.....	18	2749
Williams, Ira Jewell, testimony of.....	2	589
Amparo, extract from.....	2	604
Applications to drill denied.....	2	591
Confiscation, protest against.....	2	590
Inman—
Criticizes.....	2	605
Letter on.....	2	606
Intervention, letter on.....	2	605
Letter, Frank L. Polk.....	2	596
Of, to Times.....	2	596
Liars, American, speech of President Wilson.....	2	606
Panuco-Boston Co., stopped and fined.....	2	592
President Panuco-Boston Oil Co.....	2	589
Properties, amparo filed.....	2	591
Of company, denounced.....	2	591
Rebellion, accused of.....	2	605
Refused to acquiesce in article 27, constitution 1917.....	2	590
Review, Mexican, quoted.....	2	600
Telegram to, from Acting Secretary of State.....	2	602
Willis, Mrs. F. B., testimony of.....	8	1030
Child, death of, for lack of attention.....	8	1032
Husband, loss of.....	8	1032
Invalid, because of mistreatment.....	8	1034
Winton, Dr. George B., testimony of.....	1	159
A. B. C. quotes from, on intervention.....	1	184
Advice to church on constitution 1917.....	1	188
Books, wrote two on Mexico.....	1	160
"Boss," American, well thought of.....	1	163
Christian Advocate, quotations from.....	1	178
Committees, served on several.....	1	180
Education, documents on.....	1	159
Indians, discusses.....	1	166
Inman, subsidy by Carranza to.....	1	187
Intervention—
Against.....	1	161
As seen by Mexicans.....	1	184

	Part.	Page.
Winton, Dr. George B.—Continued.
Labor organizations, knows nothing of.....	1	170
Leaders, Mexicans, knows many.....	1	160
League of Free Nations—
Member of.....	1	159
Fund to, mentioned by Inman.....	1	176
Mexicans, in New Mexico, all good Americans.....	1	162
Mexico—
Knowledge of.....	1	160
Knows little of.....	1	180
Mining laws of Mexico, information given.....	1	172
Wilson, Alex. T., letter from, to R. Flores Magon.....	17	2502
Wilson, Henry Lane, testimony of.....	15	2249
Agrarian problem.....	15	2298
Americans did not exploit country or people.....	15	2250
Had no special favors.....	15	2250
In Mexico approved actions of.....	18	2713
Why they left.....	15	2303
No low type.....	15	2250
Without, Mexico still uncivilized.....	15	2250
Attitude of, sworn statement as to.....	15	2286
Bryan and British diplomacy as to Huerta.....	15	2300
Asked Huerta to recognize China.....	15	2289
Commoner, quotes on Diaz.....	15	2310
Uncoded messages from.....	15	2289
Business in hands of foreigners.....	15	2255
Calero's book, quotations.....	15	2298
Quotes.....	15	2294
On motives of revolution.....	15	2308
Quotes.....	15	2306
Capital, American, invested in Mexico.....	15	2252
Carranza's downfall, effect of.....	15	2296
Why against Huerta.....	15	2305
Chamberlain, George A., resignation of.....	15	2302
Churches, desecration of.....	15	2296
Committee—
American colony, to Washington.....	15	2266
Argument for retention of.....	15	2268
Concession explained.....	15	2252
Conditions on Mexico and of Taft administration, bad.....	15	2304
Conditions of people, bad.....	15	2263
Confidence in.....	9	1348
Consultation, called to Washington for.....	15	2291
Consuls, telegrams of.....	15	2295
Diaz—
Cause of fall of.....	15	2254
Government of, pro-American.....	15	2256
Invitation of, to Americans.....	15	2254
Diplomatic corps behind.....	9	1348
Diplomats telegraphed their Governments.....	15	2282
Fletcher, statement of, discussed.....	15	2302
Hale, William Bayard, contradicts.....	15	2283
Huerta and Carranza, relations with.....	15	2296
Interview with, memorandum.....	15	2312
Like Diaz.....	15	2310
No aid from Wilson government.....	15	2284
People with.....	15	2284
Pro-American.....	15	2283
Protected Americans.....	15	2283
Illiteracy in Mexico, percentage of.....	15	2254
Indians in Mexico, differences in.....	15	2309
Inman, a liar.....	15	2284
Story, refutes.....	15	2284
Judgments and apologies secured.....	15	2286
Lansing's note of June, 1916.....	15	2308
Lind, John, discusses.....	15	2296

Wilson, Henry Lane—Continued.

Madero and Villa—

	Part.	Page.
Relations between.....	15	2274
Atrocities in time of.....	15	2258
Accused, of controlling diplomatic corps.....	15	2263
Arrested by Blanquet.....	15	2263
Blanquet overthrew.....	15	2262
Burnside report.....	15	2262
Calero on murder of.....	15	2278
Conditions bad to worse.....	15	2258
Corps, diplomatic, advice of, to.....	15	2263
Despotic.....	15	2258
Did not overthrow Diaz.....	15	2256
Did not connive at murder of.....	18	2713
Evidence of unsound mind.....	15	2258
Huerta took advantage of situation.....	15	2262
Urged to protect.....	15	2271
Instruction, public, not a dollar for.....	15	2258
Insulted diplomatic representative.....	15	2263
Justifies action with.....	15	2276
Killed two colonels and privates.....	15	2263
Land, none divided.....	15	2258
Murder of.....	15	2271
Press, freedom of, suppressed.....	15	2258
"Porra, La," hired assassins.....	15	2262
Organized by Gustavo.....	15	2258
Remonstrance about jailing Americans.....	15	227
Resignation of—
Deposited with.....	15	2264
Celebrated by people.....	15	2264
Revolution of, and Huerta, outline of.....	15	2262
Supreme Court, advice of, to.....	15	2263
Visionary.....	15	2256
Matters, five to have been settled.....	15	2278
Moore, John Bassett, resignation of.....	15	2302
Murray, Robert H., statement of, untrue.....	15	2286
Peaceful government, suggestions on.....	15	2314
Pino Suarez, Huerta urged to protect.....	15	2271
Population—
American, in Mexico.....	15	2252
Other.....	15	2252
Praise for.....	11	1732
Procedure as to seating President.....	15	2271
Recommendations to President Wilson.....	15	2293
Sent to Foreign Relations Committee.....	15	2294
Resignation of, reasons for.....	15	2299
Resolutions—
American colony.....	15	2266
Brotherhood men.....	15	2276
Congratulating.....	19	2789
Sent to Veracruz July 4 to avoid Huerta speech.....	15	2283
Sonora, State of, information on.....	15	2306
Summoned Diaz, Huerta, and Blanquet.....	15	2263
Taft's administration.....	15	2280
Tampico incident.....	15	2296
Telegram, American colony, to President Wilson.....	15	2266
Testimony of, before Foreign Relations Committee stopped by President.....	15	2294
Thanks of British subjects.....	15	2271
Ministers of strong nations.....	15	2264
Troops on border.....	15	2296
Von Heintz, letter of, to.....	15	2274
Wilson's administration.....	15	2281
Conversation with.....	15	2304
Misconception of Mexico.....	15	2306
Policies of, and league.....	15	2306
Representatives—
Private.....	15	2289
Protest against.....	15	2290

	Part.	Page.
Wilson, President:
Letter to, from Magana et al.	19	2850
Mexicans ignore	11	1727
Mistake and failure of	9	1447
Personal representatives	6	811
Picture of—
Removed from consulate	8	1155
Horns painted on, and burned	8	1155
Speech on "big interests" in Mexico	19	2871
Harmful to Americans in Mexico	19	2871
To Mexican newspaper men	19	2868
Witzke, arrest and conviction of	8	1231
Lathar and Kurt Jahnke	8	1225
Woman, nationalization of	1	60
Do	2	377
Raped, 17 crossed into Texas	10	1648
Women:
One for every four soldiers	18	2661
Treatment accorded	9	1455
Wood, C. D., testimony of	10	1517
Wright, Mrs. Mary, testimony of	8	1020
Board, German lumber, brought out	8	1024
Depredations on property	8	1020
Losses of	8	1026
Mexican girl abducted by rebels	8	1025
Wright, Miss Mary:
Orchards and fences burned	8	1026
Ordered out of Mexico by United States	8	1023
Protection—
Government, San Luis Potosi could give none	8	1023
United States Government refused	8	1023
Raided several times	8	1022
Ranch in San Luis Potosi	8	1020
Robbed of everything	8	1026
Women lived in cane fields	8	1020
Y.
Yaqui Delta Land & Water Co.:
Protest of	2	489
Raid on Guaymas	1	34
Yaquis:
Assaulted Metzenthin's 14-year old sister	8	1105
And Mayo's principal soldiers	12	1901
Burned principal house	8	1105
Carranza authorities grafting on	9	1388
Cause Metzenthin a loss of $20,000	8	1105
Raided Metzenthin ranch, Sonora	8	1105
Took Metzenthin stock, clothing, etc	8	1105
Trying to make treaty	12	1900
Yucatan:
Did not revolt against Diaz	7	874
Financial system in	7	880
Land, Indians refuse	7	890
Life safe in, under Diaz	7	874
Population, etc	7	873
Seized by Gov. S. Alvarado	7	875
Z.
Zapata and Villa	11	1775
Betrayed and killed	19	2814
Wants land for people	19	2814
Zelaya, Nicaragua, removal of	17	2565
Zavala family, among founders of Texas liberty	22	3244

INTEGRITY

1980

Stanford University Libraries

3 6105 010 209 620

972.084
2658

STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES
STANFORD AUXILIARY LIBRARY
STANFORD, CALIFORNIA 94305-6004
(415) 723-9201
All books may be recalled after 7 days

DATE DUE

DOC JUN 26 1995